POLLYANNA WILL SPREAD GLADNESS

SEE THIS COMEDY OF OPTIMISM AT THE GRAND THEATRE

"Pollyanna" will spread joy and gladness broadcast throughout the community when the Pollyanna Producing Company bring an able cast to present this famous comedy of optimism at the Grand on Saturday, matinee and evening.

"Pollyanna" between book covers has moved countless thousands to laughters and tears. But it is wonderful new as a play. Its glad-girl revives touching memories of some great soul that most of us have known and loved—a father, mother, sister, brother or friend, but strangely unfamiliar and irresistibly welcome on the stage. "Pollyanna" leaves a picture to be cherished in the memory locket of everyone who is thrilled and moved by its blended humor and pathos. The remarkable advance sale is significent of the affection that "Pollyanna" has inspired among men and women, young and old, who have found in her one of the most lovable characters of modern creation. To those who do not know the story, the telling of it would be to rob them of some delightful surprises.

"Pollyanna," one of the loveliest and most widely beloved characters in modern fiction, has been brought to the stage in all her flesh and blood charms, thanks to the deftness with which Mrs. Cushing has builded her comedy upon the enormously popular glad-books of Mrs. Porter. Any favorite book character is more vivid and understandable when poetically visualized upon the stage. The most unprecedented advanced sale of "Pollyanna" is very significant. It shows that the public is keenly alive to what is new and vital in the theatre and is eager for plays that convey the sweet and beautiful influence that has made "Pollyanna" fiction tremendously popular in many lands. The comedy is an even greater delight than the stories. It spreads good cheer and glad spirit broadcast and it is full of novel and fascinating surpries.

TYRONE POWER AT THE OPERA HOUSE

TRIUMPHANT RETURN OF THIS EMINENT ACTOR ARRANGED FOR

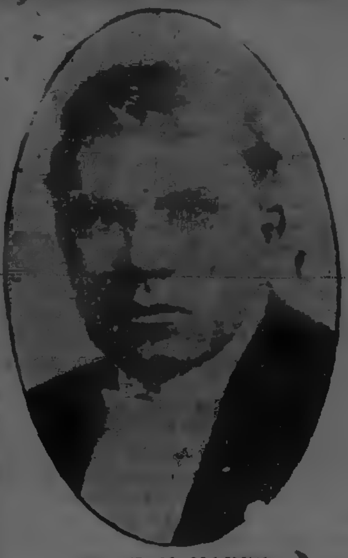
An important announcement is made by Trans-Canada Theatres, Limited, the newly formed all-Canadian corporation controlling a chain of theatres across the continent to the effect that the eminent English actor, Mr. Tyrone Power, will play a return engagement in this city and will be seen at the Grand Opera House for one night on Monday, May 24th, in a revival of Milton Goldsmith and Benedict James' powerful drama of love and power, "The Little Brother." It will be remembered by those who saw Mr. Power as the Drainman in "The Servant in the House," on his first visit here a few weeks ago, that his portrayal of that tremendous role created a veritable sensation and that a wide controversy was aroused thereby. The dramatic critics in all the towns visited by Mr. Power agreed that it ranked amongst the most significant dramatic portraits of the decade.

"The Little Brother" tells the story of two brothers who were separated in childhood; one of them being brought up by Christians, becomes a Russian priest; the other, educated by his kinsman, becomes a Jewish rabbi. The daughter of the rabbi has fallen in love with the priest's ward. Both priest and rabbi are equaly vehement in their opposition to such a mixed marriage, though from very different motives, but the lovers refuse to be separated, and marry, despite this opposition. They are happy and their union is blessed with a child.

Later the rabbi becomes reconciled to his daughter, but the priest pursues his fanatical opposition and endeavors, though in vain, to persuade the girl to give up her son in order to avoid what he believes will be inevitable disaster when the time comes to determine the child's faith.

Mr. Power's reputation, which is of the highest, and which is not confined to this continent, has been built up largely upon his well-known stand against any form of impropriety or salaciousness upon the stage, and his championship of the highest form of dramatic art in the theatrical.

Mr. Power's portrayal of the priest is one which has been praised highly by the leading dramatic critics of the day for its tremendous strength and its vital human appeal. He will be supported by the same excellent company that was seen here in "The Servant in the House" and includes Mr. Harvey Hays, Mr. Walter Edwin, Mr. Harold De Becker, Mr. J. Irwing White, Mr. Robert Taber, Miss Edna Holland, Miss Chela Knight and Miss Alma Chester.



MR. TOM MARKS, with Arlie Marks Co. at the Grand all next week.

"THE BRAT"

TO OPEN THE ARLIE MARKS ENGAGEMENT AT THE GRAND THEATRE

New York's greatest comedy drama, "The Brat," will open the engagement of Arlie Marks and associated players at the Grand next Monday, when a solid week of repertoire at popular prices will give theatre-goers a treat.

Miss Marks in the title role is a quaint character, that of a cheap chorus girl, rescued from a night court by a novelist who wants to study a "Type" for his new book being taken to his home, he finds a little philosopher, has a wealth of quaint humor and affection. Miss Marks is an ideal actress in "The Brat" as the part offers many opportunities to display her versatility and charming personality. "The Brat" is full of snappy lines and dramatic situations and if all plays were messages like "The Brat" the world would be more happy for it, as it is, an original witty play surprisingly human and full of mirth. Special scenery is carried for this production, and new interesting vandeville between the acts will make the engagement an interesting one.

Prominent in the support of this excellent company is Mr. Tom Marks, well and favorably known here from previous visits.

Plays will be changed at each performance. None repeated, and popular prices should make this engagement a note-worthy one.

The Woodstock Medical Association has adopted a new schedule of fees, and decided to close Wednesdays at noon for five months.

AMERICAN TEAM WIN SECOND PLACE

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA BLANKED 16-0—SWEEDEN LEADS IN ICE EVENTS

Antwerp, April 29.—The United States won second place in the Olympic hockey contests, defeating the Czecho-Slavs last night by a score of 16 to 0. The winners tallied seven of the goals in the first half. The Americans scored almost at will. They will receive the prize today.

The Americans had little difficulty in scoring at will in the first half of the contest, although the Czecho-Slovaks showed occasional bursts of speed. Seven goals were scored in the first period, while in the second half Larry McCormick tallied five of the nine goals.

Last night's victory gives the United States a total of three points in the Olympic ice events, which ties with Canada and Finland for third place. Sweden takes first and Norway second.

The American line-up was: Goal, Wiedenborner; defense, Fitzgerald and Goheen; rover, Synott; forwards Conroy, J. McCormick and Larry McCormick.

Sweden beat Switzerland in the hockey contest late last night by a score of 4 to 0. Sweden will play the semi-finals to-day with the Czecho-Slovakian team.

A Business Puller

There is nothing new about selling goods. The same methods are in vogue, with modern modifications, as existed a decade ago.

The sale of goods is attained by four methods---by advertising, by window dressing, by talking, by giving satisfaction.

Advertising is the chief of these methods because it carries to homes by the cheapest and surest method possible, information as to what you have to sell, and attracts that general attention to your business not otherwise obtainable.

The strong points of advertising are:
Persistency to assure returns.
Continuous and well-directed publicity.
A fair price for commensurate returns.
Quality of value as against mere size of circulation.

In connection with these four strong points of advertising The Review's columns offer space at fair rates based on the quality of its circulation, and the price and results will be found such as to confirm our claim that Advertising in The Review pays.

The readers of The Review are those who appreciate a dependable local newspaper, and whose trade spells "quality" and "cash."

We'll be pleased to talk it over with you.

The Review circulates among the best homes and reaches the best of Peterboro's buying public.

AIR RACE NOW NEW YORK TO ALASKA

COURSE MAPPED OUT FOR THE MARATHON IS 4,870 MILES

New York, April 29.— A transcontinental air race from New York to Alaska, in part over Canadian territory, is among the numerous ambitious aeronautic events planned for this year. The course mapped out for his aerial marathon covers a distance of 4,870 miles. In making the arrangements for the race the American Flying Club is co-operating with the training and operations group of the United States Army Air Service. The aviators, according to tentative plans, will hop off at the Mineola, N. Y. field at a date to be fixed later, probably early in the summer. The course will be over United States territory to Minot, N. D., from which point the flyers will cross into Canada, crossing the provinces of Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia to Port Egbert on the Alaska border. In Alaska the route runs to Circle, Fort Yukon, Fairbanks, by way to Fort Gibbon, and thence to Nulato and Home, the latted point being the final landing place. Compulsory stops at an average of 150 miles apart will be arranged.

The present year promises to be a banner one in the history of aviation as a sport both in America and Europe. So far as the United States is concerned, the first event of importance will be the flying field day of the Intercollegiate Flying Association at Mineola Field, May 7. Elepen American colleges and universities will be represented in a varied programme of flying feats, concluding with a cross-country flight The American Flying Club is also arranging for a seaplane race around Long Island early this summer.

In France a flying meet will be held at Juvisy, near Paris, May 22 and 23. The British aircraft exhibition will be held at London in July. In addition the British Government has offered several million pounds as prizes for various airplane sporting events to be held during the year. The Cape of Cairo route is being blazed. Between the two points the distance by rail, steamship or ground transport is approximately 6,223 miles. The aerial line is about 5,200 miles.

WANT SIMPLER RULES.

Golfers of the States Will Ask That Stymie Be Abolished.

Chicago, April 29. — Wilbur H. Brooks, of Cleveland, president of the Western Golf Association, and James E. Nugent of Kansas City, president of the trans-Mississippi Golf Association, will attend a conference in New York on Friday between representatives of the various associations and the special United States Golf Association committee selected to go abroad to discuss revision of the rules of golf with a committee of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrew's, Scotland.

A number of State associations in the West which were asked to send representatives, have requested Mr. Brooks to act for them. The Western men, according to Crafts W. Higgins, assistant secretary of the Western Golf Association, will ask that the stymie be abolished and that the penalty for a lost ball be made the same as for a ball out of bounds. They also will argue that the rules be re-written in a simpler manner.

GOODMAN FOR MONTREAL

Montreal, April 29.—Mike Goodman, champion speed skater of Canada, and one of the outstanding stars of the Falcons, may be with the M.A.A.A. team next season.

Goodman, when in Montreal, en route to Antwerp, expressed a keen desire to make his home here, and a good position is in readiness for him. If he accepts this, he has promised to turn out with the Winged Wheel team.

ONTARIO MARATHON GOES TO ST. CATHARINES

TRIAL WILL BE RUN ON MAY 24 DISTANCE FIFTEEN MILES

Ontario's Olympic Marathon trial will be run at St. Catharines on May 24. Last nght the Ontario Branch of the A.A.U. of C. awarded the race to the Martin Athletic Club of St. Kitts. The distance will be 15 miles. The final trial in which runners from all parts of Canada will compete will be run at Hamilton on the 19th of July.

The application for reinstatement from Ollie Johnson, the Hamilton sprinter, was discussed, and it was decided to make no final decision until further information has been received. Johnston ran in the Powderhall handicap while serving with the Canadian Expeditionary Force. He claims that he received no money and was not aware that he was transgressing the amateur rules.

Olympic matters were discussed and it is planned to send 20 track and field men to the Olympic games. There will also be seven boxers and four wrestlers. No mention was made of a cycling team.

The Provincial, Olympic boxing trials will be held in Toronto about July 1, while the final trials will also be decided here, the date being July 17.

The Provincial track and field trials are carded for the Queen City on or about the second Saturday in June.

ARE STILL SHINING WITHOUT SHINERS

SUCH IS THE POSITION OF SOME AMERICAN BALL PITCHERS

Shine ball pitchers are still shining without the shiners. When the major leagues put the ban on freak deliveries, three old addicts of the doctored ball—Hod Eller, Eddie Cicotte and Al Sothorn—were given tickets to the discard pile. "They'll never get by without the freak stuff. They won't last an inning on regular pitching," some Solomons predicted. But they're going as good as they ever did. Eller made his start in the eighth inning of a game with the Cubs leading the Reds 6 to 5. He held them hitless and runless. The Reds won out 11 to 6. John Heydler, president of the National League, saw him beat the Cubs 5 to 3 in his second start. He allowed eight hits, didn't issue a pass and struck one out.

Cicotte has pitched eighteen innings and allowed one run—against the heavy hitting Tigers. He shut them out 4 to 0 in the first game and won the second 7 to 1. He allowed five hits and passed one in the first game and in the second game was found for a quintet of bingles but he struck out six, including the great Cobb twice.

Sothoron got away bad in his first start, losing to the Indians 5 to 0, but he came back against them and won 4 to 1. An even break against Cleveland is a feather in the cap.

Despite frequent assertions to the contrary, batters claimed the trio of freak experts were getting a hop on the ball by rubbing a shiny spot on the pellet. Cicotte and Eller did rub the ball on their trousers before each delivery, but they insisted it was just to worry the batters.

TETRATEWA WON FIRST IN ENGLAND

FAVORITE IN GREAT DERBY CAPTURES A BIG PURSE

London, April 29. — Major D. McCalmont's Derby favorite, Tetratema, by The Tetrarch-Scotch Gift, won the Two Thousand Guineas, the first of the English three-year-old classics, at the Newmarket races yesterday. W. Raphael's Allenby finished second and Sir E. Paget's Paragon was third.

For months past heavy wagers have been laid on Tetratema to win this year's Derby, which will be run at Epsom Downs on June 2.

LONGBOAT GOES TO HOMESTEAD IN WEST

CAREER OF THE FAMOUS INDIAN RUNNER OF MARKED INTEREST

Lou E. Marsh in the Toronto Star says: Tom Longboat, the big Indian, who was at one time the Marathon idle of Canada, has gone West to take up a homestead on the soldiers' re-establishment plan. Longboat was a farmer on the Six Nations Indian Reserve before Bill Davis, the veteran Indian distance runner, discovered his capabilities and brought him out for the Hamilton Herald road race in 1906. He won. The same year he won the Ward Marathon in Toronto in 1907 he captured the famous Boston Marathon in record time, and from then on he was the Canadian long distance idol

Was a Repeater.

Longboat won the Ward Marathon and Montreal Star road races three years in succession, lost the Olympic Marathon in 1908, and then turned pro to run Dorando, Hayes, Shrubb, Queal, Marsh, Woods, Homer, Kohlemainer, Ljungstrom, Swanberg and that crowd of long distance gallopers. He saw two years' service in France, and, though he had several narrow escapes, came home unscathed.

A Great Comebacker.

The big Indian is a remarkable "comebacker." After his defeat in 1908 in the English Olympic Marathon he came back here decisively defeated. Dorando beat him in that race, and later on beat Johnny Hayes as far as you can shoot a rifle. Then he fell down in the All-Star $10,000 Derby at he Polo Grounds, won by Henri St. Ives. Then Sol Mints of Hamilton bought his contract from Pat Powers of New York for a thousand dollars. Three weeks later the Indian beat Alf Shrubb at twenty miles at the Island.

SHOWS OLD FORM

Montreal, April 29.—That George R. Hodgson, Olympic champion of 1912, is fast rounding into condition was shown by his effort in the 440-yard race in the weekly swimming handicaps of the M.A.A.A. last night, when he swam within eight seconds of his world's record for the 400 metres and seconds of his own Canadian record, which still stands.

VARDON ALMOST CERTAIN TO PLAY FOR U.S. TITLE

New York, April 29.—Harry Vardon, six times British open golf champion, has sent a letter of thanks to Alec Pirie, Secretary of the Professional Golfers' Association, concerning the invitation to compete in the P.G.A. championship tournament to be held over the Flossmoor links later in the season. Vardon wrote as follows:

"Your letter to hand with many thanks. It is nearly certain that Ray and myself will be making the trip, as I have been asked to make at least one more trip across, and we shall be very pleased to play in your P.G.A. championship, if it is at all possible. I will advise you later when we think of sailing."

HUNTING WILD HORSES

ROPING THESE ANIMALS PROVES EXCITING.

Thousands of Them Roam the Northern Wilds of the Province of British Columbia, and Adventurous Men Have Found It Profitable to Drive a Whole Band of Them into a Corral.

In the vast and sparsely settled territories marked on the map of Northern British Columbia as Peace River, Cassiar, Cariboo and Lillooet, bands of horses roam wild. The number cannot be estimated, but a guess can be hazarded, based on the number captured in recent years. I should place the figure at between two and three thousand.

Eighty per cent. of the horses owned by Indians to-day in these districts have either been caught wild, or are colts of wild mares captured a few years ago. Strictly speaking, these animals are not wild, but feral. That is, they are descended from tame horses which escaped from their owners, and have deteriorated until to-day they are mostly undersized and lack the staying power of the horse bred in captivity, though extremely hardy. They vary from 650 to 1,150 pounds in weight, though a few will be bigger.

The foundation stock of these feral horses is believed to have strayed away from the Spanish expeditionary forces in the days of Cortez, and gradually made its way north. The native American horse, scientists agree, disappeared many hundreds of years earlier, and the Indians and Mexicans had not even a tradition left of their existence. Historians relate that the natives were amazed at seeing men riding on horses, mistaking them for some weird semi-human creatures of the Centaur type.

Coming to comparatively recent times, the British Columbia wild horse received hundreds of new members in the days of '98 and '99, when the gold rush to the Klondyke was at its height. Pack trains with anywhere from ten to two hundred horses were strung out over hundreds of miles of coast, and as these thousands of horses had to be turned out to graze every night, it was inevitable that many should escape the daily morning round-up.

Possibly because he is a descendant of a "civilized" ancestor, the feral equine is extremely wary of man, and a difficult animal to capture.

In February, 1916, in partnership with Joe Graves, I set out to round up a bunch of wild horses in the neighborhood of Youngs Lake, East Lillooet, about forty miles north of the Canadian Pacific Railway line. Joe had hunted wild horses for several years, and knew the country like an open book.

Like most other wild gregarious animals, horses do not wander far afield unless the band becomes too large for its feeding grounds, or they are frightened away. They roam at will throughout the summer and fall months, selecting the shady timbered lands where flies and mosquitoes are scarce, but in winter, they come down to the meadows and frozen swamps where the grass is long and easy to paw from under the snow.

In Youngs Lake district, there is a chain of scattered meadows, stretching over thirty miles, and it was on one of these meadows that Joe took me to the hunt. We were riding strong well-fed horses, and we set out prepared to stay away two or three days if necessary. We left Joe's homestead early on a bright sunshiny morning, with the thermometer registering fifteen above zero, which is comparatively warm for that part of the country. We rode easily for several hours before coming suddenly on a band of nine horses feeding in a little "pothole," or small meadow hidden in the timber. The horses saw us and were off at a gallop in a trice. Spurring our mounts we started in pursuit, and for an hour we kept them going at full speed, following their well-beaten trail. At the far end of a long narrow meadow, Joe pulled up his horse and said: "Guess we'll have something to eat now, and let our horses rest awhile. Those 'cayuses' (the Indian word for horses, but generally used by white men to denote an inferior animal), will only go a couple of miles further on, and will stop and rest too. But they won't get anything to eat there, while ours can get a feed here where there isn't much snow."

As Joe had surmised, we came upon the wild band only a short distance from the meadow. They were standing about, resting.

Two of them did not get away to a good start, and my partner waved me back. I soon saw he was going to try to catch up to the laggards and lasso one of them. Spurring his horse furiously, he was soon within roping distance. Uncoiling his lariat, he circled it over his head, ready for a throw at the right moment. Suddenly he stood up in the stirrups and flung the noose neatly over the wild horse's neck.

The captive fought frantically for a couple of minutes, but Joe's horse was trained to the business, and there could only be one end to the struggle. The wild horse jumped, plunged, bucked, twisted and turned. The rope around his neck was gradually choking him. Suddenly he reared. That finished him. Joe's horse jumped forward; dragging the other off his feet and stretching him full length on the snow. Then, with Joe keeping his rope lariat taut, I sprang to the ground and in a minute had the prostrate animal helpless with a half hitch around a hind foot, and the other end of a short length of rope tied around his neck. With only three feet to stand on, the brute was at our mercy. We dragged him to a tree and tied him there securely, to be further attended to after we had captured the rest of the band.

That was the only horse we roped on this chase.

Another method of catching these horses that is fairly successful, is the placing of a running noose suspended over a small limb and attached to a solid tree. This trap is set along a trail used by the wild horses, and as soon as one of them gets his head into the noose, he springs forward and draws the rope tight around his neck. We drove the band along at top speed for seven or eight miles. They followed a trail till they came to a meadow where Joe had built wings that lead into a corral where we could get the whole bunch.

The thing worked out exactly as Joe had said. The preceding summer he had built two long fences that tapered in the form of a V, terminating in a high corral. Apparently the horses did not notice the fences until these were less than twenty yards apart and by that time we were so close up to them, galloping and shouting, that they were afraid to turn back, and rushed right into the corral.

There were three colts and two yearlings in the bunch we had rounded up. The older animals were worth from ten to fifteen dollars apiece, unbroken, and could sell for twice that amount after being ridden once or twice. The yearlings and colts, Joe decided to brand and turn out again with his tame horses. He kept the older animals until the summer, when they brought from $30 to $40 apiece. —P. W. Luce in Toronto Star Weekly.

Is there such a thing as a snake lover? Just ask the keeper of the reptile house who has been there for years and he will tell you snakes are beautiful and kind. This [illegible] has been denied him lately, since the gentleman died.—Exchange.

Plea for Natural History.

We content ourselves with a knowledge of the tongues, and a little skill in philology, or history, perhaps, and antiquity; and neglect that which to me seems more material, I mean natural history. I do not discommend or derogate from those other studies; I should betray mine own ignorance and weakness should I do so; I only wish they might not altogether jostle and exclude this. I wish that this might be brought in fashion among us. John Ray (1691).

Nation's "Balance of Trade."

"Balance of trade" is an expression used by political economists to indicate the difference between the value of the exports and imports of a country. The theory of the balance of trade grew out of the mercantile theory which considers the possession of gold to be the chief object of trade. Hence there rose the belief that a nation increases in wealth to the extent that the money value of its exports exceeds that of imports.

Sea Otters.

Prohibition of the killing of sea otters in Alaskan waters has been extended to November 1, 1925. It is hoped that in the meantime this valuable fur-bearing species, which was pursued almost to extermination, will gain somewhat in numbers.

The fur of the sea otter is the most beautiful and most costly of all peltries. Long before the discovery of America the mighty tycoons of Japan clothed themselves with its shimmering velvet. Early explorers found the natives of the Aleutian islands and the Puget Sound region commonly wearing sea otter cloaks, which they parted with for a trifle.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

LAMPMAN—MacKENZIE.

A charming wedding took place in St. John's Church, Lakefield, yesterday evening at 7.30 o'clock when Miss Helen Winnifred MacKenzie, eldest daughter of Rev. and Mrs. A. W. MacKenzie, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr Archibald Arthur Lampman, son of the late Archibald Lampman, Canadas' illustrious poet.

Exquisitely gowned in white satin edged with silver lace and carrying a bouquet of pink, sweet-heart roses, the bride entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Atwood.

The young bridesmaids were becomingly attired in white, while Mr. Kenneth MacKenzie, brother of the bride, Mr. Beresford Hamilton, of Peterborough, Mr. Hugh McCullough, of Galt, and Mr. Harry Atwood, of Toronto, acted as ushers.

Rev. Canon Hedley, uncle of the bride, performed the ceremony. During the signing of the register a beautiful solo selection was rendered by Mrs. Harry Fitzgerald.

After this ceremony the wedding party repaired to "The Grove" where a reception was held, a twhich were present a large number of friends, many of whom were from a distance. The guests partook of dainty refreshments and the fair young bride cut the wedding cake with a sword. Many toasts were proposed for the future happiness of the young couple and the bride was the recipient of many costly and beautiful gifts, showing the high esteem in which she is held.

Mr. and Mrs. Lampman left by motor for Gairlock and other points, where they will spend their honeymoon.

OGDEN—GLAZIER.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the George Street Methodist parsonage on Wednesday at seven p.m., when Florence Glazier and James Ogden, both of this city, were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. J. Thomas.

Best wishes will follow the happy couple.

TELFORD—DELAHAYE.

At the George Street Methodist parsonage on Wednesday at 2.30 p.m., Irene May Delahaye, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Delahaye of this city, was united in marriage to Robert Bruce Telford. They were attended by Ray Hetherington and Miss Pearl Delahaye. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. J. Thomas.

After a short honeymoon they will reside at 78 McDonnel street.

FIRE DESTROYS DAIRY

Second Heavy Loss in Few Months for G. A. B. Gay.

Belleville, April 29.—Last night fire which broke out at 10.30 completely destroyed the dairy of G. A. B. Gay, on the 2nd concession of Sidney, a short distance west of the city. The origin is unknown. With the dairy was destroyed the entire equipment. The loss will be very heavy, the insurance being about $4,000, covering not much more than half the damage. Mr. Gay is a leading dairy man of this district, and about four months ago he lost his barns and many cattle by fire caused by spontaneous combustion.

TEAM FOR FIRE HALL

A new team has been secured by the Fire Department from B. L. McLean, mayor of Lindsay. They are a fine team, dark brown in color and 5 and 6 years old. They were purchased to replace Roy and Billie, a team of gray mares which has been on the department for some years. Two weeks ago they were sold to Mr. Disdale, the wood dealer, as it was decided that they were becoming too old for the department.

On Monday last the fire chief and two men journeyed to Lindsay in a car to bring the team home. They left Lindsay at 1.15 p.m. and reached Peterborough at 6 o'clock with the horses in perfect condition after a 39 mile jaunt. From the general appearance of the team it is thought that they will make splendid fire horses.

WE MUST GET THEIR GUNS AND AIRPLANES

CANNOT BE ALLOWED LYING ABOUT SAYS PREMIER LLOYD GEORGE

(By Canadian Press.)

London, April 29.—Premier Lloyd George, speaking in the House of Commons today on the San Remo conference, said that before the conference there had been some misunderstandings, serious enough in themselves, but made grave by deliberate fomenting on the part of very reckless persons. The Premier, stated, howewer, that everyone was satisfied with what happened at San Remo. The conference has dispelled all suspicion that the Versailles Treaty was not to be enforced.

Everyone Satisfied.

One misunderstanding that had been removed, said the Premier, was that on the part of French, who no doubt thought Graeat Britain did not mean to enforce the treaty with regard to reparation and disarmament. There was no difference of opinion on disarmament, Llloyd George said, but when it came to ordering disarmament there was no one in Germany who seemed to have power to enforce the decree, and that was one of the greatest difficulties the Allies had to face.

We Must Have Them.

"Their guns and airplanes we must get," said the Premier. "We cannot allow these terrific weapons of war to be left lying about."

A contract has been awarded for the erection of a $74,600 public school at Welland.

THE TRENT WATERWAY

THE ATTENTION OF AMERICANS IS KEENLY ATTRACTED TO THESE WATERS

In the March number of the "Country Life," one of the best of American out-door-life publications Mr. Albert L. Judson, President of the American Power Boat Asociation. writes an interesting article on motor boating in connection with the prospects for enjoyment by tourists. In the following quotation the Trent Waterways comes in for a flattering notice. "At noon the next day we are at Whitehall when we enter the lower stretches of Lake Champlain where the glorious mountains rubbing their green and purple sheen gently against the summer skies excite our admiration and awe, and add to our feeling of self-satisfaction for having been wise enough to investigate at first hand the pleasures of motor boat cruising. And thus it goes. We may linger long on the lake, loafing, swimming, fishing, eating aboard or at the many excellent hotels, just as our own sweet fancy may commend us. Or we may go on through the Canadian canals up to the St. Lawrence, where the motor boat is in its utmost glory, where bad luck can hardly attend our fishing efforts, where life is just what we wish to make it from the ultimate in simplicity to socially complex. When we reach the St. Lawrence the whole world is open to our cruising desires. We may elect to navigate the newly opened Trent canal, in Canada, which has opened to the motor boatboat man an enormous new territory for his peregrinations, surpassed by none in the world. We may then go through the great lakes to Chicago, thence down the wonder-path of the Mississippi River, around the Florida Keys, and come north by the beautiful and interesting inside route."

Now, Mr. Judson, we expect you along this summer and from your visit the fishing, scenery and variety will give you many reminiscences for further articles on this beautiful waterway on your later issues of "Country Life."

It will be interesting to know who will be the first in Peterborough to traverse the whole route from Peterborough to Midland.

NO DISTINGUISHING RANK FOR GRAVES OF WAR HEROES

London, April 28. — The War Graves Commission has decided unanimously on absolute uniformity of headstone for the graves of every man and woman who was killed or who died in the war. A plain design in Portland stone has been selected, recording the name, regiment and rank, symbol of religious faith and the inscription which Kipling chose: "Their name liveth forevermore," with room at the foot of the stone for an inscription limited to 66 words, to be personally chosen by those nearest to the dead. The principle of equality, whether for Field Marshal or camp follower, has the approval of the Government.

Kipling and Winston Churchill, with other members of the Commission, addressed a meeting of the Army Committee in the House of Commons to-night. Kipling, with intensity of feeling, spoke in favor of absolute equality. He said the main object had been to aim at dignity and simplicity and a sense of abidingness.

Mr. Churchill said that the whole spirit of the army was in favor of equality and uniformity.

SINN FEINERS AND OPPONENTS ENGAGED IN STREET FIGHTING

Lively Scenes Outside Wormwood Scrubbs Prison, Where Hunger Strikers are Confined—Ladies' Chorus Feature Occasion by Singing Irish Songs—Sister of Marshal French Present.

(By Canadian Press.)

London, May 1.—Sinn Fein sympathisers and opponents engaged in a street fight before Wormwood Scrubb prison last night, and mounted police had to charge the crowd before they would disperse.

Stones and clods of earth were hurled, and several persons were slightly injured.

It was announced today that three more hunger strikers had been released, making a total of thirteen taken out of the place during the past ten days.

Ladies Sang Songs.

One feature of last night's demonstration was the appearance of "tin" helmets worn by a large party of Irishmen engaged in keeping order.

A choir of ladies sang Irish songs, and Mrs. Despard, sister of Field Marshal French, addressed the assemblage.

Disorderly scenes occur almost nightly in the neighborhood of this prison, but the participants are drawn from the rougher elements of the vicinity, and the trouble is not attributed to the feeling aroused by the hunger strike of the men confined in prison.

ST. RAILWAY STRIKE IN LONDON, ONT.

(By Canadian Press.)

London, Ont., May 1. — With but little apparent inconvenience, London citizens walked to work today or patronized numerous jitneys that are already operating to carry traffic during the street railway strike which commenced this morning. With this exception May Day is quiet in London.

WINNIPEG STRIKE IN BRITISH HOUSE

GOVERNMENT DECLINES TO ASSERT INFLUENCE ON DOMINION AUTHORITIES

London, May 1.—The Colonial Under Secretary, replying to a question by Lieut.-Col. Malone on the subject that labor in the colonies and dominions was more severely treated than in this country, said: "I would point out that the self-governing dominions are original members of the international labor organisation. Col. Malone may be assured that leaders in the Winnipeg strike will not be subject to treatment more harsh than people in this country."

Mr. Bonar Law said: "I think we can leave the Canadian Government to fulfil their obligations under the treaty."

Col. Malone said: "Will the British representatives make representations to them?" Mr. Law said the reply to the question was in the negative. If he had any want of faith in the proper conduct of a self-governing dominion it would be a very bad outlook.

ROMANCE OF WILDERNESS DAYS TO LIVE AGAIN IN HUDSON'S BAY CO. CELEBRATION

Red River Pageant Promises to be One of Most Interesting Historical Spectacles Ever Staged in Canada—Starts From Site of Old Fort Garry.

(By Canadian Press.)

Winnipeg, Man., April 30.—With Indian fur bridgades and York boats loaded with peltries on the Red River, council fires burning at Lower Fort Garry and the smoke of the peace pipe scenting the air, the romance of wilderness days will live again at the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the Hudson's Bay Company which will be inaugurated in Winnipeg, May 3.

Sir Robert Kindersley, G.B.E., latest of the distinguished line of Hudson's Bay Company governors, will be present from England and will take part in the river pageant and in the subsequent street pageants which will be held successively in Edmonton, May 6-9; Calgary, May 11-13; Vancouver, May 15-19, and Victoria, May 21-24.

The Red River pageant, which promises to be one of the most interesting historical spectacles ever staged in Canada, will start from the site of old Fort Garry, early capital of the company's once vast empire and about which Winnipeg grew and pass down stream eighteen miles to Lower Fort Garry. Tricked out in bravery of paint, feathers and beaded buckskin, Indians from a dozen tribes will man York boats and canoes in fur brigade formation. To do honor to the company to which their ancestors paid loyal allegiance Indians will come from the shores of Hudson Bay, James Bay, Lake Superior fur country, Northern Saskatchewan, from the prairies and from the Rocky Mountains, Athabasca and British Columbia.

A flotilla of freight boats piled high with bales of furs will trail in the wake of the York boats in charge of factors and trappers in pioneer costumes. As it glides in long procession through a countryside famous in Hudson's Bay traditions past the site of old Fort Douglas, these ones of Lord Selkirk's Red River settlements and the battlefield of Seven Oaks where Governor Semple and twenty men fell in conflict with their rivals of the Northwest company, the pageant will seem to sail out of the past of 250 years ago.

When it reaches Lower Fort Garry, whose stone buildings and battlemented stone walls still preserve the picturesqueness of early days, two ancient brass cannons at the gate will boom a salute from their rusty throats. Within the walls of the old stronghold where the first treaty was signed between Canada and the western Indians in 1871, Governor Kindersley will seal anew the ancient friendship between the Redmen and the company by smoking the calumet of peace. The pipe, especially designed for the occasion, will bear carved upon its stem the totems of all the tribes and will be presented to the governor as a souvenir. Sir Robert will confer upon each of the braves a medal struck in honor of the anniversary and at a council at which the Indians will squat upon the ground in a wide semi-circle, will reply to orations by the sachems and chieftains. After the speeches, the Indians will present a wampum belt to the governor in ratification of their pledges of fealty, and will partake of an old fashioned feast.

Street pageants will be held in the other four cities. Floats will picture romantic episodes in the company's history and the development of the West and in the parades will appear Indians, trappers, cowboys, dog teams, Red River carts, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, government officials and civic bodies. In all the cities moving pictures taken on a special expedition which spent seven months in the north and illustrating every phase of the fur trade, will be exhibited free to the public. During the pageants it is expected the five cities concerned will declare holidays.

IMPROVEMENTS AT THE FIRE STATION

PRESENT FURNACE IS SAID TO BURN TOO MUCH COAL

UNDERGROUND GASOLINE TANK

DRILL TOWER AND CONSIDERABLE MINOR REPAIRING BADLY NEEDED

Chairman Ald. Morrison reported to his Fire, Water and Light Committee last evening the following repairs and improvements needed at the fire hall:

1.—Floors of No. 1 and No. 2 apparatus rooms repaired.

3.—The front of south stable raised to allow apparatus to go under, door large enough to allow the apparatus to come from the rear of south stable.

4.—Drill tower erected in backyard for training purposes, and twenty-five feet of ground purchased from Mr. Chas. Rishor to make the yard large enough for drill purposes. Concrete platfor 65 x 20 feet constructed in back-yard for washing of hose. Hydrant placed in yard for purpose of washing hose and other apparatus and charging of chemical tanks.

5.—Gasoline tank placed underground and equipped with pump

6.—Floors in living rooms repaired.

7.—New furnace.

This work comes under the jurisdiction of the City Trust, but would be chargeable to Council. The cost would not come out of the committee's appropriation.

It is understood that the firemen themselves would build the drill tower mention, the City Trust to furnish the material.

The Peterborough City Trust will be ashed to arrange for all of the above repairs and improvements, excepting the purchase of 25 feet of land and the construction of a concrete platform.

This was the motion of the Mayor and Ald. Whitehouse, and a conference with the City Trust on this matter will be held.

As to a new furnace over 60 tons of coal were burned in the fire hall last year, which amount will increase to 90 tons this year, and Chief Grange declared that he had information to hand of a new furnace which would only consume from 35 to 40 tons of coal the season.

Ald. Crowe said the present furnace was installed in 1906, and should last 20 years.

The gasoline tank which would cost about $200, would be a money-saver.

Fire Chief's Car.

The committee decided to repair the fire chief's car, and not purchase a new one this year. Chief Grange estimates these repairs will cost $400

Who Were There.

There were present Chairman Ald. Morrison, Alderman Jones, Whitehouse and Mayor McIntyre.

RICH ORE FIELD IN MANITOBA

WESTERN PROVINCE TO DEVELOP INTO GREATEST CANADIAN MINING DISTRICT

(By Canadian Press.)

Prince Rupert, May 1.—"Sandy" Salinas, well-known prospector, who after many weary months of search discovered the valuable silver property of the Spanish Group at Alice Arm, has disappeared. No trace of his whereabouts can be found and his friends are anxious. Salinas is a Spaniard, young, short and swarthy. Long before Alice Arm blossomed forth as at boom silver camp, his unbounded faith in the district kept him prospecting through the hills. Despite privation and solitude, his courage never flagged. Finally he struck a rich vein. Today the Spanish Group is decidedly worth owning. But the owner has been missing for weeks. He wandered away after a prolonged illness from influenza. Stacked in sacks at the Spanish Group is enough silver ore to yield a modest fortune.

ANOTHER STRIKE DUE IN TORONTO

BAKERS AND DRIVERS THREATEN TO TAKE JOINT ACTION

REDUCTION IN BREAD PRICES

WOULD FOLLOW ADOPTION OF DEMANDS, THEY CLAIM

Toronto, May 1.—There is a strong probability that the bakers and bread drivers will not be working next week and that bread will be a scarce article throughout the city. The Salesmen and Journeymen Bakers' Unions embracing from 1,000 to 1,200 men have served notice on all the large bakeries that unless they hear from the management of the bakeries before tonight they "would take whatever action was becoming to such an organization." The master bakers not agreeing to terms asked a strike will be declared.

The men are asking the following wage scale: oven-men and doughmen, $40 a week; tablemen and machine men $38 a week; bakers' helpers $35 a week. The drivers are also asking for a new scale of not less than $30 a week with a commission of 12 per cent. to be paid on all retail sales and seven per cent. on wholesale commissions on any amount collected over $270 a week.

The men also ask that all wages be paid weekly and that Wednesday shall be considered a half-holiday the year around, thus recognising a 44-hour week.

Tom Watt, organizer of the Journeymen Bakers, declares that this action of the bakers was the natural result of the negotiation for the "day-work" schedule which is now under consideration before the legislature. The new schedule which the men have drawn up is based on a continuation of the present night work, said Mr. Watt. "Day work would eliminate the present unsanitary conditions and would reduce the present cost of bread." Asked if the men could secure day work would the proposed schedule be reduced, Mr. Watt smilingly refused to make any statement.

The Journeymen Bakers are holding a special meeting to consider the situation this evening in Occident Hall at 8 o'clock and the bread drivers met in the same hall last night to make their plans.

ALD. CROWE COMES IN FOR CRITICISM

VETS WANT TO KNOW WHERE HE GOT IDEA VETS BAND WAS ON LAST LEGS

"Where did Ald. Crowe get his information that the Great War Veterans' Band is on its last legs?" That is the question which is being asked by incensed Veterans at the hall today. In view of the showing made by the band on more than one occasion recently they are at loss to account for such a statement coming from any alderman and the Veterans' one and all assert that it is as far from being the truth as it could be. Feeling this morning among the Veterans was running pretty high regarding what they consider an unwarranted attack on their band and more than one member has expressed himself in strong terms and signified his intention of bringing the matter up at the next general meeting. There will be an executive tonight called to consider other important business, but it is more than likely that if the members of the executive are in the same mood as the Veterans seen this morning the question will be mooted at the meeting tonight.

If anyone for a minute believes such a statement to be true they are reminded that there will be a recital in the hall tomorrow afternoon and they can judge for themselves whether or not the band is on its last legs. Veterans are inclined to believe that Ald. Crowe's views are predjudiced by the fact that he is a strong supporter of a certain other band for the whole band grant and would leave the Veterans out in the cold.

The opinion was by different members that one band should get the grant and that band should be a citizens' band and military.

TEN THOUSAND DEFY LANDLORDS

FIGHTING WITH BACKS TO WALL

TENANTS ASKED TO PAY HIGH RENTS RESIST EVICTION.

(By Canadian Press.)

Chicago, May 1.—Thousands of families in Chicago went on a "rent strike" today, and refused to vacate apartments inaccording with May Day moving order H. J. Standish, president of the Chicago Tennants' Protective League, estimated.

Defy Landlords.

Mr. Standish predicted ten thousand tenants would defy all efforts of landlords to evict them.

Tennants who have been asked to pay exorbitant rents, and who are unable to pay them, or to secure other quarters, are fighting with their backs to the wall, he said.

OFFICERS REFUSE TO OBEY ORDERS

TURKS NOT DISPOSED TO FIGHT AGAINST NATIONALIST LEADER.

(By Canadian Press.)

Constantinople, May 1.—On all sides is found evidence that Turkish officers are not disposed to move against Mustapha Kemal, the Turkish Nationalist leader in Asia Minor.

Momentary Quiet.

Only seven out of thirteen thousand officers known to be in the city have appeared at the War Office in obedience to an order to report. Quiet is reigning momentarily in Anatolia where Nationalists are under arms. The machinery of two Turkish gun boats anchored in the Golden Horn has been disabled, while several ships carrying recruits to the Sea of Marmora where the Sultan's troops are assembling, have gone aground.

GENERAL MIX UP OF TIME ONCE MORE

SOME CITIES AND TOWNS ADVANCE THE CLOCK AND OTHERS WILL NOT.

(By Canadian Press.)

Toronto, May 1.—Commencing tomorrow morning at 2 a.m., when some cities will adopt daylight saving locally, the average Canadian citizen will be presented with new exercise for his mental faculties, in trying to figure out where he is at, in general mix up of standard, local and railway schedule time by the clock.

Cities of Montreal and Quebec, in fact nearly all of Quebec Province, will advance the clock and thereby conform with night time in the neighboring state of New York. The Maritime Provinces, as a whole, will not adopt daylight saving.

Ontario, generally speaking will also stick to Old Sol's dictum in the matter of time, although the cities of Toronto, Ottawa, Kitchener, Sarnia and Niagara Falls have decided locally to turn forward the clock. All others, with smaller towns and the great agricultural community of this Province, will probably remain on standard time

Warsaw, May 1.—A further communication issued by the war office says: "Since the offensive began we have nearly defeated the Bolshevik twelfth army. In the resulting actions the seventy-seventh and the seventy-eighth divisions have been destroyed. The remainder of the Bolsheviki are retreating eastward. JAPS FIGHT REDS.

Reinforcements at Vladivostok—Allies Support Jap Movement.

Vladivostok, May 1.—Severe fighting is in progress at Chita, trans-Baikalia, between forces of General Voitzekoffsky, the sole remnant of Admiral Kolchak's army in that territory now opposing the Bolsheviki faction, according to reports from a Russian source.

The Japanese are declared to be supporting General Voitzekoffsky. Japanese reinforcements are constantly arriving at Vladivostok, and Japanese representatives here declare that the action of the Japanese troops has been sanctioned by the Allies.

Representatives of the city of Paris and a Canadian banking syndicate have signed a contract for a loan to the French city of $20,000,000.

MAY DAY TROUBLES IN CANADA

(By Canadian Press.)

Toronto, May 1.—Reported idleness of twelve thousand coal miners in Sydney, N. S., district as a May Day protest against the imprisonment of the Winnipeg strike leaders, a general tie-up of the building trades in Ottawa, including those working on the new Parliament buildings, and a street car strike in London, are the most serious developments reported in Canadian labor circles this morning.

WORLD-WIDE SCARCITY OF CAPITAL IS RESULT OF MORE CREDIT CONTRACTION

Manufacturers of Automobiles Enter Vigorous Protest Against Banks' Refusal to Advance Funds—Trade Conditions, However Continue Fundadmentaly Sound

(By Canadian Press.)

New York, May 1.—Drastic liquidation of securities and commodities during the week was again primarily traceable to the world-wide scarcity of capital as attested by further credit contraction at home and abroad.

The petition of the Government for the reopening of the United States steel case, the American situation and the proposed heavy tax on war profits were foremost among other developments which expressed the markets in frequent moods of pessimism.

Foreign state banks took their cue from British and French institutions in advancing discounts, and in domestic fields the strain extended to private banks in various districts of the country.

Vigorous Protest

Western manufacturers of automobiles and accessories entered vigorous protest against refusal of banks to advance funds for promotion of their business, the banks contending that such operations did not constitute "essential credits," as prescribed by the Federal Reserve Board.

Fundamentally Sound

Trade conditions continued fundamentally sound, but the railroad strike, with its attendant freight tie up of fuel and raw material again materially reduced production in many leading lines of industry.

Bankers continued to elaborate on the increasing need of Conservative financing and numerous projects and enterprises, including several railroad underwritings in quest of capital, which encountered unexpected opposition or delay. Local and New England banks reported smaller offerings of merchants paper.

NOTICE OF REMOVAL.

On and after April 30 Dr. Edward H. Wood will have his office at 300 Charlotte street, corner of Rubidge.

SATURDAY, MAY 1, 1920.

"HOUSES WANTED," IS THE CRY.

WE BELIEVE there is a movement among the manufacturers to arrange for the erection of a certain number of houses, and this co-operation with the city is highly commendable. However, the housing commission, if such there be now, is strangely silent. As far as we can learn, nothing from it of a concrete nature is before the city, and it is high time there was, if anything worth while is to be accomplished this summer.

How backward Peterborough seems in attempting to solve the housing problem. In Toronto, plans for the quick construction of small homes at comparatively low cost are in the hands of the Board of Control. The prices quoted are: Four-roomed houses, $5240 the pair, five-roomed houses, $5630 the pair, six-roomed houses, $6550 the pair. These prices are for houses with the first storey in brick, above that stucco or shingles, a favorite American design. Here is a plan for our housing commission to work on—a plan which will give a man a home of six rooms for $3275, for the prices quoted above are for semi-detached houses, a great many steps removed from the terrace, which so many object to. And something is radically wrong with conditions in Peterborough if houses cannot be built here as cheaply as in Toronto; so much so, indeed, that the outlook for expansion is not encuraging.

The four-roomed houses which seem to find favor in Toronto in the present emergency are dwellings 14x26 feet, with verandah, living-room, kitchen, two bedrooms and a three-piece bathroom. Such a home would be easy to heat, and many a small family might be glad of one.

In Montreal today 250 families are homeless, and that city's officials have undertaken to find them temporary accommodation in city premises, and arrange for storing such household goods as cannot be used. If our city authorities do not find a way to relieve the housing situation here by insuring the erection of new houses by hook or by crook, it looks at present as though by next fall his Worship the Mayor and his colleagues may also have their hands full in finding roofs to cover the heads of quite a few families.

Mayor Church of Toronto has been a busy man of late hunting up large untenanted buildings which might be converted into living quarters for people who cannot find houses. He has succeeded in finding a score of such among which is named the Arlington Hotel. And this brings to our mind the fact that Peterborough also has a large hotel building doing nothing but offering blank windows to the house-seeking public. The old Oriental is a spacious building containing a large number of rooms, untenanted now for some years. 'Tis a pity the City Council did not take seriously Alderman Turner's proposition to, if necessary, offer the proprietors some such inducement as a fixed assessment to turn the building into apartments. Alderman Turner had the people's interests at heart in making that suggestion, and we see that his mind runs on this question in a parallel groove with that of Toronto's mayor. Why Alderman Turner proposed a fixed assessment was to encourage the owners to reconstruct the hotel's interior into apartments, which, it is understood, would be rather costly in view of the way the rooms are now laid out. While the owners of the property have a perfect right to hold the hotel untenanted if they choose, still for all that, it seems a crying shame that some steps are not taken to utilize some one hundred vacant rooms at a time when "Houses wanted" is an everyday cry. One would imagine that no owner of large vacant property would turn down any proposition which offered a revenue equitable with any outlay to assure tenancy, and Alderman Turner's proposition as to the Oriental Hotel was at least worthy of dipping into quite deeply.

BACK TO THE LAND.

THE TORONTO MAIL strikes the right keynote in the following: "Are economic conditions in the cities and towns going to force a real 'back-to-the-land' movement? Unless the world has better crops this year than there seems reason to expect, food prices will remain high for another twelvemonth. The grain outlook is discouraging to those who wait for easier food conditions, and farm production is lagging. Values are greater, but the quantity is less. Europe is likely to be dependent for several years on this continent for a large part of its food requirements. If business in the cities and towns slackens, the combined effect of high food and housing costs will compel an outward movement to the farms.

"Trading in luxuries cannot continue on the scale of the past year without bringing trouble on the cities and towns. The country has to have more production of necessaries. We want more foodstuffs, more raw materials, more coal, metals, etc. If Ontario farms had the English cottage sytem, in which a farm worker's family could be comfortably housed, many a city father would be better off in the country. A condition which compels rural families to go to the cities and towns is usually lack of proper accommodation on the farms. Most farmers want casual labor, which has little responsibility.

"The growth of the urban centres at the expense of rural population is pictured in vivid terms by rural [illegible]. The outlook is for a check to this transfer of productive power, but the farmers themselves must be prepared to help. Those who need labor, season after [illegible] ought to have separate cottages in which a married [illegible] with a family could live, and allow them sufficient ground whereon to grow their own vegetables [illegible] cow. High costs in the city will [illegible] with a reaction, and these cottages might look good to a worried father who cannot see how to meet city food and housing costs."

LET THERE BE MARGARINE.

WE DO NOT THINK there was any need for the mass meeting of women Thursday night to resolve to petition the Dominion Government not to prohibit the manufacture of oleomargarine. It is not at all probable that the powers that be at Ottawa have any such intention. They will, however, enforce such regulations as will prevent fraud and imposition on the public by caterers by serving margarine in the name of butter, and rightly so. Margarine has been sold in the Old Land for many years, and no one ever gave it the name of butter. It was and is used there for the food fat of which it is composed, because it is cheaper than butter which many cannot afford to buy.

Since December 10, 1917, when the restrictions were removed, the quantity of margarine manufactured in Canada has been 13,358,046 pounds, and the quantity imported 12,071,267 pounds, and it is yet to be shown that margarine has materially affected the butter industry. It is, however, quite evident that at the prices of butter, unless margarine was available, a large section of Canada's community would be deprived of that food fat which is so necessary for human mortals. Of course, if any guarantee could be given that butter would be offered at prices within the reach of all, it is not to be assumed that anyone would prefer margarine, which can be said to enter into competition with butter only in the sense of price.

THOSE CIVIC APPOINTMENTS.

COUNCIL ON MONDAY night will appoint new men to three civic offices—an alderman to take the place of the late Alderman Harry Phelan, a Public Utilities Commission, and a member of the City Trust, positions held by the late W. H. Moore. It is rumored that there are several in the field for these positions, all backed by certain influences. It is to be hoped that Council will exercise their own judgment in selecting men to fill these offices and not be swayed by personal or class considerations, which are not suggestive of the city's general interests being best conserved. This method of selecting men for high municipal office is by no means a popular one, in that it does not seat men of the people's indisputable choice. While perfectly legal and within Council's jurisdiction, it converts an elective office into one by appointment, contrary to the common procedure and Council's selections, it is to be hoped, will be such as will promise an energetic and community-interest application of the duties involved.

ARTISTIC PIANO PLAYING.

THE GENERAL IMPRESSION that counting is a bore, an additional burden and an unnecessary evil, might be removed if pupils understood just what counting was intended to do and how much correct and artistic playing depended on it. Each measure has so many units of measurement. Correct counting makes these units the same length, whether one note, two, three or four notes go to each count. Time must be marked off by mechanical means, as well as with a metronome, or by some one standing by the pupil as he practices. Few pupils have metronomes—still fewer can play by them—and not many are fortunate enough to have some one mark time for them, hence the necessity for learning to count for themselves. The teacher must count for and with the pupil until the habit is formed and (this is the most important consideration), until the feeling for rhythm is established. Pupils often enough count to their playing. This serves no purpose whatever. The counting must flow along definitely, regularly, and inexorably, like the swinging pendulum and the notes must be made to fit the counts. Audible counting is the chief, if not the only means of attaining accuracy so far as length of notes and measures is concerned, and of making the music intelligible rhythmically.

One successful teacher adopts the plan of giving pupils a certain amount of preparatory training in steady rhythmical counting, before playing, and again tests them by having them count aloud to his playing.

NO SIGNALS FROM MARS.

DR. FREDERICK MILLENER has stopped listening for signals from Mars, says the Sun and New York Herald, dismantled the receiving antennae, which covered twenty-five square miles, and announced that Mars did not send wireless waves to the earth in the period in which he was alert to hear them.

Cynics will treat this as evidence that there are no beings on Mars comparable to human beings, and that if reasoning creatures live there they have not reached that plane of accomplishment which we of the earth have attained.

Those who like to believe that Mars is inhabited by a race of super-engineers, however, will not be frightened from their theory by the failure of this attempt to ring up the red planet.

They will say that the Martians may have been too busy to send us signals at he moment when Dr. Millener was in the listening post; that the Martian wireless operators may have been on strike; that the Martian electrical generators may have broken down; that ethereal conditions may have been such that the impulses could not get through; that malicious interference by jealous planets not invited to the conversation may have made communication impossible.

Obviously, the fact that because the Martians were not calling at the time when Dr. Millener was receiving does not prove there are no Martians, any more than it proves there is no Dr. Millener.

Moreover, there is another aspect of this attempted linking up of Mars and earth. How do we know that the Martians are not definitely set against having any traffic with us?

It is conceivable that Mars has observed the conduct of this world for the last six years with constantly growing disapproval, and has finally decided that we are not fit associates for its people. A dignified Martian statesman may say to his followers:

"Those worldlings are a rough, savage, brawling lot, who manifestly cannot teach us anything, and from association with whom we should derive no benefit of any kind. Do not respond to their advances. Pay not attention to their signals. Ignore them electrically as you ignore all undesirable socially. If they want to have traffic with us let them go out and get a reputation."

This is a humiliating possibility, one which all good men will wince to think about. Yet we must face it bravely. If the Martians don't want to greet us cordially there is no Interplanetary League to force them to amend their ways.

Chats About Books and Their Authors

The ignorance of the world at large in regard to the proper methods of finding out things in a library is immense. This is not said in any spirit of superiority, because it is a librarian's duty to be able to guide the public and he or she is in a position to tell through long familiartiy wth the books, where to lay hands upon the information that may be required. But it is so easy for persons to find out things for themselves if they will only go about it in a way that will enable them to do so. It is a common enough sight to see people wandering about among the shelves looking for books that they are unable to find. The volumes are arranged in a systematic manner, each class by itself, and the card catalogue would soon set one right as to where to look, but there are very many who will not take the trouble to learn how it is worked. Beyond this difficulty looms up another. Many come to the library for the purpose of hunting up authorities or to verify some date or quotation. They are usually absolutely at sea as to where to obtain their information. As for instance, a few days ago search was being made for the proper designation of the thirtieth anniversary of a wedding. The most likely place to find this had been overlooked and that was the dictionary. Tome after tome had been taken down that could not by any possible chance have contained what was wanted. There are several dictionaries in the market which are almost encyclopaedic in their range and many a difficulty could be solved if people consulted their pages before looking elsewheer.

I have been reading a very interesting book within the past week, entitled "Eccentricities of Genius." The author, Major Pond, was at one time in the Lyceum business in the United States and in his day introduced many speakers and lecturers from England to the American public, besides acting in the same capacity for many of his own countrymen and countrywomen. His book is full of interesting anecdotes concerning men and women who thirty or forty years ago were in the public eye. He throws a very remarkable light on characters like T. DeWitt Talmage, and P. T. Barnum, the famous showman, and others.

Neither Talmage nor Barnum appears in a very favorable light in his pages. Talmage was apparently a money-grabber and Barnum a heartless and soulless individual. But he has many kind words to say of most of those whom he writes about. It is interesting to learn from his book that Anthony Hope obtained his first entry into literature through the kindly offices of the late Robert Barr, who happened to see some of his writings. Barr was at the time editing the "Idler" with Jerome K. Jerome. He was so much taken with Anthony Hope's writing that he asked him how much he would take a thousand words Hope replied by asking: "would a pound be too much?" Barr replied. 'I will give you several pounds a thousand," and thus he was started on the road to success. But the most interesting thing in the book is Major Pond's estimate of the character of Dr. Cook. Major Pond writes: "Dr. Cook has not only made an enviable reputation for himself but is personally one of the most charming of men. He is as modest and unassuming as he is accomplished." This was written before the unassuming traveller'h chimerical conquest of the North Pole. Major Pond finishes his eulogy by grandiloquently saying: "among Polar explorers I do not regard anyone as more bold, more to be depended upon for accuracy of statement, or whose scientific training better fits him to rightly appreciate the value of each new fact discovered than Dr. Frederick A. Cook, our fellow countryman."

The section devoted to religion is really the least resorted to by any patrons of the library. I think one reason for this is that the idea is prevalent that it is devoted entirely to sermons. Nothing could be further from the truth. There is a certain sprinkling of these among the books but the term religion comprises a good deal outside of Homiletics. This subject is only one of very many that come under the head of religion. There is Natural Theology for instance, which takes in Atheism, Deism, Pantheism, Evolution, Theosophy and many other philosophical flights. It deals with religous history and also with mythology and with the thousand and one things that lie between these two extremes. If one does not care therefore to dip into the teachings of pulpit orators there is an ample field for reading in other directions. But we have many a preacher's word in the library, which, if we may not all agree theologically with his views, we can at any rate peruse with delight for their perfection of style and beauty of language. Porteus' lectures on the Gospel of St. Matthew, although they were delivered 120 years ago, are just as applicable to the minds and hearts of men today as they were when they were uttered. His thoughts on war might have been delivered yesterday, for he shows that through all ages lust of gain has been the torch that has started most of the great world-conflagrations. There are two volumes of Spurgeon's Sword and Trowel and admirers of that great preacher will find an abundance of good things in these books. He was one of the men whom Major Pond was utterly unable to induce to enter the lecturing field. The chapter on Spurgeon is not the least amusing thing in Major Pond's book. There are sermons to suit every denomination and essays on every form of ethical outlook. A new set of valuable books was added to our shelves a short time ago in the shape of ancient Hebrew literature, comprising the apocryphal books of the Old and New Testament. The religious section has suffered less from depredations than any other section in the Library, but we have had occasion to mourn the loss of one or two volumes, in the course of the years. These may perhaps be termed pious thefts, but it opens up a field of conjecture as to whether the end jupstifies the means. If the food people steal has a beneficial effect on their systems, why should not the same hold good of one's moral nature, when applied to the theft of nutriment for the soul?

HAVE A GARDEN

The time for fun, work, sweat, bugs, weeds, successes and disappointments in gardening is started.

During 1918, boys and girls, men and women of Canada and the United States grew five hundred million dollar bills in their back-yards That would be a real crop; it is the value of all the garden stuff grown in small gardens that year.

If you are going to have a garden this year, why not lay it out according to a plan? Draw it to scale on paper before you start. By this you will be able to buy the quantities of seeds intelligently and to plant in proper order.

Put in one general group small plants like beets, onions, lettuce, carrots, radishes, and parsnips. In another general group put larger plants like corn, tomatoes and potatoes. Spreading ground vines, like melons and cucumbers, which need wider spacing should be put in another general group. The reason for this grouping is that the various plants in a group need similar general treatment as well as spacing.

In making a plan provide space in which to enter costs and yields of the various crops. This will give you a complete record, which will be useful another year. Another helpful use of the plan is that it will guide you in the rotation of next year's crops. For this purpose save your plan for next season.

In the location of a garden, it is not always possible to choose conditions as to sunlight. It is important, therefore, that in the arrangement of the various kinds of vegetables which are to be planted, due care should be given to providing the greatest exposure to the sun for those crops which need it most. Those plants which must ripen their fruits, such as tomatoes and egg-plant, require the greatest amount of sunshine; while lettuce, spinach, kale, and other leaf crops require relatively less. Foliage crops must have at least three hours of sunlight a day and plants which ripen fruits at least five hours a day. This is important.

If it wasn't for the poor man the rich man would have to shine his own shoes.

USED CAMOUFLAGE IN 1858

Junked Flagship Was Coated With Mud in Civil War.

Flames will soon destroy all that can be burned of the historic old warship Richmond, used during the Civil War, as a flagship, by Admiral Faraught, which has been tied up in the morgue for disabled and superannuated craft in the Delaware, near Bridesburg, for nearly a year. The Givernment recently disposed of the Richmond at auction. The new owner sent the vessel to Eastport, Me., where it will be beached and burned for the iron, brass and copper in the hulk.

The warship was built in 1858 as a first-class sloop of war. It is believed to be the first naval vessel to be camouflaged, as it was coated with mud to conceal its presence during the action before New Orleans.

Soon after the war, the Richmond was taken out of commission and converted into a receiving ship and stationed at League Island. Later it wwas ta ken tao the Norfolk navy yard, where it remained until sold to a Philadelphia ship-breaker.

It is said the ship contains at least 1,000 tons of iron and 40 000 tons of copper and brass—Philadelphia Ledger.

A memorandum indicating that extensive timber limits had been granted without tender immediately prior to the last Provincial election, was laid before the judges investigating the Department of Lands, Forests and Mines.

Nowadays, when the possession of an umbrella is considered as necessary as owning a hat, it may not strike the everyday mind that there was once a time when an umbrella was a luxury. In France when they were first introduced it was considered very effeminate for a man to carry one.

As a shade from the sun the umbrella is of great antiquity. We see it in the sculptures and paintings of Egypt, and Sir Gardiner Wilkinson has engraved a delineation of an Ethopian princess traveling in her chariot through upper Egypt to Thebes, wherein the car is furnished with a kind of umbrella fixed to a tall staff rising from the centre, and in arrangement closely resembling chaise umbrella of the present time. The discoveries at Nineveh show that the umbrella or parasol was generally carried over the king in times of peace and in war times.

From the very limited use of the parasol in Asia and Africa it passed into Greece and Rome as a luxury. The skidrion, or day shade of the Greeks, was carried over the head of the effigy of Bacchus and the daughters of the aliens of Athens were required to bear parasols over the heads of the maidens of the city at the great festival of the Panathenea.

Defoe, it will be remembered, makes Robinson Crusoe describe that he had seen umbrellas employed in the Brazils and that he had constructed his own umbrella in imitation of them. "I covered it with skins," he said, "the hair outward, so that it cast off the rain like a pent house, and kept off the sun so effectually that I could walk out in the hottest weather with greater advantage than I could before in the coolest."

The umbrella was used in England as a luxurious sunshade early in the seventeenth century. Ben Jonson mentions it in a comedy produced in 1616. The eighteenth century had half elapsed before the umbrella had even begun to be used in England by both sexes as it is now.

Much of the clamor which was raised against the general use of umbrellas originated with the hackney coachmen, who, of course, regarded rainy weather as a thing especially designed for their advantage, and from which the public were entitled to no other protection than what their vehicles could afford.

The early specimens of the English umbrella, made of oiled silk, were, when wet, exceedingly difficult to open and close; the stick and frame were heavy and inconvenient and the article generally very expensive.

Denny's Cold.

Denny was suffering from a severe cold and a friend sympathetically inquired how he managed to catch it. "It's all through the bad faith of a friend that I was tryin' to do a neighborly turn for," Denny replied. "It was like this, do you mind. I meets Oswald, who was enjoying a peach of a case of blues. 'Will you do me a favor?' he asks. 'I will,' I says. 'I'm going to commit self-suicide,' says he, 'and it's agin my conscience and religion, but I've thought of a way. I'll go stand at the lakeside with me back toward you, and you come runnin' like mad, knock against me, and bump me in the water. Do you see? In that way I get drowned and I won't be committing suicide, and you will be doin' me a favor.' I was for arguin', but I thinks to myself, if I can do the felly a favor and save his soul besides for him I ought to do it—and I did. He stands by the lake just as we agreed. I goes back about a block to get a good runnin' start, puts on full steam and goes crashin' into where he's standin.'" "Yes, and then?" eagerly asked the friend, as he stopped. "The dam Dutchman had changed his mind, and he stepped aside as I reached him, and I couldn't stop."

Bore Gas Mask Secrets.

Awards were recently made to two Belgian girls, Mlle. Louise d'Have, and her sister, Mlle. Marie d'Have (who is now Mme. Clement), and posthumously to their father, M. Theopholus d'Have, for giving to the Belgian general staff details of the first German gas mask.

Posing as a pro-German, M. d'Have was able to send his daughter to Havre, then to the Belgian headquarters, via Holland, with a design of the mask concealed in her dress. At the Dutch frontier she was searched for four hours in vain. Had the document been discovered she would have been shot.

Altogether, Mlle. Louise crossed the frontier fifty times, until at the end of 1915 she thought it would be safer to remain in Holland. So well did her father pose as a pro-German that his neighbors hated him, and their behavior toward him hastened his death from heart disease. At the armistice the crowd tried to burn his house.—London Mail.

May Amend B. N.A.

Two current developments are emphasizing Canada's progress toward nationhood. One is the definite announcement from London that Canada is to have a minister plenipotentiary in Washington; the other is an intimation from the Canadian Government that the Imperial Parliament is to be asked to amend the British North America Act (Canada's Constitution) so that future amendments may be made by Canada without reference to the Imperial Parliament.

The request that Canada should have the right to amend her own constitution arises not from any specific issue, but from a recognition that in theory the present situation does not conform with the idea of "equal nationhood," now being promulgated. So long as the Canadian constitution can only be changed by an act of the British Parliament Canada's status is technically that of a colony and nothing more. In practice, however, for many years the attitude of the Imperial Parliament has been that any request for a change in the B. N. A. act would be granted at once and no questions asked, with one proviso, that the request be reasonably unanimous as far as the different parties and sections of Canada were concerned.

The proposal now is that the Canadian Parliament can itself make these changes provided all the provincial legislatures agree to them. It will be seen that this is a more stringent regulation than even the difficult provision under which the United States Constitution can be amended. But the problem which makes absolute unanimity of all the provinces in Canada necessary is Quebec. Under the B. N. A. act certain rights to Quebec, granted when the province was conquered and ceded from France were perpetuated, and Quebec has always felt that she was more certain of justice and the continuation of her rights when in the hands of a British Parliament than she would be if thrown on the mercies of her neighboring provinces in Canada. Consequently the proviso that all provinces must agree to proposed changes means chiefly that the other eight provinces must not be allowed to put anything over on Quebec. The proviso will of course similarly safeguard any other province.

Though there has been no clamor for changes in the B. N. A. act, it is possible important changes in it may follow its Canadianization. For example, defenders of the Canadian Senate have always declared there was no use agitating for its abolition because the Imperial Parliament would never consent. Similarly it was said the Imperial Parliament would never consent to the abolition of court appeals to the Privy Council. If now it becomes possible to abolish the Senate and appeals to the Privy Council by Canadian action alone, it will be up to the advocates of these measures to show how earnest they are.

Testing Engines.

The tractor, like the passenger automobile, or the truck, has for its most important feature the engine. This must always be given a most thorough test. There are several tests which a new machine is ordinarily put through preparatory to its being offered for sale.

First of all, the engine is run under some power other than its own. Then it is run under its own power, under load. While this is being done the final adjustments are made and a reading made.

Many companies do not make tests on perhaps more than four per cent. of their passenger cars. This is not necessary, because such a vehicle is not driven under full load.

An apparatus, known as the Prony brake, is an important instrument in determining the brake horsepower the engine is developing, and also to impose a continuous load on the engine, so as to test it. Brake horsepower is the power delivered at the flywheel, or at the power take-off pulley, if the engine is mounted in the chassis.

With the Prony brake it is possible to transform the power at the flywheel into force that may be measured with a scale in pounds, so that the engine efficiency may be determined.—Illustrated World.

Recent Crisis in Denmark

Caused by King Christian, But He Is Not Unpopular

WHILST all the circumstances which have helped to precipitate the recent crisis in Denmark are not yet known, sufficient is known to enable a fairly just estimate to be formed of the general situation of affairs. First of all, it is not an unexpected situation. The world, today, has so many great affairs on its hands that an issue of this kind has to reach a stage of considerable definiteness and acuteness before it can claim any very general attention. Thus, for months past, Denmark has been debating the Schleswig question, the immediate cause of the present crisis, with tremendous eagerness and often with dangerous rancor, but the world heard little of it until an actual explosion took place, until the usual general strike was proclaimed, and the usual rumors and threats of revolution began to circulate.

The story is soon told. When the victory of the Allies made it clear that the great wrong of 1864, namely, the annexation of the Danish territory of Schleswig-Holstein by Germany, could be righted, and would be righted by suitable restorations to Denmark, the Schleswig-Holstein question was generally recognized as one of the questions to be decided by the Peace Conference. In due time, therefore, the matter came up before the conference, and, very quickly, the following facts became apparent:

KING CHRISTIAN.

First, that Holstein was almost entirely German, and Denmark did not want it; second, that Schleswig, whilst largely German in the south, steadily lost its German character as approach was made to the Danish border, until, in the northern part of the province, the population was overwhelmingly Danish. In these circumstances, the Peace Conference divided Schleswig into three zones, running roughly east and west, and decided that the population of each zone should have an opportunity to decide by plebiscite whether it wanted to remain under German rule or be annexed to Denmark. Subsequently, the third zone was shown to be so preponderatingly German that Denmark herself was willing to abandon claim to it, and the elimination of the third zone from the operation of the plebiscite was one of the concessions made to Germany before the signing of the treaty last June.

Now the first zone held its plebiscite last February, and voted itself, by an overwhelming majority, back into Denmark. About a month later the second zone held its plebiscite, and, by a majority almost equally decisive, voted to remain German. The Danish Cabinet, under the leadership of Mr. Zahle, was in favor of acquiescing in this decision, and regarded the question as finally settled. The Conservative Party, however, thought quite differently. This party strenuously opposed abandoning claim to the third zone last June, and has been most bitterly opposed to the surrender of the second zone, with its important city of Flensburg, to Germany in any case. As soon, therefore, as the middle zone voted to remain German, the Conservatives apparently started an agitation, if not to reverse the decision, at least to secure the internationalization of the zone for a term of years. Mr. Zahle and his radical ministry refused to adopt such a policy. King Christian gave his support to the Conservatives, and the Zahle Ministry, refusing to resign, was dismissed. Thus the issue was joined. Radicals and Socialists, everywhere, bestirred themselves in protest against the King's action, and, at a great mass meeting held in Copenhagen, it was decided to send to the King an ultimatum demanding the reinstatement of the Zahle Ministry, the convocation of the Riksdag, and the passing of the electoral bill, under threat, in the event of refusal, of a general strike.

As to whether or not the movement is revolutionary in character, two statements, one from either side are significant. The first is from the Socialist leader in the Lower House of the Riksdag, who recently stated that, whilst he held a republic to be the ideal form of government for Denmark, if a Republican regime were established, he would vote that "King Christian be made President of the Danish State for life." The second is from King Christian himself, who is reported to have said to one of the Ministers in the former Zahle Cabinet, a Socialist, "If you come back with a Socialist majority from the elections, I will have a Socialist Ministry, and you will see that we will work excellently together."

The Ontario division of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association held its annual meeting in Toronto yesterday.

Socialist Premier in Sweden

HJALMAR BRANTING, the new Swedish Premier, is the leader of the Socialist Party, which was a negligible quantity when Branting joined it in 1884 and now is by far the strongest of the three political parties in Sweden.

Branting is tall, broad shouldered and dignified. He dresses remarkably well and presents a strange sight at mass meetings and conventions of the proletariat. The traditions of his family were far from radical. His father, the pioneer of Swedish gymnastics and successor to Hing as professor of medicine at the Karolinska Medico-Kirurgiska Institut, Stockholm, was outspokenly conservative, and his mother, whose maiden name was Emma af Georgii, was an arch-reactionary, like most of the offspring of the landed nobility of limited means.

It was his mother who insisted that Hjalmar attend the exclusive private school of Pastor Breskow, where he was a classmate of the present Swedish King Gustave, with whom he had many a fight and from which Branting, although two years the junior of the prince, always emerged victor. The story of his fights he once related to Henrik Ibsen, who used to come once a week to the Munich home of Georg von Vallmar, leader of the Bavarian Social Democrats, who was married to a Scandinavian.

The pious, blue-law spirit of the Breskow school was repellent to young Branting, who was full of pranks and skeptically inclined. When Hjalmar entered the Stockholm gymnasium at the age of fifteen he manifested opposition to mysticism and transcendental theories. When he was graduated from the gymnasium at the age of seventeen he wrote a composition on "The Influence of International Passenger and Freight Traffic on the Intellectual and Economic Life of Nations," a subject strange to the average pupil of so youthful an age.

His parents wanted him to become a judge, but during the five years he was a student of the Upsala University Branting manifested little interest in law, devoting much time and energy to political economy, literature and history.

During the latter part of the seventies of the last century the democratic movement in Sweden crystallized, for the first time, in a large organisation, "Verdandi," which Branting joined. He became acquainted with the radical Scandinavian writers, especially Georg Brandes, and corresponded with Karl Marx, father of the modern Socialist movement. He also came in contact with Russian Nihilists of the Turgeniev school and hailed the assassination of Czar Alexander II. as the dawn of a new era in the Muscovite empire.

When he left the Upsala University without having graduated he organized a private school, affording graduates of grade schools an opportunity of acquiring a high school and university education. That institute was soon known as the "Red University."

At the age of twenty-four years Branting joined the Socialist party and two years later, in 1886, became editor of Socialdemokraten, the leading Socialist newspaper in Sweden. He was the first Socialist member of the Second Chamber of the Swedish Parliament, elected for the first time in 1896 and re-elected ever since. Since 1908 he has been editor of Tiden, the Socialist monthly, to which he had been a contributor for a number of years.

Branting has been sent to prison five or six times for political offences, the last time in connection with the Swedish general strike eleven years ago. Since then he has not been prosecuted for his political activities, partly because of the increasing power of his party, partly because Sweden, formerly a Junker state of the Prussian type, has been democratized.

Last Words of Rulers.

The ancients had an ear for last words, and among the reputed farewells of Roman emperors there have been handed down Nero's cynical, "What an artist the world is losing in me!" Julian's cry of surrender, "Thou hast conquered, O Galilean!" and Vespasian's ironic, "I feel myself becoming a god."

Had Not Changed Much.

A negro, who was so singularly lazy as to be quite a problem, got converted in a revival. His associates in the church were extremely anxious to know whether he would not bestir himself and go to work. The negro attended a meeting and offered a prayer, in which occurred the petition: "Use me, Lord, use me—in an advisory capacity."

When to Abandon Hope.

We quite agree with you that it is time for a lover to give up hope when the lady "cuts him dead" in the streets and her father threatens to kick him off the doorstep. These are discouraging moments which ought to check the ardor of the most sanguine man.—London Tit-Bits.

Those who have found relief are the people who want all sufferers to know what they gained from their experience.

Mrs. B. Walters, of Savona, B.C., writes, praising Gin Pills for the immediate relief given by these splendid Pills. Mrs. Walters says:—

"I advise people who have not used Gin Pills to try them. I have been troubled for years with weak kidneys, and one box of Gin Pills cured me. I recommend them as an absolute and reliable cure."

Derangement of kidneys or bladder is so very serious that, at the first sign of pain in side or back, treatment with Gin Pills should begin. The duty of the kidneys is to cleanse the blood. If weak or inactive, uric acid and other poisons and waste are carried to the joints and muscles, causing inflammation, rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, constant headaches, dizziness, floating specks before the eyes, gravel or stone in the bladder, general debility and lassitude. If you have any of these symptoms, get Gin Pills at once. Free sample on request. At druggists or dealers, 50c a box. Money refunded if not relieved.

X-Ray Guards the Aviator.

In the construction of airplanes a great deal of attention is given to the inspection of material which is designed to enter into the various parts of the machine before it is worked up in order to avoid the possibility of accidents which might occur due to the presence of some defect. The wood used is especially watched and only such pieces as appear to be of the most perfect character are selected in the first place, and after being sawed up a large percentage of this is rejected despite the care of the first selection. The leading English manufacturers of airplanes now make constant use of the X-ray for the examination of all wood and metal designed for use in the construction of their planes. The X-ray tube is contained in a metal case, a hole being cut in the top of this to admit the upward passage of the rays. The strut is laid over this opening and the penetrating rays pass through the wood, like the sun's rays through glass.

Squirrels Big as Cats.

There is no country that can rival North America for the great number of squirrels, both species and subspecies, represented in her fauna. In so far as brilliancy of color and size are concerned, however, says the American Forestry Magazine, the handsomest and largest squirrels in the world are found in the Orient and the East Indies, along the coast of Malabar, is found a squirrel as big as an ordinary cat; this animal is bright red on the upper part of its body, offset by the most intense black, while all the lower parts are of a clear yellow.

Unusual.

"A rather remarkable couple, I should say," remarked a Toronto man. "They've been married ten years and she still listens with deference when he expresses an opinion."

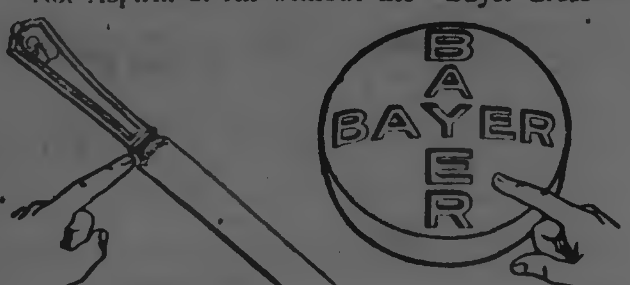
ONLY TABLETS MARKED "BAYER" ARE ASPIRIN

Not Aspirin at All without the "Bayer Cross"



The name "Bayer" on Aspirin is like Sterling on silver. It positively identifies the only genuine Aspirin,—the Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over nineteen years and now made in Canada.

Always buy an unbroken package of "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" which contains proper directions for Colds, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Joint Pains, and Pain generally.

Tin boxes of 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Larger "Bayer" packages.

There is only one Aspirin—"Bayer"—You must say "Bayer"

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

FARMERS WHO HAVE BEEN DRINKING HARD CIDER MAY BE CLASSED AS MOONSHINERS

Law to This Effect in Kentuckey Under State—Wide Dry Amendment.

Louisville, Ky., April 30.—Farmers in Kentucky, who have been accustomed to quenching their thirst with hard cider may be classed as "moonshiners," under the McLellan law, which goes into effect on July 1. Under the state-wide dry amendment, adopted by the people last Fall, any person having a beverage containing more than one-half on one per cent alcohol, including cider or home-made wine, on their premises, may be hailed into court to show whether they manufactured it with or without a permit.

Kentucky is thus assuming "concurrent jurisdiction" with the government of the United States in enforcing prohibition pust more teeth into thte Volstead Enforcement Act and makes every peace officer in the state responsible for keeping the commonwealth "bone dry."

Thirty-four other states and the District of Columbia have state law enforcement measures as follows. Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho. Illinois Indiana, Iowa, Kansas.
Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi. Missouri, Montana, Nebraska. Nevada. New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahama, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota. Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, Washington. West Virginia and Wyoming. Ohio has not adopted a complete enforcement code, three codes having been passed by the legislature and held up by the popular referendum.

Eleven states which so far have not passed law enforcement codes are; Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Vermont, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Louisiana and Wisconsin. Three of the 11, Rhode Island, New Jersey and Wisconsin have adopted beer bills. The Wisconsin Legislature, in enacting a two and one halw per cent law provided that if the United States Supreme Court sustains the Volstead Act. the statute shall not go into effect. Rhode Island will license places selling beverages containing not more than four percent of alcohol by weight on the ground that it is non-intoxicating. New Jersey in legalizing the manufacture, sale and transportation of three and one--half per cent beer awaist the formal declaration of peace and the end of war prohibition.

Maryland wet legislators proposed a three and one half per cent bill, which was passed by the House but was defeated in the Senate. A three and one half per cent bill is now pending in the Massachusetts and New York legislatures. Delaware is considering an amendment to the state prohibition code providing for the sale of liquor "medicinal purposes" in harmony with the federal code. The drys oppose it on the ground that it nullifies much of the state enforcement law

WHITCHCRAFT STILL HAS HOLD IN WALES

REMARKABLE CREDULITY OF FAMILY WHO CONSULTED GIPSY RECENTLY

London, April 30.— An amazing story of Welsh credulity was narrated at Merthyr (Glam.) when Mary Jane Davies, an old gipsy, was charged with sealing by means of a trick £122 from David James, a Breberris farmer. James, in November, was suffering from a rash over his right hand, and he sent a married daughter to consult Daveis at her tent. According to the daughter Davies told her she knew what she had come for, and that her father, herself and child were bewitched. This was, however, denied by Davies, who declared it was James and members of the family who told her that they were bewitched.

A day or two afterwards, it was stated, Davies came to the farm and told the inmates that they were bewitched. She undertook to cure them for £122. They collected £80 as a first instalment, and later another £42 was paid. Davies prescribed a daily dose of brimstone and gin for each of the inmates, including James' collier son-in-law, who had no complaint, and gave them each a small bag containing a kind of charcoal powder to hang round their necks. She called occasionally to see how they were getting on, and at length James finding that he was not cured of the skin disease, demanded his money back. She promised to bring it the same evening, but did not do so, and left the neighborhood.

James, whose evidence was in Welsh said he had believed himself bewicthed. Job, he added, was bewitched.

Another charge is pending against Davies of obtaining £414 and furniture worth £50 from another man, and she was remanded.

BOYS BURGLE STORE.

Sneaked Out of Bed to Commit the Crime—Suspended Sentence.

Woodstock, April 30.—Two boys, aged 15 and 16, were brought before the magistrate here yesterday and charged with no less than seven cases of store breaking and theft. They pleaded guilty. The youngsters, according to their stories in court, would sneak from their beds after the other members of the family had retired, and raid stores.

About midnight on Wednesday. Constable Moore caught the boys in the act of breaking into a local harness shop. The magistrate, on account of their youth, allowed them to go on suspended sentence after their fathers had paid for the articles which the lads had not accounted for. The boys were also ordered to stay home every night for a period of one year.

CONVICTED OF STARTING FIRES

Milton, April 30. — The Halton Peel Children's Shelter here has received as wards of that institution three small boys convicted by Magistrate Barr of Burlington of starting four fires in that town recently. One of them destroyed R. W. Douglas' barn, two horses, a wagon and harness. Crown Attorney Dick of Milton prosecuted, and Hughes Cleaver of Burlington acted on behalf of the youngsters' parents. Deputy Fire Marshal Saville also attended court.

The attempt by the Irish section of the Liverpool dock workers to hold up traffic till the hunger strikers in Wormwood Scrubbs Prison were released has failed.

IRISH PRESS ON HUNGER STRIKE

RELEASE OF PRISONERS AVERTED AN UNCONTROLLABLE OUTBURST

The "Irish Times," commenting on the release on parole for outside medical treatment of some. of the. Sinn Fein prisoners. says: "The Government had allowed itself to get into a position in which it was confronted with a choice of two evils. If any of the prisoners had died the state of Ireland, which is bad today, would have become far worse. Nationalist Ireland has worked itself into such a passion over the sufferings of the prisoners that a single death in Mountjoy might have provoked an almost uncontrollable outburst of crime and lawlessness. This, at any rate, has been averted, and the gain, combined with the breathing space which it gives to the new authority at Dublin Castle, may be accepted as justification for a "climb down," which, in any other circumstances, must have been wholly ignominous."

The "Freeman's Journal," says:—"After a day of Viseregal hesitation and Castle intrigue, the dying prisoners were released from Mountjoy. It is too soon yet to rejoice, for the recovery of several of the victims is gravely doubtful; but the agony of the nation is relaxed, and the indignant passion which it required strong counsel and self-control to check, can now be directed into a resolute determination to break the system that could so outrage humanity and defy justice by a policy that might have betrayed the people into extremes of violence. The exposure of the treatment of untired men in the House of Commons had proved too much even for the stomach of the Morning Post.' The action of Irish Labour had ominously stirred the rank and file of British Labour. The geenral strike began to cast its shadow beyond the Irish Sea."

The "Irish Daily Independent," says "In this terrible contest, this battle against an unjustifiably cruel prison system, this struggle for elementary justice and fairplay, the will of men in gaol, he spirit of dying men backed by the support and sympathy of the nation, has compelled the Government to capitulate. This is the outcome of the hunger strike. Now that the Government have, however tardily, given way in some measure to justice and humanity, let thtem in God's name indulge in no more wriggling, or tyranny, or pettiness in regard to prison treatment of political prisoners. For once let there be a square and honest deal. Now that new blood has been put into the executive, we would ask in all seriousness and solemnity whether they think a repetition of the detestable policy of the last two years is calculated to make for peace or betterment in this distraught land."

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat less meat, also take glass of Salts before eating breakfast.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralise the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

TO PERMIT PROTEST PARADE.

Winnipeg, April 30.—An official permit for the holding of the May Day protest parade against the conviction and imprisonment of the strike leaders was granted today. James Law, secretary of the Winnipeg Defence Committee, received the permit from Police Chief Newton, which states that the marchers will be given the right of way as far as possible.

Sgt.-Major Flinter and his two young sons were suffocated by smoke in a fire at their home in Pembroke.

FRANKLIN FIELD LIKE A SHOWROOM

SPECIAL THREE-MILE RACE STAR EVENT THIS AFTERNOON

Philadelphia. May 1.—Franklin field looked like the showroom of a wholesale dealer in athletes yesterday.

Long-legged runners, chunky legged hurdlers, stocky weight throwers, every model and make of athlete from the Pacific Coast on the west to merry old England on the east, were out for the annual Penn relays.

"Durn near all of them," was the nearest Dr. George Orton, manager of the carnival, would come to estimating the number of entries.

More than 100 universities were entered. Youngsters almost beyond count, from almost as many schools here for the scholastic events, were being walked upon as they gazed in awe upon eighteen national, intercollegiate and foreign champions and record holders.

Britishers There.

The spotlight of interest forcussed on the quintet of Britishers brought over by Col. A. N. S. Jackson, war hero. Olympic hero and hero of a race on Franklin field back in 1914, when by a superhuman spart he snatched a victory in the two-mile relay from the famous Penn team of that day.

Rudd, the British half-mile champion, Tatham, Jeppe, Stallard, Milligan and Montague, the British three-mile champion, the best talent of Oxford and Cambridge Universities, comprise the team that will strive to repeat that memorable feat against the best blood of the American track.

Seven major events and a flock of scholastic numbers are on the opening day program for this afternoon.

A Special Race.

The feature event of the program is the special international intercollegiate three-mile run placed upon the card for the principal purpose of giving E. A. Montague, the Oxford star and British champion, a chance to show himself. He will be opposed by Nightingale. Connolly, O'Connell, Crawford, Otis and McDermott, a flock of the best distance runners in America. The three-mile event is new to American athletes.

The rest of the program includes the American petathlon championship, the 440-yard low hurdles, the American one mile relay championship, the two and a quarter medley relay, throwing the 56-pound weight, running hop-step-and-jump.

Penn's star relay team, consisting of Carl Eby, Gustafson, Shields and Brown, with Coach Lawson Robertson, and the British team are in Atlantic City taking the "quiet cure," and may not return before this afternoon.

Opinion here seems agreed that the British team will be pushed to win the two-mile relay tomorrow. Rudd is the only member of the team who has done better than 1.58. Penn and Yale both have quartets able to dobetter than that. Surprises are looked for from the West. Ames, Illinois and Notre Dame have teams within a few seconds of the world's record, as was shown at the Drake relays.

A Favorite.

Montague probably will run the favorite in the three-mile event today. The distance practically is new to American athletes. Nightingale and Connolly can be counted upon to give the visitor a good race, however.

With perfect weather, almost ideal conditions, and a track known to be one of the fastest in the country, and some of the fastest men in the world in the meet, the prospects for new records seem unusually good.

TIME TIMES CHANGE MAY 2, 1920

Of the Grand Trunk Railway System.

All Grand Trunk Railway System trains will be operated on standard time, which is one hour slower than daylight saving time. Where cities, towns, villages or municipal bodies served by the Grand Trunk adopt daylight saving time all concerned should keep in mind that time tables indicate time of arrival and departure of trains one hour earlier than daylight saving time. Where daylight saving time is not adopted local and standard time harmonizes.

LOS ANGLES WOMEN GRATEFUL TO TANLAC

MRS. M. E. PROCTOR SAYS HER COMPLETE RECOVERY AFTER SO MANY YEARS OF SUFFERING SEEMS TO GOOD TO BE TRUE---WAS INVALID FOR YEARS

"I am so grateful for what Tanlac has done for me that I want to tell the whole world about it," said Mrs. M. E. Proctor, of 717 W. First St., Los Angeles, Calif., when speaking of the splendid results she had obtained from the medicine. "To think that I should have suffered for so many years, and spent hundreds of dollars in vain efforts to get relief and then find complete relief after taking only four bottles of Tanlac, seems too good to be true."

"Yes, indeed; for years and years I suffered terribly from stomach trouble. Everything I ate seemed to form gas and so affected my heart and breathing that I would have palpitation and would turn purple in the face in my efforts to get my breath. These attacks caused me intense suffering and were so bad that I was frequently confined to my bed and would have to be attended by some member of the family for fear I should succumb during one of the attacks.

"I got awfully thin and was so weak that I had to give up all household duties. I often went for two weeks at a time without getting a good night's sleep and as a consequence became very nervous and low-spirited. In fact, I was a confirmed invalid and my friends did not expect me to live very long.

"I sat reading the paper one evening when my eye caught the statement of a lady who had suffered with similar trouble to my own and telling how she had been wonderfully helped by Tanlac. I sent for a bottle and started taking it and the results have been most surprising.

"My appetite is splendid now and I can eat most anything without any distress afterward. The gas has stopped forming and I no longer have palpitation or that smothering feeling. I sleep sound all night long and get up feeling rested. I am in better health today than I have been for forty years and I feel years younger.

"I don't believe there ever was as good a medicine made as Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by The Warne Drug Co., and by the leading druggists in every town.

A COLUMN FOR VETERANS

(By Mike.)

There is trouble being raised in Toronto because Veterans have not been getting their share of civic appointments, and Mayor Church refused to accept responsibility for all that is done at the city hall. One would have thought that he had been there long enough to be able to watch all that was going on and then some.

• • • •

J. Harry Flynn did not get the presidency of the amalgamated Grand Army of United Veterans. He got a vice-presidency instead, but it is safe to say that he will continue to pull the strings.

• • • •

It is wonderful what a saxaphone can do to an orchestra. The weekly dances of the G. W. V. A. have become increasingly popular since the innovation of the saxaphone and the electric fans. Both are a great improvement and already having an effect on the gate receipts.

• • • •

"What do I get for my monthly fees?" That question has often been asked by a member of the G.W.V.A., and here is one of the answers. Recently a returned soldier got into a foolish escapade which resulted in his being fined $200 for being in possession of liquor. It was his first offence, and there were other circumstances in connection with the case which made the fine a great hardship. The secretary of the G. W.V.A. placed the case before the Attorney General with the result that $150 was remitted. And there are many other cases where such assistance has been rendered.

• • • •

The ladies' tag day was not quite as successful as it might have been, being probably due to the fact that others had been tagging before them. A considerable sum was raised, however, and will be put to good use by the ladies of the auxiliary.

• • • •

The Ottawa Journal seems to be slightly twisted as far as the affairs of Veterans are concerned. In one of its editorials it refers to Flynn, and states that such a man brings disgrace to even such an organization as the Great War Veterans' Association. Now what has J. Harry Flynn got to do with the Great War Veterans' Association? The last that we knew of the matter they were confirmed enemies. Surely the Ottawa Journal is not confused with Colonel O'Flynn of Belleville, the recently elected and popular head of the Provincial Command.

• • • •

The G. W. V. A. of Belleville have signed for plans and specifications for the new memorial home, which will be erected on Riverside or what is better known as Panter Park. The plans and specifications accepted were prepared by Mackenzie Waters, architect, of Toronto, a former well-known Belleville boy. Work will be commenced in the near future and the structure will not only be an ornament o the city not only be an ornamen to the city members of the association.

• • • •

The Vets' football team is in no way disheartened by the results of the opening game. They anticipated a hard fight, due mainly to the large amount of practice which the opposing team had already had. They are up against pretty much the same proposition again today, but this time it is expected that one or two steps will be taken to strengthen the team, and the C. G. E. would do well to forget the idea that they will have an easy victory. It is almost certain that Sid. Whatley will be prevailed upon to appear in goal, which will help some.

• • • •

The suggestion that the disabled soldiers who are receiving only a small pension should have the option of taking a cash grant in lieu of the pension is meeting with different expressions of opinion among the returned men. In the local ball the other day a member of the G. W. V. A. was heard to express the opinion that once the option was allowed there would in reality be no choice left for the returned man but to take the cash, because if he did not it was more than likely that when he again appeared before a board his category would be raised and he would have no pension to barter.

• • • •

It has been intimated by a certain high officer of the local branch of the G. W. V. A. that in the event of the property qualification being removed from municipal politics he would be a candidate for office next election. At the time it was impossible to tell whether or not he was serious, but one point is brought forward, and that is that the removal of the property qualification gives the returned soldier the first real opportunity to take an active part in the government of the country which he fought to preserve.

Announcement has been received from Ottawa that part of the D. S. C. R. is to be demobilized immediately. All returned soldiers will be inclined to agree that the bigger the part referred to the better. There seemed to be an awful lot of overhead expense attached to the D. S. C. R. It really seemed a lot like finding jobs for a certain class of people.

No information has been received as to whether ex-artillerymen are rushing to join the newly organised battery. The inclination is the other way. They have no desire to play at being soldiers. They are afraid they might be mistaken for some of the cadets who resign and do all sorts of funny things just because they don't like their colonel. Now, how many colonels in the army did a soldier really get to like, anyway? And those cadet uniforms were originally made for real soldiers. That makes it all the worse.

At a recent meeting of the local G. W. V. A. when the matter of subscriptions to The Veteran was under discussion a member got up and made a statement, which was not contradicted, that the editor of the magazine had resigned. It was naturally taken by all who heard it to refer to the investigation which was being conducted. It appears from a communication received by Secretary Whatley that the information was entirely erroneous. The same communication announced that the investigation into the affairs of The Veteran had been completed and that the investigating committee was perfectly satisfied with everything in connection with the magazine. The Veteran is the official organ of the G. W. V. A., and returned soldiers will rejoice over the fact that it has been cleared of all charges made against it.

A despatch from Welland states that the returned soldiers there have gone on record as being opposed to the increasing of allowances to members of Parliament. That is getting back at them for the refusal to consider more gratuity. It seems to be a reasonable conclusion that if the country cannot afford to give the soldiers any more, neither can it afford to grant increases to members of Parliament. It is likely that the action of the Welland returned soldiers will be followed by similar action all over the country.

ATTACKS HYDRO COMMISSION

Contention That Shortage of Power is Affecting Industries.

At he annual meeting of the Ontario Division of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association held in Toronto yesterday, Mr. W. R. Breyfogle of this city was elected to the executive committee. The Peterborough branch is one of three new branches to be organized since the last annual meeting. The others are Brantford and Niagara.

The meeting attacked the Hydro Commission for the shortage of power, and passed a resolution asking that a Royal Commission be appointed to investigate the workings of the Hydro and report to the Government. It was freely claimed that the Hydro was not delivering the power for which contracts had been made and that it was seriously crippling the industries of the Province. It was blamed as being indirectly the cause of unrest in the Province as shortage of power compelled factories to shut down and throw their men out of employment, thus causing unrest.

Other matters of importance were discussed at the meeting.

NEW GOLF CLUB AT CHATHAM

Chatham, April 30.—At a joint meeting of the Chatham Golf Club and the Indian Creek Land Company, the owners of the golf course, it was decided to advertise for tenders for a clubhouse to be erected as soon as the construction can be started.

The following officers were elected: President, F. Bette; vice-president, C. H. Housion; treasurer, Col. B. M. Green; secretary, A. C. Woodward.

SYRACUSE BALL CLUB MAY MOVE

BASEBALL PARK NOT READY FOR OPENER—BUSINESS MEN TO MEET

Toronto, April 30.—There is a chance that Syracuse will be without an International Baseball League team. The following statement has been issued by Joseph Dunfee, partner of E. C. Landgraf in the Syracuse Club, yesterday:

"Unless the fans of Syracuse rally to our aid immediately with offers of financial assistance the baseball park now under construction will not be completed, and the International League will be under the necessity of looking elsewhere for a place to plant the Syracuse franchise."

A committee of business men will hold a meeting next Monday night to discuss ways and means of saving International League baseball for Syracuse, because President Landgraf threatens to "pull stakes" unless the new grounds are ready for occupation by May 20, when Baltimore make their first appearance of the season at Syracuse.

The Scottish and Trades Union Congress has passed a resolution in favor of liquor prohibition.

One hundred persons were killed in an encounter between Communists and Serbian troops in front of the Hotel Moscow at Belgrade.

PETERBORO MEN, WHO MAKE GOOD

From the position of telegraph operator in a small town to that of president of half a dozen financial corporations and a director of many orders is quite a jump for a man to make and yet this is part of the wonderful record of progress made by Edward Rogers Wood, of Peterborough

He was born in Peterborough on May 1., 18466, and is the son of the late John Wood of this city. His education was received completely in Peterborough at some of the splendid educational institutions, of which this city is the proud possessor

It is not recorded how long he remained a telegraph operator but judging from the vast changes made in the intervening years he probably did not hold this position for any great length of time.

He first became connected with the Central Canada Savings and Loan Company in the year 1884. Starting at the bottom of the ladder with this company he steadily received well merited promotion until he was vice-president and managing director. In the year 1914 he was elected president of the company.

While these few words cover the main career of Edward Rogers Wood there are many other incidents in his career which give evidence of his remarkable business ability.

The war and its many tasks provided opportunities for him to put his ability to the service of his country and he was not slow to take these opportunities. He became a member of the Imperial Munitions Board which organized the manufacture of munitions in this country to such an extent that before many months had past a considerable portion of the shells used on the Western front bore the trade mark, "Made in Canada."

The needs of those left behind by the soldiers fighting, soon occupied the attention of Mr. Woods and he was appointed honorary treasurer of the Toronto and York County Patriotic Society, which helped greatly to alterate suffering caused by war conditions in the Ontario Capital.

Edward Woods was right there with both feet when the call for money was made by the Dominion Government. He received the appointment of chairman, Dominion Executive Committee, Canada's 1918 Victory Loan. This loan was remarkably successful, and when the Government again contemplated a Victory Loan in November, 1919, Wood was the only man thought possible for the chairman of the Executive Committee. The wonderful organization put into this campaign, the methods of advertising adopted, and the success achieved attracted the attention of the whole world. Peterborough might well be proud to realize that the brain behind it all was that of a Peterborough born and educated man.

Mr. Woods is a firm believer in the effect of good surroundings upon the youth of the country and he has at all times both financially and morally indicated his belief in the great work of the Y.M.C.A. In connection with this it might be stated that he is a director and past president of the Central Y.M.C.A., Toronto.

In politics he has always been a Liberal, although he has never taken any active part in the political life of the country prefering, to keep his attention to the business world and leave politics for others. In religion he is a Methodist and has shown himself to be a strong supporter of the reforms urged particularly from that denomination.

In July, 1891, he married Agnes Euphemia Smart and at present resides at 84 Queen's Park, Toronto

Some idea of the vastness of Mr. Woods' financial enterprizes can be garned by studying the following list of business connections: He is president of the Dominion Securities Corporation, Ltd.; vice-president of the National Trust Company, vice-president Brazilian Traction, Light and Power Company, vice-president Canada Life Assurance Company, and a director in the following companies: Canadian Bank of Commerce, Western Assurance Company, British American Assurance, Dominion Steel Corporation, Massey-Harris Company, Ltd.; Toronto Power Company, Toronto Railway Company, Shawinigan Water and Power Company, Mexican Light and Power Company, Mexico Tramways Company.

Mr. Wood may be regarded as a real Peterborough product, being born in Ashburnham where his mother now resides on Belmont avenue.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

WORK OF LOCAL MINISTER HIGHLY APPRECIATED BY CONGREGATION

The conjoined quarterly and trustee Boards of George Street Methodist church, at a recent meeting recorded their deep appreciation of the work of the popular pastor, Rev. A. J. Thomas, on behalf of the congregation, by recording the following resolution on the church books.

On motion of Dr. E. E. Harvey and Mr. C. E. Smith, it was resolved "that we, the members of the conjoined quarterly and trustee boards of George street Methodist church, at this, almost the last meeting of the year, wish to express our appreciation of the magnificent and far-reaching work accomplished by our pastor, Rev. A. J. Thomas, during his pastorate here. We feel that the inspiration he has given us to live and work on a higher plane, will sweeten enhance our lives, and be a constant incentive to nobler and more useful living. Under his care, the church has increased not only in membership but also in spiritual influence. We desire him always to remember that we have deeply appreciated his unselfish devotion to duty, his readiness to use his utmost endeavor to advance every interest of the church, and his personal example of true Christian gentlemanliness. As he goes to another pastorate, we wish him Godspeed, and trust that every joy in life may be given himself and Mrs. Thomas, who has so fully upheld him by her constant and effective support."

Rev. Mr. Thomas becomes pastor of St. James' Methodist Church, Montreal, in June, succeeding Rev. Dr. Henderson. He will be greatly missed by the congregation of George Street church and the community at large to whom he has [illegible] himself by his untiring zeal in promoting the kingdom of Jesus Christ in the hearts and lives of the people.

A DESIRE TO EAT WHAT YOU WANT

HOW STOMACHS CAN BE RESTORED TO A VIGOROUS, HEALTHY CONDITION.

Not to be limited in diet, but to eat whatever he pleases is the dream of every dyspeptic. No one can honestly promise to restore any stomach to this happy condition, because all people cannot eat the same things with equally satisfactory results. It is literally true that "what is one man's food is another man's poison." But it is possible to so tone up the digestive organs that a pleasing diet may be selected from articles of food that cause no discomfort.

When the stomach lacks tone there is no quicker way to restore it than to build up the blood. Good digestion without rich, red blood is impossible, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills offer the very best way to build up and enrich the blood. For this reason these pills are especially good in stomach trouble attended by thin blood, and in attacks of nervous dyspepsia. Proof of the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in even the most obstinate cases of stomach trouble is given by Mrs. S. Morrison, Varney, Ont., who says: "I shall always feel indebted to a friend who advised me to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had been a sufferer for upwards of twelve years with stomach trouble which resulted in a general weakness of the whole system. My meals always caused me great discomfort, and at times I would go hungry rather than undergo the suffering which followed meals. I was constantly taking something or other recommended for the trouble, but without finding a cure, and often the trouble kept me in bed when I should have been about doing my housework. My friend, who had had a similar attack, came to see me and urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which had cured her. I got a supply at once and began taking them, and soon found relief. By the time I had used eight boxes I was again enjoying the best of health, and with a good appetite and stomach restored to normal. Had I known of this medicine earlier it would have saved me years of suffering, and I urge any who may be in a similar condition to try these pills at once."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail postpaid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SOLDIERS' CIVIC RE-ESTABLISHMENT

HAND LOCAL GRIEVANCES IN TO SOLDIERS' AID COMMISSION

The Vocational and Advisory Board of the Soldiers' Aid Commission, has been asked to use its endeavors, through the local secretaries of the several branches throughout the Province, in an effort to collect information to be presented as soon as possible to the committee of the House of Commons now in session on the question of soldiers' civil re-establishment.

Should there be in the city or district surrounding where it is claimed that an injustice has been done to any deserving man or where there are complaints or legitimate grievances with regard to vocational training such can be handed to the local secretary (Mr. F. H. Dobbin) of the Soldiers' Aid Commission at his office, city building (over Drummond's store).

Following receipt of the same an investigation of the facts and statements will be made with a view to a complete re-establishment of the disabled soldier.

It is asked that prompt action be taken as time is short in which to present these cases, and so uphold the hands of those who are moving in this matter for the benefit of ex-soldiers.

BIG CHEMICAL INDUSTRY FOR CANADIAN FIELD

Canadian Interests Form the Chemical Products, Limited, to Develop Extensive Plants at Trenton, Ont.

Toronto, May 1.—(Secial.)—An era in the manufacturing development of the Dominion is marked by the taking over by outstanding business men of Canada of the British Chemicals, which on February 26th, 1920, was formed into a new company under the name of Chemical Products, Limited, at Trenton, Ont.

The plant is located on an ideal site for manufacturing purposes, covering an area of 255 acres facing the Trent River and the Trent Valley Canal, and is admirably situated for water carriage and hydro-electric service. It is close to three trans-continental railway systems, each of which is connected with the plant by side lines.

The capital stock of Chemical Products, Limited, consists of $2,000,000 cumulative participating preference stock of $100 par value and bearing interest at the rate of 8 per cent. This stock will be preferred as to both assets and dividends. After the payment of dividends equivalent to $8.00 a share upon the preference and common shares, it is provided that the directors may declare and pay further additional dividends equally upon the preference and common stocks out of any surplus or net profits. The common stock consists of [illegible]00,000 shares (no par value).

Some idea of the enormous enterprises upon which Chemical Products Limited has embarked may be gathered from the fact that it will produce acid phosphate alone to the amount of 75,000 tons yearly, exporting any surplus over and above the requirements of the home market. Further, there will be production of aspirin to the extent of 1,500,000 pounds yearly; 5,000 pounds yearly of salicylic acid; between 5,000 and 6,000 tons of refined nitrate of soda. The above are the four main products which the company will manufacture when it goes into operation.

Directors and Management

The executive officers and management of the Chemical Products, Limited, comprise men who are outstanding either in connection with the chemical industry or manufacturing in general in Canada or the United States. The president is R. J. Copeland, of Copeland-Chatterson Limited, Toronto. The other directors are: D. M. Sanson, of Graham, Sanson & Company, investment bankers, Toronto, president of the Dominion Linens, Limited, and Flax Spinners Limited, of Guelph, and vice-president of William Neilson, Limited, Toronto; R. J. Cluff president of Chase Tractors Corporation, Limited, Toronto, and of the Galt Brass Company, Limited; T. P. Birchall vice-president of Chase Tractors Corporation, Limited, and president of Loew's Theatres; J. C. [illegible] vice-president and general manager of the Saginaw Chemical Company, Saginaw, Mich., and formerly general superintendent of the [illegible] Chemical Company, Midland, Mich.; T. E. O'Reilly, president of T. E. O'Reilly, Limited, chemical brokers, Toronto, and formerly president of Chemical Products of Canada, Limited, and W. H. Vanwinckel, vice-president of the Aniline Dyes & Chemicals, Inc., New York, and formerly sales manager of the Dow Chemical Company. The operation and management of the plant will be in the hands of A. H. C. Heitman, who has many years' experience in similar undertakings in connection with the chemical industry. Mr. Heitman was the first on the North American continent to install and bring into successful operation a plant for the production of salicylic acid, of which he supplied large quantities to the British expeditionary forces during the war.

BRITAIN PENALIZES U.S. ON WAR BILLS

FIVE PER CENT TACKED ON SUPPLIES UNPAID IN THIRTY DAYS

Washington, April 29.—Great Britain is demanding and the United States is to pay 5 per cent. interest on all accounts for war supplies that were not paid by the United States within thirty days.

The interest charge brought by Great Britain on Navy Department purchases alone aggregates $50,000. Though surprised at the charge, Navy Department officials intend to pay the bills received. This country made no similar charges and has been asked to postpone, and is postponing the collection of interest on loans made to the British Government.

Efforts have been made by the Administration to keep the entire matter secret. A part of the record placed on a public file in the Treasury Department was withdrawn and is now somewhere in secret archives. Officials of both departments are non-committal with regard to the details, and it is not known how many claims of bills have been presented to the War Department, the Shipping Board and other Government agencies or how much they will aggregate. No public announcement with regard to transactions involved has been made.

the war and sent its fleet to British waters and began despatching troops to Europe the Allies were asked and offered to furnish equipment and supplies. Many American naval ships operated out of British bases and were supplied by the British Government.

Orders for the things required that the British could furnish were [illegible] Government vouchers for them, as is usual, were frequently a long time getting through. The Navy Department request for a decision regarding the payments stated that it was not known at the time purchases were made that 5 per cent. interest would be charged on all accounts that ran for more than thirty days.

POLLYANNA AT GRAND TONIGHT

NO ONE SHOULD MISS THIS FAMOUS "GLAD" PRODUCTION

"Pollyanna," in comedy form, as devised by Catharine Chisholm Cushing, from the famous stories of Eleanor H. Porter, reaches the stage of the Grand today. Pollyanna Producing Company bring it with an exceptionally able cast. It combines Lolita Westman as Pollyanna, who grows up in the play from the child of twelve into the maid of seventeen, and other players of fine achievement including Pacie Ripple, Wallace Roberts, Earla Elverson, Audrey Wood, Augusta Durgeon, Peter W. Maguire Geraldine Russel, William Day and others.

The key-note of comedy is optimism— the bright outlook upon life— the spreading broadcast of good-cheer and happiness. And it is a love story without any morbid sex problem. It is described as a sunny play that refreshes the tired business man and does not make him ill at ease if accompanied by his wife, sister, daughter or sweetheart. It is significant that half a million copies of the "Pollyanna" stories have been sold and the trade estimate is that every book averages ten readers. the equivalent of a five million circulation.

INFORMAL DANCE TO THE FI-FI CAST

BELMONT CLUB GRACEFULLY ACKNOWLEDGES PERFORMERS IN PRODUCTION.

A crowded house greeted the performance of "Fi-Fi" again last night. The various parts were enacted in the same pleasing manner as the previous night and the same well-merited appreciation for local talent was given. The performance did not appear to be the least bit amateurish in style and great credit is due to the producer, Mr. Allen, of the Rogers Producing Company, for having so successfully organised the company in so short a time as he had at his disposal. Mr. Allen left today for Port Hope where he will produce the same play under the auspices of the I.O.D.E. Leading social organizations of Toronto and London are also going to present "Fi-Fi" under his direction.

A pleasant time was spent in the Belmont Club last night after the performance when the club members showed their appreciation to the cast by entertaining them to an informal dance. Dancing was indulged in from 11 p.m. to [illegible] a.m. and a very enjoyable time was spent by all. In a few brief but pointed words Mr. R. A. McKee, the president of the Belmont Club, told the members of the cast of the great appreciation for their efforts and the success which had attended them. Special mention was made of the splendid work of the various committees as announced in the program who had carried on their work in a [illegible] satisfactory manner thereby contributing in no small way to the success of the production.

The Belmont Club has taken a more tangible way of expressing its appreciation to the children of the cast. After the first performance on Thursday night a picture of the whole cast was taken and one of these will be presented to each child who took part in the play as soon as they are received from the photographer. It will be a memento of a very successful event and something well worth keeping.

BOYCOTT DOES NOT AFFECT POTATO SALE

FARMERS TOOK THIS MEASURE AS A HUGE JOKE THIS MORNING.

Farmers on the market this morning were very skeptical as to the possibilities of a successful boycott. They are firm in the belief that there is too much of a shortage of potatoes to have any cause to worry about boycotts. "I should worry," said one farmer, when questioned about the matter this morning "For every one who does not want potatoes there are 10 who do." The farmer who made this statement certainly had cause to feel satisfied, for at 10.30 he had sold a big load of potatoes at $6 a bag, and judging from the number of persons still enquiring he could have sold many more at the same price. If there is a boycott, it certainly has not begun to make itself felt yet. The only difference between this Saturday and last on the market was that last Saturday a few farmers were content to ask $5.50. Today they all asked $6, and what was more they got it.

When challenged as to the justification for such prices the farmer immediately passed the buck on to the workingman and said, "What can you expect with men asking a dollar an hour for an eight-hour day. If we worked eight hours a day the price of potatoes would be away out of reach.

Other prices also showed a tendency to be firmer today, particularly eggs, which were selling at from 47c to 50c, but mostly 50c. The following are the prices received today:

Dairy Produce

Eggs, 47c to 50c.
Butter, 68c and 70c pound.
Chicken, 35c pound.

Vegetables

Potatoes, bag, $6 straight.
Carrots, 40c peck.
Parsnips, 40c peck.
White beans, 75c peck.
Onions, $1.25 to $1.50 peck.

Meats

LIFERS DINED AS ONE GOES FREE

CELEBRATES HIS PARDON BY BANQUET AT WARDEN'S RESIDENCE

SPEAKS TO 17 COMRADES

HAS GIRL AND JOB AND HE'LL STICK TO BOTH

When William Perry will be released from Sing Sing Prison on Gov. Smith's pardon after having served fifteen years of a life sentence and to celebrate his return to the outside he gave a banquet the same night in the dining room of the warden's residence, at wheich his guests were the Warden, Lewis E. Lawes; Mrs. Lawes, the Rev. William E. Cashin, the prison Catholic chaplain, and seventeen convicts, a lot of whom, like Perry, had been sentenced to life imprisonment and who have served more than twelve years.

Perry's dinner is entirely unique in prison functions. There probably has never been anything like it in any prison in the United States. Every man of the eighteen "lifers" was allowed to cross the road that separates the Warden's office from the residence on his word of honor that he would not try to escape— and there was not a man among them who made the slightest effort to get away when he saw the clear road and possible freedom in front of him.

The dining room of the Warden's residence had been gayly decorated with flags and bunting and flowers, and excepting for the gray uniforms of the convicts there was little if anything to differentiate Perry's banqut rom the scores of official dinners that have been given by prison officials in the same room. The guards that necessarily accompanied the convicts were not in the room with the diners; they were in another room, out of sight, and they really weren't needed.

After the banquet the convicts marched across the road and back into the prison with hardly a look at the first bit of open country and freedom they had seen for more than twelve years, and which some of them never may see again.

Perry is probably the most popular convict in the prison, and more than the usual good wishes were expressed for him in the speeches made by Warden Lawes and Father Cashin to the banqueters. He has been the waiter in the Warden's residence for several years, and in addition to the few cents a day allowed him by the State a considerable sum has been placed to his account by the Warden's guests who wished to tip him but who were not allowed by law to give a convict money who were permitted to leave gifts with the prison authorities to be given to the prisoner when he was released.

Perry will leave Sing Sing with more money, therefore, than any convict in recent years, although the expenses of last night's feast put quite a dent in his bank roll. He frankly admitted this in the speech that he made to them, but he said he thought he had got his money's worth.

"I'm going out of here tomorrow," said Perry, "and neither this nor any other prison will ever see me again. I've got a girl and I've got a job, and I'm going to stick to both."

Two more youths were the victims of motor accidents in Toronto streets.

QUICK FIRING GUNS REACH CITY

Four eighteen-pounder quick-firing guns reached the city today from Halifax and will be immediately turned over to the recently organized 4th Battery as part of their complement. These guns are of particular interest not only to the members of the battery but to the citizens as a whole, because they are the very guns which were used by the Canadian artillery in France, and they still bear the marks of many a hot engagement during the last few months of the war. They are of the very latest type of gun such as was made in 1917 and are the last word in light artillery.

Recruiting for the battery has been progressing favorably, and a number of the old artillery veterans are joining up with a view to getting a taste of the old life for a couple of weeks in the summer. It is expected that the battery will take these guns to Petawawa some time in June for live shell practice.

WORK STOPPED ON HUNTER ST. BRIDGE

All work on the Hunter street bridge was brought to a standstill his morning when every employe went out on strike. It had been the intention of the employes to strike on Tuesday next, but the Russell-Townsend Company anticipated the action of the employes, and yesterday published a list of wages they would pay to the different departments. As these prices were considerably less than the men could get in other places they decided to go out on strike without further notice. The men want 60 cents an hour for laborers and 85 cents for carpenters. The price being paid by the company at the present time is 50 cents for laborers and 75 cents for carpenters. When interviewed this morning representatives of the company were reticent on the matter, but intimated that they were willing to follow the lead of the Board of Works in the matter of wages.

A Business Puller

The Review circulates among the best homes and reaches the best of Peterboro's buying public.

There is nothing new about selling goods. The same methods are in vogue, with modern modifications, as existed a decade ago.

The sale of goods is attained by four methods---by advertising, by window dressing, by talking, by giving satisfaction.

Advertising is the chief of these methods because it carries to homes by the cheapest and surest method possible, information as to what you have to sell, and attracts that general attention to your business not otherwise obtainable.

The strong points of advertising are:
Persistency to assure returns.
Continuous and well-directed publicity.
A fair price for commensurate returns.
Quality of value as against mere size of circulation.

In connection with these four strong points of advertising The Review's columns offer space at fair rates based on the quality of its circulation, and the price and results will be found such as to confirm our claim that Advertising in The Review pays.

The readers of The Review are those who appreciate a dependable local newspaper, and whose trade spells "quality" and "cash."

We'll be pleased to talk it over with you.

A Contract for systematic advertising in the Review means more business for you Mr. Business Man.

RACING DATES TO BE CHANGED

MILTON TO START— FORT ERIE AND HAMILTON MAY SWITCH

Ottawa, April 30.—While tentative dates have already been announced for the coming turf season in Canada, it is likely that the schedule will be revised slightly. The Canadian Racing Association will meet in the near future when the meets will be finally alloted. It is not expected that there will be any alterations in connection with the dates given to Connaught Park, which are June 19 to 26 and September 23 to 30, on the Woodbine Track at Toronto. There appears to be some difficulty, however, in connection with the Hamilton and Fort Erie meetings, so they may be switched somewhat.

Everything now points to a great racing season in the Dominion. As soon as the Maryland tracks close next month the majority of the horsemen racing there will ship their thoroughbreds to Canada.

"Jim" Milton, the well-known starter, who is now officiating at the Havre de Grace meeting, will act in that capacity on the Canadian Racing Association tracks. It is announced that Milton will do the starting at the Woodbine meeting May 22, and that he has also been appointed for other Canadian meets under the jurisdiction of the Canadian Racing Association. Mr. Milton succeeds Barret A. Dade, always a big favorite on the Canadian tracks, who is now starting in Kentucky.

JUVENILE SPORTS IN LINDSAY TOWN

The Lindsay Warder says:

"A meeting of representatives from local organization interested in the promotion of amateur sport for juveniles (all boys under the ages of 20 years) was held last night, a number of important matters being discussed.

"Representatives were present from the Collegiate Institute, the O.R.B., Boy Scouts, Semper Fidelis Class, Bona Fide Class, Bona Fide Class and the Standard Efficiency Test Class of Cambridge Street Methodist Church.

"Matters pertaining to sport were discussed, and it was decided to organize for the promotion of various sports, a special meeting to be held at once to form a Town Baseball League."

It's easy to laugh at misfortune when it visits the other fellow.

WILL APPLY NEXT WEEK FOR REINSTATEMENT IN GOOD STANDING

Toronto, April 30.—The Ontario Branch of the C.A.A.U. will hear the applications for reinstatement from the various lacrosse players who desire to play in the O.A.L.A. at their rooms, 22 College street, on Tuesday evening of next week at 8.15. It has been suggested that the respective players appear before the committee with a view to answering any conquestions that may come up, and those interested are asked to accept this intimation as notice of the meeting.

"Bill" McArthur stated yesterday that he will be found with Young Torontos again this season. "Bill" will play either in the nets or on the defense. The Blue Shirts had their eye on another goalkeeper, and will likely sign him up, playing McArthur at first defense.

Now that the O.A.L.A. groupings have been settled, the various conveners should call their teams together and make up their playing schedules. The season opens on May 15 and the preliminaries should be cleaned up without delay.

QUESTION OF FOOTBALL AGITATES LINDSAYITES

There are many citizens in Lindsay who are interested in soccer, and there are several who would like to see the game promoted.

Just why Lindsay has not taken a keener interest in football is hard to understand, but apparently everybody is waiting for the other fellow to start the ball rolling.

With teams at Oshawa, Peterborough and other points, the game should also go ahead in Lindsay.

Who will be the first to make a move?—Lindsay Warder.

Famous Old English Castle.

Warwick castle is said to have been built by the Saxons before the first William landed on Albion's shores. One of its old towers has seen a thousand summers come and go, while the other portions of the structure belong to the fifteenth and the sixteenth centuries. It is one of the most romantic and picturesque edifices in England and is associated with the memory of the great "kingmaker" of the wars of the roses, Count Guy and other heroes who have clanged in heavy armor through the spacious rooms and in the banquet hall drank the health of the beauteous ladies of their line.

Go slow and the other fellow may beat you to it.

CANADIAN JOCKEY IS GREAL FAVORITE

NEIL DUGGAN OF TORONTO MAKES GOOD ON SOUTHERN TRACKS

San Diego, Calif., April 29.—Tiajuana in the past has produced many crack jockeys, but this season it has been the schooling place of two freckled-faced youngsters who have already developed into little masters of the pigskin. The boys in question are J. Roberts and Neil Duggan, who at the present time are showing their older rivals some fancy horsemanship.

Duggan came to Tiajuana under the wing of his contract holder, William ("Red") Walker, a man who has raced horses from coast to coast for the past 20 years. His early form at the Mexican track was a series of mistakes, but walked each evening after the races were over would take the lad in hand and point out his errors and coach him as he did the many other jockeys he has turned out in days gone by. Duggan learned fast, and it was not long before his services were in much demand, and today the horsemen seeking the five-pound apprentice allowance swamp Walker with their requests for the boy, with the result that the old "red fox" can have the pick of the mounts for his protege.

Duggan is a Toronto boy under contract to William Walked for three years, and up to April 16 has ridden 57 winners this year.

Rides Like Knapp.

Duggan in many ways reminds one of ("Big") Bill Knapp, who, when riding at 90 pounds, was considered a wonder with the whip. It was often said that Knapp could knock a horse sideways with his whip, so severe was the punishment dealt when he would resort to his "bat". However, Knapp, knew when and how to use a whip and a sluggish horse would always do his best when the latter rested in the saddle.

With Duggan it has been the correct use of the whip that has been the hardest lesson for him to learn. His over-anxiousness to win has found him plying this weapon as early as rounding the far turn, with the result that early in the season many of his mounts have stopped to a walk under his terrific punishment. This fault, however, Duggan, has corrected, and at the presentl time, we find him hitting a horse a couple of times at the head of the streeh and then at the finish if necessary.

Duggan's greatest success this season was his masterful ride on Jack Reeves in the San Diego Business Men's handicap at a mile and an eighth, when that old horse took a smart field into camp to enrich his owner the tidy sum of $3,000.

Jack Reeves at one period of the race was 12 lengths behind the leader, which is the characteristic manner in which he runs, for Jack likes to loaf the first part of the race, but runs through the stretch with the courage of a lion. Despite Duggan's short experience he did not become impatient with his mount, but waited with him until leaving the back stretch, where he called on the horse to do his best. Responding to the urging Jack Reeves came through on the rail and midway in the stretch took the lead to win as his rider pleased.

Came in Box Car

Roberts' rise to saddle fame has been meteoric. Coming to Tiajuana via the box car route along with Charley Hewell's Texas bangtails, this country youth looked as green as grass when he first threw a leg over a thoroughbred's back in active racing. However, like many other Texas born kids, Roberts soon showed that he was a natural rider. To the experienced eye it is noticeable that the pigskin artist has a splendid pair of hands on a horse and his judgement of pace is excellent. He is alert at the post and it is amusing to watch him ride a snug finish on a tiring horse and outgeneral his more experienced and older opponents.

"Dance Men."

The "danceman," evolved from the "footman" through a generation of cabaret hunting society leaders, is the latest addition to the smart matron's retinue.

The danceman is required to be good looking, to wear clothes well, dance better, and above all to be of a character that guarantees the respectability of the lady employing him.

He follows his patron at a distance of a yard or so, sits a few feet away from the tea table, moving only when requested by madame to take a turn around the hall.

As it is not considered good form to speak to the danceman, Paris matrons are at last able to devote their attention to acquiring the fanciful steps without incurring the displeasure of their husbands, because a paid servant is not considered a man.

No Canadian Veto.

In the House of Commons recently Hon. N. W. Rowell stated that the Canadian Government was not aware hat the British House had been prevented from arriving at a decision on the sending of a mission to the Vatican because of fault on the part of the Dominion to give their views on the matter. The Government, he said, had been invited to give its views and conformed with this request on December 6, 1919. The Government had not sufficient information to justify its offering advice on the matter.

Value for Your Money.

Deepest Lake in America.

A lake known as the Great Sunken lake, is reported to be the deepest lake in this country, and perhaps in the whole world. Located in the valley of the Cascade mountains, about 70 miles north of Jacksonville, Ore., this lake, which is about 15 miles long and four miles wide, is so deep that its depth cannot be measured. It is situated so far below the crest of the mountains that winds cannot reach it, and its surface is like a sheet of glass. It is sometimes called the "lake of mystery."

Packing the Soil.

It has been estimated by authorities that a man weighing 170 pounds, wearing No. 8 shoes, creates a pressure of 14 pounds to the square inch of surface where he steps. A horse weighing 1,400 pounds creates a pressure of approximately 18 to 33 pounds per square inch under his hoofs while pulling an average load. A tractor weighing in the neighborhood of 1,800 pounds exerts a pressure only about ten pounds to the square inch.

Happiness Alley

By OTILLIA FRANCES PFEIFFER

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

A peculiarly placid and uneventful life had Arline Merritt led. Her mother had died when she was twelve and for six years the daughter had passed most of her time at a select boarding school.

All that time Arline never returned to the home where she was born. Four times a year her father spent a day at the school, brought her many presents and supplied her liberally with spending money. At each visit Arline referred to the old home in the city and expressed a longing desire to spend her vacation there.

"You will soon be eighteen," said her father, "and then you shall come home for good to keep house for me," and at his last visit he had added: "You won't know the old place, Arline. My means have continued modest, but I have managed to save enough to renovate house and grounds and it will be a snug nest. 'Happiness Alley' as they call the little blind end block; it has only ten houses its entire length, but each one is occupied by some old time family residents."

"It is really Gresham court, of course," responded Mr. Merritt, "the little spot right in the heart of the city and yet quiet and verdal as some country lane. You see, our neighbors and myself started in trade on the business street nearby when it was far from being built up, and settled in Gresham court for our homes. We have been closely connected, both as to business and socially, and a little community of genial, humble storekeepers have led peaceful, happy lives, with no ambition toward splurge and show."

It was a golden day in the experience of Arline when she left school for home. She went into raptures over the broad porched cottage looking out upon a lovely garden, all fenced in and at its rear a high brick wall shutting out the rear of the business buildings fronting on the next street. An old woman servant relieved Arline of all household drudgery, the neighbors greeted her warmly. Plain, practical people, the denizens of Happiness Alley were sincere, unpretentious and entirely apart from show or glitter. Their clean, even lives shut out all extravagance and folly, and Happiness Alley was not a misnomer.

Unexpectedly Mr. Merritt sickened and died and Arline was left alone. It was her first real sorrow, and the kindly sympathy of the neighbors bound her more closely to them and to her home. She settled resignedly into the groove of a calm, even life. She grew sedate, instead of gloomy.

A bench under a great flowering tree overhanging the rear wall became a favorite spot with Arline. One evening she looked up as there was a rustling in the tree overhead. She started to her feet as she made out a figure hanging on the top of the wall and clutching at a swaying branch.

It broke with the adventurer and he fell in a senseless heap almost at Arline's feet. She could not repress a scream. From the little two room cottage where he had his living quarters the old gardener came hurrying to the spot. The intruder was a young man dressed in neglectful attire and his pale face suggested the invalid or convalescent. Old Hugh carried him to the cottage and placed him on his bed.

"He is not hurt by his fall, only stunned," he said. "It looks to me as if he was getting away from somebody. Shall we call the police?"

"Oh, no! No!" [illegible] Arline quickly, interested strangely in the intruder—"no, leave [illegible] until we learn his story. You will [illegible] his care, Hugh?"

"Surely, if you say so, Miss," replied the old gardener and the next day, able to sit up but still looking weak and troubled, the young man told Arline of himself and her compassionate soul was moved to new kindly sympathy.

He was Sidney Marsh, he told Arline, and for over a year the subject of peril and prosecution at the hands of schemers who had swindled his father out of his rights in a corporation of which the latter, now dead, had been an official. In order to terrorize Sidney their emissaries had assaulted him, had once kidnaped him and held him a captive for months, and everything now depended on the young man finding a safe seclusion until the day of trial, a few weeks ahead. They had located him the day of his fall from the tree, and in escaping Sidney had scaled the wall and met with his present friends.

And loyal, helpful friends they proved, old Hugh and the housekeeper as well as Arline. Interest and sympathy aroused new emotions in that tender, innocent heart and Sidney seemed to wander in a lonely paradise, safe and secure from the troubles and dangers that had made of him a persecuted refugee.

It was a glad day for him when he appeared in court, sustained his claim and secured a verdict against the plotters which made of him a rich man.

"I lay it all at your feet, dear one," he told Arline, "and my life's devotion with it! One favor I crave: that we remain in this Eden always, amid the peace, and loveliness, and content-ment of Happiness Alley."

CALEDONIAN DANCE ONE TO REMEMBER

LADIES HAD CHARGE AND THEY CONDUCTED PROCEEDINGS HANDSOMELY

A most successful dance and social evening was held by the Caledonian Society, last night, in their Club rooms on George street. There were several reasons which went to make it the most successful affair held by the Caledonians this season. In the first place it was advertised as a Leap Year Dance, secondly it was announced that it was the last dance of the season as far as the Caledonians were concerned, and also, being a leap year dance, the ladies of the society had entire charge of the evening's program and they certainly put the men to shame. The attendance was more than double that of the last dances held by the men and the program was one round of fun and amusement from begining to end.

Grand March opened the dancing program with the president, E. Hardie and Mrs. Hardie leading. From them until the orchestra swung into the home waltz at about two a.m., the hall was alive with a gay throng intent on getting as much enjoyment into an evening as it was possible to get. Among the old coutry dances which predominated in such a gathering were Rora A. More, quadrilles, waltze, (Old Country.) reels, lancers, Highland Scotische, military two-step, valeta and partmelle. These dances were extremely popular but there were also a few of the Canadian variety to allow for those who unfortunately could not dance the Old Country dances . Among these was a tag waltz with the difference that being a leap year dance, instead of the man tagging the lady was called upon to do this and one found that his partner suddenly left him and tagged someone else across the way.

The children were not forgotten and one number of the programme was set aside as games for them. It was noticed, however, that the games were even more popular with the grown-ups than with the children and the M. C. had some difficulty in passing on to the next number in the programme which was a waltz.

After the twelfth dance at about 11:30, refreshments were served in the liberal manner for which the Caledonian Club is already noted. The ladies proved in this part of the evening's arrangements to be even better hostesses than the men were hosts and there was plenty for everybody and lots to spare.

Interspersed with the dancing were a few vocal selections which were all very well received. They included excellent solos by Miss Duthie Mr. John Smith, the well-known local baritone, and Mrs. French Mr. R. Henry also obliged with a couple of comic songs, which produced much applause.

First class music was supplied by Mrs. Bugg ,pianist, and Mr. Pirrie, violinist. For most of the Scotch dances such as the Highland Scotische, Mr. Thom, a recent arrival from Glasgow, played Scotch airs on the bagpipes. Perhaps the most popular dance of all was the Highland Scottosche, danced to the music of the pipes which was natural in such a Scotch gathering.

Mrs. Reid acted as Master of Ceremonies and the committtee who were responsible for the arrangements for the evening were: Mrs. Reid, convenor, Mrs. Wyllie, Mrs. French, Mrs. Veitch and Miss Dutchie. The general opinion of the men present was that they should take their hats off to the ladies on this occasion, and after refreshments had been served, a vote of thanks was moved and carried with three ringing cheers.

MR. ROWAND AT ST. ANDREW'S

Rev. Mr. Rowand, who made many warm friends during his two years' ministry in St. Andrew's Church while Mr. Rollins was overseas, will conduct the services tomorrow in the Conservatory of Music where St. Andrew's congregation now worship. Mr. Rowand won the affection and gratitude of St. Andrew's Church by his splendid work and he will doubtless be greeted by large congregations morning and evening.

SAFETY PATROLS IN SCHOOLS

For a number of years the Ontario Safety League has conducted "Safety Patrols" in certain of the schools of Ontario with marked success. The idea back of the "patrol" teaches the older pupils to look after the younger ones. The boys and girls forming the patrols are provided with badges, report forms and other literature. An ordinary school patrol consists of ten or twelve members, including the "captain." who wears a gold badge instead of a silver one.

A public spirited youth in Winnipeg; Master William Konotop, heard of these Safety Patrols and decided he wanted to help to prevent accidents, and the following series of letters to the League is most interesting:

First Letter.

I hope you are quite well. I belong to a Trail Rangers Club in the North Winnipeg Y.M.C.A., Selkirk avenue. I have a Trail Rangers' manual at home, so I looked it up and found out that there was a school safety patrol, so I wanted to join it, and twelve more of my friends, so we said in our last meeting we should get some badges. So I am writing if you would let us be members of the Ontario Safety League. We would like some badges, but we can't get them. Can you get us some? I am closing now, for I have to go to school. So good-bye. Our teacher says we could have one if we wanted to.

Don't forget.

Yours truly,
WILLIAM KONOTOP.

Second Letter.

Dear Sir:

I have received your letter and I am writing back. I could not understand your name, so I would like you to write it plainly. I couldn't understand one word and it was literature. I had to ask teacher, and she told me what it meant. There was an accident here not very long ago. A fire chief got his back wheels knocked off by a street car. I must close my letter now, so good-bye. With best wishes,

Yours truly,
WILLIAM KONOTOP.

P.S.—When do we get the badges? One of our boys asked me to put it down.

Third Letter.

Dear Sir:

I have received your letter and I am writing. Is there any badges for the leader? If there is, can you send me one? I received your badges at Jan. Here I am sending you a safety report—the fire wasn't a bad one. I was delivering papers when I saw something burning and I heard the firdemen come past, so I followed them. I must close now so good-bye With best wishes,

Yours very truly,
WM. KONOTOP.

P.S.—If you have a leader's badge please send it, or captain's.

Fourth Letter.

Dear Sir:

I am sending you a letter and two reports that were done by Recklessness and Carelessness. I would like you if you can give me all the ones that are captains of patrols names. I would like to see some of them if I can. I must close pretty soon. I got your letter safely and thank you for the captain's badge. We are going on with our patrol very well. I must end, so good-bye. I hope that you get this and Safety Report too. So good-bye.

Your best,
WILLIE KONOTOP.

P.S.—I see some other boys who have badges the same as ours.

Fifth Letter.

Dear Safety League:

I have received your letter and I am writing back one of my patrol members are dead so you can see there is one missing. I have no reports to sent this time but will soon get some. I have got to get one today. I can not write a big letter so good-bye.

Yours very truly,
WILLIAM KONOTOP.

P.S.—Every body wants to join the patrol but I tell them I haven't any badges. The Lord Nelson School is asking me to make a patrol for them, but I say I am not the owner. and then I said I will try because we would like to have less accidents.

OBSERVE CLEAN-UP WEEK

To the Editor of The Review:

Sir: Kindly permit me me to say that I hope the citizens will take up heartily the idea of the clean-up week promulgated by the Board of Trade.

A clean, tidy city, which includes tidy yards and premises, makes an instantaneous impression on a visitor that the city is a live one, with enterprising citizens who have a good civic spirit. It also reacts on ourselves and helps to make all feel a greater pride in our city, and increases our self-respect, as well as assisting to provide a healthier atmosphere.

The program for the week has been published, and if all will join in carrying it out it will be of marked benefit.

The suggestion in the program to continue the greater production movement is timely and should also be acted on.

Yours very truly,
(Sgd.) A. A. McINTYRE,
Mayor.

This is really a Property Committe's question, and Ald. Jones said he would secure an estimate on what it would cost to illuminate the clock.

PROPOSED DEVELOPMENT OF ST. LAWRENCE INTO DEEP WATERWAY

Plan for Improving River Between Montreal and Lake Ontario to Make Same Navigable for Ocean-Going Boats Favored by Most of Canada.

(By Canadian Press.)

New York, May 3.—Interests favoring and opposed to the proposed development of the St. Lawrence deep waterway have for weeks been marshalling their forces for a series of public hearings on the subject, to be held by the International Joint Waterways Commission, commencing at North Bay, Ont., May 7. These hearings will be continued until the end of June in various Canadian and American centres.

The plan for the joint development by Canada and the United States of a St. Lawrence ship channel has been enthusiastically greeted by the former country, the port of Montreal alone standing aloof somewhat, as the established outlet of the St. Lawrence for ocean tonnage, and by fourteen western and middle western states in the neighboring republic. The state of New York is conducting the active opposition south of the international boundary line, seeing in the scheme a menace to the New York State barge canal, and possible rivalry to the port of New York. At a convention held March 15 a large number of representatives of chambers of Commerce and commercial organizations of the state of New York pledged themselves to work against the project.

The International Joint Waterways Commission was created by the treaty between the United States and Great Britain relating to the boundary waters between the United States and Canada signed at Washington, January 11, 1909. One of the provisions of this treaty requested the commission to investigate what further improvement of the St. Lawrence River between Montreal and Lake Ontario was necessary to make the same navigable for ocean-going vessels together with the estimated cost thereof, the commission to report to the governments of Canada and the United States its recommendations for co-operation by the two countries in such improvements. On February 24 of this year the commission sent out to municipalities, boards fo trade, associations, and other bodies interested in the development of trade routes from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic seaboard, a circular letter stating that:

"The engineers appointed by the two governments are now engaged in making surveys and in the preparation of plans and estimates for the information of the commission. This information will not be available for some time, and in the meantime the commission purposes holding a series of public meetings at which all interested parties for or against the proposed development will be given an opportunity of expressing their views."

So far as the United States is concerned, sentiment in favor of the St. Lawrence deep waterway chrystallized definitely at the National Rivers and Harbors Congress held in Washington last December, when fourteen states, represented in the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater Association, came out strongly for the plan. These states are Illinois, Michigan, Iowa, Montana, Colorado, Indiana, Wisconsin, North Dakota, South Dakota, Idaho, Nebraska, Minnesota and Wyoming. These states are in the heart of the continent, and have perhaps one-third of the area, one-third of the population and one-third of the wealth of the United States. They produce about two-thirds of the iron, corn and wheat, and possess two-thirds of the measured coal reserve of the republic.

The claims of the western states were presented at the Washington congress by H. H. Merrick, president of the Mississippi Valley Association, in the following terms:

"The cost of improvement is less than that of other routes. Moreover, it would be divided between the two nations sharing its benefits.

"It is a high-speed waterway avoiding long passages by canals.

"It would accommodate the large vessels of commerce, opening the Great Lakes to ocean freighters and avoiding the cost of rehandling goods.

"The improvement would develop vast water power.

"It would be jointly owned and used by Canada and the United States, and such joint ownership and use would cement the friendship of these two great peoples.

"If, failing to joint hands with Canada, we insist on an all-American route, then we may expect an all-Canadian route as well, and we would then have two costly water-

LIKE PULLING TEETH TO GET AID FOR EX-CANADIAN SERVICE MEN IN AMERICA

Are Told by Red Cross to Get Out and Earn Living

(By Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, May 3.—While the Canadian Patriotic Fund is assistint veterans of the United States forces in Canada, "it is like pulling teeth" to get aid from the American Red Cross for ex-soldiers of the Canadian army residing in the United States, asserted C. H. Bonner, executive secretary of the Vancouver branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, giving evidence before the Parliamentary committee on pensions here this morning.

Mr. Bonner said that particularly in Seattle, Canadian ex-soldiers or their families who needed a start to re-establish themselves, were being told by the American Red Cross to "get out and earn their own livelihood." American women were aided by the American Red Cross while Canadian women living beside them wer told to go out and find work, Mr. Bonner said.

Many of the men dispersed from service in British Columbia, said Mr. Bonner, were Americans enlisted in California for inland water transport or engineering services.

New York, May 3.—Tonp Tazio, thirty years old, detained by the Department of Justice as an important witness against a number of radicals involved in the bomb outrages of last June, committed suicide early today by hurling himself from a window on the fourteenth floor of a Park Row office building.

Evaded His Guard.

Tazio is believed to have evaded his guard by obtaining permission to go to the wash room. He leaped from the window clad only in his night clothes.

The department officials said he had confessed to his part in the June plottings, and was an important witness.

REDS BACKED UP AGAINST RIVER

STUBBORN STRUGGLE FOR KIE

CHINESE MERCENARIES USED BY BOLSHEVIKI TO STEM ADVANCE

(By Canadian Press.)

Warsaw, May 3.—Bolshevik forces have backed up against the Dnieper River, and are preparing to resist Polish and Ukrainian efforts to take Kiev, towards which General Pilsudski's men are fighting their way from three directions. Stubborn fighting is going on in the open country along the Telrow River in the vicinity of Malin. Chinese mercenaries are being used by the Bolsheviki to stem the Polish advance, said Saturday's official communique.

Driving Back Reds.

Winnica and Zhmerinka, approximately fifty miles southwest of Kiev, have been retaken by the Poles and Ukrainians after three days' of fighting. The Reds have been pushed across the Bug River.

Capture Kiev.

Polish forces occupied Kiev on Sunday, according to extra editions of newspapers here today.

General Pilsudski, President of the Polish State, led to the troops into the city, the newspapers say.

PROVINCIAL LEGISLATORS WILL PROBABLY GET INCREASE IN PAY

At Present it Looks Like a Compromise on $2,000 Asking $2,500.

(By Canadian Press.)

Toronto, May 3.—With at least two weeks of work and probably three still ahead of Legislature indications are that the members' request for an increased indemnity will be granted.

It is understood that the Government is considering the matter with a view to offering $2,000 as a compromise between the present allowance and the $2,500 asked.

Accept Compromise.

A majority of the members it is expected would be willing to accept such an offer if it were made. As seventy-nine members of the House signed the round robin which was presented last week, the Government is likely to comply with the wishes, rather than risk the possibility of the matter being brought up in the house and forced through, despite Government opposition.

EXCITEMENT OVER FIRE

Smoke from Basement of Electrical Store Causes Alarm.

Some excitement was caused on George street last night, just as the people were coming out of the churches at eight o'clock, when smoke was discovered coming from the basement of Grant and Thorpe's electrical store. A passerby rang in the alarm, and on the arrival of the Fire Department, it was found that the cause of all the trouble was a generator used for recharging batteries, which had become overloaded and had burnt out. Before the department arrived on the scene a large crowd had gathered in the vicinity, and caused considerable annoyance to the firemen in the carrying out of their work. The arrival of hal fa dozen policemen soon put this matter in order. tI was the second trip for one of the horses recently purchased for the department, and he has every appearance of making a very good fire horse. The two horses bought last week have not been out for a sun yet.

Two Other Fires.

There were two other fires on Sunday, both alarms bein gsent in at 10.30 a.m. One was to the home of Mr. Matthews, 119 Smith street, on account of a chimney fire which, however, caused no damage and the other was to the residence of Mr John Knowles, 172 Adeline street, also a chimney fire. There was no damage here either.

OLIVER BARR IS FINED $246.00

COSTS MONEY TO HAVE ILLICIT STILL APPARATUS IN ONE'S HOUSE

Oliver Barr, charged with having in his possession apparatus suitable able for the manufacture of spirits, contrary to the Inland Revenue Act was fined $100 and costs and expenses amounting to $146—$246 in all —or six months' imprisonment this morning.

At first Barr pleaded not guilty, and evidence of the Inland Revenue Officer, Wm. H. Buller, was taken to the effect that on the 19th of April last he had made a seizure of some barrels which still smelled of fermented mash, a 32-gallon can, and some piping and clamps, all being the part of equipment found about an illicit still. These were seized in a house on Lot 1, Concession 14, Cavendish. He had met Barr, who had told him he didn't have the house but just the land rented. There was other evidence, however, which went to show that Barr did use the house.

While some legal points were being discussed and a second charge was about to be commenced, the accused decided to elect summary trial and plead guilty, which he did, with the above result, and the Crown dropped the other charge against him, which, however, stands against the other accused, James Rutts.

ESCAPE SENTENCE ON IRREGULARITY

JOSEPH LABRIE AND BROTHER EMILE FREED BY JUDGE DUCLOS

(By Canadian Press.)

Montreal, May 3.—Joseph Labrie, sentenced to life imprisonment, and his brother, Emile Labrie, sentenced to twenty-five years in the penitentiary by Judge Desy at Sherbrooke, were this morning freed by Judge Duclos on account of irregularity in papers committing them to prison.

The papers did not mention the full name of the men they killed or that of the crime. They were found guilty of manslaughter in connection with the shooting of Charles E. Chaz, near Sherbrooke.

The Regular Meeting of the Great War Veterans' Association will take place tonight in the Veterans' Hall at 8 o'clock. All members are requested to be present as business of the greatest importance will be taken up.

ONLY FIFTY PERCENT OF TRAINS RUNNING FROM AND INTO PARIS

Virtually no Freight at all Moving—General Federation of Labor Declares Struggle Will Continue Until General Interests of Nation are Assured—The Manifesto.

(By Canadian Press.)

Paris, May 3.—The strike situation in this city was generally stationary at the north and east stations this mornings. Only about fifty per cent. of the usual number of trains are in operation. Virtually no freight trains were moving during the forenoon.

Continue Struggle.

General Labor Federation last night issued a manifesto declaring it will continue the struggle, and disclaiming all responsibility for present events. It says it will not cease to defend the general interests of the nation, and urges certain "indispensable measures, which events since the armistice have proved necessary."

Manifesto recapitulates a program comprising a national economic council, an international commission to apportion raw materials, an international fleet under a League of Nations to bring down freights, reorganization of all railroads, and other measures. It concludes by affirming that the execution of this program would have prevented all ills from which the country is uffering, and would have brought wealth and prosperity.

(By Canadian Press.)

New Bedford, Mass., May 3.—A strike of approximately 20,000 operatives went into effect at thirty-sevn cotton cloth mills in this city today. The walkout was occasioned by the posting of notices relative to working conditions for loom fixers, who were required to operate more looms than formerly.

SENATOR PRINGLE OF OTTAWA DEAD

WELL-KNOWN BARRISTER PASSED AWAY AT CHATEAU LAURRIER

Ottawa, May 3.— Senator Clive Pringle died at the Chateau Laurier Hotel yesterday afternoon at 1:45. Death was due to heart trouble, from which he suffered for many months.

Senator Clive Pringle was the son of Roderick and Sara (Etanton) Pringle, and was born at Grafton, Ont. January 8, 1871. Both father and mothter were of Canadian stock. The late Senator was educated at Trinity College School, Port Hope, Ont., and at Trinity University, Toronto, where he graduated as B.A., in 1891. He then took up the study of law, and was called to the Ontario Bar in 1894 and to the Bar of British Columbia in 1898. He practised law in Greenwood, B.C., as member of the firm of Pringle and Whiteside, from 1899 to 1903. Since 1903 he had practised in Ottawa. Mr. Pringle was made Senator in 1917. He is survived by his widow, Rebecca Brooks Cornell, daughter of Richard Cornell, of Buffalo N. Y. whom he married July 11, 1901; by one son Roderick John Pringle, and by two daughters, May and Margaret Marion. Senator Pringle was a member of the Church of England, and was a Conservative in politics.

The remains will be taken to Cobourg for burial.

TWO KILLED, FIFTY ARE WOUNDED IN RIOTS IN EASTERN SECTION OF PARIS

BRIDGE WORKERS ON THE JOB AGAIN

RETURN TO DUTIES PENDING SETTLEMENT OF WAGE QUESTION BY COUNCIL

Once again this morning the vicinity of the Hunter street bridge was the scene of activity. The men all returned to work this morning under protest, having learned that Mayor McIntyre was in New York and that nothing could be done in the matter of increased wages until his return, when the City Council would discuss it. As far as could be learned from the officials of the company this morning, everything now rests with the City Council, the company apparently being willing to abide by any decision of the City Council in the matter. The men have agreed to work until Thursday next, so as to give the City Council an opportunity of meeting and taking the question up.

Citizens in general who are anxious to see the completion of the much debated bridge will be relieved to learn that so far only half a day was lost by the strike. Saturday would in any event have been a half holiday, and it was on Saturday morning that the men went out.

Major-General Sir Charles Townshend, the hero of Kut, has arrived in Toronto.

Socialist Members of Chamber of Deputies Suffer Injuries in Clash With Police.

Paris, May 3.—Two persons were killed and about fifty others wounded, most of them slightly, in a series of small riots on Saturday afternoon in the eastern part of the city.

The situation generally is under control of the authorities.

Two Socialist members of the Chamber of Deputies M. M. Vaillant-Couturier and Alexandre H. Blanc, were injured in a clash with the police in the afternoon near the Place de la Republique.

A clash between Republican guards, police and two thousand May Day manifestants occurred at three o'clock Saturday afternoon on the boulevards of the St. Martin quarter. Two shots were fired during the melee and several persons are reported wounded.

The disturbance was the first active disorder of the day. It was brought on by the presence of students from the schools who acted as drivers on the auto busses, replacing the striking drivers.

Towards 3 o'clock crowds along the route of the autos began jeering the student drivers. They then began stoning the windows of the auto busses, spitting in the faces of the drivers of the busses which had

SPIRITUALISM AND HUMBUG.

CREDULITY IN THE HUMAN make-up has existed since the first inception of man on this earth, and we have had it with us always. Barnum declared that the public loved to be humbugged, and he has many followers in this year of our Lord nineteen-twenty. Spiritualism and spiritualists find a ready market, and many a dupe finds a home in an insane sanitarium as the result. The only spirits of a real tangible nature are those that are distilled, and many cannot associate with such with impunity. The spirit of the seance chamber has a horror of being touched; in fact, he or she are so sensitive that they operate as a rule through a third person—the medium—for a price in dollars and cents. On those rare occasions, when a spirit does consent to become visible, it is in an atmosphere of darkness—lights up would be too revealing. When the lights were turned up on the Davenport brothers, America's famous spiritualists, by a party of mischievous students, the results were too illuminating, and the Davenport brothers fled, carrying with them a bunch of spirits' faces and arm which had up to that time made thousands of credulous dupes. Slade, a famous spiritualist, through whose machinations so many weak-minded dupes of both sexes found their last earthly homes in mad houses that the British Government offered a reward for his exposure, waxed rich by his infamous trade. Slade's operations were of the manifestation nature, and two skeptical young men—Maskilon and Cook—undertook a manifestation of their own which sent Slade to prison for life. These young men had the temerity to pounce upon the spirit, turn up the lights, and "she" (the spirit) shrieked in "mortal" terror. The only reward these exposers of Slade would accept was a license to give spiritualist exhibitions in the Egyptian Hall, London, England, under the proper names of trickery and illusion. Their performances were marvellous, and demonstrated just what spiritualistic effects can be adduced from illusion.

But yet we have the credulous with us still, and mediums and their gangs flourish. But today spirits do no manifest themselves to the human eye: it is too risky; they resort to writing their messages by the hands of mediums. Such subterfuge is only worthy of the tricksters themselves and insulting to our Christian faith and twentieth century intelligence.

However, this trickery is by no means new; it is an ancient custom revived. The idols of the pagans delivered messages to their worshippers—through a third person also, a priest concealed within the god. Those messages had their price likewise in gold or silver currency. Spiritualism is in the same class with witchcraft, and its mediums of the same profession as the smellers-out-of-evil-men in the Zululand of old. This practice of holding seances for filthy lucre has a baneful influence on weak intellects, and should be stamped out root and branch, even as the British blotted out witchcraft in those African territories which came under their protection.

Spiritualism is repugnat to the teachings of Christianity and degrading to human intelligence and human conceptions of the Almighty. It is really so childish to imagine that if the Great Architect of the Universe willed that there should be spiritualistic communication between the dead and the living, the means of such connection must rest in a medium (unless one is a medium oneself) and in writing.

VENTILATION NEEDED.

IN THE INTERESTS of good health, for the stamping out of consumption, whose appalling toll of our race year by year robs Canada of its manhood and womanhood, medical experts point to ventilation and fresh air and exercise, and plenty of it. The Ottawa Journal, in treating of this subject, points to the sad death of a returned soldier and his two little sons at Pembroke, suffocated by smoke after their house had caught fire, "which," it says, "recalls by one of its circumstances the tragedy in Ottawa last winter in which the whole Cardinal family perished by coal gas. The circumstance in question is indicated in a paragraph of the Pembroke despatch, namely, 'unfortunately, all the windows in the house, including the bedroom, were closed tight.' That was also the case in the Cardinal domicile. It is the habit of a great many of us to seal up our homes almost hermetically, and to so risk such a fate as befell the Pembroke and Ottawa households. the danger and the fate which such closure invites are indicated to but a comparatively very slight degree by such sudden tragedies as these. The insidious evil which is done gradually day by day from lack of fresh air in our homes is a million times more destructive. No more potent cause, or at least aggravation of tuberculosis, exists; no more continual and extensive cause of a general enfeeblement of human vitality predisposing human beings to all sorts of disease. The Indian or other savage taken from life in the open and comfortably housed in a civilized dwelling comes to the latter with a rugged constitution, but he will not live long. Little more healthy for ourselves is residence and sleeping in homes from which fresh air is almost shut out, and foul air bottled inside. The first principle of hygiene in this or any climate is fresh air. Draughts are troublesome and sometimes dangerous things, but they can be avoided with a little common sense, and all the damage in the world draughts ever did to human health would not be a millionth part of the damage done by bad air."

"MADE-IN-CANADA."

AMERICAN BUSINESS MEN, in talking of the made-in-Canada campaign, view the agitation as but temporary, one which will die out when the adverse exchange rate against Canada has been adjusted. They are confident that then Canadian-American trade will flow back into its normal channels.

The made-in-Canada campaign, which perhaps found its birth in the United States' adverse exchange rate, has already had some effect which, the Canadian Press says, "is seen in statistics of Canadian-American trade for the seven months ending at the close of January, which reveal a decline in purchases from the United States. As an indication of the present trend it may be expected that a substantial decrease will be reflected in the next report, with a corresponding increase in Canadian importations from Great Britain.

"According to the Monthly Summary of Foreign Commerce (Washington), Canada bought goods to the value of $483,159,230 from the United States during the seven months ending January of this year, as against $542,472,967 for the corresponding period ending January, 1919. Canada's sales to the United States for these periods were $319,016,730 and $292,490,855 respectively. Thus, the excess of imports over exports representing Canada's adverse balance of trade with the United States in the seven months ending January, 1920, was $162,142,500 as against $249,982,112 for the same period ending January, 1919, a reduction of about $90,000,000.

"In spite, however, of the shifting balance, Canada is shown as being still the second greatest buyer in the United States markets. Great Britain is an easy first, and France a close third. In the seven months ending January, 1920, Canada bought twice as much goods from the United States as the whole of South America."

In Canada's reduction of $90,000,000 in its excess of imports from the United States we find a source of congratulation and a move in the right direction, as the less of our needs are imported, the more of our own inherited resources are we drawing from. The first aim of Canada should be, "sufficient within herself for her own needs," as far as practicable, with "trade within the Empire" a second slogan.

In Canada there are abundant natural resources, the development of which has not yet been touched, and Canada's objective should be to lessen imports by using those resources and by the application of Canadian capital and Canadian effort. In a comparatively small nation like Canada, with untold natural wealth, to be the second greatest buyer in the United States markets shows that we have been remiss in taking advantage of our own opportunities, and the "made-in-Canada" principle has not originated before needed, and should develop into a strong industrial policy inaugurated as a potential factor in our national life.

GUARD AGAINST VANDALISM.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES have instructed teachers to warn their pupils to keep off people's lawns and not to heedlessly or wilfully in any way mar the work of citizens in beautifying their home surroundings. People should be encouraged to make the exteriors of their premises as beautiful as possible, for these days, with the removal of unsightly fences, to cultivate picturesque lawns and beautiful flower beds not only pleases one's own individual leaning toward horticulture, but offers that which delights the eyes and the senses of neighbors and passers-by. Then nothing demonstrates community interest in one's own home town more than the presentation to the visitor of a city beautiful which arrests and holds the attention and impels the thought that both business and municipal progress and care are marching hand in hand. Beautiful and well-kept homes are sure signs that their owners are prosperously happy and that the city which can support such homes is one worth while, industrially and domestically. Then we don't want citizens' efforts in this direction discouraged by mischievous hands, adult or juvenile, and such mischievousness, it is understood, is to be vigorously guarded against and punished this year.

While on this subject, it is regrettable to note that last summer not a little amount of vandalism occurred here in the parks and on citizens' lawns and grounds where considerable damage was done, quite evidently not by heedless children, but by near-grown-ups and adults criminally intent on appropriating to themselves the results of others' efforts and expenditure in the way of plants, flowers, and even vegetables. It is to be hoped that this year every effort will be put forth to catch such offenders, and that, if any are caught, let their punishment be sufficiently fitting to the crime as to promise a deterring effect on others.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

SHOULD KEEP OUR BEST.

(Kingston Whig.)

Has the time not arrived when the Canadian Government should put its hand on bright young men from the universities and give them every opportunity to go into research work for the benefit of the nation and not allow them to be picked up by other countries?

THE NEW IRISH SECRETARY.

(London Times.)

Sir Hamar Greenwood may be the last of a long line of harassed ministers who, with some partial successes and many failures, have sought to achieve the impossible from Dublin Castle. He enters upon his duties at one of the darkest periods in modern Irish history, and with a commission which many think forlorn. Nevertheless, we trust that, if the Government will give the opportunity and he will take advantage of it, the ending of the chief secretaryship may better become that office than anything in its record during recent years.

USES OF THE WHITE-COLLAR BOY.

(The Sun and New York Herald.)

When the white-collar boy has dug coal and stoked locomotives, has made a first-class job of it, and has sent outlaw strikers back to work, consider the white-collar boy and the painter or the glazier. In the great city, when an apartment house is all but ready to give shelter to scores of families distracted because they can't find roofs under which to put their heads, the organized painter holds up the delivery of the houses because he won't paint them. The glazier holds up the delivery of the houses because he won't put in the window glass. But anybody can put in a pane of glass. Anybody can paint. Anybody can do an ordinary job of painting, whether it is a door or a sash or a wall or a whole house. On the farm a boy does it. He does it well enough to keep out the rains and snows of tempestuous climates and seasons. He does it well enough to preserve the woodwork for generations against blistering suns of summer and savage blasts of winter. When the painter and the glazier want to keep the public from getting a permanent roof over its head, let the white-collar boy do the job for himself and for the public—and he'll do it better than the average organized painter and glazier tries to do it or thinks of trying to do it.

SAFETY OR COMPENSATION

One of organised Labor's best Allies is the Ontario Safety League. This statement may be challenged by those who prefer to receive compensation for injuries and death in industry than remove the cause of these industrial tragedies. In enlisting the co-operation of the managers of industry to keep their plants one hundred per cent. mechanically efficient a substantial step towards the elimination of accidents has been made. In seeking the co-operation of the employees through the organising of "Safety Committees" another substantial step towards accident prevention has been made. The workers need all the compensation they can get in the event of accidents, but there is a much more pressing need for accident prevention than there is for compensation. It is this necessity which the Ontario Safety League regards as imperative and the work they have done and are doing to prevent accidents should receive the commendation of every right-thinking wage-earner. The enactment of Workmen's Compensation legislation has undoubtedly stimulated many owners of industries to introduce safety appliances in their factories with the hope that compensation costs will be reduced, but it has been left to the Safety Organization in the United States and Canada to educate the manufacturers to the need of safety methods in their industries. It has sometimes been charged that Safety Leagues are merely operating in the interests of the employers and labor organizations have refused to give them the co-operation they are justly entitled to. Such organizations should be judged by results and not merely on the prejudices of those who adversely criticize. When the huge steel industry of the United States expended large sums of money to reorganize their plants with a view to preventing accidents they not only realized a net gain of $1,000,000 in cash over and above the cost of introducing their safety devices, but saved 23,000 of their employees from either injury or death. The railways of the United States soon saved the lives of 3,000 of their employees and 6,000 lives of the general public by taking the advice of the Safety Leaguers. Out of the eighteen to twenty millions of workers in the United States there have been 2,000,000 accidents within a given period, with 750,000 workers losing four weeks' working time or over, and 22,50 never returning to industry. Out of the 750,000 losing time to the extent of four weeks or over, from 15,000 to 18,000 suffer permanent impairment. The compensation paid to injured workmen and to the dependents of those killed in industry amounted to $200,000,000 in one year. From the standpoint of the employer it is important that accidents should be prevented and compensation charges reduced. From the standpoint of the mployee it is exceedingly important that accidents should not happen. Industry free from accidents is more to be desired than Workmen's Compensation legislation. The demand for Workmen's Compensation legislation is mane necessary because of the tragedies in industry, and the Ontario Safety League is doing more good for the workers in saving life and limb than it is forf the employer in saving compensation costs and increasing production. Those who save their lives are greater debtors to the Safety League than those who save their cash.

HOW MUCH FOR YOUR HUSBAND?

If you are a husband, it would pay you to find out at once whether you are a liability or an asset, and lay your plans accordingly. For these are parlous days.

In the olden time, husbands got rid of undesirable wives in many ways. If not particularly aggrieved against them, they let them live and sold them to some one else.

Nowadays nearly every newspaper brings us tidings of some wife selling or offering to sell her husband. They even appear in the "For Sale" ads along with second-hand cook-stoves, sewing machines, dogs, horses and bicycles. Something like this:

"For Sale—Husband, as good as new. Has never done any work. Only slightly shiftless. Kind and gentle, and any woman can drive him. Sound in mind and limb. Reason for selling, owner is leaving the city and must unload at once. Or will exchange for a late model typewriter or a couple of good hens. A bargain for some one who needs this sort of husband."

The style was started, we believe, by the Missouri woman who several years ago traded her husband for a mule, stating that the latter would not be so particular about his food and would not need a room in the house.

Last week the Pennsylvania papers spoke of a woman there who had offered her husband in trade for a second-hand Ford. It seems that she is an efficient washerwoman. Her husband has been delivering the washing and collecting it, but failed to show speed. The Ford would help her immensely in her business and she figured that the up-keep of the machine would be less than that of the maintenace of her husband.

A gipsy woman last week offered her husband for $5000, stating that she was getting rid of him for the reason that the cost of necessities had increased so much in the past two years that she couldn't afford to have any of the luxuries.

The thing is becoming general. The only thing to do if you happen to notice the wife sizing you up several mornings at the breakfast table in an inventorial sort of way is to get busy and begin bringing home the bacon.—Boston Advertiser.

DOMESTIC BAROMETER

A genius out West, who, strange as it may seem, is not running for President this year, and has time to do something useful, has invented a domestic barometer. This little machine, hung in any house or apartment, is guaranteed to register every degree of marital temperament from Felicity, which is at the top, to Divorce, which is at the bottom.

Storm-tossed mariners upon the wreck-strewn sea of matrimony can consult the machine and trim their sails accordingly—many times averting disaster.

A rapidly falling barometer is the signal to go off on a new tack, haul in the flying jib, reef the mainsail and run before the gale.

The first thing the husband does when he comes home is to glance at the barometer, which hangs in a convenient place in the hall. If he comes home at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning he doesn't have to look at the barometer. He knows it is going to be stormy, and his hunch is to tack swiftly for the back stairs and make his own room without showing any chance for a collision.

If he can get out of the house before breakfast next morning he can wait until the storm subsides.

In ordinary times, however, the barometer is a handy little household accessory. Its delicately attuned needle will, by the slightest daviation from "Fair," inform the husband when it is time to annex a pair of opera tickets. The needle will also indicate "New Hat," "Late Model Car," "Dinner in Town" and "Furs," besides a hundred other little storm preventatives.

In fact, the only thing the inventor will not guarantee his machine to do is to keep a matrimonial bark off the financial rocks. It would take a superman to evolve a barometer of that kind in these changeable times, and he is only a common, ordinary, human inventor with the average imagination.

"Pigs in the Blankets"

By SAIDEE E. BALCOM

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

"Will be with you noon train. Can stay over one night.—Bach."

This was the telegram that Nelson Wright received at his office and instantly the dull day was transformed. He sprang to his feet briskly and snatched up the telephone receiver, calling in turn three close male friends who were favorite chums.

If there was anybody in the world whom Nelson particularly liked it was this electrifying "Bach." Joyfully he hailed one and each of his chums. "I've told you about Bach. Well, he'll be here today, so hold yourself open for supper."

He had known Bach for two years when he was working in the city. When Nelson returned to his home town and put out his shingle as a budding attorney he had kept up a regular correspondence with this prince of good fellows. He had known that Bach was off on a jaunt for a month and was duly delighted to learn that on his way home he would stop over at Springdale.

Bach, as Verne Dayton was familiarly designated, was not over twenty-five but was an avowed woman hater and confirmed society hermit. Outside of that he was the most munificent and jovial of hosts and entertainers.

Chef as well as host, Bach had become an expert in the preparation of dishes that would appeal to the most critical of bon vivants. The little kitchen of the suite was his kingdom half the evening, while he pottered around with every latest accessory of cookery to provide a perfect meal.

"Bless the better sex!" he was wont to observe chivalrously, "but none is my blasted life. Think of it, fellows; from ten to sixteen the special victim of a parsimonious step-mother whose cooking was sparse as was it sloppy. I recall mackerel every day drowned in a greasy gravy that even the flies wouldn't touch. Evenings, inevitable and unvaried yellow corn meal and molasses. After my father's death I was relegated to an aged aunt. Poor soul! She did her best but she had no more appetite than a bird and forgot that I had one. I was literally starved to death. At nineteen I was alone in the world and thrown upon that desolate rock of refuge, a cheap boarding house. Do you wonder, when I made a lucky hit in business and had the means to do as I liked I eschewed cooks and became fastidious as to cookery? True, there are some meals to be had for a small fortune, but give me my own frying pan at my own fireside and I am content."

Bronzed, clear eyed, bright faced, it was a little after noon when Verne entered Nelson's office to receive a hearty welcome.

"Had the time of my life!" declared Verne in his boyish, wholesome way. 'A tent, a campfire, nature, and cookery to my individual taste."

"We want some more of it," returned Nelson fondly, "right here, in this town, and tonight. I've invited three friends who have heard of your wonderful culinary genius. See here, my mother and sister are away in the next town for a couple of days. I'm going to give you the key to the house and I want you to get and prepare the ingredients for one of your famous welsh rarebit treats."

"Well, I'll do just that!" answered Verne with animation. "It will seem good to get back to a real home kitchen."

At five o'clock that afternoon Lorena Wright returned home. She paused in surprise as she noticed that the kitchen window was open and, adorned with one of her aprons and fluttering about table and stove, was the self-constituted cook. He observed her and looked startled and then sheepish, but the sweet smile on Lorena's face as he revealed who he was and his mission, not only restored her complacency, but presented the unspoken opinion that his chum's sister was worth looking at twice. The invited guests arrived, the rarebit was really a work of art, and Verne was invited to supper the next evening.

"I have got a new delicacy I wish to try," explained Lorena, and Verne somehow was glad to protract his stay. When a puzzling new dish was set on the table the next evening he dispatched his share with all the appreciation of a delighted connoisseur.

"I never enjoyed such a refection!" he insisted enthusiastically. "What is it, Miss Wright?"

"Pig in blankets they call it," explained Lorena. "Shall I give you the recipe? It is somewhat elaborate. You wash some oysters and roll them up in thin strips of bacon and skewer them with a small toothpick, sprinkle pepper, dip in melted butter, broil on hot toast, garnish with lemon and white celery, and there you are."

Two weeks later Verne Dayton reappeared at Springdale. Of course Nelson invited him up to the house.

"Miss Wright," said Verne, "no one can follow out that recipe like you. I simply had to come back to try another feast of those 'pigs.'"

And later out of hearing of others as he supposed, Verne remarked to Nelson: "What I've really come for is to get better acquainted with a pretty girl and a perfect cook."

And Lorena overheard and covered her face with her hands, blushing—and was glad.

Horsemen of Australia Pay Unique Compliment To the Prince of Wales

THE news that during his forthcoming tour in Australia the Prince of Wales will ride Bayard, a blood bay of over fifteen hands, acknowledged to be the champion hack of the Commonwealth, is full of meaning for one who knows the great island-continent and its people, says London Answers.

From the Australian point of view, no greater compliment could have been paid the prince. More than anything else the countrybred Australian loves his horse. There is no people more skilled in horse-lore. Horse-racing is a national passion. A great racehorse becomes almost an object of veneration. In lonely places, hundreds of miles away from the great centres of population, men argue about his achievements, and carefully treasure tattered fragments of newspapers setting forth his exploits.

On the basis of comparative population, there are more verse-writers in Australia than in any other country. And ninety per cent. of their verses are written about the horse. There is at least one Australian horse-poet—A.B. ("Banjo") Paterson—whose verses are known by heart from one end of the continent to the other. The circulation achieved by his books, at 6s. a copy, would turn the most successful of our British masters of poetry green with envy.

Every country-born Australian is a horseman almost from his birth. It is no exaggeration to say that most of them learn to ride soon after they have acquired the art of toddling. At eight years of age many of them ride as many miles to school and back again every day. (And sometimes, both before and after school, they will milk half a dozen cows, and do other odd jobs about the farm.)

At seventeen, or thereabouts, the Australian lad becomes the proud possessor of a horse of his own—"a real showy hack," instead of the pony or the old farm general utility horse of which he has made use hitherto. On this he will ride long miles cross country in the evening to visit the girl of his heart upon a distant farm.

If it has "a turn of speed," he will spend hours each day in training it, in the hope of being able to win a race with it at the annual picnic races in the nearest town. Or if it can jump a bit, he will develop its talent by "schooling" it over post-and-rail fences or improvised hurdles. The writer knew one young Australian who erected a hurdle under a tree with an overhanging bough so low that if the horse cleared the hurdle, the rider had a very narrow escape from having his head cracked by the tree-limb. He said it made it "so much more exciting."

Another young man lived twenty miles from a country town, to which he would frequently ride in at night on more or less half-broken horses. He would dance until two or three o'clock in the morning, and then ride home. And if it happened to be moonlight, he would not bother to open any of the many gates on his journey, preferring to make his half-schooled horse jump the barbed wire fences instead: That was exciting, too.

Wonderful friendships sometimes exist between these men and their horses. The writer came once to a desolate sheep-station (ranch) in a far-distant part of Australia, where his hostess told me that her husband had left three days before to help fight a devastating bush-fire which had broken out on the property of a neighbor. They had become anxious at his prolonged absence, and were sending out a search-party to look for him. The writer joined it. Twelve miles away from his homestead he was found lying in a pool of his own blood, with his faithful horse standing guard over him. Exhausted by his efforts to fight the fire, he had gone to sleep on the horse's back on his way home, fallen off, and cracked his skull on a big stone. But the horse had never moved from his side.

So that is why it is safe to say that the decision to place the champion horse Bayard at the disposal of the Prince of Wales is a great compliment. The Australian will lend his horse only to a man whom he respects. He will allow no duffer to put his leg across its back. The man to whom he lends him must have the "hands" and "seat" of the born horseman. Evidently the "Digger" is convinced that the prince satisfies all those requirements.

ENTIRE EARNINGS CARRIED ON BACK

RIOT OF HIGH BUYING IS SWEEPING WINNIPEG CITY

(By Canadian Press.)

Winnipeg, Man., April 30.—"Winnipeg citizens are themselves responsible for the high cost of clothing and by careful buying and pocketing some of their pride can bring the cost down to reasonable figures." declared Mayor Charles F. Gray, in an interview, after deprecating what he termed the riot of high buying which is sweeping the city. Thousands of girls in the city, he said, carry their entire earnings on their backs. The man, he said, are not any better and advocated that citizens co-operate to bring the cost of wearing apparel down. By way of illustrating what can be done, he said, that he bought two suits of clothes for $35 each. "And they are as good as many $60 suits." His overcoat, he said cost $35. The hat he is wearing is six years old, and the boots he wears cost $8.50. He declared that as long as the cost of clothing is as high as at present he will refuse to buy the best and asked that citizens do the same.

RICH PROSPECTOR HAS DISAPPEARED

SACKS OF SILVER ARE DISCOVERED AT HIS SPANISH GROUP

(By Canadian Press.)

Winnipeg, Man., May 1. Within the next five years the development of the mining country of Northern Manitoba will be of such a nature that it will have become the greatest mining district in Canada, said J. E. Hammel, of Toronto, one of the original owners of the Flin Flon copper mine. Work to cost one-quarter million dollars will be done on the Flin Flon property this year, he said, and will be spent in sinking two shafts to a 500-foot level in order to find out the physical character of the ore, a proceeding that must take place before mining on a large scale is commenced. Mr. Hammell said that before a return on the money invested in the mine could be gained ten million dollars would have to be spent in development work, including the erection of a smelting plant. The mine was recently sold to a syndicate representing English, Canadian and American capital and Mr. Hammel is satisfied that there will be no hold up on this score. Mr. Hammel stated that he was practically certain that the company would be able to guarante an output of at least 2,000 tons if not 5,000 tons of ore blister copper per day to take effect three years from now. This guarantee would be forwarded to the Provincial Government which was under obligation to construct a railroad 80 miles in length into the mining district to handle the output, which will cost approximately $2,700,000 to be hand over when completed to the National Railways for operation.

GOOD WORK OF BUREAU.

The local D.S.C.R. has received no instructions with regard to demobilization as announced from Ottawa some days ago. The opinion was expressed by Capt. Morrison that the Peterborough branch would be one of the last to close down as it was included the offices of large cities, which it was the intention of the department to keep open to the last.

At the bureau this week there were 55 applicants, 40 vacancies and 34 placed locally. Fourteen river drivers were sent to Sudbury. In the women's department there were seven applications, 11 vacancies and six placed all for factory work.

The Price of Sugar.

Sugar is a very important item in the present-day high cost of living, but it likewise plays a part in the manufacture of high explosives. A new process has been perfected by the Government whereby glycerine is obtained from sugars and sweets, and the glycerine, in turn, becomes an explosive through nitration.

Thus chemistry has found a way to convert harmless sugar into a deadly explosive. Now that the war is over, however, there will be less demand for this form of explosive for such purposes, but there are many uses to which it can be turned in peace. It will be especially valuable in blowing up heavy and clayey soils which ordinarily resist the farmer's plough. Excellent crops are secured from lands treated in this way, as the general shaking up is conducive to a better action of the nitrifying bacteria in the ground.

It is expected that glycerine obtained in this way will also be used extensively in making transparent soaps and beautifying lotions, as a lubricant for gas meters, and as an ingredient in the manufacture of copying and printers' ink.—Illustrated World.

"Happy-Go-Lucky"

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

"Impulsive? Yes. Irrational? Perhaps at times, but that is his temperament. He was the dearest of lovers and is the very best husband in the world!"

Thus Cecille Drury spoke to her sister-in-law, Mrs. Alleen Boughton. The bride of a year and her relative had been discussing Sidney Drury in a friendly, familiar manner, Cecille all indulgence and resenting somewhat the mild criticism of the other.

"I was basing my thought on the sheer goodness of heart of Sidney," explained Mrs. Boughton. "His generosity is his greatest failing. It seems as though all anybody has to do to get anything he has is to ask him for it."

"Maybe you are hinting at me!" laughed Cecille. "I can't break Sidney of his spendthrift ways with either scolding or pleading. Why, I happened into his office the other day and chanced to admire a new rug he had just bought. By the time I reached home he had already sent it there."

"That is Sidney all over," said Mrs. Boughton. "Can't you and Sidney come over and take dinner with us this evening?"

"I am sorry, dear, but we are booked for a card party at Mr. Ream's. I am to spend the afternoon with Mrs. Ream and Sidney is to join me there in the evening. Oh, by the way! I want to show you the lovely vase my brother has sent from Rome."

Meantime the handsome and happy-go-lucky, hail-fellow well-met subject of interest and discussion, Sidney Drury, on his way to the stock exchange of which he was a member was met by Gregory Ream, the latter in a great fluster. It was at the house of Mr. Ream that the card party was to be held that evening.

"See here, Drury," he spoke. "I'm in a tie-up all the afternoon in an important conference. I promised my wife to arrange for a prize to the winner. Take it off my hands, will you?"

"Certainly," answered the accomodating Drury.

"Buy something worth while, neat and tasteful, see? And I'll fix it up with you later."

But pressure of unexpected business with Sidney drove the promise entirely from his mind. He had hurried home after business, dressed for the pending social function and was about to start to join his wife at the Ream home when sudden recollection moved him as by a shock.

"The mischief!" he ejaculated—"the prize for the card game! I promised Ream I would attend to it. What will he think of me?"

Drury stood reflecting as to what was best to be done. It was too late to go back down town and many of the shops would be closed. He cast his eyes about the room. Was there not some article of bijouterie or art that would do for the prize?

"The very thing! and decidedly tasteful and pretty," he spoke with relief and satisfaction as his eyes fell on the vase so prized by his wife.

It was a gay, mirthful group, and all were ready for the midnight refection and wondering whose score would win the prize, when Cecille chanced into a side room to find Mrs. Ream unwrapping the prize. Just then some one called the hostess and Cecille nearly toppled over. Aghast, she viewed the vase! How had it come here? Direful thoughts came into her mind. She had left it near an open window. Had some burglarious passer-by reached in, secured it, sold it, and by some haphazard had it come into the possession of the Reams? Then again it might not be the same. Oh, she must know! She rushed by the lady deciphering the score cards and approached Sidney.

"Why, how pale and disturbed you look!" he observed.

"Sidney," she spoke impetuously, "we must go home at once."

"But—supper, the prize?" remonstrated her husband.

"Make our excuses, please. I am not well. Don't delay, Sidney. I want to get home at once."

She was mute and nervous all the way from the card party. Once inside their house her glance flew to the window stand. Her precious vase was gone. She dropped into the first chair and broke out into hysterical sobbings.

"Why, what in the world is the matter?" exclaimed Sidney, and then Cecille poured forth her woes. "Her brother's cherished gift!" Sidney was aghast. She chanced to catch a glimpse of his guilty face.

"Oh, Sidney! Surely you never—"

"Yes, I did!" confessed Sidney bluntly. "I'm a misfit, a bungler, an irresponsible imbecile! Don't cry, dear—I'll call up the Reams and explain."

"No, no—that won't do!" dissuaded Cecille.

"But I wouldn't have you lose your brother's gift for all I possess!" declared Sidney. "What don't I deserve for my foolishness! Some one on the wire," and he crossed to the telephone. Cecille saw his face brighten magically. He came toward her pirouetting on his tiptoes and chuckling.

"It's all right!" he cheered. "You won the prize, my dear! I'm a reformed man from now on," and he lifted Cecille's beaming face and kissed it.

"Never again!" he pronounced, lifting his hand solemnly.

Slugs Used to Detect Gas

THE common garden slug helped importantly to win the war. It was—and the fact has only just been revealed—the sole efficient and officially recognized detector of poison gases in the Allied battle area.

When the slug gave warning, the gas alarm was immediately sounded, and the soldiers put on their masks.

Thanks to the slug (for a reason presently to be explained) it happened in a great many instances that one or two Tommies were able at night to steal across No Man's Land and literally drag anywhere from a dozen to fifty Huns out of the trenches, making them prisoners.

The Germans were at a frightful disadvantage, because the secret of the slug was unknown to them. The slimy little mollusks were to be found in plenty all over the battle zone, but the idea of using them to detect poison gases never occurred to the enemy.

Toward the close of the war both sides made frequent use of "camouflage gases"—i.e., gases that cleverly pretended to be poisonous, but which were not so at all.

Suppose, then, a case where the men on one side were obliged to wear masks night and day, perhaps for forty-eight hours or more—their efficiency being reduced thereby to next to nothing at all—while the men on the other side were not compelled to adopt any such means of self-protection. What chance would the former have when briskly and unexpectedly attacked by the latter?

None whatever. And this was just what happened over and over again. The Allies paid no attention whatever to the camouflage gases, because their slugs told them that the stuff coming over was harmless. On the other hand, the Huns had to wear their masks continually, their fighting power being thereby reduced to so low a point that they could offer little resistance to attack by our soldiers.

Canaries are more sensitive to noxious gases than human being. Exposed to them, they begin to droop and show signs of collapsing before men are perceptibly affected. It is the same way with mice, whose actions quickly betray the presence of such gases in the atmosphere.

Mice and canaries were commonly used by the Germans and by the Allies during the war. But they were not altogether satisfactory. They did not give warning quickly enough; and—what was of extreme importance—they were affected by camouflage gases.

The slugs were not bothered in the least by the camouflage gases, and paid no attention to them. But the least quantity of poison gas in the air would cause them to retract their "horns"; and then the gas alarm was sounded, every man promptly putting on his mask.

But right here it will be as well to go back and find out how this remarkable and valuable discovery, in regard to the supersensitiveness of the slug to poison gases, came to be made.

The discoverer was Dr. Paul Bartsch and his finding out of the fact in question was due largely to accident.

He had at the same time a red squirrel and a parroquet—both regular mischiefs, and, oddly enough, great friends. One day, while engaged in a rough-and-tumble romp together, the bird and the squirrel managed to knock the top off the box containing the slugs, and the latter, crawling out, sought hiding places, so that the doctor had considerable difficulty in finding them.

The box was in the furnace room. At night the slugs which had eluded capture—they are noctural animals—would come out and look for food. A dish of mashed potatoes, accidently left on the dining-room table, attracted them, and they partook of it. When this had happened once Dr. Bartsch purposely put more mashed potatoes in the same place, for experiment's sake.

A slug might be called a snail without a shell. Snails are notoriously slow travelers. But the slug, relatively speaking, is a racer. It can probably journey at a rate of fifty yards an hour. Thus to cover the distance from the furnace room to the dining room was no feat at all for the doctor's pets.

Slugs are extremely fond of mashed potatoes. But how did they know where to look for it? Obviously, they were attracted to it by an extraordinary keen sense of smell.

Having established this fact, Dr. Bartsch thought no more about the matter. It was not until the war-gas question came up, and military authorities were anxiously looking for some animal that would serve as a "gas watchdog," that the supersense of the slug recurred to his mind.

If there was one part of gas in 10,000,000 of air, the animal would slightly retract its "horns." When there was one part in 5,000,000 it would withdraw them further. The load being increased to one part in 4,000,000 it would draw them in altogether. It was found possible actually to measure with accuracy the strength of the gaseous solution by observing the creature's actions.

Slugs' eyes are set on the ends of two long stalks projecting forward from the head. The stalks are the so-called "horns."

The discovery here outlined will probably save many lives in peace times. For undoubtedly use will be made of it in mines, where slugs—replacing canaries and mice for the purpose—will give warning of the presence of dangerous gases.

CHILDLESS WOMEN

Please Read This Letter And See What Normal Health Will Do For You.

Berwick, Ont.—"I had organic trouble, and after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Medicine all my troubles passed away. I was made strong and well and have been ever since. Now we have a fine baby boy six months old, and I know that I would not have this baby and would still be suffering if it had not been for your remedies. My husband and myself say that your remedies are worth their weight in gold, and I recommend them to my friends. One of my aunts is taking them now."—Mrs. NAPOLEON LAVIGNE, Berwick, Ontario, Canada.

Among the virtues of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is its ability to correct sterility in many cases. This fact is well established as evidenced by the above letter and hundreds of others we have published in these columns.

In many other homes, once childless, there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Fewer Sea Eagles Seen.

That the monarch of the air, the sea eagle, has disappeared from Caithness, as well as from the Orkneys and Shetlands, is a well-authenticated fact. The sea eagle is not very uncommon in the West Highlands, and still builds its nest on various hills abutting on the cliffy coast. The sites of the nests are on the edge of some large and well-stocked sheep farms. The birds have always been accused of killing lambs, as well as hares and winged game, but the charge would be difficult to substantiate.

Eliminating Poison Ivy.

The cheapest and most effective method of eliminating poison ivy, according to experts of the United States department of agriculture, is the simple one of rooting up the plants and destroying them. If the poison ivy is in large fields it may be necessary to plow and cultivate the land. Ivy on large trees, stone walls and buildings can be killed by arsenate of soda, at the rate of two pounds to ten gallons of water. Two or three applications are sufficient.

Ancient "Breadfather."

Of what great importance the loaf which before 1200 was the name o bread, was a daily food can be inferred from its relation with the word "lord." For lord, A. S. hlaford (hlaf, bread, loaf; weard, a keeper), is probably a contraction of hlaf-weard, literally "loaf-ward" and therefore, originally signified the keeper or dispenser of bread—in short, the breadfather, to whom the members of the family had to apply for their daily bread.

EMINENT DIVINE CONDUCTS ST. PAUL'S PRESB. CHURCH ANNIVERSARY SERVICES

Brief History of One of Peterbore's Oldest Places of Worship.

The anniversary services at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church yesterday were conducted by Rev. Robert Johnson, D.D., pastor of the American Presbyterian Church, Montreal. It is 61 years since St. Paul's Church was erected on its present site, and although 30 years ago the church was overhauled and additions made including the school at the year of the church, yet in reality at the present day the same church stands as was erected in 1859 in the early days of Canadian Presbyterianism. During these 61 years there have only been three pastors of the church, the first one being Rev. John Morris Roger, who was responsible for the breaking away from the Scottish church after the disruption in Scotland in 1843, and to whom the credit is due for the untiring efforts which brought about the erection of the present edifice. The second pastor was Rev. E. F. Torrance, D.D., who held this position from 1876 to 1907, and the third is the present pastor of the church, Rev. Robert Pogue, who was inducted on December 5, 1900. Judge Roger, of Northumberland and Durham, resident at Cobourg, and a former lawyer and mayor of Peterborough, is a connecting link with the first days of St. Paul's Church. He is the son of the first minister of the church, and was for 27 years an elder.

The Prodigal Son.

Rev. Robert Johnson read the lesson and preached at the evening service yesterday. The lesson was of the well-known story of the prodigal son, and in reading it Dr. Johnson drew a beautiful comparison of the prodigal son and the people of today whose aim was to get what they could out of life. Their aim should be not to get what they could out of life, but to put what they could into life.

"I have loved ye saith the Lord. Yet ye say wherein hast Thou loved us? Was not Esau Jacob's brother? saith the Lord: yet I loved Jacob" (Malachi 1-2). Dwelling on this text Dr. Johnson pointed to the fact that Malachi was a prophet of a time of reconstruction after the return of the Israelites from the bondage of Babylon and the rebuilding of the city and temple. Malachi was therefore a prophet in such a time as the present, and his words were effective for present conditions just as they were in his own time for this also was an era of reconstruction after the devastations of the past years. For 400 years following this story in the Old Testament the darkness had been unbroken since the prophecy of Malachi, when the evening bell rang out its prophecy and message in the words of the Lord, "I have loved ye." This was the closing message of the Old Testament, and its reverberations resounded through the silence of the 400 years till the angels in the heavens above Bethlehem sang the glorious tidings, "Unto you is born this day a Saviour." Dr. Johnson, laid stress on the fact that in the time of Malachi, although the Jews had rebuilt the temple and re-instituted those fasts and feasts of the old region, yet their religion was one of form and ritual, and there was not the spirit behind it. This was the condition which brought forth the lamentations of Malachi. There was no joy or no overflow of love in the worship of those days, and therefore it was not satisfying to God. They gave everything, and yet they really gave nothing, because their hearts were not in it. They were trying to escape from God, and that was what many are doing today. They were trying to escape from God, thinking that captivity by Him would be an imprisonment. But they could not escape from God for it was His love that pursued them. Dr. Johnson urged them to answer the appeal of Jehovah in the closing words of the last testament as given by Malachi in the words, "I have loved Ye."

Dr. Johnson related many interesting little stories during the course of his sermon, all depicting the divine love for man.

PENSION REDUCTIONS CAUSING DISCONTENT

ALLEGED THAT INVESTIGATORS OBTAIN VAGUE AND INCOMPLETE INFORMATION

There is considerable dissatisfaction among the local Veterans and among relatives of Peterborough soldiers who fell overseas over the methods adopted by the investigators of the Pensions Commission who carry on enquiries with a view to reducing the pensions paid the dependent relatives of soldiers. The claim is asserted at the local branch of the G.W.V.A. that these investigators obtain vague and incomplete information and send in misrepresented reports, upon the strength of which the pensions are cut down most unfairly.

There are two cases to hand now which illustrate the contention of the Veterans in this matter. The first case concerns a widow who was receiving a pension on account of the death in action of her son, upon whom she depended for support. The investigator sent in a claim that she was living in a house owned by herself and that she was receiving an income from $400 invested in Victory Bonds. On the strength of this information her pension was reduced from $48 to $32. The Great War Veterans took up the case and conducted an inquiry which showed that the house referred to did not belong to her, but to her daughter, who was also a widow with two children. It was also found that the $400 belonged to the daughter. In view of these facts the Pension Commission was appealed to in order to have the matter rectified. It was pointed out that even if the $400 had belonged to her their action had the effect of penalising thrift. As a result of this communication the Pensions Board decided to increase the pension to $38, and correspondence is now going on between the G.W.V.A. and the Board, which will probably result in the pension again being raised to its former level.

The other case was where a son who had been the sole support of the family had been killed overseas and an indefinite pension had been granted. The investigators of the Board came and discovered that the house the family were living in was their own property and the pension was consequently reduced. The War Veterans found upon enquiry that the facts as stated by the investigators of the Board were not correct, but that although the house was the property of the family yet there was a mortgage on it of $2.360. This meant that instead of having to pay rent the family had approximately $15 a month interest to pay. As a result of representations being made by the local branch of the G.W.V.A. the case has again been reopened and it is hoped that this time justice will be done. There are many other such causes before the local branch, and the feeling against the investigators and the methods they adopt are to say the least not very cordial.

Matthew Wilson, K.C., D.C.L., of Chatham, died at the age of 66. He was prominent in legal, Anglican Church and educational matters.

CAUSE OF UNREST.

Class Hatreds Will Prove Serious Danger.

Lord Askwith recently delivered an address in London on "Industrial Unrest," reported in the Christian Science Monitor, a subject that obsessed most people at the present moment and from which many people expected great difficulties in the future. The present unrest, he said, started as far back as 1908, when big strikes broke out. In 1910 and 1911 more strikes occurred, and in fact there was an economic revolution and the flames spread like wildfire. The strikes were settled by degrees, but they showed that the leaders of the men had got out of touch with the rank and file and the hearts of their men.

In the autumn of 1914, continued Lord Askwith, there were serious movements on the part of labor for the betterment of conditions, but the war came and put a different complexion on things. Labor had an ideal, and he stated emphatically that nothing could have beaten the way in which labor put its squabbles below ground and decided to go into the war and win it.

One of the causes of the industrial unrest after the war was Government waste and extravagance. The people saw that the Government were not curtailing expenditure, so they said "Why should we curtail expenditure? If the cost of living goes up we shall ask for more wages." The workers had been told there was to be a new world. They asked for it at once. They were tired of the war and a natural reaction set in. The labor schemes of 1914 were revived.

The country, continued Lord Askwith, was rapidly falling into camps. On the one side they had capital and the employers, and on the other they had labor and their leaders behind them. Between them they had what was commonly called class hatred. The feeling of class hatred was not improved by anything that was being said at the present time.

With regard to the nationalization of mines, Lord Askwith said he was against any industry in Great Britain being run by bureaucrats in Whitehall. The other day he asked Mr. Smillie what nationalization was. Mr. Smillie replied that the fundamental of nationalization must be accepted before he could give details. The whole of the question of nationalization largely depended upon management. They could not get on without the three—capital, management and labor.

He did not believe that nine-tenths of the trade unionists of the country cared about nationalization at all, or understood what it meant. Government control of trams and trains was all very well, but he did not believe in the coal industry, upon which every other industry depended, being experimented upon. The people were disgusted with governmental control of munitions during the war, and did not like Government interference in industry.

Lord Askwith deprecated the attacks upon the Labor party as not being fit to govern. They only drove more people into Labor, he declared, by attacking them as Bolsheviki. He appealed to employers to take a more active interest in their workpeople, to treat them as human beings, to make their lives more pleasant outside, and to see that they were comfortably housed. In fact, he added, the lack of housing was one of the most wicked causes of the unrest.

Sailors' Superstitions.

Although civilized man is rapidly losing his dread of ill-omens, the sailor retains superstitions with almost mediaeval intensity.

Secrecy that surrounded a recent transportation of two bodies by liner to America is only one of the many instances in which shipowners recognize the supernatural fears of their crews.

Never go aboard a vessel with a hare-fur coat, says the sailor. That is why the ocean traveler may despair of finding jugged hare on the stateroom menu. Superstition has become a custom.

Let a land-bird appear at sea, and sailormen will find an omen in it. One tramp cargo-boat, bound from South America to England recently, sighted a house-sparrow about 100 miles west of Ireland. The bird, exhausted, fluttered on the poop, fell at the feet of the first officer, and soon died. A deputation of the crew approached the captain, who, to appease them, slightly changed the vessel's course; and her safe arrival in port seemed to convince the men that their fears had been justified.

Few sailors will start on a voyage without a supply of "Dutch drops"—a medicine reputed to cure all bodily ailments, from baldness to appendicitis! "Dutch drops" are known in almost every port in the world.

Finally, seamen believe bad luck follows one who steps ashore or into a dinghy with his left foot. Education or no education, superstition never will die at sea.—Tit-Bits.

Fight For Honor.

Think well about great things; and know that thought is the only reality in this world. Lift up nature to thine own stature; and let the whole universe be for thee no more than the reflection of thine own heroic soul. Combat for honor's sake; that alone is worthy of a man. And if it should fall to thee to receive wounds, shed thy blood as a beneficent dew, and smile.—Cervantes.

His Headquarters.

A small feather pillow which nestled in a glass case in the historical museum created especial interest among the visitors. "I don't see anything unusual about that pillow," remarked a girl, turning to the guide. "It's a very valuable pillow," replied the guide. "That is Washington's original headquarters."

DIVORCE DECREE TO COST MARY $40,000

RENO FIXES PRICE WHICH FILM STAR PAYS FOR FREEDOM

Reno, Neva., May 3.—Poor little rich Mary Pickford spent $40,000, according to report in Reno, to secure a quiet, painless and rapid divorce.

Attorney-General Leonard Fowler, who, with his deputy, Robert Richard, is working overtime at Carson in preparation of the unit by which he hopes to set aside the decree, is determined to find who got the money.

The Pickford case stands pre-eminent among the many efforts made to railroad a divorce through the courts and at the same time to prevent undesirable and premature publicity, Attorney-General Fowler asserts.

The investigation made by Fowler may result in the introduction of evidence reaching back prior to the arrival of Mary Pickford at Minden, when it was openly stated in Reno that the little moving picture actress and Owen Moore had met in New Jersey, where a financial settlement was made and arrangement completed by which plaintiff and defendant would start for Nevada.

At that time it was already reported that William H. Sheldon, of New York and Reno, had been retained as the attorney for Mary Pickford. Sheldon positively denies that he was connected with the case. He added:

"If the Pickford decree is invalid and can be set aside, then 90 per cent. of the divorces granted to outsiders by the State of Nevada are invalid and can be set aside."

EAST PETERBORO BASE BALL LEAGUE

NOW BEING ORGANIZED BY SOLOMON FOR EAST COUNTY

If the plans originating in the brain of Jake Solomon materialize there will be another baseball league into the fray this season. Jake, who organized the Central Ontario Baseball League last year which made such good showing and won the Ontario honors, has started to organize this new league which may be known as the East Peterborough Baseball League with Indian River, Norwood, Keene and Lakefield. If there are any other teams wishing to get into this league they will have to get in touch with Jake Solomon as a meeting of the new league will likely be called in the near future.

In connection with this it is understood on good authority that the trophy donated last season by Mr. Thompson, ex-M.P., for home and home games between Norwood and Indian River will be offered to the new league.

CHEMONG BRIDGE OPEN.

The Chemong floating bridge, which was broken by the ice on Good Friday, is now open for traffic. Although work had not quite been completed on Saturday, it was possible to cross the lake on it, and information received today is that the bridge is now fully completed. This will be welcome news to the residents of Ennismore, who had been compelled to go around the head of the lake, adding sixteen miles on the return trip to Peterborough. Delay in getting the bridge into repair had occasioned considerable complaint by the residents of that district, and this fact had the result of stimulating the work so that it was possible to permit traffic across he bridge on Saturday.

FORTY HOUR'S DEVOTION

Large Congregations Listen to Sermons on Modern Life

The Forty Hours' Devotion opened in the Church of the Immaculate Conception yesterday morning.

In the evening, Rev. Father Quiry preached the opening sermon to a large congregation, touching principally upon the subject of religion and its relation to the problems of everyday life. We are living in an age that is barren of the true religious element. The tendency of today is to disregard the spirit of religion and its effect upon the life of the individual to divorce it from the factory, the workshop, the school room and the artists' studio. And so the people of today have earned for themselves the title "materialists." No longer do they extend a welcome to the homeless beggar—no longer are they solicitous for his welfare. No longer will they listen to his tale of sorrow. Put him out of the way—let the government take care of him. No more will the broken soldier talk the night away by the fireside. He is number so-and-so in a charitable hospital. No longer do we hear of the young woman in her father's house, who was loved by the servants who took a personal interest in the beggar that came to her father's gate. Today she is a howling suffragette—a motion picture actress or a principal in a noted divorce case. So we see where the world is going to—we see the results of materialism and we know that there is only one thing that will save the people from themselves—the spirit of charity tempered with brotherly love—that is the very essence of religion.

Rev. Father Galvin will address the congregation at the services tonight and Rev. Father McCaully of Ennismore will speak tomorrow night.

Devotions each evening begin at 7:30 o'clock.

LACROSSE GROWS IN POPULARITY

SPLENDID TURN-OUT FOR PRACTICE ON EXHIBITION GROUNDS SATURDAY

More than ever turned out to the lacrosse practice at the Exhibition grounds on Saturday afternoon both as regards players and spectators. To make things interesting the home played against the defence. The old players showed up in good form and the new players are beginning to get worked into the game.

It is now a certainty that there will be a game here on the 24th of May. The only doubt that exists in the matter is as to whethter or not it will be possible to secure an outside team for that date. If this is not possible two local teams will compete and should in any case provide an interesting game as it is well known that there are many first class players in the city. In order to boost things along everyone who can handle a stick is wanted out for the next practice on Saturday. After this game the team which will play on the 24th will be chosen.

The Players

The players seen on the field Saturday were: Dillon, G. McCoy, J. McCoy, Goodfellow Dunford, Tudhope, Lawson, Scriven, Donovan, Robertson Whitney, Meir, Johnstone, Todd, Creighton and J. Haight. Mr. J. Sutherland who is an old hand at the game, put the boys through their paces. All the players seemed to be getting back into form and it is expected that when they play their first game against an outside team they will be able to give a good account of themselves.

BELL SPORTS CLUB.

Since the Bell Telephone Company organized their sports club recently they have been preparing to enter various fields of sport this summer. Rumor has it that if there is to be a commercial league in this city this season the Bell Telephone will be right there with both feet. They were to be seen on Saturday afternoon at Riverside Park most assiduously at work with a bat and ball, and although it may be that they did not show any particular class in their initial efforts, yet with practice they may be able to provide a healthy-looking team for any such league as mentioned. It is stated on pretty good authority that they will also be heard from in other lines of sport this summer.

PROPOSED DEVELOPMENT

The interest of Canada in the development has been set forth in a booklet entitled, "Great Lakes and Atlantic Canal and Power Company, Limited," by N. M. Cantin, copyright Canada, 1919, in which it is stated:

"A cut will be made perfectly straight from Jordan Harbor on Lake Ontario to Moulton Bay on Lake Erie, a distance of less than 19 nautical miles across, with but six locks to take care of the 325 feet fall between the two lakes.

"From Lake Erie to Lake Huron, a straight cut will be made across the narrowest neck between the two lakes, which will be less than 43 nautical miles apart, with only one lock, there being less than 3 feet difference in the water level of the two lakes.

"The Straits of Mackinaw and the Sault Ste. Marie ship channel will also be deepened and straightened, making ocean terminals of Chicago, Ill.; Indian Harbor, Ind.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Duluth, Minn.; Fort William, Ont.; as the former sections of this improved waterway will have made seaports of Detroit, Mich.; Windsor, Ont.; Port Stanley, Ont.; Toledo, Ohio; Ashtabula, Ohio; Conneaut, Ohio; Erie, Pa.; Buffalo, N.Y.; Toronto, Ont., and many other places on the Great Lakes and tributary rivers, and at such inland places as Lansing, Mich., and Pittsburgh, Pa., the latter place (via the Ohio River and Ashtabula on Lake Erie) where harbors will eventually be made to dock and accomodate large ocean liners, as was done for Manchester, Eng.

"The improvement of the ship channel of the St. Lawrence River to the depth of 35 feet is advocated.

"Directly adjacent to the St. Lawrence and the Great Lakes in Canada are the provinces of Quebec and Ontario, which would derive particular immediate benefits, as also would Manitoba and Saskatchewan, for the purpose of foreign commerce. In the United States, the states of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York from the boundary of the Great Lakes, and for the purpose of foreign commerce, North Dakota, South Dakota and possibly Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Vermont and Massachusetts would also be benefitted. These states, south and west of the Great Lakes, contain more than half the farm property value of the United States; they contain one-quarter of the total area of the country's population; in agriculture they are as important as the rest of the country combined."

The booklet contains some 48 pages, with a map which shows the proposed New Canadian route by way of Lake Huron canal to Lake Erie, new canal parallel to the Welland Canal to Lake Ontario then on down the St. Lawrence River, making Duluth 3,791 miles, Milwaukee 3,649 miles, Chicago 3,706 miles to Liverpool; whereas the United States route, via the Great Lakes, Erie Canal, Hudson River and New York, shows, Duluth to Liverpool 4,393 miles, Milwaukee to Liverpool 4,251 miles, Chicago to Liverpool 4,308 miles—a difference in favor of the new Canadian route of 602 miles.

Two points stand out in the opposition to the deep waterway on this side of the line, represented by the city and state of New York. The Erie Canal, it is claimed, has accelerated the development of this state to the benefit of the port of New York, and the state now has something like $150,000,000 invested in the New York States Barge Canal. At the Washington congress last December from the proceedings of which quotations have already been made, George Clinton of Buffalo presented the case for the opposition.

Mr. Clinton declared that if the proposed canal should become an active and successful avenue of transportation it would work to the great disadvantage of the states bordering on the Mississippi River, the ports of New Orleans, Galveston and other Gulf of Mexico ports, and the Atlantic ports of Baltimore, Philadelphia; Newport News, etc. He estimated the expense of construction at not less than 400 million dollars for the cheapest route recommended. He maintained that improvement of the St. Lawrence by canalization might be effected by the erection of dams at the foot of each rapid, but this would cost many millions of dollars, would flood extensive territory on the Canadian and American sides, and cause heavy damage by ice. He declared there were serious objections to the use of the St. Lawrence River from Montreal to the ocean for navigation by ocean or lake vessels, which had already been a great handicap to the growth of Montreal as a great seaport. These objections were the great cross-currents of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and the heavy fogs and ice which not only make navigation extremely dangerous but which actually raise insurance rates. He added:

"The deepening of the harbors and connecting waters of the Great Lakes to 25 feet would not be sufficient to permit ocean vessels of a capacity compared to that of our lake vessels to navigate the lakes and enter the lake harbors, and our lake vessels are not adapted to ocean navigation.

"These Great Lakes vessels are practically hollow boxes constructed for the purpose of carrying the largest cargoes possible on the lowest draft of water on inland lakes. They average in speed 12 miles an hour on the open waters and 9 miles on the connecting waters. In the narrow channel of ship canals, with the delay of lockage, those boats could not make safely more than 4 miles an hour. If such vessels undertook to pass Montreal and proceed to Liverpool, they would be at the mercy of the storms of the Atlantic, which they are not fit to encounter, and their comparatively low power would not make them successful competitors of ocean vessels carrying from the Atlantic ports of our country. Also a typical ocean carrier with a tonnage of 10,000 is not suitable for lake traffic."

These various considerations, and no doubt many others will be presented to the commission at the various public hearings. An estimate of the cost of the proposed navigation and power scheme is not available except on a pre-war basis, the relation of which to actual costs a few years hence would be problematical. The question of opportionment of cost in the international section is to be considered by the commission also whether the United States should not also bear part of the cost of deepening the Canadian section in the benefit of which she would share. It has been estimated that power could be developed under the proposed scheme for $100 per horsepower and that this would not only pay for development but for the improvement of navigation as well.

Dates that have already been announced for the public hearings of the International Joint Commission are:

North Bay, May 7; Marquette, and Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., May 10; Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 11; Fort William, May 13-14; Winnipeg, May 15-16; Grand Forks, N.D., May 18; Regina, May 20; Calgary, May 22-24. From Calgary the commission will go to Billings, Mont., holding meetings later in Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, Nebraska, Iowa, South Dakota, Ohio, Wisconsin and possibly other states. It will return to Windsor, Ont., for June 23, and will conclude its work at Buffalo, N.Y., June 28 and 29.

POTATOES COST 3 CENTS APIECE

CARLOAD LOTS SOLD IN MAINE; WILL COST CONSUMER MORE

Houlton, Me., May 3.— Potatoes at three cents apiece in Aroostook County was the record established last week when they commanded $14.75 a barrel. The carload lot of spuds which brought this figure was of exceptional quality. It is predicted that the high prices of potatoes this Spring will result in more acres being planted in Aroostook County than ever before. Seed potatoes are bringing fabulous prices.

Farmers in Maine can remember a quarter of a century ago when they could not give their potatoes away in thte Spring. They offered them to the grocers at a quarter a bushel, and many times the dealers refused to buy at that price. Then it was up to the farmers to boil the spuds and feed them to the pigs. Frequently the vegetable would rot and be dumped on the plowed land as fertilizer.

There are about 500 potatoes in a barrel and with a price of $14.75 the potatoes cost the Boston wholesaler about three cents each. When freight to Boston is paid, along with the cost of sartage, storage and profit for the metropolitan dealers, the consumer will have to pay about five cents each.

It is agreed that the crop this year wil be the most expensive to grow that Maine has yet produced. Estimates place the cost of planting at $175 an acre.

Fertilizer will cost more, the average price will be about $80 a ton, farmers say. Labor is scarce and high and there will be no "Junior volunteers." to help out the farmers this Summer as during the war. In addition to the cost of planting is the expense of cultivation and oh harvesting, and potato men say that they must get $3.25 a bushel for the 1920 crop before thtey can begin to make a moderate profit.

Along the Maine coast farmers are using seaweed and kelp for a fertilized wtih splendid results. The cost is limited to the labor of hauling, and the results are better often times than where chemical fertilizer is used.

Halt 'Bus Service.

The crowds grew until they numbered two thousand, bringing the auto 'bus service entirely to a halt. A small cavalry patrol came up, but was unable to deal with the crowd, which continued stoning the vehicles, until drivers and passengers abandoned the 'busses in the streets.

A patrol of Republican Guards with a force of extra policemen arrived on the scene. The crowds drew back and then came forward again. The police then rushed upon a number of manifestants, striking right and left with sabres. Several persons were wounded, some arrests were made, and two shots were fired. At 3:50 o'clock street traffic was entirely suspended at this point.

The police early began to use flying squadrons of from twenty to one hundred men all along the boulevards to break up the congestion. The crowds in most instances were good natured, but apparently annoyed the police by blocking traffic at one point after another. As soon as a squad of police entered a crowd it dispersed only to reassemble fifty yards distant, hooting and jeering the policemen as soon as their backs were turned.

There were a number of fist fights along the boulevards, but the police did [illegible] in most instances letting the people settle their own arguments.

Important Trains Run.

The railroads are continuing to start the most important through trains and there is a limited suburban service. The strike was most effective on the State system, which reported that it had sixty per cent. of its employes idle.

The executive committee of the Federation of Labor planned to meet at 4 p.m. under the presidency of Leon Johhaux to decide whether general strike orders, which are understood to have already been issued subject to release should be put into effect to continue the general strike [illegible] May Day to support the protests of the railroad men.

Brigadier Rondeau of the Republican Guard, was shot in the back Saturday night outside a hall at the conclusion of a communist meeting, but was not dengerously wounded. Police Inspector LeComte was assaulted at he same time.

Advices from Strassburg stated that the situation was very good, as the labor unions had decided not to call out their men. Even the Socialist newspapers of that city have advised the workers to remain at their posts.

Railroad employes at Lille decided to stop work, but the citizens have formed an organization to operate public services.

UNIQUE SCHOOL FOR AUTOMOTIVE ELECTRIC WORK

PIONEER INSTITUTION MEETS GREAT NEED AND BRANCHES MAY BE ESTABLISHED

Chicago, May 3.—In the heart of what was once Chicago's most exclusive residence district, where many old homes are still maintained, a unique school has been established, the only institution of its kind in the world.

The Ambu Engineering Institute, at No. 2632 Prairie avenue, is conducted under the auspices of the American Bureau of Engineering. There are no vacations; no time for play. The students put in forty-four hours a week of intensive shop and [illegible] supplemented by [illegible]

So successful has the school been from its start only a few months ago that Clarence J. Buckwalter, president of the American Bureau of Engineering, has been urged to establish branches not only in other cities of the United States, but in England.

MAY ALLISON ORGANIZING SCREEN WOMEN FOR VOTING

May Allison, dainty and demure and celebrated on the screen, for a year or more a voter in the State of California, and now owner of a beautiful home in Beverley Hills, not far from Hollywood and the Metro studios, has undertaken to do her share in the orginastion of the women voters for the purpose of insuring their proper representation at the polls this coming fall.

"Here there are in Los Angeles and in Hollywood," said Miss Allison recently, after an automobile tour of the city in the course of her organizing campaign, "thousands of young women whose votes will be lost because they have never had called to their attention the importance of getting together. It will have no mean weight in the coming elections, and, while I'm not inclined to think that Hollywood is going to decide the presidency, I don't see why all the motion picture people shouldn't have their say in politics, especially local politics."

Concerning what her presidential candidate will be, Miss Allison is as reticent as Hoover has been about naming his political affiliations, if any. Those who know her are of the opinion that she herself does not as yet know, but that she is merely bringing to the attention of the screen folk the value of the power they possess.

Theatrical folk and al lthose concerned in the allied professions are, as Miss Allison well knows, rarely interested in things civic or political; in fact, their organization in the fight against the theatrical managers in New York last year was one of the biggest surprises of 1919.

"The world knows Los Angeles now as the screen capital of the globe," said Miss Allison, "and I think those who have made it so should have a big part in saying what is to be what. And that is why I am starting in to agitate for organization."

ARLIE MARKS CO. AT GRAND TONIGHT

The Arlie Marks Co. at the Grand tonight present one of the strongest bills of their repertoire. "The Brat" with Arlie Marks in the title role, is a prominent New York success and has never before been presented at popular prices. This company is one of the strongest repertoire companies playing Canada and has just finished a successful tour of the Maritime Provinces. Other successful plays to be presented are "The Golden Rule," "White Slave Trader," "Girl Out Yonder," "Esmeralda." Other plays will be announced later. An exceptionally strong vaudeville bill will be presented between acts, thereby avoiding delays.

Miss Marks' support includes Mr. Tom Marks, well-known here from past visits, Mr. Lindsay E. Perrin and Mis Ethel Van Orden. Popular priced matinee Wednesday and Saturday are announced.

Irish Names.

It has often been said that were a Dublin jarvey given the Irish name of a street and asked to drive his fare at once to it, he would find himself in a veritable quandary. This in spite of the fact that all the Dublin streets at one time had their Irish as well as their English names posted up. Thurles is the latest Hibernian town to give its jarveys a bad quarter of an hour with the dual forms. The simple main street has blossomed out into Cearnog na Saorise, South Mall has become the formidable Plas Chiomhanuigh, while Nicholas street is the fearful and wonderful Bothar Chuchulainn. One is reminded of the New England lake which bears the sonorous Indian cognomen of Chargoggagogmanchoggagog c h a u-bunagunamaug, or something to that effect. One thing certain about that lake is that it is never called by its Indian name. Thurles please not!

Not Needed.

Mistress (to new servant)—Mary, why didn't you bring on the finger bowls? Didn't the lady you last worked for have them?

The Scenery.

The Towers had begun to look like being a white elephant, so far as the agent was concerned, even in these days of house shortage, according to London Answers. But this time it really did look as if there was a chance of selling the property. Little Mr. Brown and his wife had tramped wearily around the tiny house, the agent at their heels. "That's architecture for you!" cried the latter. "There's country! I tell you, sir," he added, waxing eloquent, "there isn't a finer residence on earth than this! Just look at the wonderful [illegible]!" "The scenery's all right, [illegible]" responded little Mr. Brown. Authentic Bronte Relic.

An interesting relic of Charlotte Bronte, the novelist, has been presented to the museum at Haworth, England. It is a traveling trunk used by Charlotte Bronte. Inside is a label giving the maker's name and address in Brussels, and there is little doubt the trunk accompanied Charlotte on her journeys between Monsieur Heger's Pensionnat in the Rue d'Isabelle in that city, and her home at the Haworth rectory.

Red Heads Have the Advantage.

Many physicians of note are responsible for the assertion that the red headed are more resistant to disease than less fiery-haired persons, and Sir Arbuthnot Lane expresses the view that "a disease becomes less virulent in type when it gains entrance into the body of a red-head than when it attacks a person with hair of a more modest color."

Notable Sayings.

In William Dean Hewell's novel "The Quality of Mercy" the dying and repentant defaulter Northwick exclaims "That's good!" as the handcuffs are placed upon his wrists. "The flies! Bid Clifford come to me!" orders Judge Jaffrey Pyncheon, in "The House of Seven Gables," taking from his vest pocket the watch which he was never to replace.

Time to Watch Them.

The sagacious old New York Herald says there is no gallantry in politics. Oh, yes, there is, but when the politicians begin to act with gallantry the chances are they are getting ready to bamboozle you or slit you in the back.

Ideals That Uplift.

The Real Test.

"Don't conclude that a man is a patient mortal because you've watched him sitting on a log fishing," said the milk toast philosopher. "Watch him while he's waiting for his supper."

Where Thin Men Have Advantage.

A thin man has a better chance than a fat one. Women gunning for men occasionally puncture a fat one, but few of them shoot well enough to hit a thin one.

Although 400 different species of birds have their home in Nebraska, it is said that no more than 200 are to be found in any one locality.

WOMEN OUTNUMBER MEN.

Sex Disparity in England and Wales.

Great waves of gloom engulfed the audiences at the Institute of Hygiene as they listened to Dr. Murray Leslie's lecture on the disproportion of the sexes and its direful consequences.

Considering the subject in its social, economic, national and phsychological aspects, the lecturer pointed out that the disproportion of the sexes was before the war greater in England and Wales than in any other country. There were now probably 2,000,000 more females than males, and of these more than 1,000,000 were women between the ages of twenty and sixty. According to one authority we might look forward to an excess of 3,000,000 females at no distant time. From a eugenic point of view, the war had been a greater disaster than the Black Death epidemic, which killed off 25,000,000, because the men killed in the war were those who should have been the husbands and fathers.

One cause for the disparity was the ordinarily greater mortality among boy babies, and, indeed, among all males; and another was the vast tide of emigration flowing from these islands. It had been an enormous mistake to let so many men of marriageable age emigrate to distant lands without providing for the emigration of women of their own race, Dr. Leslie said.

There could be no real social rest without feminine contentment and in this country there were many evils which could be traced to the undue preponderance of women, he declared, and the social evil had probably never been so great as to-day. The freedom of the modern girl in parental supervision, the tendency to react against discipline and conventional trammels, the cry of pleasure for pleasure's sake, had all encouraged a lower standard of morality, the doctor said.

It was in regard to marriage and family life, he said, that female preponderance was playing the most important part. Never had there been so many unhappy marriages. Speaking from his own medical experience, the lecturer said that much of the existing unhappiness was due to the fact that there were very few men unhappy in their marriages who could not find distraction with other women.

Female preponderance had forced an increasing number of the physically and intellectually fittest women in the country into the labor market, and the nation was thus deprived of the best potential mothers, the lecturer declared, saying that an extraordinary diversity of type had resulted from sex disproportion. The domestic type, he said, still formed the bulk in the industrial classes, but was becoming rarer in the middle and upper classes. Never had the social butterfly type been so prevalent as it was now said to be—even more numerous than after the Napoleonic wars, the doctor declared, adding that it contained a large proportion of physically attractive girls who were forever vying with each other for the scarce and elusive male, appealing to man's lower nature instead of exercising the power to raise his ideals.

The intellectual type represented by the professional worker married in very small proportion, but to them was due the driving force that secured amelioration of conditions of employment of their sex. There was a great difference between intellectuality and intelligence. The purely intellectual woman was usually, not sexually, attractive, but facially considered the intelligent, intellectuality alert, cultured woman of personal charm was the most important type of all and best suited to undertake the complex responsibilities of marriage. Women with the wider experience of life that had come to them had developed their power of sex selection and were probably now better fitted to select their mates than were the men, who were bewildered by the various types of women.

Dr. Leslie thought girls should be so educated as to be much better comrades to men than they had been and able to share their varied interests.

Bible In Manuscript.

The largest Bible in existence is in the Royal Library at Stockholm. The covers are made of solid planks four inches thick, and the pages each measure a yard in length. It is estimated that a hundred asses' skins must have been used to furnish the 309 parchment leaves of the book, which is considered priceless.

A well-to-do resident of New York is the proud possessor of a manuscript Bible written by his only son, a cripple. It does not contain a single error or slip, for if error or slip occurred the youth discarded the whole page. The verses and readings are all in red ink, and the whole is beautifully written.

In a house in Grafton street, London, there is a shorthand Bible, which was written at least two centuries before Pitman was born. It was written by an apprentice in the days of James II., when to possess a "common or garden" Bible was rather dangerous.

A lady in America cherishes a Bible which an ancestress baked in a loaf of bread when a house-to-house search was being made for stray copies of the Scriptures. The soldiers came to search the house, but it is not a matter of wonder that they failed to find the book.—Tit-Bits.

LANCASHIRE HUMOR.

Some Samples of Jests Culled In That County.

I contend that Lancashire is our most humorous county, says a writer in the London Mail. For real, deep, hearty humor, broad, generous, kindly; causing rumbling laughter and aching sides, Lancashire has no equal. No man invests everyday affairs with such a ludicrous and fantastic quality as a Lancashire man.

His is not the humor of the carefully-planned story or the rehearsal incident—though Lancashire abounds in native tales of fun. Rather is his the droll outlook, the regarding of men and affairs through quaint eyes and untoward happenings with laughter instead of tears.

Lancashire humor has an exquisitely fine dryness about it. Witness the story of the precocious engineering apprentice who, after being discharged two or three times by the foreman for playing pranks and then turning up next morning as usual, was approached by the foreman, who said:

"Thou did that," retorted Dick, "an' dunno thee do it again. A' geet into a row wi' my mother about it last neet."

Or this of the Lancashire miner who was telling how he stopped a rush at Mons. "Couldn't help hittin' em," he said. "Went down like skittles."

"And were they all dead?" asked the listener.

"Neaw," said the miner dryly, "they weren't aw dead—but they'd aw got summat in 'em."

I defy anybody to travel from London to Manchester with a real Lancashire man and preserve a straight face.

During the war I sat opposite such a man on a midnight journey. Every time I dozed he gave me a gentle dig and cried, "Wakken up, owd ship!"

And then he would talk. "A' live at Blackpool and there's allus somebody comin' to see us; an' they come for a fortn't. Tommy coom t' other week. To our surprise on t' Friday neet he said: 'A'll go t' butcher's and get a leg o' mutton. It'll be a bit o' summat-like.' An' he did. A' said to t' missus that neet: 'Tom's oppenin' his heart at last. But dost know, that leg o' mutton were on our bill t' next week-end."

Much of the humor is closely allied with outdoor sports. George Formby hits off this fondness when he tells how, when applying for a plumber's job, on being asked by the plumber: "Can you run putty?" he answered: "Run Putty? A' con run Putty's fayther."

The Lancashire man—and woman—can be grimly humorous, too. A cotton operative, ill in bed and feeling very sorry for himself, said to his wife: "Eh, lass, but a'm feelin' bad. A'm gooin' to die."

"Aye," said his wife, "a' think so. A've sent for t' joiner to come an' widen these stairs at t' top. They're very awkward for gettin' a coffin down." He swiftly recovered.

Stories about the cotton boom abound—and are mainly against the Lancashire man. One of the newly rich bought a mansion at Blackpool. His wife protested that it was rather big. "Big," he said, "Thee wait. Thou'll be like a peacock wi' two tails when thou's gotten a pair o' steps like them to mop."

Duties of the Queen Bee.

It may be interesting to some people to learn that all the work in a beehive is done by female bees. The drones, or males, live on the labors of their more industrious female companions. Moreover, there is no such thing as a king bee. The ruler of the hive is the queen, but she is a ruler in name only, being guarded and protected by the bees simply because the colony would become extinct if she did not lay eggs at a prodigious rate. It is not unusual for a good queen to produce her own weight in eggs in a single day, and she keeps this up for weeks at a time.

Courtesies of the Match.

There were the usual courtesies as to precedence in the use of the match. "It's very English," said the man in the corner. "In Scandinavia you can tell the nationality of a man by the way he lights his cigarette. A Swede strikes a match, uses it and throws it away. A Dane uses the match first and then offers it to you. The Norwegian strikes a match, offers it to his companion and uses the fag-end himself."

Brilliant Flashlight.

An excellent flash powder which produces a light of dazzling brilliancy, may be made by mixing equal quantities of magnesium dust and powdered chlorate of potash. Place the mixture on a piece of asbestos paper, and ignite it with a long wax taper. In a darkened room, the suddenness and extreme brilliancy of the flash will dazzle everyone and produce a startling effect.

A Business Puller

The Review circulates among the best homes and reaches the best of Peterboro's buying public.

There is nothing new about selling goods. The same methods are in vogue, with modern modifications, as existed a decade ago.

The sale of goods is attained by four methods---by advertising, by window dressing, by talking, by giving satisfaction.

Advertising is the chief of these methods because it carries to homes by the cheapest and surest method possible, information as to what you have to sell, and attracts that general attention to your business not otherwise obtainable.

The strong points of advertising are:

Persistency to assure returns.
Continuous and well-directed publicity.
A fair price for commensurate returns.
Quality of value as against mere size of circulation.

In connection with these four strong points of advertising The Review's columns offer space at fair rates based on the quality of its circulation, and the price and results will be found such as to confirm our claim that Advertising in The Review pays.

The readers of The Review are those who appreciate a dependable local newspaper, and whose trade spells "quality" and "cash."

We'll be pleased to talk it over with you.

A Contract for systematic advertising in the Review means more business for you Mr. Business Man.

DE LAVALS DEFEAT CANADIAN WOOLENS

SCORE 3-1—FAST GAME OF FOOT BALL—SPLENDID EXHIBITION

In a game which gave a better exhibition of fast football than any game this season, the Canadian Woollens football team were defeated on their home pitch at the Nichools Oval by the DeLaval on Saturday afternoon. The score was 3-1 and should have been more than that but for some certain shots being missed by the DeLaval forwards in the first half.

The Canadian Woollens won the toss and played with the wind for the first half. During the whole period it was a ding-dong battle with the DeLaval retaining a slight advantage but being unable to put it to any use on account of bad judgment on the part of their forward line. Time after time they carried the ball right through the Woollen's defence till a lone goal keeper was between them and a pointer, but always they were unable to crown these efforts with a shot and generally the ball went soaring skyward right over the goal.

Jones Plays Well

It is true that in Jones, the DeLaval goalkeeper, they had more than an ordinary player to contend with and it is likely that but for his wonderful playing there might have been a heavy score marked up against the DeLaval. He was the life and soul of the team and until the last few minutes of the game all efforts to score against him were unavailing. Some of the saves he made were marvellous and brought cheers from the supporters of both sides.

Forwards Weak

The Woollens' forwards also seemed to be weak and although many time during the first half they were within an ace of scoring they did not seem to be able to put the little extra effort that was necessary to complete the work. Although there was more or less of a strong cross wind blowing yet it was decidedly in their favor during the first half but it did not assist them in scoring and when the whistle was blown for half time with no score against either side, the DeLaval emerged confident, that having held their opponents with the wind against them they would be able to at least do the same in the second half when they would have all the advantage of wind themselves.

Second Half

The DeLaval were out in earnest in the second half and within a few minutes they had placed the ball in the Wollens' net for the first counter of the game. Abraham was the successful man and it was really a wonderful piece of work although his shot was aided somewhat by the wind. G. Hartshorn was playing a game which had the result of finding him offside continually. He kept well up to the Woollens' goal and was keeping good tab on the Woollens' backs but when on occasion the ball suddenly drifted his way he was often ruled offside. Apart from this he played a good game and scored the second pointer a few minutes after the first one. The ball had been passed to him after some fine combination work and he scored off a long side shot in which he judged the wind beautifully. This was followed a little later by a pretty shot off the left foot from Nicholl's which completely caught the goalkeeper by surprise and made the third and last goal for the DeLaval. At several other times during this half they were in danger of scoring but miscalculation of wind lost the chances for them.

Woollens Rally

Towards the last of the game the Woollens made a desperate rally and attempted to catch up on the score of the DeLaval. There seemed to be some danger of them doing it but time was short till the end of the game and the best they could do was score once. At one time they broke right through the DeLaval defence and the goal keeper ran out to meet them. The ball got behind him and there seemed to be nothing to stop a score. So sure were the supporters that the cheering was already going on when somehow Jones just fell on the ball and prevented the shot from being made. It was a splendid save and the cheers which were intended for the goal were given as an ovation to Jones.

A little later pretty much the same thing occurred again but this time Jones ran out a little farther and the ball was passed to Cridland who placed it nicely in the net for the first and only counter of the Canadian Woollens. They attempted to repeat the shot a few minutes later but the whistle blowing for time cut short the eleventh hour rally and the DeLaval added a second victory to their records and the Canadian Woollens bemoaned a second defeat.

There were few spectators to watch the game due more than anything else to the fact that the grounds are no centrally located. The game was refereed by Mr. A. Day.

The line-ups.

DeLaval—Goal, W. Jones (capt.); backs, Hillmand and W. Godfrey; half-backs, Cooper, B. Hartshorn, Humpage; forwards, Long, Nicholls, G. Hartshorn, J. Cullen and E. Abraham, reserve, Goodman.

Canadian Woollens—Goal, Wetton; backs, Barton and Styles; half-backs, Montgomery, Jackson and C. Clarke; forwards, T. Clarke, Baldwin, Cridland, Read, Jones; reserves, Barrel and Telford.

VET FOOTBALLERS MET 2ND DEFEAT

TRIMMED BY THE C. G. E. TEAM BY A SCORE OF 4-0.

In a game which seemed to be full of hard luck for the Veterans on Saturday afternoon at the Exhibiton Grounds, the G. W. V. A. met their second defeat, this time at the hands of the C. G. E., with a score of 4-0 against them. It was decidedly a hard luck game for the G. W. V. A. from beginning to end, although it must be admitted that the C. G. E. showed marked superiorfty.

Captain Whatley won the toss for the Veterans and elected to kick with the wind for the first half. The G. W. V. A. started the game with but ten men, due to the fact that Jones, one of their forwards, had not shown up. After a little give and take the C. G. E. scored the first counter of the game, through Hotston beating Whatley with a fine shot.

The War Veterans began to appear dangerous at his point and made a raid on the C. G. E. goal. Naples saved what seemed a sure goal, but the ball was immediately returned, only to be saved by Parkins punting it out with his hand. Here the Veterans protested that it should be a penalty, but unfortunately for them the refree was not in a proper position to see the play, and therefore would not award the penalty. Strange to say, he was somewhere up near the Vets' goal, though what he was doing there no one seemed to know. At this junction the arrival of Jones on the field strengthened the Veterans and gave them more confidence.

The Veterans were certainly meeting hard luck at goal and the breaks were all against them. The C. G. E. scored again, but unfortunately this time it was Edwards of the Vets' team who scored, the ball glancing off his foot past Whatley, who was not expecting such an occurrence. Shortly after this the whistle blew for half time with the score standing at 2-0 for the C. G. E.

The second half opened with the Vets pressing, but their lucky star was not in the ascendant and the C. G. E. scored again with the assistance of Ryan of the Vets. After this a little temper crept into the game through Williamson deliberately jumping at Ryan. A little exhibition of amateur boxing took place for a few seconds, but happily ended by both players shaking hands. Later, Hawthorne was injured and had to leave the field for the rest of the game, leaving the Vets with ten men of whom one, McKinley, was injured to such an extent that he was a "passenger." The C. G. E. scored through Gash, and time was called with the score 4-4 in favor of the C. G. E.

The line-up:

G.W.V.A.—Goal, Whatley; backs, Howthorne and Bishop; half backs, Burrows, Ryan and Edwards; forwards, Curtis, Monks, Norman, McKinley and Evans; reserves, Piggott, Jones and Griffin.

C. G. E. — Goal, Naples; backs, Mason and MacDonald; half backs, Parkins, Turner and Bestard; forwards, Manders, Hotston, Gash, Williamson and Bartley.

FOOTBALL COMMENTS

G Hartshorn was playing on the wrong side of the field in the forward line and to use his own words, he "felt like a fish out of water." This fact probably accounted for his sending the ball skywards on one or two occasions instead of into the goal. His intentions were good but the execution was weak.

The referee seemed to be blind at times and missed several deliberate fouls as he treated both sides the same in the matter there was little kick coming from either. He was not blind, however whenever Hartshorn was offside. On one occasion the ball entered the Woollen's net for another score but it was a deliberate offside and the referee saw it and the shot was lost.

Jones, who played in the Woollen's forward line, was easily the fastest man of the two teams and it is a mystery why his teammates did not avoid him altogether, which was a avoid him altogethter, which was a fatal mistake. He could cover more ground in a few seconds than any other man on eithter team.

The Canadian Woollens have, without a doubt the best home pitch of any team in the league and it is a matter for regret that its situation causes small turnouts. The ground is perfectly even and there are better chances for a good game there than on any other pitch. Perhaps when the crowd realize this they will turn out

Both the victors and the defeated team showed a form on Saturday which suggests that they will be a force to be contended with in the league this summer. The DeLaval n particular have made tremendous strides since they played the first exhibition game with the C. G. E. and it will be an interesting game when they meet again.

"Well, we've got the better team anyway," said Mr. Worth as he left the field after the game. Just how he arrived at that conclusion he did not make clear but there certainly was some room for his contention. He will perhaps be ready to admit that the best place to prove this is on the field.

The Vets are not at all satisfied with a referee who, when the play is centering around one goal, is away up near the other goal. They are of the openion that a referee should be at all times in the thick of the fight with his eye following the ball closely.

Rumor has it that the Veterans are going to add a party of stretcher-bearers to their team. They certainly could have made themselves useful on Saturday.

Whatley, who put up a splendid fight in goal, was best for the Vets. But Hawthorne and Ryan also put up a good game.

Edwards was the hardest working half back in the field. Burrows and Jones played a hard game.

All the War Veterans were complaining and limping around except Curtis, who got through without a scratch.

There certainly were some hard knocks, Norman and Hawthorne being laid low.

Retail sugar prices are expected to be 20 cents per pound today in Detroit.

SCIENTIFIC AGRICULTURE IN SASKATCHEWAN

Upper Picture.—Students' Residence, University of Saskatchewan. Live Stock Pavilion in the background.
Lower Picture.—"Better Farming Train," showing how instruction is carried to the farmers.

Long after the ivy peered in at the upper windows of such splendid universities as Oxford, Cambridge or Harvard, such an institution as the University of Saskatchewan had not even been imagined. When Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who laid the corner stone of this new university July 29th, 1910, was a student poring over his books few but Indians had stood on the height of land which is the site of the buildings shown in the accompanying photographs, and watched the waters of the South Saskatchewan River gliding swiftly and silently northward.

Although the prairie soil was as rich and the river as broad and full then as now, the City of Saskatoon was unconceived. Even as late as twenty years ago, where now stands a city of 30,000 people on three lines of railway, there were not one hundred men, women and children and these were housed in a few tents and shacks. The wildest enthusiast would hardly have dared to prophesy that one day a university would grow there—yet there it stands!

The buildings of the University of Saskatchewan crown the height of land north east of Saskatoon and the site could hardly have been more fortunately chosen. It includes half a mile of well-wooded river front and altogether embraces 1,333 acres of rich land, 293 acres of which are set aside for a campus, 160 acres for purposes of agricultural experimentation and 880 for the Agricultural College farm. The plan provides for the eventual accommodation of 5,000 students.

The present buildings consists of an administration building, containing a hall and offices for the different departments as well as class rooms, two students' residences, one containing a spacious dining hall and the other a gymnasium and swimming pool; an engineering building; livestock pavilion and up-to-date model farm buildings. All the buildings conform to the preconceived plan and will, like those already erected, be of stone in the Gothic style. Work has just recently begun on a new science building. There are also several private residences on the campus, the two principal stone ones provided for in the architect's plan being those of the President of the University and the Dean of Agriculture. The buildings of Emmanual College, a church of England Divinity School, the first of its kind in Saskatchewan also occupy a part of the campus. The University grants sites of from three to five acres to such affiliated colleges at a nominal rental. Eight thousand dollars has already been subscribed towards a beautiful structure which will be the home of the Presbyterian College.

The university provides degrees in Arts, Science, Law, Agriculture, Civil Engineering and a Diploma in Pharmacy.

The present enrolment is between 1,400 and 1,500, including returned soldiers who are retraining in various branches of skilled work, particularly engineering. Scores of promising returned soldiers have been turned out as capable motor mechanics. Steam engineering and the handling and repairing of farm tractors are also taught. Agricultural students, principally the sons of farmers, are training in livestock handling and judging, and even in the care and management of poultry.

An important feature of the work of the University of Saskatchewan has [illegible] Extension Department con[illegible] of short instructional courses at seasonable times for farmers and farmers' wives. Each year a special train is fitted out and a regular course of instruction mapped out including lectures to farmers. This train is widely advertised as the "Better Farming Train." It makes a tour of the Province, stopping at all important points and the farmers drive in for miles to examine the exhibits, talk over their problems with experts and hear the lectures. Realizing that the average busy farmer cannot go to the University, an effort is made to take the University to him and to let him know at first hand the result of experiments with special varieties of grain, the latest information about methods of soil tillage, and [illegible].

During the recent winter evening lectures [illegible] have been given at a nominal [illegible] the benefit of city residents [illegible] of the best educated people in the community have attended these classes.

From an educational standpoint Saskatoon offers as great opportunities as any city in Canada. Complete training from Kindergarten to University is provided through a fine set of public schools, thirteen large public schools, which ranged in cost from $118,000.00 to $155,000.00 at pre-war building prices. An accompanying photograph shows two of them in one block in the working class section of the city. The enrolment of pupils in the public schools is now well over 4,000.

The Collegiate Institute, which provides the intermediate stage between the Public School and the University, has an enrolment of about 2,000.

BOWLING HONORS WENT TO OAKLAND

FOURTH ANNUAL INTERNATIONAL BY U. S. AND CANADIAN CLUBS

The bowling honors for the fourth annual international bowling tournament held by the Rotary Clubs of the United States and Canada, went to the Oakland, Cal., team, whose 2,838 total was the best mark of the meet. The team will be presented with a handsome championship trophy, while each of the individuals competing on the winning club will receive a beautiful gold medal. The Elmira, N. Y., team tumbled 2,819 pins, which netted them second position. Sacramento, Cal., was next in line with 2,795, while the Watertown Rotarians of New York State finished fourth, with 2,724.

A. B. [illegible] toppled 825 pins while rolling with the team from Elmira, N. Y., and as a consequence will receive a beautiful gold medal proclaiming him the individual champion of the tournament. Whitney, of Oakland, Cal., will also receive a gold medal, his 236 score being the best high individual game of the meet.

The tournament was held under the auspices of the Winnipeg Rotary Club and was a decided success, 63 cities being represented. In fact, it was the largest bowling event ever held in the history of the International Association of Rotary Clubs. It was a telegraphic affair, all scores being wired to headquarters and afterwards being confirmed by the score sheets mailed to the chairman of the tournament committee.

The Winnipeg Rotary Club donated all of the prizes awarded in the 1920 meet.

PORT HOPE BASEBALL

Port Hope, May 1.—Things have not been running as smoothly as they might be with the local baseball club and at a meeting last evening some changes were made in the list of officers. Bob Chalk has been appointed manager and a playing committee of V. Bradburn, J. Rowden, R. Chalk was also appointed. The baseball players and management must learn that without harmony and co-operation the best ball players in the world make little headway.

The body of Fred Bowman, formerly a patient at the General Hospital, but discharged, was found in Mohawk Lake, near Brantford. It had been in the water two weeks or more.

THE MOON WAS FULL

The total eclipse of the moon last evening attracted a great deal of attention. It was one of the best eclipses seen in a long while. Luckily the moon was full for the occasion and the night clear. At 7.13 when the moon began to rise the eclipse commenced and she kept going further into the shadow of the earth until by 8.15 p.m. there was a total eclipse and the moon was completely hidden from view. From this point she began gradually to come into view again until by about ten-thirty the moon had once again resumed its normal appearance.

Every night his week Mr. Innes will speak to Christians, and all are invited.

BEEF, IRON AND WINE?

John Collins appeared in the police court this morning to answer a charge of being drunk. Naturally the question arose as to where he secured his liquor, and John blandly placed the blame for the jag on a few doses of beef, iron and wine. He was assessed $10 and costs, amounting in all to $14.10.

INTEREST DAY.

Saturday was interest day for the Victory bonds and the local banks experienced a rush day. What aggravated the situation more than anything else was the fact that it fell on a Saturday, which is a half day for the banks, and being Saturday there were probably more people anxious to exchange their coupons for the ready cash without delay. One of the largest banks in the city found it necessary to put four extra tellers on the job, and even with this additional staff they were kept busy until closing hour, and it was necessary for customers to wait as long as half an hour at a time to get served.

The bonds due for interest on Saturday were those coming due in the years 1922, 1924, 9133 and 1934.

SACRAMENTAL SERIVCE

Quarterly Communion Yesterday at George Street Church.

The quarterly sacramental services at George Street Church yesterday were observed by a very large number of the members. These were not only the last to be administered by Rev. A. J. Thomas, but also until next September. The love feast at ten o'clock was attended by a goodly number. Between 600 and 700 members partook of the Lord's supper at eleven o'clock. There was also a reception service for new members, 140 adults being received into full membership on profession of faith and by letter and 32 into junior membership. It is interesting to note that during the past three years over 500 have been received into membership. This is the splendid record which Mr. Thomas leaves behind him, due to his untiring zeal in winning souls to Christ.

In his evening discourse Mr. Thomas dealt with the subject of "The Elements of True Friendship," taking his text from Proverbs 18:24, "A man that hath friends must show himself friendly, and there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother."

Without our friends life would be like a wilderness. The genius for friendship has been a characteristic of mankind throughout all the ages. The friendship of David and Jonathan was cited as one of the finest examples of friendship that has ever been known between mankind.

The average individual realises but little how much he owes in his material success to the power of friendship. No one is quite the same after having had the association of a powerful soul in friendship. If a man such as Phillip Brooks could have an influence such as he had over those who came into his presence, what must be the influence of the Lord Jesus?

Since friendship is so important it is well for us to ask ourselves by what standard true friendship should be judged. Congeniality, sincerity, fidelity, unselfishness and moral principle are some of the things we should look for in true friendship. There is something which is even better than all these, however—a common devotion for the Lord Jesus, a great passion to do the will of the King of Kings and Lord of Lords.

In concluding his remarks Mr. Thomas admonished his congregation to bear four points in mind:

1.—To cherish the friends that have been tried and tested throughout the years.

2.—To be very cautious in our choice of friends.

3.—To give our friends and everybody the very best we have.

4.—Always make a friend of Jesus.

"Jesus is ever seeking friends," said Mr. Thomas. "It is our privilege to enter into that holy fellowship and communion, if we consent to the terms which Jesus laid down when he said, 'Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you.' Let us live in His presence, let us open our hearts to Him and let us devote our energies to His service."

CAMPAIGN TO AID GIRLS IN CHINA, INDIA AND JAPAN

This is Foreign Week at the Young Women's Christian Association. Girls in China, India and Japan wants the boarding homes, gymnasia, Bible classes, clubs, swimming pools and summer camps that the Y.W.C.A. offers. They want the good times, the comradeship and all the best things that go with the association. And so this week the girls of the Peterborough association are giving, and getting their friends to give, in order to help send the Y.W.C.A. to the girls of foreign lands. Working under Miss Brownscombe, Miss Payne, Miss Pryce and Miss Thomson respectively, are four teams of girls, each selling shares in the foreign work at ten cents a share and each trying to out-sell the other. Some people ask, "What will be our dividends from these shares?" Tomorrow night at 8 o'clock Miss Rose Beatty, the National Foreign Secretary, is going to speak on the girls of foreign lands, and will tell just what the dividends from these shares will be. Everybody is welcome at this meeting.

EVANGELIST KENNEDY'S CLARINDY REVIVAL

The following is what the Clarinda Herald, Clarinda, Iowa, has to say regarding Evangelist Kennedy and Miss Clara Kidd, both of our city:

"The three week's union revival meetings have closed. Sunday was to have been the closing day; but Mr. Kennedy by the request of pastors and people, stayed over Monday night to preach his sermon on "Christ's Second Coming," and the house was crowded to bid farewell to the evangelists. An exceedingly kind spirit prevailed with everybody and many kind words were said by the pastors and people regarding their work. In a substantial way the committee in charge showed their appreciation by handing the evangelists a check for over $800.00 for their services. We believe Mr. Kennedy has few equals in the field as a Bible teacher, and Miss Kidd's songs were always enjoyed by our people. The meetings were far reaching. Meetings were held in shop, factories and schools during the day, then large delegations would gather at night at the church. Some nights an over flow meeting would be held in another church. High School night, about 250 young people came in a body and many sought the Lord. All the co-operating churches got a great spiritual up-lift, as was shown in the large attendance at the prayer meeting Wednesday night. Mr. Kennedy and Miss Kidd have left behind them many friends here. They open next in Winnipeg, Canada. We wish them God's speed."

BAND OF G.W.V.A. GIVE PRIVATE RECITAL

HIGH-CLASS PROGRAM, EXCELLENTLY RENDERED, GAVE REAL PLEASURE

A private recital was given by the band of the Great War Veterans yesterday afternoon at four o'clock to the members of the Association, their wives and families, the City Council, members of the Board of Trade and other prominent citizens. There were forty pieces in the band and the audience, which practically filled the hall were greatly impressed.

The programme was so arranged as to give a variety of music and included everything from a grand military fantasia to "Roses of Picardy." The latter was rendered as a cornet solo and brought forth such loud and continued applause that the band was compelled to repeat the number. Another well rendered and greatly appreciated number was selections from Joyland, one of the great English revues. The Military Fantasia was supposed to represent the life of a "Tommy" from the day he enlisted right hrough his army career to the battle fields and home again. In order to get this effect a score or more the number each representing a different phase of army life. It commenced with the "Fall in" and concluded with "Three Cheers for the Red White and Blue."

The following is the programme:

March— "On the Quarter Deck."
Overture — "Lustpiel."
Cornet Solo— "Roses in Picardy."
Revue Selection— 'Joyland."

SERVICES AT MARK STREET CHURCH

TIMELY SERMON ON THE LIGHT OF DAWN AND EVENTIDE

Communion service yesterday morning was largely attended, about 125 persons remaining for sacrament. Miss Peters sang "The Lost Chord" very sweetly, while in the evening Miss L. Jones took the solo splendidly. The congregation was also large.

The morning subject was "The Light of Dawn and Eventide," and was based on Luke 1:78, "The dayspring from on high has visited us." Let us learn the following lessons:

1.—As the sick and suffering, after a long weary night of pain and anguish, hail with gladness the dawn of a new day, so the weary, sick and suffernig world, hails with gratitude and gladness the coming of the "dayspring," even Christ, to the lonely, broken-hearted sons of men.

2.—"Dayspring" means the beginning of the day, just as spring means the close of the night of winter, and the opening up, and the revival of the world of nature. Dayspring in nature means night is past, darkness is over, the gates of light are opening, birds are singing, and activity is on the wing. Life throbs everywhere. Buds in millions burst along our path.

3.—Jesus is the "dayspring from on high." His light burst upon the Roman world at the very darkest hour of the world's history. It pierced the gloom, dispelled the moral night, revealed the love of God to fallen men, brought immortality into human ken, blazed man's way back to an offended God and flings a shining radiance round his grave.

4.—The dayspring is impartial. There is light for the rich and light for the poor, light for prince and peasant alike. There is light on mountain and plain, on lolling river and tossing sea, light for the mansion and light for the hovel, light for the King's cornet, and light for the sewing girl's needle. Blessed, holy, pure, impartial light.

5.—And this light is from on high. God sent the dayspring, but the dayspring came. Light, beauty, joy and activity all come with the dayspring. But the day will grow brighter. "At evening time it shall be light," and earth's evening shall melt into the morning of eternal day.

The evening subject was "The Sentry on the Wall," and was based on the text, Isiah 21:11, "Watchman, what of the night?" Note the following points of discussion:

1.—Isiah on the wall of Zion looking through the glass of Prophetic vision. The modern preacher is also on the wall. What are the signs of the times, Mr. Preach? How are you telling the news?

2.—Who are asking the question? (a) The utterly careless and indifferent. (b) Some ask with contempt, "What of the night?" (c) Some ask with horror and dispair. (d) Others ask the question with breaking heart.

3.—The watchman faced the burning question. He uttered threat and promise alike. He fearlessly called men to repentance.

4.—As men of God, it is ours to watch on the wall. To stand at our post. To sound the news. A man may so accustom himself to say, "All is well," that some day he will slip into hell with a false optimism on his lips. Yes, and drag others with him. As long as we try to make ourselves believe that things are ship shape, we will never make much more to make them better.

WOMEN INVITE MEN TO COME TO ALTAR

FRENCH GENTLER SEX WANT TO MARRY—CAMPAIGN FOR HUSBANDS

London, May 3.— "France has need of children to make up for the losses of men in the war, and we are quite ready to fulfill our obligations to the country?"

So runs the ultimatum made to the French Government by combined societies of middle-class young women who find it impossible to get husbands, owing to the high cost of living.

They suggest that bachelors should be taxed so heavily that celibacy will be impossible for them. The disinclination of young men to marry has resulted in a proposal that the disappointed young women should follow the method which resulted in the closing of the saloons in the United States and organize demonstrations in the hotels, cafes and race tracks where the young men who hold aloof from marriage spend their time and money.

"We want to get married," runs the ultimatum. "We are entitled to be wedded. We stand ready to bear children for the country's good."

WHY SHOULDN'T WOMEN PROPOSE?

ASKS VIOLA DANA, WHO SEES NO REASON WHY MARRIAGE SHOULD DISRUPT CAREER

"Quit the screen!"

Viola Dana drew herself up to her full height of four feet, eleven inches, and registered astonished indignation.

We explained that May Allison had told us she would be contented to retire from motion pictures when the right man came along, and all we wanted to know was whether Miss Dana would adopt the same course under the same circumstances.

"Why should I?" Miss Dana asked.

"But if you did fall in love you wouldn't think of giving up everything to follow your lord and master?"

"'My lord and master!' Fiddlesticks," said Miss Dana. "He'd be a good pal or I wouldn't have him. And we'd both be independent. He'd have his job and I'd have mine."

"I suppose I ought to be away up on this leap year thing," she said. "You see, I'm appearing in 'the Leap Year photoplay' — 'Dangerous to Men.'

"I've thought it all out," Miss Dana continued, "and I really believe that a woman should have as much right to propose as a man has. The reason she doesn't is that she's more subtle as a rule. You know yourself that it's nicer to be asked than to do the asking. And a man seldom asks unless he's pretty sure the woman is in love with him. If they're both in love, I can't see that it makes much difference who 'pops the question.'"

CLEAN UP THIS WEEK

This is Clean-up Week for the city and the Board of Trade is conducting a campaign with the object of instituting a thorough clean up. It started yesterday when the ministers in all the local churches of every denomination made an appeal to their congregations for a real clean up. In the theatres slides will be shown during the week and in all the schools the teachers will give a fifteen-minute talk on cleanliness and the object of the clean-up campaign.

Up to the present there has not been any great rush at the Board of Trade with reference to cultivating vacant lots, but there have been a few requests made to the Board in this matter.

POLES HAVE ADVANCED TO WITHIN TWENTY-EIGHT MILES OF KIEV CITY

Bolsheviki Are Entrenching on West Bank of Dneiper River in a Great Semicircle—Battle For Ukranian Capital is Now at Its Height.

(By Canadian Press.)

Warsaw, May 4.—The Bolsheviki are entrenching in the hills on the west bank of the Dnieper River in a great semi-circle with their backs against Kiev, the Ukrainian capital, according to information today from the front.

Fighting At Its Height.

The fight for the possession of Kiev is at its height, raging day and night along a line through valleys and rivers. Both sides are using artillery, but Kiev has not yet been bombarded by the Poles.

28 Miles From Kiev.

It is reported that the Poles, who are about twenty-eight miles from Kiev, are making effective use of armored trains, armored automobiles and other equipment. From the north the Poles are proceeding southward below the Priep and Dnieper Rivers with a flotilla, using some monitors recently taken at Czernobyl, the flotilla base of the Reds.

Changed Commanders.

Reports received here say that the plans of Trotsky, Bolshevik Minister of War, for the defence of Kiev, called for the replacing of General Misseckow by General Scwiezdow.

WOULD LEAVE TURKS IN CONSTANTINOPLE

SIR CHARLES TOWNSHEND THINKS THAT POLICY WOULD BE SAFEST

BRITAIN HOLD BOSPHORUS

TO EJECT TURKS WOULD STIR UP TERRIBLE HOLY WAR

Toronto, May 4.— Sir Charles Townshend, the hero of Kut-el-Amara who is in Toronto, in discussing conditions in the near East with the press, said he disagreed with one editor of the Toronto paper that the Turk should be ejected from Constantinople.

"There are people in Britain that talk that way too," said General Townshend. "But if they want to set the whole East aflame to stir up the Mohommedans and start a holy war that will last for five years and spread through all the East and India that is just the way to do it."

"Undoubtedly there has been ill-treatment of the Armenians, and the Turk has been guilty of many crimes," said the General. "But how far is the punishment idea to be carried? The cry is to punish the Turk. But has the Hun been punished yet? He has financially, but so far as I can see he doesn't propose to pay what he promised. The Armenian is the money-lender to the Turk, he furnishes the spies to the Turk's foes, and the Turk hates him. When the Turk is aroused he does not act with the decorum of a member of the British Parliament—he grabs a rifle and runs wild."

Sir Charles thinks the situation will be safer with the Turk left in Constantinople, that city a free port and Britain controlling the Bosphorus, the Dardanelles and Gallipoli, and thus the entrance to the Black Sea.

Welcomed by City

Sir Charles was officially welcomed to Toronto at the City Hall this morning at 11 o'clock. As the distinguished guest entered the beautifully decorated Council Chamber he was cheered by representatives of all classes of Toronto's citizens. Clergymen, Salvation Army workers, judges, lawyers, great war veterans, workmen, City Fathers and many officers from military headquarters were present to do honor to the hero of Kut-el-Amara.

The Mayor pointed out that in honoring this General Toronto wished to pay tribute to the British army and all its ranks.

Devoted to the Army

"It is partly true that I have devoted the whole of my life to the army," said Sir Charles in reply. "I love the army. I love its traditions, and I'm very proud of it. I am no stranger to Canada and I believe I

New York, May 4.— After flying more than 1,400 miles up the coast from Miami, Fla., a big HS2-L flying boat, with the liberty motor still roaring untiringly, landed in the Hudson River off Eighty-sixth street. The time given for the flight is 15 hours 35 minutes, an average of nintey miles an hour.

The pilot, Harry Rogers, guided his big boat down onto the surface of the water by following the glowing path thrown across the river by a huge electric sign on the Jersey shore. Then he and his two companions, Sydney Schroeder, assistant pilot, and Edward Bohn, mechanic, moored their boat and came ashore. The men were hardly able to stand from exhaustion, and their faces were lined and reddened by more than two hours of flight through a stinging rainstorm.

Made But One Stop.

Rogers, who is a pilot for Aero Ltd., a concern which has operated passenger carrying flying boats here and along the Florida coast told how he had brought the "ship," up for the spring and summer flying here.

"We filled the passenger cockpit full of gas tanks so we would have enough fuel to get here without unnecessary stops. At a quarter of three this morning, while it was still dark, we took off from Miami, and hit up the coast for Morehead City, N.C.

"That was the first stop and the only stop we planned to make in the whole 1,400 mile triu. For about eleven hours we headed northward flying around 500 feet and not mak-

CANADA IS TO HAVE MODERN NAVY GIFT OF BRITAIN'S ADMIRALTY

Hon. C.C. Ballantyne Reported to Have Made Announcement Privately.

(By Canadian Press.)

Halifax, May 4.—According to an Ottawa story, says the Daily Echo Admiral Jellicoe's overseas naval program is to be carried out by the Canadian Government, and the Dominion is to have a modern navy, comprising battle cruisers, destroyers, etc., to be the gift of the British Admiralty. The Echo states that Hon. C. C. Ballantyne is reported to have made this announcement privately.

Bit of Camouflage.

The newspaper further states that the recent order of the Government closing up naval stations in Canada and discharging officials and employees, was camouflage, so as to allow of the [illegible] of a new naval program with a clean slate.

The Minister is also credited by the Echo with saying that he is tired of the criss-crossing going on in connection with the Jellicoe program and is taking the matter wholly into his own hands.

MEXICAN REVOLUTIONISTS CLAIMING VIRTUAL CONTROL OF CHIHUAHUA STATE

Way Paved for Unobstructed Advance Against Torren From Whence Campaign Against Mexico City Can be Launched Bloodless Revolt of Juarez and Capitulation of General Francisco Gives Revolutionists Upper Hand.

(By Canadian Press.)

Juarez, Mexico, May 4.—Through the bloodless revolt of Juarez and the capitulation of General Francisco Urbalsjo and his Yaqui Indians at Casas Grandes, Sonora, the revolutionists today claimed virtual control of Chihuahua State, and that the way was paved for an unobstructed advance against Torreon, from where a campaign is to be launched against Mexico City.

Immediate Advance.

Plans have been made for an immediate advanec through Chihuahua upon the interior strongholds still hel dby the Carranza government.

American Concern.

Washington, May 4.—The murder of two more Americans in Mexico, reported yesterday to the State department, accentuated the concern with which officials here are watching the developments beyond the border.

Requests for additional warship protection at points on the east coast of Mexico already had been forwarded to the navy by the State Department.

On the border, the reported closure of the port of Juarez was interpreted as indicating defection of the Federal garrison under General Escobar to the rebel cause. Loss of this entry port, officials said, would be a serious blow to the federals, because of its revenue producing capacity. They believed complete rebel control of the State of Chihuahua would be the logical result.

The murder of Eben Francis Greenlaw and his young son by Mexicans near El Oro, only 125 miles from Mexico City, brought from the American embassy in Mexico City a prompt and emphatic demand that the Mexican government arrest and punish the murderers. The American government contends that the Carranza authorities were responsible for the protection of the Greenlaws because of the presence of Mexican troops in the immediate vicinity.

Destroyers will be stationed at Tampico, Tuxpan, Vera Cruz and Fronteras, ready to take off any Americans who may be in danger either from the Mexican federal authorities or the rebels.

Co-ordination of Forces.

Reports were received here yesterday of conferences attended by representatives of Obregon, Vila, Manual Pelaez and Felix Diaz, which indicated that definite co-ordination between the various factions was being arranged. Official information showed that the revolution had been planned for several months.

Unofficial advices from Mexico City indicate that the censorship is being exercised more sharply than ever, and that newspapers are not permitted to print any news of the rebel activity in the northern part of the country.

Gen. Obregon had pledged himself to protect foreign lives and interests if elected to the presidency, a consular report to the State Department said. Obregon also included in his platform a declaration in favor of the renewal of foreign investments in Mexico. He accused President Carranza of violating the constitution in assuming dictatorial powers, and of having injured Mexico by the adoptio nof a policy calculated to drive out foreign capital.

OTTAWA VETS RESENT STATEMENT THAT PRIVATES' WIVES WERE OF SERVANT CLASS

McLean Declared Such Widows Who Could Work Should be Encouraged to do so.

(By Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, May 4.—A very strong feeling was manifested last night at a meeting of the Ottawa Command, G.W.V.A., regarding the remarks of General McLean, a member of the Special Parliament Committee on Pensions.

Woman Should Work.

The general, at a meeting of the committee yesterday, said that the average wife of a private soldier was of the servant class before marriage and maintained that such women who could work should be encouraged to do so.

Remarks Resented.

A resolution was passed unanimously to the effect that Ottawa Veterans deeply resent this implied slur on honest toil, deplore the Brigadier-General's ignorance, and see no reason why the widow of a private who gave his life for Canada should not be allowed to try and live on her pension just as a widow of a brigadier-general is able to.

According to the announcement France has been awarded the Thuringen and Emden and 38 submarines; Japan will get the Oldenburg and Nassau and Augsburg, and Italy will receive seven submarines. The ships scuttled at Scapa Flow, says the announcement, are to go to Great Britain. POLICE HELD UP MRS. ROOSEVELT

CHICAGO DETECTIVE THOUGHT THE LADY WAS MODERN BURGLAR.

OFFICER PULLED HIS GUN

FAILED TO BE CONVINCED UNTIL CHAUFFER EXPLAINED TO CHIEF.

Chicago, May 3.—Mrs. Archibald Roosevelt, daughter-in-law of President Roosevelt, was stopped at the point of a pistol in Michigan avenue by a hard working detective, who suspected her of being a burglar.

She was not arrested, but the statement of her identity was received with considerable doubt. It was not until her chauffeur had been closely questioned at Police Chief Garrity's office that the police decided they had been mistaken.

Mrs. Roosevelt was on her way to the La Salle street station in her automobile to take the Twentieth Century Limited to New York whence she will sail for Panama to join her husband. At Randolph street and Michigan avenue the car was stopped by the crush of traffic, and it caught the eye of Detective Sergeant Donnelly. He noticed a pile of suit cases and a fashionably dressed young woman and he stepped over to investigate.

When he noticed that the car had no license plate he drew his pistol and issued a sharp command to the chauffeur to pull over to the curb. A crowd of pedestrians halted to witness what promised to be a spectacular arrest. Donnelly, with visions of the "woman in black," opened the tonneau door.

"Who are you, Madam?" he inquired.

"I am the daughter-in-law of Theodore Roosevelt, once President of the United States," replied Mrs Roosevelt.

"Have you any cards that will prove your identity?" the detective asked.

"Certainly," said Mrs. Roosevelt producing her handbag and exhibiting several letters and cards.

The detective was nonplussed but not convinced. After a moment's hesitation he consented to let her proceed, but ordered the chauffeur to report to Chief Garrity as soon as Mrs. Roosevelt had been taken to the La Salle street station. He did so, and explained that Mrs. Roosevelt really was Mrs. Roosevelt. The license tag, he said, must have been lost in the trip from her home to the Loop.

CONFERENCE OF PREMIERS NEXT WEEK ON FINANCIAL SITUATION

Expected an Agreement Will Also Be Reached Concerning Germany's Execution of Treaty's Reparation Clauses Silesia Plebiscite Postponed Two Months.

(By Canadian Press.)

Paris, May 4.—Premier Millerand is going to London next week to confer with Lloyd George regarding financial questions.

Reparation Clauses.

It is expected that an agreement will be reached upon a line of action to be adopted concerning Germany with regard to the execution of reparation clauses in the Versailles treaty.

To Meet Germans.

The Premier will also agree on a basis of discussions to be held with German representatives at the Spa meeting on May 23, in line with an understanding reached by the Supreme Council at San Remo that the Allies would not discuss before the Germans any questions upon which they were not in accord among themselves.

French Viewpoint.

The French viewpoint is that they will not discuss the principle of any clause of the treaty, and will take up with the Germans only the manner of applying the Treaty's terms.

Prominent among the points to be taken up in London will be the interpretation of the reparation clauses, and the form in which the German delegates at Spa will be told what the Allies insist upon.

Ambassadors Confer.

At a conference of ambassadors this morning it was decided to postpone the plebiscite in the Teschen district for two months. Balloting to decide the nationality of this region will occur on July 12th.

FRENCH AMBASSADOR TO BERLIN NAMED

Paris, May 4.—Maurice Herbette, former chief clerk of the Foreign Office, has been designated by the Government as the new French ambassador to Berlin.

This appointment is to become effective when the Allies resume full diplomatic relations with Germany, and not before.

"How did you know their religion?" asked the magistrate.

"They are passers-by," answered the policeman.

"You mean they were pedestrians?"

"That's the word sir," said the witness.

DR. JOHNSON'S VIEWS ON HOW TO SOLVE WORLD'S UNREST PROBLEMS

Instead of Reducing Working Hours Everyone Should be Working Overtime

St. Paul's Church was well filled last night to hear Rev. Robert Johnson, D.D of Montreal, lecture on the cure for the unrest of the present times. He gave his cure in the three laws of the Garden of Eden—work, love and religion.

At the commencement Dr. Johnson drew attention to the apparent dilemna of the great statesmen who attempted to settle the affairs of the world. They all went to the Peace Conference feeling sure that they knew just what the world wanted—for three hours they did not succeed in electing a chairman—and yet they knew just what the world wanted. Human history had commenced in a garden, and it was to find its consummation in the city of God let down from heaven. There were perhaps few who could see the similarity between a garden and a city, but in spirit there was not only a similarity but an identity. As an example he drew a picture of the river starting on its journey from the mountainside, swelling to a mighty stream [illegible] the ocean where it was drawn up by the sun and again returned to the mountainside in the form of rain. The circle of human history would be the same.

Keynote of New Age.

There had always been some who recognized this fact. Up to the present the tendency had been to say: "I am a body. I have a soul. I must care for that soul," but now that tendency was changing to one of "I am a soul: I have a body which I must feed and clothe." That was the keynote of the new age—the spirit. In the Garden of Eden there were three fundamental laws to which man was subject. The first was the law of work. Man was placed in the Garden of Eden, as the Biblical story tells us, but it went further than that. He was placed there to till the soil, and to keep the garden. This law was binding alike on the pauper and the millionaire and none were exempt. Every man was put into the world to work in some way.

REFERENDUM IN THREE MONTHS

FORMAL COPY OF PROVINCIAL RESOLUTION RECEIVED BY DOMINION GOVERNMENT

Ottawa, May 4. — The Dominion Government has received a formal copy of the resolution passed by the Ontario Legislature asking for a Provincial referendum on the importation of liquor into Ontario. The Dominion Government now has three months within which to issue a proclamation.

The proclamation will give the date of the poll, the date when prohibition of importation (if carried) will go into effect and other like particulars.

Following the poll, the Dominion Government will prohibit the importation of liquor into Ontario providing such prohibition carries by "more than one half of the total number of votes cast in all the electoral districts."

NOT FARMED LAND FOR TWENTY YEARS

ADJACENT POPULATION IN HABIT OF HARVESTING CROPS THEMSELVES

(By Canadian Press.)

Washington, May 4.— In returning his agricultural statistics schedule to the U. S. Census Bureau, a Pensylvania farmer made no mention of crops. When the bureau inquired, he gave this explanation:

"The population near and about my farm has a tendency to relieve owner from the labor of gathering his own crops. This altruistic impulse is so predominant that I have refrained from planting anything for the past twenty years. Am just now turning about forty acres into a cemetery and hope to fill it soon."

NOTICE OF REMOVAL.

On and after April 30 Dr. Edward H. Wood will have his office at 300 Charlotte street, corner of Rubidge.

TUESDAY, MAY 4, 1920.

CLEAN UP AND PRODUCE.

THE BOARD OF TRADE'S idea in urging that this week be one for putting our city in order after the winter, is to be commended. "Clean up," "Paint up," "Repair," "Beautify lawns," are among their timely suggestions, which they then follow up with the cry for "Greater Production." And it is to be hoped that the week-end will see generous results from the co-operation so earnestly urged.

During the war the principle of greater production entered largely into everyday life in this city, and in Canada generally. Enemy submarines were sinking wholesale the ships carrying supplies to the Allied armies at the front, and increased production was one of the great weapons pleaded for and resorted to as a means for victory. Right loyally the people in Peterborough responded to the need; back yards were converted into gardens teeming with vegetable life, and vacant lots were rented for producing purposes. And now we have another war on our hands, so to speak—a war against high prices and a visualized shortage of farm and garden produce. And so greater production is as essential now almost as it was in 1916-17. Farm labor is going to be short, we are told, and crops especially of vegetables and potatoes, short next fall. This should impel a general movement of home-growing so that in regard to vegetables at least citizens in a city like Peterborough, where there is land and plenty of it, should produce as much as practicable for themselves and thus not draw from supplies which may be needed for those in congested centres who have not the means to participate in any greater production movement.

THE BOYCOTT ON POTATOES.

THE FARMERS' SUN admits that in some cases the women's boycott has had the effect of reducing the prices of potatoes paid to farmers, but it adds that the long list of middlemen standing between the producer and consumer have been the only ones to reap any benefit, as the low price has not been reduced to the consumer.

Well, there were no middlemen on the Peterborough market last Saturday when farmers sold direct to the consumers potatoes at $6 a bag.

REST ROOMS FOR FARMERS' WIVES.

A REAL SERVICE can be performed by the U. F W. O. clubs throughout the country in providing rest rooms in the various small cities and country towns says the Farmers' Sun. When the bar was abolished in the Province a good many hotelkeepers who were in business for the proceeds of the bar, closed their hotels with the result that accommodation in many towns was seriously curtailed.

There is an excellent opportunity for the establishment of Farmers' Clubs in these towns. Such a club could serve as a clearing house for agricultural activities. It might be made the office of the district representative, be affiliated with the co-operative store, if one were located in the town, serve as a meeting place for U. F. O. and U. F. W. O. members from all parts of the country, and in brief become a Community Centre for the farmers and their wives.

It is most important that the farmers get to know one another so that when the occasion arises they can readily get together and present a united front against their politcal opponents. A common meeting place in a market town would help to develop an esprit de corps among the members of the U.F.O. and the U.F.W.O.

GREAT COLONIZING FORCE.

COMMENCING YESTERDAY, the Hudson's Bay Company are celebrating their two hundred and fiftieth anniversary. The celebration is centred in Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver and Victoria, which all grew up about old Hudson's Bay trading posts.

Not the least noteworthy feature of the anniversary is the exhibition in the five cities concerned of moving picture films which epitomize the romance of the far fur country. These pictures were taken by H. M. Wychoff, an expert moving camera man of the British Educational Films Corporation and who spent seven months from last June to January with two expeditions sent out after photographs by the Hudson's Bay Comnany. The first expedition was under Captain Mack in the Hudson's Bay and Labrador districts. It brought back pictures of the company's old fur posts on Hudson Bay and James Bay and quaint and romantic scenes of life among the Eskimos on the coasts of Hudson Straits.

The second expedition was commanded by Captain Tom O'Kelly, who has seen twenty years' service with the company in the Northwest. This expedition traveled through a vast extent of territory in the Athbasca and Great Slave Lake region, and after many hardships and adventures returned with some of the most remarkable moving pictures ever taken in the remote regions beyond civilization's frontiers. The pictures of wild animals in their native haunts are perhaps the best ever obtained. How the pelts are removed and dried, and how the trappers live on their lonely trap lines through the long winter, are all set forth in vivid detail.

The charter creating the company of adventurers of England trading into Hudson's Bay was signed by King Charles II. on May 2, 1670. At the height of its power the company ruled three-fourths of the North American continent. It surrendered its authority and territories to Canada in 1870. With its empire gone, it has become a great modern merchant, with a chain of departmental stores extending across Western Canada. With its old trapping grounds usurped by farms and cities, it has gone further afield, and it has more fur posts today than ever before in its history, and is still the world's greatest fur company. With the opening of all its remaining lands to farm settlement, it has become in recent years one of the greatest colonizing forces in Canada. With two hundred and fifty years of history and romance behind it, it has the distinction of being the oldest mercantile corporation in existence.

SIGNOR D'ANNUNZIO'S LEAGUE.

IF THE COVENANT of the League of Nations provoked a slight sensation of distress when it was first critically examined by the leading authorities on internation law, says the Sun and New York Herald, the League of Fiume prescribed by Signor D'Annunzio will doubtless produce even more painful symptoms. In a general way, the membership of the new league may be said to include Ireland, India, Egypt, the whole of Islam and the small fry of the Balkans.

This is at least enough to start on, and under the leadership of the picturesque warrior-poet the League of Fiume should make a brave show. Ultimately any individual with a grievance will be eligible provided that he has sworn eternal hatred against the government, but until the organization is perfected the league will confine itself to offering support to oppressed nationalities. The special advantage of the league will be that among the delegates themselves the rights of the minority will be jealously safeguarded. Thus, as soon as it is evident that a majority is in favor of a certain course of action that majority will immediately give way to the minority.

By this means, all the delegates, whether they hail from the Balkan Hades or the Garden of Eden, will learn the sovereign importance in politics of pure, untainted obstinacy. The obnoxious doctrine of compromise will gradually be eradicated, while the membership of the league will steadily increase as people all over the world come to realize that their slightest grievance will always arouse sympathy and never run the risk of being seriously considered.

IRISH REBELLION OF 1641.

THREE YEARS AGO Lord Ernest Hamilton added "The Soul of Ulster" to his published works, which began in 1897 with a volume entitled "The Outlaw of the Marches," and now he is seeing through the press a new work, "The Irish Rebellion of 1641." The first part of his history gives details of the rising extracted from the depositions of eye-witnesses never published in narrative form. The attempt thirty years later to reverse the Ulster Plantation is dealt with in the second part, while the ten years' war which followed on the failure of the attempt forms the subject of the concluding portion.

GREAT OPPORTUNITIES.

TURKEY, SAYS a correspondent, wastes golden opportunities. She celebrates the Christian New Year's Day, the Jewish New Year, and the Mohammedan New Year; but why neglect New Year's Day (O.S.)? One of the delights of spending a winter holiday in Serbia, before the war, used to be the ease with which it was possible to keep Christmas and the New Year at Semlin—only a ferry ride across the river—and to keep each of them over again (O.S.) in Belgrade a fortnight later. And they have a pleasant way, in these Balkan countries, of making Christmas a two or three days' celebration. Decidedly there are possibilities about this new sport!

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

SURE SIGN OF SPRING.

(Exchange.)

Notwithstanding the wintry weather we're having, we know that Spring is about here. Reports go to show that the peach crop in Georgia is nearly ruined and word of a similar effect to the Niagara crops is hourly awaited.

STARTING THEM WRONG.

(Brantford Expositor.)

Anyone who is a careful observer cannot fail to see large numbers of the very young on the streets at too late an hour, or in places of public entertainment, and that at an age when it would be better, from every point of view, for them to be home in their beds.

WORTHY OF IMITATION.

(Montreal Herald.)

The Nadelberg Y. M. C. A. in Basle, Switerland, has had the excellent idea of organising a course in good manners. At the two first meetings the subjects were. The ten commandment of a well-bred man, and Good manners in correspondence. In a century in which politeness is passing away this innovation deserves mentioning and is worthy of imitation.

THE GAMBLER'S PARTNER.

(London Free Press.)

The Ontario Government takes the stand that race track gambling not only is justifiable, but that it is worthy of the co-partnership of the Province. This seems to be the deduction fairly to be taken from the proposal that the Provincial Exchequer shall share in the profits of the race tracks to the extent of something like three-quarters of a million dollars annually.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

SOMETHING IN THIS.

(Toronto Telegram.)

United States membership would have made the League of Nations an adjunct to every American presidential campaign. German-Americans would have sold their votes to the president or presidential candidate who would do most to pervert the League of Nations into an agency for the protection of Germany against France.

League of Nations consisting mainly of France and Belgium can safeguard peace with the wisdom of immediate action against Germany. A League of Nations dominated by the United States would endanger peace by the folly of unending talk.

ALL THINGS NOT EXPEDIENT.

(Westminster Gazette.)

The French are anxious lest we deal too leniently with Germany in the matter of the European reparations. They mistake our point of view. We agree without the smallest hesitation that it would be monstrous if France at the end of the war were left worse off than Germany; and we desire nothing so much as that Germany shall make all the reparation possible to France and the other nations she has wronged and injured. Our doubts are whether the attempts to enforce the treaty as it stands will not defeat that object and reduce Germany to a condition in which nothing can be recovered for France or for anyone else. In this matter nothing but good sense and—we do not hesitate to say it—humanity will help. We must give Germany the means of production and we must give her hope, or we must wipe off her debt as irrecoverable. That is daily becoming more evident.

THEIR SWORDS IN PLOWSHARES

(H. F. Gadsby in Toronto Saturday Night.)

Perhaps the most hopeful plan of re-establishment is the Soldier Settlement Board, which aims to place the returned man on the land if he can demonstrate a fitness for farming.

The plan carries with it three blessings—it converts the sword into that most productive instrument of peace, the ploughshare; it puts our idle acres to work growing food to bring down the cost of living, and it creates a class of contented citizens whose profitable industry will help to pay off the national debt. In the long run this back-to-the-land policy of the Soldier Settlement Board will probably do more good to Canada than all the other re-establishment schemes together.

Warned by past mischances with gifts to soldiers, as, for example, the scrip which was distributed after the Boer war only to fall into the hands of the land sharks, the Government has discarded the policy of free handouts for a much more sensible one which may be summed up in the words of the old proverb—God help them who help themselves. To which chairman Black of the Soldier Settlement Board adds: "and the Government will keep an eye on you to see that you don't stumble."

This plan, which has been in operation for two years, is a huge success as the figures go to show. Up to the Spring of this year Parliament had voted $45,000,000 to turn soldiers into farmers, and probably another $50,000,000 will be required to finance this gigantic scheme during the present fiscal year.

One hundred million dollars looks like a lot of money, especially to the old timer who can remember when Canada's total debt was only thirty-five million dollars, but scaled to present ideas a hundred millions is not too large an investment in an enterprise which promises such magnificent returns.

Chairman Black naturally views with pride the ocean-to-ocean activity of an organization which has accomplished such great results in the short period of thirty months. He admits that, like the hen who was given thirty-six eggs to hatch out, he has had to "spread himself," but the spreading has been a decided success.

"Every soldier," he continued, "who takes up land under our plan gives an implied contract that he will do two things—work, and acept our advice. By accepting our advice I mean that he will act upon the expert suggestions of our land inspectors who visit from time to time to see that he is growing the right things in the right way and is handling his farm with intelligence. Good farms and goor farmers—that's our motto—and if the farmer is not good, if he shows that he can't learn to farm, we take the farm back and leave him free to follow something that he can do better. This is an act of mercy all round—to the farm, to the man, and to the Dominion treasury, whose ultimate loss cannot be heavy so long as this system of salvage is practiced."

THE SAFETY-LEAGUE

His Worship the Mayor of Hamilton, C. G. Booker, has addressed the attached letter to pupils of the schools of the Dominion:

"To the School Children of the Dominion of Canada:

"Dear Children,—We have a society which is called the Safety League and which stands for a word which I wish to write just a few lines to you. That word is 'carefulness.'

"A great many lives are lost during the year, many buildings and lots of property are destroyed by carelessness, and we want you for one to be unselfish and to assist in the work of this league by doing all you can in being careful.

"Don't handle matches carelessly, make sure when you light one that it is properly put out when thrown away. Don't leave loose papers lying around where there will be any danger in their catching fire. Be careful in regard to accidents. Do not slide on the sidewalks and make them slippery so that when older people come along, who are not so sure of their feet, will fall and injure themselves. Do not attempt to cross the street carelessly in front of horses or machines, but always keep your eyes wide open, not only for your own safety, but also for the saefty of others.

"Adopt as your motto this word, 'careful.' During the year 1920, keep it constantly before you and it will help to make each one of you unselfish and strong to help others.

"Yours sincerely,
"CHAS. G. BOOKER,
"Mayor."

LEGISLATURE'S PROGRAM

Enough to Keep Provincial House Busy Till Next Week.

Toronto, May 4.—The Provincial House will make strenuous efforts this week to clean up all business, so that an adjournment may be reached, but the prospects are that the session will run into the next week as well.

The principal matter for debate will be the Hydro. The general feeling seems to be one of "safety first," but the Labor members are expected to force a show-down on the principle of public ownership. The amendments to the Workmen's Compensation Act are also expected to furnish material for discussion, while the Premier has promised to bring down the Mothers' Pensions Bill. The Private Bills Committee is still struggling with proposed legislation. Then, there are the proposed amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act. The License Board has extended all standard hotel licenses for one month, presumably so as to leave the Government with a free hand to make changes it desires before cutting off or renewing the permits.

LARGEST DEMONSTRATION

Madrid, May 2.—The largest May Day demonstration in the history of Spain passed off quietly in the Capital, although disorders are reported from provincial points.

MEAT SAID TO HAVE BEEN TASTELESS AND STRINGY

Paris May 4.— A music hall favorite ate roast lion for her luncheon here recently at a social gathering at Marguerry. The dish was introduced between frogs and snails but, according to an epicure who attended, lion fillet will never become popular. The animal, a young lioness, known as Mascot in a local menagerie, was acidentally killed by her trainer. The meat was said to be "tasteless and stringy."

SUBMARINES LOSE MUCH EFFICIENCY

ADVANTAGES STEADILY ON THE WANE THROUGH DETECTING APPARATUS

London, May 4.— Submarines have lost two-thirds of their efficiency since 1914, according to Lieutenant W. S. King-Hall, R. N., in a recent address at the Royal United Service Institute on "The Submarine and Future Naval Warfare."

The speaker maintained that the advantage previously possessed by the submarine was steadily on the wane. Whereas, at the begnning of the war in 1914 it was as 9 to 1 against the surface ship, it was only 7 to 3 in 1919 and was likely to be only 6to7 in 1930. He was of the opinion that within the next few years there would be a great development of submarine detecting apparatus which would give large and important ships a certain measure of protection against tactical attack by submarines.

He regarded as impracticable the proposal that battleships should be made submersible. He ventured the opinion that the use of gas might eventually revolutionize naval warfare much as gunpowder did when first introduced. It might be discharged with deadly effect on an enemy coastline. It was actually suggested during the German occupancy that the Belgian coast should be "gassed" but the plan was abandoned "in deference to Belgium's susceptibilities."

ANOTHER MAN IN TROUBLE

(By the Darlingside Correspondent of the R. and T.)

I've filled my income tax return
(A modest one withal),
I stated frankly what I earn,
And, though the sum is small,
I'm filled with terrifying doubt,
I cannot sleep at night,
For fear that when I made it out
I didn't get it right.

The thing was full of baffling blanks
I didn't understand,
Like "Interest on Cash in Banks,"
And "Fund from Sale of Lands,"
And "Income from Fiduciaries,"
(Which were not even named),
And "Bonuses, Director's Fees,"
And "Obsolescence Claimed."

All these appalled and puzzled me
Profoundly, I confess,
What obsolescences might be
I could not even guess.
On reaching them, I recollect,
I skipped 'em, every time,
And I'm afraid that this neglect
May constitute a crime.

For I cannot forget one line
Which makes me cringe and quail.
It reads: "Ten Thousand Dollars Fine
Or else One Year in Jail
For Making Fraudulent Return."
And chill my pulses run
And I am filled with deep concern
Lest that is what I've done.

PROCESSIONS IN GERMANY

Berlin, May 2.—While enormous numbers of people celebrated May Day in Germany by abstaining from work, no serious disorders were reported from any part of the country.

In Berlin the processions were orderly. A feature was the number of school children in line, bearing green branches, and such mottoes as "We, too, strike."

JAZZ.

English Writer Explains Origin of the Word.

The secret is out at last. The origin of the word "Jazz" has been discovered. Writing in the London Express, the discoverer leads up to his sensational deduction by first saying, apologetically, that "we are not responsible for the vernacular of our brothers on the Western continent," but since Jazz is now as much of a household word in merry old England as in America, he proceeds to explain:

"One would not call the colored worker in the Southern United States lazy. That is too harsh a word. It is hot there and he might be indifferent to working, but never lazy. A negro likes work. But there is a germ in the south known as the 'Hook-worm,' which affects all true southerners—some unkind employers call it 'loaferitis,' which has a close connection with the infinitive to loaf.'

"Now, the white employer has many thousands of negroes working for him and consequently many overseers; so not being able to remember the names of all his foremen he generally names each one 'Jasper'—a term of highest esteem when used in connection with work I understand.

"Through the very human love of abbreviations, Jasper became Jass and as the overseer's principal means of getting work out of his underlings is through harsh and abusive tongue, he was often requested to coin new names. The southern drawl makes 'jass' sound like 'jazz,' and there we have the word itself.

"And jazz music, no matter what classic-loving critics may say about it, at least inspires energy—hence the derivation."

Why Kolchak Army Melted.

How an army of 80,000 Kolchak troops "melted away" by desertion to the Bolsheviki, following a speech made to prisoners of war by Leon Trotzky in Omsk, Siberia, two days after the city's evacuation by the all-Russia forces, was told by Maj.-Gen I. Thord-Gray, a former officer of the British, Canadian and All-Russian armies, just returned from Vladivostok.

Trotzky, he said, addressing the prisoners as "comrades," said that they would be welcomed by the Red army if they cared to join. Captive officers, he said, who wanted to return to Kolchak would be given safe escort and 2,000 rubles each. A number of the prisoners accepted the offer and, returning to their own lines told what Trotzky had done. Within two weeks, Gen. Thord-Gray said Kolchak had practically no army, and a few months later was executed.

Gen. Thord-Gray went to Siberia with a Canadian expedition, and was taken prisoner by the Bolshevik when they captured Vladivostok. Before leaving two attempts, he said were made to assassinate him.

Towards the last, he said, the Bolshevik troops showed better moral than Kolchak's men. They also had one machine gun for every twenty men, whereas the Kolchak army had only three with every battalion, almost 600 men. During the retreat of the Kolchak army a 2,000-mile retirement, they were driven before machine guns, but seldom before rifle fire. Gen. Sakaroff, the All-Russian War Minister and chief of staff he said, "lost the army at Omsk without a fight."

Chickens in First Cabin.

On two steamships which sailed recently from New York for South American ports prize chickens occupied first cabin quarters. Feliciano de Moraes, a wealthy Brazilian, took several crates of chickens and three dozen rabbits on the Tennyson. He planted an incubator in his stateroom with the chicks and proudly told the purser he expected to hatch many eggs during the 21-day trip. As another passenger occupied the stateroom with him, the purser decided the incubator would be placed in the storeroom. Some chicks were left in the cabin.

On the liner Santa Luisa, bound for Valparaiso, were two prize-winning Plymouth Rocks quartered in a stateroom with two attendants to care for them. They came from Enfield Mass., and were going to Senor A Nevis, a poultry fancier.

Weird Fraternity.

One of the most remarkable of fraternities is that of the Misericordia which is said to have been instituted in 1244, and survives to the present day in many cities and towns of Italy. The members, who are recruited from all ranks of society, wear when on duty a costume of cheap black material that completely disguises them, the face being hidden by a sort of hood with two holes for the eyes. They bury the friendless dead, and also discharge the functions of an ambulance corps, dealing with accidents as they occur, and carrying the sick or injured to the hospitals. The funds needed for the work are derived from membership fees, supplemented by alms for which the members make mute appeals at the doors of churches, holding out a little box to receive them.

Appropriate Last Words.

The Elizabethans are full of well-chosen last words. Marlowe makes Tamburlaine assume the sobriquet of Attila with his last breath: "For Tamburlaine, the Scourge of God, must die!" and the duke of Guise exclaims as the assassin does his work: "Vive la messe! Perish Huguenots!"

Military Service Paths.

Every man in the United States army takes the federal oath at the time of his enlistment. Members of the National Guard take what is known as the dual oath, which covers both state and federal service.

Faulty Wills.

Like many another great lawyer, including in recent years Lord Grimthorpe, Lord St. Helier, and Judge Bacon, Judge Renaud failed to make his will properly.

In spite of his legal knowledge, he made an unattested alteration in the body of the will, with the result that an affidavit of due execution had to be made by one of the witnesses before the document could be admitted to probate.

The most confusing legal will on record, perhaps, was that of Lord Grimthorpe, who died in 1905. Lord Grimthorpe's estate was valued at two millions sterling, and his will contained no fewer than fourteen contradictory codicils which the Probate Court was obliged to investigate very carefully before it could be proved. It took nearly two years to obtain probate.

When Judge Francis Bacon died in June, 1911, he left a fortune of £11,000. But the will, made on a sheet of foolscap, contained several alterations and interlineations which were not signed or witnessed, the consequence being that before probate was granted careful legal investigations had to be made.

Then there was the case of Lord St. Helier, better known, perhaps as Sir Francis Jeune, who died in 1905, and whose will contained so many confusing codicils that it occupied the court for some considerable time. It was discovered, for instance, among other things, that his lordship had left a legacy to a clerk who had been dead ten years.

"It is shocking to reflect upon the litigation which has been occasioned by laymen making their own wills." This was said by Lord St. Leonards, the famous lawyer, who often declared that his will would be a "testamentary masterpiece." And yet when he died there was probably more litigation over his will than over any other, for the simple reason that it could not be found, although certain codicils were discovered. It was only when the intentions of the testator had been proved by these codicils and the recollections of his daughter, who had acted as his secretary, that Lord St. Leonards' property was finally disposed of.—Tit-Bits.

Greasy Luck

By T. B. ALDERSON

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

Captain Joel Holcomb had been gone a year on his last whaling voyage before either his niece, Rhoda, or her lover, Vance Deveril, heard from him. During the twelve months Rhoda had lived with a distant relative and Vance had held a modest clerkship in a shipping office.

The sea had been the roving ground of Vance's father for many a year. He had been the owner of a whaler. When he died about all he left was the good ship Defiance. She was not as good as new by any means, however, and the executors were about to sell the vessel for what she would bring as old junk when Captain Holcomb had come along. It was through this circumstance that young Deveril became acquainted with Rhoda, his niece. Thenceforward she filled all his thoughts and this fact induced Vance to favor the uncle in a plan he had formed.

"Tell you what, lad," Captain Holcomb had said, "the Defiance can be made entirely seaworthy and I have enough laid by to make her so. Here's my proposition: you furnish the ship, I'll refit her, then fifty-fifty on what comes of a venture to the South seas, say around Polynesia. I know the district, it abounds in spouters, and as to ambergris, it's there that precious spoil abounds. One lucky voyage and we're both made men in a money way."

So the battered old Defiance started for the Southern seas and Vance and Rhoda dreamed, and loved, and hoped. Vance had only his limited salary to depend on if they married, so they awaited some word from their venturesome argonaut.

It had come at last—a letter. From what Vance could surmise it had been picked up by a mail steamer from a boat coming off shore from somewhere in the vicinity of the Papuan group of islands. It started out with the words, "I'm about to tell you about our cruise, and I'll start in by saying in an encouraging way we had greasy luck."

"What does that mean?" inquired Rhoda, to whom Vance showed the letter.

"It's a whalers' term and means that they were successful in finding plenty of whales and secured a rich cargo of sperm oil," explained Vance. "For two pages, though, the rest of the letter is undecipherable. It must have been wet through, immersed in sea water somewhere, for the pencilings are all blurred and blotted out. Only the last page is clear again. Listen, dear," and he read aloud:

"You must come therefore to Mimosa island, where, as I tell you, I am, and I need your help in getting away. Come alone by yawl from Ampti, and be sure to paint your nose red. As I have explained to you I am a king, but I need a prime minister to help me out of my fix."

"Perhaps the blotted out pages explained?" suggested Rhoda, and after a lengthy consultation it was decided that Vance must certainly try and find this mysterious and uncharted Mimosa island.

It was not an easy task and it strained his resources to reach the presumed vicinity of the old captain's whereabouts and hire others to assist him in his quest.

Vance was greeted by a half-nude, ferocious appearing crowd, bearing spears, clubs and darts. They were about to attack him when their attention was focused on his carmine-bedaubed nose. He was led to a rude habitation and there, seated on a broad dais, more rubicund than ever, his nasal appendage more than usual aglow, was Captain Holcomb.

It took the latter some time to impart to Vance the story of his adventures. Laden with "greasy spoil" representing a fortune the Defiance had encountered a storm. Then pestilence had swept away the crew. It was just by chance that the sole survivor, the captain, had been able to navigate the dismantled vessel into a cove at an unfrequented part of Mimosa island.

"She's there now," said the captain, "but I have so played on the superstitious fears of my subjects that they believe she is haunted, for when they first discovered me I played some tricks on them with fireworks, a victrola and an electric battery which impressed them that I was a sort of wizard. They made me their king. I told them of the coming of my red-nosed relative and they believe red noses to be a distinctive mark of great dignity and power. They will never let me go willingly and my escape and the conveyance of the Defiance to some friendly port is now to be your task."

Vance received explicit orders from the captain and rowed away that night. At the settlement he engaged a steam launch to proceed back to the island after dark. All due preparations were made for towing the whaler to a safe port the following evening.

And upon that occasion, claiming that he wished to exorcise the haunting spirits, the captain was allowed to visit the cove alone. By midnight the old ship was free of the island and two months later the ex-king and Vance were welcomed home by pretty Rhoda, with the proceeds from their greasy luck sufficient to keep them all in comfort for life.

Francis Bacon's Old Home Now Nothing But a Ruin. How the Landmarks Decay

GORHAMBURY, the home of the great Francis Bacon, Baron Verulam and Viscount St. Albans, the "wisest, wittiest, meanest of mankind," is hard by St. Albans, that city named after the British proto-martyr, who experienced the Diocletian persecution. It is a likable place and its proximity to London, a mere 21 miles away, has not yet taken off the edge of its essential provinciality.

I can imagine no ramble more pleasant than that which shall bring you, let us say, on some thyme morning in May, when the pink horse chestnuts, which are here a feature, are in bloom, when the air is scented and moist with recent showers and suppressed heat, and a blue haze settles over the landscape, into St. Michaels, an old English village, untouched by any modern developments, save for the injudicious restoration of the church, when Lord Grimthorpe, that devastating amateur architect who spoiled St. Albans cathedral, let loose on it, some twenty-three years ago.

At the entrance to the village you see the little River Ver crossing the road by a ford or waterfall, still in use when a carter wishes to cool his horses' feet; although for the general convenience a little red brick bridge was built more than a hundred years ago.

St. Michael's Church, standing as it does almost in the centre of the old Roman city of Verulamium, is largely built of Roman brick and tile, the spoils of that vanished place, whose fragmentary walls yet stand lonely in the meadows. The chief interest of the interior is the curious statue of Bacon, in an alcove on the north side of the chancel. It represents him in his habit as he lived, seated in a chair, in an attitude of philosophical abstraction. "Sic sedebat," says the inscription beneath, showing us that the work indeed was intended for an intimate, rather than a conventional portraiture. It was placed here as a mark of affection, by his secretary, Sir Thomas Meautys.

There is a right of way for pedestrians through the park of Gorhambury, now a property of the Grimston family, whose head is the Earl of Verulam. The existing mansion is a typical classic building of the eighteenth century, with an imposing peristyle of lofty stone columns. Bacon's old home is equally typical of its age, the Elizabethan Renaissance period. This scene of the great Chancellor's pride, and of his retirement, has long been a ruin. That he was housed sufficiently well we can yet see from its best preserved feature, the porch, with its now forlorn panels of marble and its terra-cotta medallion heads of the Roman Emperors. The ruins are stayed up now with brickwork and iron rods.

Apart from the crumbling walls stands a poor old, badly treated, one-legged and headless statue, said to represent Henry VIII., but scarce recognizable so scored and slashed is it with penknives and the initials of many generations of Toms, and Dicks, and Harrys; evidences these, of that noble passion, the passion to be remembered, but not exactly to be admired in this manifestation of it. Let us not, however, in accusing the Cockney crowd, forget that they are not alone in scribbling and carving their names and initials everywhere and anywhere. Old Izaak Walton carved a great "I. W." in the marble of Casaubon's monument in Westminster Abbey, where it may be seen to this day; and is not the name of Carlyle, who should, philosophically, have been far above such a deed, found scribbled on the walls of Shakespear's birthplace, among those of an undistinguished throng, in whose excuse we can say only that "they knew no better."

To-day the haggard ruins of old Gorhambury are securely railed off, and the pencils and penknives cannot get to work upon them.—Christian Science Monitor.

Before Columbus and Tasman.

When we are asked to state who discovered America, we reply "Columbus," without any regard for the fact that civilization had risen and fallen on the American continent before Columbus was born. In New Zealand recently, a boy was asked in a school examination who discovered his country. The answer expected of him by scholastic tradition was "Tasman," but the lad perplexed his teacher by replying, "Kupe." He may not have got his marks, but he was right. Polynesian tradition, which is unwritten history of proved accuracy, records that about a thousand years ago two dark-skinned captains sailed from the Society Islands into the southern seas, discovered New Zealand, sailed round it and returned to their own land, visiting the Island of Raratonga on their way. The tale that has lived after them shows that they entered Wellington Harbor, the present site of the capital city of the Dominion, where they saw the moa, the giant wingless bird that had become extinct before the first white man set foot on New Zealand's shores. The world has never produced greater navigators than the early Polynesians, who in their big outrigger canoes traversed the Pacific north and south, east and west. Without map or compass, they pushed north to the equator and south to the ice pack. The white explorer came in the tracks of their canoes.

Throne Speeches.

Speeches from the throne as every one knows, are compiled not by the King but by the Cabinet, and more than once their keenest critic has been the royal orator. George III., after reading the speech at the opening of Parliament on one occasion, turned to the Lord Chancellor and asked: "Did I read it well, my lord?" "Excellently," was the obvious answer. "I am glad of that," said the King, "for there was nothing in it." George III. was even more caustic, for when proceedings were to be taken against a bookseller for publishing a spurious version of the speech from the throne, he intervened, saying that he had read both versions and thought the spurious one much the better.

The nipponophone, the Japanese phonograph, has revolutionized the nation's attitude toward music. Instead of being limited to tearooms and geisha girls, music is now being welcomed everywhere, and even in the schools nipponophone records are being introduced for teaching national songs and for marching.

Achilles' Shield.

In early days some armor must have been very beautiful. Homer, describes the famous shield of Achilles, made for him, so the story goes, by Hephaestus, the smith of the mythical inhabitants of Olympus. It was covered with pictures of cities and the people in them, soldiers lurking in ambush, farmers working in their fields, a vineyard, and wild animals. If the shield itself was nearly as beautiful as Homer's description of it, it must have been a wondrous work of art.

Cardinal Manning.

The middle of the nineteenth century saw a great movement in England toward the Church of Rome. Among the many well-known converts was Henry E. Manning, who had been a clergyman in the Church of England for over fifteen years. He entered the Roman priesthood and was ultimately made cardinal archbishop of Westminster. He died January 14, 1892.

Fear to Tell Own Name.

Among the Kayans, a tribe of the Philippines, it is a breach of manners to ask a man what his name is. If a white man does so through ignorance the man will turn to a bystander and ask that the stranger, who does not know the customs, may be informed. If a man tells his own name the evil spirits will hear him and can more readily do him harm.

NEW RECORD IS SET BY TANLAC

NEARLY 75,000 BOTTLES SOLD IN TORONTO ALONE—HUNDREDS TESTIFY TO MERITS.

Remarkable though it may seem, nearly seventy-five thousand bottles of Tanlac have been sold and distributed in Toronto in less than three years, and the wonderful demand continues unabated. And what is true of Toronto is likewise true of the entire Province of Ontario.

In one day alone recently in Toronto, two hundred and eight well-known people, by actual count, called at Tamblyn's Drug Store to obtain the medicine and to tell of the benefits they have derived from its use. Among the number was John McElrey, of 29 Jarvis Street, Toronto. In relating his experience with the medicine, Mr. McElrey said:

"For several years I suffered with indigestion and a disordered liver, as a result of which I had frequently bilious attacks and headaches. When these attacks came on my eyes would get red and swollen and my tongue all white. I would have a dull heavy feeling and lacked all ambition to do things. My sleep at night was spoiled by restlessness and I always get up in the mornings feeling tired out.

"It wasn't until I tried Tanlac that I found anything to really help me. I had tried many othed medicines but they never seemed to suit my case. But Tanlac put me into good shape in a very short while. My appetite picked up so fast that I am hungry nearly all the time. I found the tablets of great benefit in regulating my liver, and I never have biliousness or headache now. I sleep well at night and have got twice the life and energy that I used to have. I have found Tanlac to be a splendid medicine and I'm satisfied that it's the very best thing for troubles like I had."

have the right to be here."

The General emphasized the fact that he sympathized with the men who won the war, and he, with other generals in England, were doing all in their power to get the general public to think more of these men.

He had not learned of Toronto's war record until last night. It had surprised him, he declared, and he did not know of any city in the Empire which had beaten the record of this city.

General Townshend then spoke briefly on how he brought Turkey out of the war. 'I was sent to do a task, which was to take the whole of Mesopotamia, a task which Napoleon would have despaired and on which Hannibal would have turned his back."

At the conclusion of the speech, Comrade C. D. Morgan, president of the Beaches branch of the G.W.V.A., presented a copy of the constitution to the General. "We feel that in this presentation we honor our comrades who fought with you at Kut," he said.

Then Sergt. W. F. Canon, who served with the General during the campaign in the second battalion of the Royal West Kents, pinned the gold badge of membership on the lapel of his coat, while the audience broke out in hearty cheers.

General Townshend proceeded to shake hands with several present. He noticed that Jack Ramsden had a wooden leg. Striking it with his cane, he said. "I see you have a wooden leg. Well, you wouldn't take your weight in gold for it, would you?"

He also shook hands with Rev. L. A. Dixon, son of Canon Dixon, who was head of the Y. M. C. A. in Mesopotamia.

ing very good time as this ship goes. We made Morehead City and stopped there an hour and fifteen minutes, tanking up and feeding up. We left there between 2 and 3 in the afternoon. Before we took off we sent a telegram to New York teling them to expect us about 7 o'clock.

"From Morehead on we made better time, but it got bumpy off Cape Charles. The ship pitched and jumped around, but we kept on flying. From Delaware Breakwater on we hit rain, but rain couldn't stop us after we'd gone that distance. Once the motor cut off and I thought we'd have to land but I nosed her down and she picked up again and kept on hitting fine.

Sets Distance Record

"Down around the lower bay it was misty and dark and you couldn't make out anything much in the distance, but it looked mighty good to us. We came up the river without any moon to fly by, but I picked up the flashlight signal from the shore and knew where to land. So I set her down along the track of that sign over there, and here we are."

The distance 1,400 miles, is further than any other flying boat is known to have flown in a single day. The first stretch to Morehead City is about 900 miles and the second 500 miles.

The NC-4 in its transatlantic flight from Trepassy to the Azores made a longer non-stop flight, but the total distance—1,200 nautical miles — is shorter than the distance by coast line between New York and Miami.

MURDER TALE BY 14-YEAR-OLD BOY

TELLS STORY IN COURT OF SHOOTING OF JAMES BROOKS

SENSATIONAL QUEBEC CASE

SIXTEEN-YEAR-OLD ARMAND BEAUREGARD CHARGED WITH MURDER

Montreal, May 4. — Paul Hecko, fourteen years of age, under a charge of manslaughter in another case, was the chief witness heard at Sts. Scholastique, Quebc, on Saturday, when Armand Beauregard, sixteen years old, appeared before the court on a charge of having murderet James Brooks at Montfort in December last.

Mrs. Brooks, wife of the murdered man, was in court and identified a wrist watch, knife, gun and various other articles as having belonged to her husband when he went on the hunting trip which ended in his death.

Hecko gave a long account of the alleged murder to Judge Goyette of Hull. He identified Armand Beauregard as the person with whom he went to Montfort. He said that he bought a $20 rifle and Beauregard gave him some cartridges. It was with this weapon that Hecko stated that he had killed a boy, in regard to which he is now under a charge of manslaughter. The two agreed to run away.

They went to Montfort, and after leaving the train they stopped overnight at a small rest place on the highroad. Then Brooks came along. Later they went to another shack and Brooks followed them. Hecko said that Beauregard wanted to shoot him as he was about to enter, but Hecko dissuaded him. In the morning, Hecko stated, Beauregard shot Brooks and rifled the body, threatening to kill Hecko unless he helped him. Later they returned to Montreal and sold the rifle and other articles taken from Brooks. Witness said he had not confessed before because he was frightened of Beauregard.

ITALIAN WARSHIP IN THE BLACK SEA

BRITISH COMMONS QUESTIONS OBJECT OF ITALY SENDING CRUISER THERE.

London, May 4.—The recent report that Captain De Martini, in command of an Italian cruiser, called at Novorossisk, on the Black Sea coast of Russia, with the purpose of opening up diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia, was called to the attention of the Government in the House of Commons yesterday. Cecil B. Harmsworth, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, replied to questions, saying he understood that the Italian vessel had gone to Novorossisk with the purpose of establishing more satisfactory wireless communication with Russia, and that its commander had no intentions regarding opening negotiations with Soviet Russia.

DEBATE ON BUDGET ENDED LAST NIGHT

NO AMENDMENTS IN LEGISLATURE—SPEAKERS DEALT IN GENERALITIES.

Toronto, May 4.—The debate on the Budget in the Legislature ended at midnight. There was no amendments and the speakers since early in the afternoon dealt with many generalities, many of them far removed from definite Budget proposals.

H. H. Dewart, Liberal Leader, and Hon. Geo. Henry, Acting Leader of the Conservatives, spoke briefly just before the adjournment. Neither was very critical. At no period of yesterday's proceedings was much interest shown on the part of the members. At some stages there were not over 30 members present. The Hydro got into the debate several times, and most of the speakers advocated caution in new enterprises. K. K. Homuth (South Waterloo) had a new scheme for housing, which he outlined to the House. Hon. Peter Smith, Provincial Treasurer, in his reply, spoke about two minutes, most of which was thanks for the suggestions made by the various speakers.

LOCAL MILK PRODUCERS WILL FIX THEIR OWN PRICES THIS SEASON

Refused Mr. Gillespie's Offer of $2.35 Hundred Pounds.

The Milk Producers' Association met Mr. Gillespie and othter coal distributors in the Board of Trade rooms last night to fix the summer price of milk. After considerable discussion on the matter during which adverse opinions were expressed of Mr. Gillespie's offer of $2.35 a hundred delivered, a motion was passed stating that the Association would fix its own price. As most of the producers in this district have no other market than Mr. Gillespie's condensory, unless they want to make butter at home, it is likely that they will eventually be compelled to accept Mr. Gillespie's price for their milk.

The meeting was addressed by Mr. E. H. Stonehouse of Toronto, president of the Ontario Milk Producers' Association. He gave a detailed reprt of the milk situation in the province and presented figures of the summer prices fixed in the different cities, including Montreal, Hamilton, Chatham, London, Kingston and Cobourg. In each case the price fixed was slightly higher than the price paid last year but less than the winter price. London's price was the lowest ofthe season. Mr. Stonehouse gave for this fact that there was no Milk Producers' Association in that City and the producers were compelled to take whatever was offered.

Mr. Gillespie's price of $2.35 a hundred was lower than any of the cities mentioned with the exception of London. His winter price was $3 It was pointed out that Peterborough was differently situated as regard distribution of milk than any other cities. There was not enough consumption of whole milk to encourage production of milk for that purpose. Mr. Gillespie takes most of the milk here and pays a flat rate for whatever is brought in. He sells what milk he can in the city and the rest goes into the condensory for the manufacture of the ice cream and other products. The farmers felt that they were getting a lower price for the milk used in the city than elsewhere and yet if Mr. Gillespie was to pay a higher price for the milkso ld in the city he would have to single out eight or ten producers who could guarantee to supply him with sufficient for that demand.

There was a general feeling among those present that $2.50 a hundred should be paid but Mr. Gillespie stated that he could not promise more than $2.35 on account of the condition of the condensed milk trade. The market, he said, was overtsocked at the present time and he had been unable to place more than one shipment for many months. In fact the condensory had been operating under a loss all winter and rather than do this any longer he would close up shop.

With reference to unprofitable producing of milk, Mr. Gillespie hinted that this might partly be caused by keeping unprofitable cows and he quoted figures from a few cows he had bought himself this winter which were showing a nice profit over the cost of feed. He suggested that the best prospects at present for milk producers were in the cheese industry and he advised any who could to adopt this method of disposing of their supply of milk. As there are few cheese factories in this district, however, the majority of farmers will be obliged to accept the best price that Mr. Gillespie can offer and hope for warm weather during the month of May so that they can put their cows out to pasture.

Mr. Gillespie could not promise any more than the stated price for the month of May, but he said that if at the first of June conditions warranted it he would be willing to give his patrons the benefit of better prices. Other producers present had the same story to tell as Mr. Gillespie and all claimed that there was not enough play between the cost price and the selling price in the city.

There was a general feeling among the producers that the prices should stay up at the winter rate until the first of June, the reason for this being the fact that it cost as much if not more to produce milk in the month of May as in the winter months and at the same time it was particularly necessary to keep the cows in a good flow of milk or else the supply would decrease and they would not be producing sufficient when they went on the grass. If this situation occurred it would take a month to get back to the proper condition again and by that time the best flow of milk would be over and the dry mid-summer weather causing a decrease.

Several farmers presented figures for the winter months which indicated that at present prices of feed it was almost impossible to pay expenses producing milk. Some went so far as to say that if it had not been for some sidelines such as selling alsike and a few logs during the winter months they would not have been able to meet their feed bills. Others of those present brought up the point, as an answer to Mr. Gillespie, that the profits on cows in good flow of milk must not be taken as a basis for the whole year's work and that the farmer must also consider the months when the cow is not giving a great deal of milk together with the months when she is dry and still must be carried over. It was also pointed out that the two or three years of her life, while she is growing up before she starts to show profit at all, must be considered and these periods must be paid for before she commences to show a balance of profit at all.

The chair was occupied by Mr. R. B. Rogers, president of the Peterborough Milk Producers' Association, and there was a very large attendance of producers.

AN AIRSHIP TRIP FOR HONEYMOON

VENETIAN COUPLE TAKE A JOURNEY THAT IS GROWING POPULAR.

Venice, Cal., May 4.—Immediately following the marriage service the other afternoon, which united the lives of Miss Margaret Stayman of Cincinnati, O., and Jack Peters, motor officer of Venice, the huge airplane in which the ceremony had taken place floated up among the clouds and carried the bride and bridegroom to San Diego.

Aviators at the Venice field are becoming accustomed to piloting honeymoons, but this was the first ceremony that had yet taken place out on the field in the open air, amid the leather fittings of the biggest plane on the Ince field. Lieutenant Fred Hoyt is pilot of the wedding trip. Rev. C. S. Vail performed the ceremony.

GRAVE CHARGES AGAINST THE JAPS

ACCUSED OF DELAYING EVACUATION OF SZECHS IN SIBERIA

Vladivostok, May 3.— The members of the International Railway Board, with the exception of the Japanese member, have forwarded to their Governments an identical telegram, which places them on record as protesting against the actions of the Japanese military in Siberia.

"The Railroad Board," says the telegram, "having examined reports of the actions of Japanese troops in the railway districts, are of the opinion first that General Semenoff systematically set aside the terms of the allied railway agreement; second, that the Japanese military acquiesced and themselves usurped the functions of the allied railway organization, and aided in the confusion of traffic, and actually delayed the progress of the Czechs, and third, that the Japanese military, by placing troops at the principal points on the Chinese Eastern Railway, which the allied agreement assigned to the Chinese to guard, and allowing such detachments to interfere with matters affecting railway traffic, provoked conflicts, resulting in needless loss of life to Chinese, Russians and Czechs, and also jeopardized the movements of trains.

EXHIBIT IN CHICAGO

Regina, Sask., May 3.—The proposal to organize a joint Saskatchewan exhibit of purebred animals to show at the International Exhibition in Chicago the last week in November and the first week in December met with general approval at a meeting of the Saskatchewan Livestock Board. Practically the entire board was present and it was decided to request the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture to co-operate with the board by assuming transportation charges and assisting in organizing the exhibit.

ARE RE-CONDITIONING EX-GERMAN VESSELS

Washington, May 3.—While the action of the House Committee on Appropriations in omitting from the sundry civil bill the appropriation of $44,000,000 requested by the Shipping Board to defray the expenses of reconstructing the ex-German passenger ships is a blow to the Shipping Board, Admiral Benson declared that the board would go on with its plan to have this work done by private steamship operators.

"Of course, the whole question of handling the ex-German passenger ships is difficult because of the injunction against our selling them," said Admiral Benson, "and we will have to await the final decision of the courts before we know exactly where we stand.

"In the meantime, however, we do not intend to sit around and do nothing. We will have these vessels reconditioned by private concerns and let them pay themselves out by earnings from the operation of the vessels under our regular managers' agreement. There will, perhaps, be an advantage in this, because each operator can have the ships he takes put in condition for the exact use which he intends to make of them. Afterwards, if the courts say we can sell them, they will be sold.".

PROTECTION NOW AGAINST MINE GAS

APPARATUS TO CONQUER CARBON MONOXIDE—PROF. C. R. HOOVER MAKES ANNOUNCEMENT

Hartford, Conn., May 3.— A new means of detecting the presence of the deadly gas, carbon monoxide, which has been the cause of many deaths in mines and is the posinous factor in illuminating gas, has been perfected. This announcement was made tonight by Professor C. R. Hoover, in an address before the Connecticut Valley section of the American Chemical Society, in this city.

The device was invented by him in his chemical laboratory at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., and it is to be described in detail soon in one of the publications of the society.

The investigation of the properties of carbon monoxide was carried on extensively by the Chemical Warfare Service. The gas is so poisonous that at one time its use in warfare was seriously considered, but owing to the dificulties in condensing and transporting it, that project was abandoned.

Its presence in mines, emplacements and shafts was formerly detected by taking into those localities a canary bird, as this little creature, being particularly susceptible to such deadly fumes falls at once into a faint when they are present.

The new detector, however, is a delicate scientific instrument which records not only the presence of the monoxide, but also the quantity of it in the air. It consists of a small glass tube filed with a mixture of an iodine salt, pumice stone and fuming sulphuric acid. When air is admitted to the tube the contents turn green, the depth of the color indicating the percentage of the poisonous gas. There is an indicator which records with scientific accuracy the exact proportion of the injurious vapor.

The detector can be lowered by a string into shafts and when withdrawn for examination before anyone is permitted to enter. It is of special value in the iron and steel industries, in gas manufacture, for fire departments and in mine rescue work.

The contrivance can be used in conjunction with a new type of gas mask which counteracts the effects of carbon monoxide and is patterned after the army gas mask developed by the Chemical Warfare Service in the European conflict.

BENEFIT OF SPORT TO THE COMMUNITY

POSSIBILITIES FOR COMMON GOOD BEING RECOGNIZED BY THINKERS

Francis Nelson in the Toronto Star says:

An international football match in France last month had more than a sporting aspect. It was played at Pantin (a suburb of Paris, and the visiting team was sent over by the Sports Committee of the British Labor Party. The French team was selected by the Federation Sportive du Travail, an organization corresponding to the British. An immense crowd saw the game, which was won by the visitors, 3 goals to 1.

An Active Element For Good.

At a reception held after the match at the Pantin Town Hall, the Mayor, Mons. Duray, celebrated the coming triumph of sport among the working classes. He contended that its practice would do more to counteract the evils of drink, debauchery, and laziness among the laborers than any other means, and that the leaders of the French Socialist Party could do no better work than help to foster the sporting spirit among their members.

The value of sport as an ameliorating influence in the present worldwide unrest, and its possibilities for positive good in the community are becoming clearly recognized by thinkers. And the antipathy to sport so deeply rooted in ancient prejudice and ignorance is steadily, if grudgingly, giving way before the light.

The State's Approval.

The importance that the French Government attaches to sport was exemplified by the manner in which it officially recognized the Easter Monday International Football Association match between France and England at Rouen. The English party were received on their arrival at Dieppe at the Mairie by the Mayor of the seaport town, and be presented each one with a miniature bronze plaque, bearing in relief the arms of Dieppe on the obverse side, and on the reverse a design emblematic of some of its industries. M. Thoumyre, an Under-Secretary of State, had also journeyed from Paris to greet the visitors, and he gave them a cordial welcome to France.'

Soldiers Must Be Sportsmen.

In military, as well as civil, affairs is this progress clear and definite. The Minister of War has issued an army order regarding games and sports in the army. Football in particular is made compulsory. All lieutenants, sub-lieutenants and N.C.O.'s must be capable of captaining a team. A special sporting costume for the soldier is foreshadowed. Games fields will be prepared on the manoeuvring grounds or in the neighborhood of the barracks.

Boxing Among Boy Scouts.

In Britain, the home of sport, and especially of competitive sport, a sound foundation is being established by the encouragement of boxing among the Boy Scouts. The preliminaries in the All-London Scout tournament last month had more than 600 entries. The finals were held at the Holborn Stadium, and the spectators included the younger generation of the royal family, Prince Albert and Prince Henrty.

Ontario Keeping Pace.

Ontario's recognition of the changed condition of affairs has had several recent demonstrations. The appropriation of $5,000 as the Provincial contribution to Canada's representation in the Olympic games of Antwerp was generous and timely. The establishment of the Ontario Athletic Commission, which will regulate professional boxing and wrestling, primarily for the benefit of the returned soldiers' organizations, and will generally encourage the development of sport and the sporting spirit, is further concrete evidence that the world close to us is not only moving, but moving in the right direction and at a welcome rate of speed.

The revival of racing, suspended during the war in Canada alone of all countries in the world, is a belated atonement for what a large element of the community considered a panicky and unwarranted course. In Ontario the public treasury will profit more largely than in pre-war times from this popular form of recreation. And, much as the enemies of racing would be willing to see it so embarrassed, the Government escapes the anomalous position of interfering with what is probably the most popular form of recreation in the Province.

Often a man's success is due to his asking questions and answering none.

WORLD'S WEALTHIEST WOMEN

The wealthiest woman in the world lives not in the United States, but in Japan. She is a little widow who, until her husband died in 1899, lived the cloistered life of the average Japanese wife. Her husband, who had worked up from nothing to the ownership of a one million-dollar dollar sugar refinery, left her his refinery and his camphor business. The Russo-Japanese was gave such an impetus to Japanese commerce that she sold the refinery to what was then the Japanese sugar trust for three and a quarter million dollars, then a record price for a single commercial transaction in Japan. The outbreak of the European war found her in control of fifteen large factories—steel works, shipyards, cotton mills, coal mines, breweries, flour mills, match factories and celluloid works. The European war poured from 200 million to 250 million dollars into her lap and its ending finds her a frail, unobstrusive queen of commerce, whose fabulous wealth is one of the most vital factors in Japan's growing power.

She is Mrs. Yone Suzuki and she lives on a modest estate on the fringes of Kobe, Japan. Her business manager, S. Takahata, has just arrived in London. I asked him to-day how many women Mrs. Suzuki employed. "I do not know," he said. "It is too difficult to say. She has so many interests in so many industries in so many parts of the world that it is impossible to judge. Probably between 35,000 and 40,000 are employed by the companies directly under her control. A large proportion of them are girls and women in whose welfare she takes a great interest."

Mrs. Suzuki owns 98 per cent. of the shares in the great firm of Suzuki and company, one of the most powerful corporations in the world, with its head office at Kobe and branch offices in London, New York, Glasgow, Hongkong, Seattle, Shanghai, San Francisco, Marras, Manila, Bombay, Calcutta, Valparaiso, Vladivostok, Singapore, Melbourne and a long list of far eastern seaports.

She controls the steel industry of Japan, she has the world monopoly in crude camphor and she dominates the sugar market. She is the holder of vast estates in Japan, Korea, China and the East Indies.

She operates at present a fleet of 60 steamships, built in her own yards and totalling more than a half millions tons, but as many more are building in her yards, so that shortly she expects to operate a fleet of 100 ships with a tonnage of almost one million.

"What is Mrs. Suzuki accomplishing for her women employes?" I asked Mr. Takohata.

"You must understand," he said "that labor conditions are very different in Japan from what they are in the United States Almost 75 per cent. of our laborers are women in Japan, and the conditions under which they formerly worked were very hard. When Japan passed the 12-hour a day labor law, it was looked upon as a great reform Even then the factories worked day and night, and when one shift of girls was finished with their day's work they crawled into the still warm beds which had been vacated, by the last shift

"But now conditions are improving rapidly. Mrs. Suzuki's employes are working only eight hours a day which means a greater concession than even six hours in the United States, for with the unfavorable climatic conditions of Japan and the poorer education and skill of them to work about four hours a day longer to equal your production."

Mrs. Suzuki has helped to obtain a higher status for married women in Japan, and in the business enterprises under control, the reforms she has achieved have electrified the Japanese labor world.

"The girls in Mrs. Suzuki's factories live in large, healthy dormitories and recreation grounds are now being established for them." Mr. Takohata told me Such things are quite new to Japan, but Mrs. Suzuki hopes to see the day when women in Japan will enjoy priviléges equal to those in the United States."

Much of the stimulus for Yone Suzuki's reforms has come from the United States Her son was for a time a student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston, and had it not been for the European war Mrs Suzuki would have visited him there.—London Correspondence Kansas City Star.

A TRIP TO THE OLD LAND IN 2 DAYS

The latest issue of the Aviation News offers the following what it terms not distant possibilities:

Halifax to England in two days.

New York to Liverpool in two and a half days.

Vancouver to Yokohama in three and a half days.

Vancouver to Australia in five and a half days.

Encircle the globe in twenty-eight days, including four stops of two days each, are the not distant possibilities, according to an article in the current issue of Aviation News.

2,000 Passengers.

According to the figures issued by the Air Ministry the above is a possibility of the near future An airship of 10,000,000 feet cubic capacity could carry 2,000 passengers for a non-stop voyage of 5,000 miles. An airship of this enormous capacity would have a disposable lift of 200 tons, and if this weight were taken up entirely by gasoline a flight of approximately 20,000 miles would be possible.

Taking, a quarter of the lift for petrol—a quantity sufficient for a 5,000-mile flight—there remains a weight of 150 tons still to be disposed of. This represents 336,000 pounds. As 2,000 people of average weight, 150 pounds, if women are included equally with men—only weigh 308,000 pounds, it will be seen that ample margin has been left, even if the crew of 20, weighing 3,080 pounds, are taken in.

It is, however, as dead weight only that the passengers have been considered. If the voyage of 5,000 miles is to be considered from the practical standpoint, food and accommodation of the travellers must be thought of.

"A voyage of 5,000 miles in the type of airship under consideration, flying at an average speed of 53 miles per hour, would take a little over 94 hours, or roughly, four days. For a journey of this length food and sleeping accommodation would have to be provided and more space would therefore have to be allowed for each passenger in addition to the actual weight carried. Also more men other than those actually engaged in navigating the airship would be required. A future air liner will not carry as many stewards as the ocean liner of the present day; probably one in ten of the people carried will be servants of various types. This would reduce the 2,000 passengers to 1,800.

Even Carry Servants.

As regards weight, food and bedding would take up, roughly, a third of the lift available after petrol has been taken on board, or 50 of the 150 tons available. The remaining 100 tons would be available for passengers and servants, but as extra space for accommodation of necessity means extra weight for the vessel to carry, it is safer to take 85 tons as the weight available. Still, taking the average person to weigh 150 pounds, this allows for 1,236 passengers, of whom 123 would be servants.

Therefore, having all due regard to space, comfort, sleeping accommodation, food and servants, the modern air liner of an already projected type will with comfort carry 1,100 paying passengers on a non-stop 5,000-mile flight. If the number of 2,000 is still adhered to and the conditions of comfort supplied, they could easily be taken on a flight of about 2,000 miles.

AIRPLANE HANGARS

Commercial Firm Claims They Would Meet Housing Shortage.

Toronto, May 4. The Mayor yesterday received an offer from the Nathan Richards Company of three portable airplane hangars, which they claim would be very suitable for housing several families during the summer months owing to the housing shortage. "They could be erected within a few days," reads the letter "and would accommodate nine or twelve families while proper homes were being built."

The price asked for the hangars is $5,000 each, or the three for $14,750, and the erection of same at cost. The firm also suggests that after the housing situation is controlled the hangars could be put into use for a municipal hangar until the proper air-harbor is established. The offer will be referred to the Board of Control.

"SEVENTEEN"

COMING TO GRAND DIRECT FROM BOOTH THEATRE NEW YORK

"Seventeen" opens at the Grand one night only, next Monday, direct from an eight months' stay at the Booth Theatre, New York, and a long run in Boston, where it has been universally considered the most delightful the most freshly amusing play of the year. All who have and all who have not read the book will want to see the stage version, which is in four acts, revolving around the histories incident to Willie's purloining fathter Baxter's dress suit in order to dazzle the charming Lola Pratt.

Everybody who knows Willie Baxter and has chuckled at his first love affair, who delights in the tender misunderstandings of his mother and the uncanny frankness of his impish sister, Jane, will be glad to know that these and many other characters of Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen" stories are in the play.

And who plays Jane? and Lola Pratt, the long suffering Mr. Parcher, and most of all that delicious incarnation of man in his salad days, William Sylvanus Baxter?. Thomas Kelly, an actor both youthful and experienced for he has been on the stage since boyhood, brings Willie Baxter to life. His impersonation is rated as one of the finest pieces of acting of the year. Elizabeth Black whose name has been on the tongues of thousands since her instantaneous success as naughty little Jane; and Lael Davis, who is now known far and wide as the "baby talk lady," and Judit Lowry, whose realistic impersonation of Mrs. Baxter has brought her innumerable letters from other mothers, will bring to the stage the deliciously funny scenes that make "Seventeen one continuous ripple of laughter. Wallace Ford as Johnnie Watson, Oscar Craik as George Crooper, Robert McGroarty as Joe Bullitt; Agnes Horton, as Ethel Boke, the fat girl; Alma Mammersly, and other boys and girls complete the cast of lively youngsters; Aldrich Bowker, William Belfort, Louis John Bartels, portray the elders. In bringing "Seventeen" to the stage, Stuart Walker has set a new fashion in plays. Both young and old folks who would live again the happy days of their youth, will delight in this drama of "Youth and love and Summertime."

VARIETY OF APPEAL IN FIVE NEW GOLDWYN PICTURES, READY FOR RELEASE

"Out Of The Storm" an Emotional Masterpiece; Stirring Political Intrigue in 'The Great Accident'; Other Three Rich in Human Interest.

New Goldwyn Pictures recently completed and scheduled for distribution through Goldwyn's twenty-two exchanges in May and the early part of June are "Dollars and Sense," starring Madge Kennedy; "Out of the Storm," an adaptation of Gertrude Atherton's novel, "The Tower of Ivory"; "Jes' Call Me Jim," starring Will Rogers; "The Great Accident," staring Tom Moore, and "The Slim Princess," in which Mabel Normand is the star.

Every reader of the Saturday Evening Post is familiar with the inimitable stories of Octavus Roy Cohen, who has turned his creative genius to the writing of original scripts for production by Goldwyn. "Dollars and Sense," the first of his works prepared especially for motion pictures, is marked by the natural humor and strong human appeal that have given this author's stories such a high place in current fiction. Although it does not come under the head of a vehicle modelled to suit the personality of a star, Mr. Cohen conceived a central character in which the ability of Miss Kennedy has ample scope. Harry Beaumont directed.

First Atherton Picture.

The public, which already has had an opportunity to realize the superior quality of the Eminent Authors Pictures by Rupert Hughes, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Leroy Scott and others, will be particularly interested in "Out of the Storm," Gertrude Atherton's first contribution, an adaptation of "The Tower of Ivory," the most popular of all her novels. The dramatic quality of this picture places it among the emotional masterpieces of the screen, and in addition to the human interest of the situations, there are spectacular scenes presented in a vivid fashion, under the direction of William Parke.

From all quarters come reports of the sensational rise of Will Rogers whose following has been increased by thousands with the release of each new production: "Almost a Husband," "Jubilo," "Water, Water Everywhere," and "The Strange Boarder,"" will find a worthy successor in "Jes' Call Me Jim," a story by J. G. Holland in which the comedian's four-years old son figures prominently. "Jes' Call Me Jim" is peculiarly adapted to Rogers' type. He portrays the role of Jim Fenton, a happy-go-lucky hunter and trapper who is in love with the village milliner, played by Irene Rich. Those who have read J. G. Holland's "Seven Oaks," the book on which this picture is based, will readily recognize the screen possibilities in the experiences of the self-sacrificing trapper who shoulders the burdens of an unfortunate friend. Clarence Badger, who has been so successful with earlier Rogers productions, handled the direction of 'Jes' Call Me Jim."

Exciting Story for Moore.

Tom Moore comes to the front again with a fast-moving story that is still fresh in the minds of readers of the "Saturday Evening Post." It is "The Great Accident," by Ben Ames Williams, directed by Harry Beaumont. The plot structure of this exciting narrative makes it an ideal subject for motion picture treatment.

The fame of "The Slim Princess" as a stage play in which Elsie Janis scored one of the greatest successes of her career has lasted through a score of years. In the photoplay Mabel Normand is starred. George Ade never conceived a more humorous character than that of "The Slim Princess," who must gain in weight in order to fulfill the standards of feminine beauty in Turkey. Director Victor Schertzinger has missed no opportunities for laughs in his handling of the rich material of this story.

ARLIE MARKS MAKES HIT IN "THE BRAT"

POPULAR FAVORITE GREETED BY ENTHUSIASTIC AUDIENCE LAST EVENING.

The first appearance of the Arlie Marks Company in Peterborough this season took place at the Grand Opera House last night, and was greeted by a good house. Arlie Marks has always been a popular favorite and last night, when she took a leading part in "The Brat," her former popularity was immediately renewed. The play shown last night is at present having a very successful run in New York city and is the first royalty play to tour Canada at popular prices while still running in New York.

Tonight theatre-goers will also have the opportunity of renewing the acquaintance of Tom Marks, who will take the part of Father Tom in "The Golden Rule."

Between the acts some first-class vaudeville is put on by Lindsay E. Perrin, Chris. C. Allen, Van Orden and Dampier, Hughes and Perrin and Marcelle Gerard. The vaudeville in itself is something well worth seeing.

CHOOSING LUBRICANTS

Practical Advice Regarding Use of Machine Oils.

They Should Possess the Qualities of Adhesion and Cohesion—Mineral, Vegetable and Fish Oils All in Use—Planting Potatoes for Seed.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

WHILE possibly every care and attention is given to the mechanism of farm machinery, few, if any, give consideration to the quality of the lubricants used.

The efficiency of any power is seriously affected by poor or improper lubrication of surfaces in frictional contact, indeed, it is estimated at about 50 per cent. of the available amount of energy in useful work.

The object of lubrication is not only to reduce friction, but also to carry away whatever excess of heat may be generated, for a certain amount of work will produce a given quantity of heat, but the carrying away of the heat is only an incidental condition, for heating of the bearing should not arise.

Oils for lubricating purposes should possess two qualities—that of cohesion and adhesion. Their cohesive properties lie in the character of their molecules to cling to each other, and their adhesive quality to stick to anything else. The union of these two properties make up what is known as viscosity, that is the body of the lubricant. This in a greater degree than any other factor determines the lubricating value of the oils. While viscosity of an oil determines its value as a lubricant, fluidity indicates its adaptability to any one particular machine. It is because of the struggle between viscosity and fluidity that the same oil will not do for the heavy engine shaft, and for light weight machinery. Each requires an oil with just sufficient "body" to carry the load without being squeezed out of the bearing. Beyond this condition the more fluid and easier moving the oil the better.

A thick lubricating film of good resisting body is needed for the line shaft of an ocean liner, but a drop of the same oil would put a watch out of commission.

Practically all the lubricants now in use are of the mineral oil foundation treated to free them from acid, and to improve their suitability for special purposes. Sperm oil is specially good for high speed light machinery: for heavy bearings castor oil, but both are expensive. For great pressure at slow speed lard, tallow, and other solid lubricants are suitable. If pressure is great, and speed high, castor, sperm, and heavy mineral oils are used. For low pressure at high speed, olive, sperm, rape and refined petroleum give satisfaction.

Vegetable and fish oils are drying oils, that is, they oxidize rapidly, causing gumming or clogging of the bearings to which they are applied. A mineral oil does not oxidize, neither does an animal oil. But mineral oils have a low flash point; that is, they fire at a low temperature. Animal oils develop fatty acids; these corrode and pit the metal they are used to lubricate.

Adulterants of various kinds are added to oils and greases to give them "body." Gum, soap, lime, resin, tar, soda and free acid all have their own distinct purpose to serve. Simple tests may be applied to lubricants for quality and viscosity. To test for acid saturate a bit of cotton waste with the suspected oil, and lay it open upon the surface of polished steel or brass for twenty-four hours. If steel shows even a slight corrosion or, if the brass turns green, free acid is present. To test for gummy adulterants place a drop of oil upon a piece of glass inclined at such an angle as to permit it to flow gently down. If any gum, resins or other viscosity producing elements are present, they will be apparent by the color of the oil stream, as the adulterants deposit themselves upon the glass in the form of sediment.

A good quality of lubricant will not break down, when rubbed between the finger tips, as quickly as a poor one.

It would be economy in three ways at least to use two different kinds of oil, economy of power, of machine wear, and of oil, and in addition there would be greater efficiency.—Jno. Evans, O. A. College, Guelph.

Planting Potatoes for Seed.

This refers entirely to the production of seed potatoes, not those intended for human consumption. The growing of seed potatoes is better divided into two sections, the early and the late. For growing early potatoes of the Irish Cobbler variety the seed should be selected true to type and free as possible from any of the various diseases which affect the potato plant or tuber. These should be from 5 to 12 ounces in weight and cut up into pieces 2 ounces in weight with two eyes to the piece. They are planted about the 10th of June and are given every possible cultivation with the soil in a state of high fertility; better having been clover sod well fertilized with barnyard manure to which has been added a considerable quantity of commercial fertilizer, about 800 lbs. per acre. Thorough spraying to control leaf diseases and the Colorado Beetle should be given throughout the season. For the late seed the Green Mountain or Rural New Yorker is used. The planting is generally done about June 1st to June 5th under similar conditions to the former. In all cases it is necessary to select a soil that does not dry out during the summer time, as potatoes for seed should not be subjected to a check at any time during their growing period.

"Wise" Ladies."

In the old Saxon councils, ladies of birth and quality used sometimes to sit with the wise men. The decrees of Wightred's great council, in 694, were signed by five of the abbesses, who deliberated with the king, bishops and nobles.

For One Lone Blossom.

If you are in need of decorations and find but one lone, short-stemmed rose on your bush, do not despair. Pick the flower with as long a stem as possible. Then either tie or wire the short-stemmed blossom to a longer stem of another flower; in this way there is no waste on account of lack of stem. If you have no other flowers whose stems you can use, try a bit of the branch of the plant, or, in lieu of better, avail yourself of the hollow stem of an artificial rose.

Garnet Is January Stone.

The garnet is the birthstone for January. Consequently it is the luck stone for all born in that month. According to old authorities "the garnet exercises a calming influence and takes away anger and discord. It is likewise a sovereign remedy for hemorrhages and protects the traveler from all dangers when traveling. When the figure of a lion is engraved upon a garnet, it will protect and preserve the health of the wearer and cure him of all diseases."

Lighthouse as a Home.

The housing problem in England has reached such an acute stage that every conceivable kind of abode is being utilized for living quarters. Even old lighthouses are being used for this purpose.

One of these, the South Foreland Lighthouse, lying between Dover and Deal, has been converted into a private residence and is now for sale. This structure is about one hundred years old. The former light room has been turned into a comfortable smoking apartment.

War Expenditures In January.

War expenditures borne by Canada during January last totalled $43,800,000, of which sum $15,305,904.07 was spent in demobilization.

Is Largest Tunnel.

The longest railway tunnel on the American continent is the Rogers pass tunnel on the Rocky mountain division of the Canadian Pacific line, which is five miles in length and runs under Mount McDonald, in the Selkirk range. It was constructed at a cost of more than $10,000,000.

Potatoes' Food Value.

Potatoes differ widely in food value. It is shown that the most useful potato for food is the one with the largest amount of dry matter. When two varieties are practically equal in this respect the nitrogen they contain enters into the estimation of their feeding quality.

United States' Land Best.

British America, which consists of Canada, Newfoundland and a number of islands, has an area of 3,750,000 square miles, while the total area of the United States and its possessions is 3,743,446 square miles. Thus Britain has a little more territory, but it is largely so far north as to be of comparatively little value.

Leakage.

Ingenuity in advertisement is responsible for quite a deal of street entertainment. The latest thing in London is a large shop window in Queen Victoria street round which an unending crowd surges, attracted by two ordinary sacks of oats, the only exhibits of any kind in the spacious shop-front, except two little mice, which pop in and out of sight and occasionally nibble at the oats, which can be seen through two holes at the bottom of each bag. A notice is displayed—"Stop That Leakage," and an invitation is given to step in and inspect patent weighing machines.

A Business Puller

There is nothing new about selling goods. The same methods are in vogue, with modern modifications, as existed a decade ago.

The sale of goods is attained by four methods—by advertising, by window dressing, by talking, by giving satisfaction.

Advertising is the chief of these methods because it carries to homes by the cheapest and surest method possible, information as to what you have to sell, and attracts that general attention to your business not otherwise obtainable.

The strong points of advertising are:
Persistency to assure returns.
Continuous and well-directed publicity.
A fair price for commensurate returns.
Quality of value as against mere size of circulation.

In connection with these four strong points of advertising The Review's columns offer space at fair rates based on the quality of its circulation, and the price and results will be found such as to confirm our claim that Advertising in The Review pays.

The readers of The Review are those who appreciate a dependable local newspaper, and whose trade spells "quality" and "cash."

We'll be pleased to talk it over with you.

The Review circulates among the best homes and reaches the best of Peterboro's buying public.

HORSE RACING AFTER ITS DARK

OCCASIONALLY EVENTS ARE NOT FINISHED UNTIL ELEVEN AT NIGHT

(By Canadian Press.)

Manilla, P. I. May 4.— Horse racing after dark has become popular here and draws large crowds to the last event is not finished until after electric lighted tracks. Some times the 11:30 o'clock p.m.

From 9 o'clock a. m. until 11 p.m. on the first Sunday of every month and on all legal holidays, except during the rainy season from June to October, racing meets are held here.

The entrants are native ponies from 47 to 53 inches in height, except for a few horses imported from Australia. Some of the ponies are so small that the jockey's legs must be strapped up to prevent their feet dragging on the ground.

"Rock," a pony that was discovered hauling a carrameta or native cab here and purchased by his present owner for $250, is credited with having won $25,000 in purses on the track during the past year.

Purses range from $125 to $1,000 forthe bi gspecial races.

LINDSAY SPORTS

Enthusiasm for Baseball — Plenty Promised This Season.

(Lindsay Warder.)

There promises to be plenty of baseball in Lindsay during the coming season. Already a Junior League has been formed with the age limit at 20 years and under, but although baseball players and fans realize that this is a good venture and worthy of support, nevertheless it is felt that the Junior League is more or less a student's league, and many young fellows, under 20 or slightly over are barred from playing baseball because they do not happen to belong to the student body in Lindsay. It is also thought that the above league does not give baseball in the months when baseball is generally at its prime, namely, June, July and August, as their schedule ends on June 6th.

Consequently a meeting will be held this week (date to be announced) of all fans and players interested in organizing an Intermediate Town League, the same to be composed of four teams with no age limit. In this league it is hoped to include all young fellows under 20 who do not go to school, and do not belong to any particular organization. It will also include players too old for the Junior League, and yet not fast enough yet for the Central Ontario League.

This league it is understood would affiliate with the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association, the winner to play off with the winner of the Whitby League, or the winner of the Trent Valley League.

Hustlers Organized.

It is understood that last year's Hustler's have already decided to enter this league, and other teams desiring of entering should leave their names at the Warder office at once.

Teams in the present Junior League, who desire to continue playing baseball after their schedule is over may also enter this Intermediate League.

Seeking Information.

Arthur, three years old, was watching his cousin milking a cow. This was the first time he ever saw anybody milking. He hesitated a while and said: "Are you milking the side that gives cream now?"

One Good Point.

Jud Tunkins says one thing he admires about gasoline is that when the price goes up no one stops to worry you with explanations you can't understand.

Ostriches Biggest Birds

Ostriches are the largest feathered creatures existing and one of these birds will sometimes measure eight feet in height and weigh 300 pounds.

Irish Names.

It has often been said that were a Dublin jarvey given the Irish name of a street and asked to drive his fare at once to it, he would find himself in a veritable quandary. This in spite of the fact that all the Dublin streets at one time had their Irish as well as their English names posted up. Thurles is the latest Hibernian town to give its jarveys a bad quarter of an hour with the dual forms. The simple main street has blossomed out into Cearnog na Saorise, South Mall has become the formidable Plas Chiomhanaigh, while Nicholas street is the fearful and wonderful Bothar Chuchulainn! One is reminded of the New England lake which bears the sonorous Indian cognomen of Chargoggagogmanchoggagogcha ubunagunamaug, or something to that effect. One thing certain about that lake is that it is never called by its Indian name. Thurles please not!

The Soul Kiss

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

"Nine," spoke Adrian Pearce, indicating his floor to the elevator conductor.

"Eight, please," supplemented a mischief-eyed girl at his side. She had once done stenographic work for the young lawyer and they were on pleasant speaking terms. She emphasized the "please," and Adrian recognized an implied reproach, but he spoke, low enough for the conductor to hear.

"I said 'please' in my heart, Miss Adams, feeling duly grateful for the willing and pleasant service we all receive on the cars in this building. Do you know that I shake hands in spirit with every smiling person I meet? As upon any little tot who looks at me I bestow a mental hug and it brightens my day."

"And I am so far from babyhood!" pouted Myra Adams daringly, and left at her floor with a bewitching, though flirtatious laugh.

It was that evening that Myra mentioned Adrian to her closest friend, Adele Bartlett. There was a wide gap socially between the two girls, for Adele was an heiress, but their mothers had been close friends in their youth. Adele, sedate and lovely, for both her parents were dead, was very fond of her less fortune favored friend whose bright free ways showed a happy spirit under all circumstances.

"The only fault with Mr. Pearce," observed Myra, "is that he doesn't in the least know what flirting means. I think he is the finest gentleman I ever met. He has very little business, for they say he will never take a case unless his client is absolutely in the right. He is the soul of goodness and never seems to begrudge his services for the poor and distressed. He got me my present position."

"He must, indeed, be a model man," said Adele.

"You should know him, Adele," declared Myra; "you must know him. Somehow he is just your kind—a great thinker and so original. All he seems to care for is exerting a good influence."

But Adrian Pearce was neither uncanny nor an eccentric. There had been born in him a parity of impulse and thought that distinguished him from ordinary men. He was intuitively humane and law was to him justice sheer and simple. He was invited to the Bartlett house by Myra during a social function and there was a dreamy, satisfied expression in Adele's eyes after he had left.

Adele's fair cheeks paled and her lips tremored as Myra said one day: "Mr. Pearce is about to give up his office on account of unprofitable practice and is going to South America with some great railroad project," and when Adrian called that evening Adele found it difficult to conceal her vivid emotions. As he held her hand at parting his words bore an undertone of sadness. "I shall miss you greatly, Miss Bartlett," he said. "I shall not cease to think of you always. If I succeed I shall return."

"Oh, I so hope you will!" spoke Adele fervently, and his eyes lightened and expressed emotions that caused her to thrill and quiver. She sat alone after he had left, unable to cast off the spell his coming had evoked. In a dreamy mood akin to half somnolence she suddenly started up. To her overstrained senses it seemed as though an impalpable presence had entered the room and that she felt a soft caressing pressure upon her lips. She flushed and palpitated. Had this mysterious man in whom she was so interested, who sent his thoughts out after others to console, to cheer, wafted to her a true "soul kiss?"

A new life was born in her. She arose, ordered her automobile and followed out an urgent impulse. Only a few days before a friend, Mrs. Wynne, a widow, had told her of a just claim for a large amount she had against the wealthy former partner of her dead husband but had not the means to prosecute it. For hours Adele was closeted with this lady.

Adrian Pearce did not give up his office. There came to him the next day the widow friend of Adele. He had no knowledge of their mutual acquaintanceship. The case was placed in his hands and its merit involving a just claim aroused his truest interest and attention. He won the case and was the recipient of a large fee besides acquiring fixed professional prestige.

It was a ten days after that when he entered his office to hear voices in the inner room. Mrs. Wynne was there, and Adele. He heard the latter say:

"I must hurry away, for if Mr. Pearce met me here with you he might suspect"—and just there she came face to face with the young lawyer and flushed crimson.

"I overheard you, Miss Bartlett," spoke Adrian gravely, gently. "You sent me this client and financed the case. I am glad I can repay you, but the noble motive that impelled you to aid a struggling lawyer to his place in life I can never forget."

She swayed unsteadily under his grateful glance. Then she returned it, and in her eyes there was something that told Adrian Pearce that to his honeyed gain and fame there had been added—love.

Paid in Full

By WALTER J. DELANEY

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

For a dying man, Mark Walton was strangely jovial, cheersome and reconciled. The fiat had gone forth from his physician that his days were numbered, and when some twenty friends and relatives were invited to his house at a prescribed hour one afternoon, they stared at one another and then at the flower-decorated house, at an orchestra made up of violin, 'cello and harp in an alcove, and then through an open doorway into the capacious dining room, where a table was set gleaming with crystal and silver as though anticipatory of some rare festal occasion.

"I wonder what we are here for?" whispered a half-third cousin of their host to an equally distant relative.

"Supposed it was to say good-by to a dying man," came the low spoken response, "but the layout suggests a feast."

When dinner was announced and the guests trooped into the dining room they found Mr. Walton propped up in an invalid chair, pale and thin, but with a welcoming smile on his face. He remained at the table, but partook very sparingly of the meal, while urging his guests to enjoy a good dinner. He chatted familiarly with one and all of those present.

His niece, Estelle Bliss, a great favorite with the old man, sat at his right hand. The chair at his left was occupied by Alan Bruce. The latter was a young man in nowise related to Mr. Walton, but he had been a sort of occasional secretary for the latter off and on for a year.

"My friends," spoke Mr. Walton, when the sumptuous repast had been dispatched, "you include all the people, relatives and friends, for whom I have a warm sentiment of confidence and liking. I wish you to enjoy a pleasant evening—music and dancing and visiting together, and toward midnight when you have fully enjoyed yourselves I will meet you all in the library. There I wish to distribute my fortune among you."

There was a vast flutter among the throng. Suddenly vague hopes were raised. The envious ones looked at Estelle and Alan.

But all the innocent, gentle-hearted thought of Estelle was fidelity to this good old man while Alan considered that he had been well paid for all he had done for a generous employer, and had no right to expect any share in the announced distribution.

"My physician, Mr. Walton," pursued, "tells me I may live here a month. In another climate perhaps a half a year, so I am going away and you will probably never see me again. I want no squabbling over my small possessions when I am gone, but harmony and satisfaction among you all. I have converted my holdings into ready cash. Each of you will receive a sealed envelope containing what I have thought best and just to award you. I would prefer that none of you ever disclose the amount you have received."

Estelle and Alan drifted together, danced together, conversed together all the evening. They were very well acquainted and had become warm friends. When the good-night melody was played each one of the group passed into the library, received a sealed envelope, and Mr. Walton shook hands with them with a kindly word and they saw him for the last time, for he died on his journey South two days later.

Alan Bruce was startled and then mystified as he opened the envelope addressed to himself. It contained twenty one thousand-dollar bills. In a corner of the envelope, however, wadded up as if it had got there accidentally, was a note, or rather what was left of it. The same bore an old date. The signature was torn off it. Had been made out to "Robert Thorne," whoever he was, and was canceled by him. "Paid in full."

Alan placed the twenty thousand dollars in a safety deposit box and said nothing to anybody about it. But he did a deal of thinking. Somehow he felt that there must be some mistake. Had he got money intended for some one else. And then the mystery of the canceled note. He learned that it had leaked out that Estelle had received only five hundred dollars, and that many were censuring Mr. Walton for leaving so mean a pittance to his favorite niece. One day he met Estelle on the street.

"Mr. Bruce," she said, "I value your good opinion and I know you respected and esteemed Uncle Mark. People are condemning him because he left me only five hundred dollars. The truth is he acted most liberally, for we learned he had paid five thousand dollars father owed to a Mr. Thorne. Father is like another being since that terrible load is honorably lifted from his shoulders. Are you ill?"

No! Only electrified with a sudden illumination. In a flash Alan discerned that there had indeed been a mistake. The twenty thousand dollars and the canceled note were intended for Estelle and the five hundred dollars for himself!

He was so glad that this was revealed, so noble, so modest that in her secret soul Estelle Bliss held to the belief that he was the grandest man in the whole world. She was an heiress now, but oh, how joyfully she accepted Alan when he spoke of the love he could no longer restrain.

HUN FEELING IS UNCHANGED

German Clergy Still Talk of Day of Triumph in Store for the Fatherland.

The Glasgow Herald prints from a special correspondent some interesting information regarding the views of the German churches on the peace treaty.

What, asked the writer, is the guidance offered by the churches at this crisis in the affairs of the nation? We are in no doubt as to its character. In the Kreuz Zeitung recently Doctor Conrad, one of the ex-kaiser's chaplains, wrote a homily on the attitude which religious men should adopt toward the peace which is being "dictated to Germany." He wrote: "Possess your souls and do not despair. God in his good time will turn our sorrows into joy. Is there a German man with the fear of God in his heart who does not realize that this humiliation is but for a time and that before long the drama of the new fashioning of the earth will begin again? When that time comes Germany will rise supreme from the fire of her trials. It was in 1870-71 that began it; that was the prelude; we are now at the close of the second act. The coming third act will give us our final place and God will be with us. All I can counsel is this: Be patient. Our hour is coming. Certainly, sign the peace, for this will give us the breathing time we require and also time for reflection."

In the Kirchen Anzeiger there is a sermon by Stadt-Pfarrer Brockhaus, headed "What Is Now Our Duty?" The preacher after denouncing "the cruel and incredible terms" of the treaty, goes on: "There is a revenge which is holy and ennobles all those who nourish it in their hearts. We cannot sit down under the awful humiliation. But we must wait God's time. We must wait for him to dictate our course. He who led the German people from weakness to strength, he who once blessed our efforts in our world mission is punishing us now for our sins, but he has great work for us yet and he will see that we yet stand on the necks of our adversaries." All through these sermons dealing with the peace and the present situation generally the German clergy continuously exhort their flocks to be patient, to be steadfast during the days of tribulation. In a perfunctory sort of way they acknowledge that tribulation has come upon the people because of their sins and shortcomings, but the sins and shortcomings have nothing to do with the guilt of causing the war or with the ineffable crimes committed by Germany in the four years of its duration.

Amethyst Once Highly Prized.

On account of its fine color, play of light and capacity for polish, the amethyst once held a high rank as a decorative stone, perhaps next to the sapphire, but by reason of the discovery of large quantities in Brazil its popularity declined in Europe and consequently its commercial value declined in corresponding ratio.

Of all the quartz varieties the amethyst has been the most highly valued, and the most frequently used for the art of engraving. The deep shades are less brilliant and for this reason the artists of antiquity preferred the lighter shades. Consequently the ancient intagli occur almost invariably on the light-colored specimens so that engravings on the dark shade may be suspected as modern.

But some of the specimens of Egyptian, Etruscan and Roman engraving on amethysts are extant, among which may be mentioned the gem bearing the likeness of the Emperor Trajan captured by Napoleon when he conquered Prussia in 1806; a bust of Antonia, daughter of Mark Antony, the head of a Syrian king, which is or was in the Pulsky collection, and a superb engraving of Dioscorides, now in the national library in Paris.

Natural Enemies of Mosquito.

Dr. L. O. Howard, chief of the United States bureau of entomology, writing on his favorite theme, the [illegible] in a recent bulletin reviews the natural enemies of the insect. Among fish he mentions first the common goldfish and silverfish, which devour mosquito larvae and should be put in artificial ponds. Top minnows are great feeders on mosquito larvae, and a small species introduced from Texas and Hawaii have proved their value, while a small top-minnow of the genus Girardinus, known in Barbados as "millions," has been used successfully in other West Indian islands. Many predatory aquatic insects feed on mosquito larvae. Certain birds prey upon the adults, and bats also eat them. Many plants are popularly believed to keep away mosquitoes, among them being several species of eucalyptus, the castor oil plant, the chinaberry tree, etc. Scientific observations have not confirmed the popular idea on this subject.—Scientific American.

Swift Handling of Troops.

The Canadian national railways recently broke a speed record in the transportation of troops from one ship. The troopship Olympic docked at six o'clock in the evening with 4,900 returned soldiers aboard. Eleven special trains were made up to take the soldiers to demobilization points inland. The first of these specials got under way at 7:45 o'clock. The other trains followed at average intervals of 18 minutes. Within three hours all the soldiers were on their way for the interior. The troops averaged 445 men to a train and it took 150 cars to handle them.

Gulls in the Hencoop.

A curious custom of the Newfoundland fishermen is that of keeping seagulls of a large species as domestic fowls. They capture the young while they are nestlings, and rear them on fish, confining them in pens. Their eggs are eaten, and, for lack of a turkey or goose for Christmas, the fisherman is satisfied with a selection from his coop of fattened gulls.

LECTURE BY LOUIS JOFFE LAST NIGHT

TALKED ON THE FALL OF RUSSIA AND MODERN HAPPENINGS.

Last evening the Epworth League of George Street Church were favored with a very interesting lecture by Mr. L. Joffe. This is the first time that Mr. Joffe has spoken in this church, and he delighted those who heard him.

The first part of his talk was devoted to the fall of Russia. Mr. Joffe has written a book on this subject, and anyone wishing to learn of the true conditions in Russia will be greatly interested in Mr. Joffe's book. He gives special attention to the difficult position of the Czar on account of the intrigue and graft in the Russian court. As regards the great body of common people, Mr. Joffe showed quite clearly the disastrous effect of the sudden removal of their Czar. While the present condition of Russia is chaotic, the speaker is confident that the country will be redeemed and will become a great nation.

Of special interest was the speaker's application of the Russian situation to present-day conditions in Canada and the United States. The futility of strikes for higher wages, the undermining influence of radicals working for their own personal interests, the necessity for economy were all depicted clearly. The only solution is for the employers and the employes to get together and produce the necessities of life so that the buying power of the dollar may be raised to its former value. Money in itself is of no value. The scarcity or abundance of commodities determines its buying power. Thus, if there are one thousand bags of potatoes and one thousand dollars, a bag of potatoes will cost one dollar, but if there are only one hundred bags of potatoes and one thousand dollars, one bag will cost ten dollars.

The concluding part of the address was devoted to a description of Russian folk lore, folk songs, proverbs and traditions. One striking feature is the similarity between the sentiments of the various peoples of the world. The simplicity and love of the home life of the Russian people is shown in their songs and poetry.

Mr. Joffe very kindly answered quite a number of questions asked by the audience on various phases of his talk. At the conclusion a vote of thanks to Mr. Joffe was moved by Mr. Earl Barrie and seconded by Miss E. Dix.

SOLD TO EX-SERVICE MEN.

Ottawa, May 4. — Surrendered Doukhobor lands aggregating about ten thousand acres in the vicinity of Kamsack, Sask., were disposed of by ballot to soldier settlers under the regulations of the Federal Soldiers' Settlement Board on April 20.

Twenty-six parcels were sold and eleven farm units remain to be disposed of.

This closes out the last of the Government lands held by the Doukhobors, which gave the Dominion Government so much trouble some years ago when these people were settling on their homesteads in Saskatchewan.

MILITARY HONORS FOR FIRE VICTIMS

FATHER AND TWO SONS LOST LIVES THROUGH FIRE AT PEMBROKE

A very sad accident occurred in Pembroke on Thursday evening, when a noted citizen, Sergt.-Major Flinter and his two sons, aged ten and eleven, suffered death from suffocation, as a result of fire in their home.

The funeral was conducted on Sunday, under G. W. V. A., when the remains of the soldier, wrapped in his country's flag, was carried to his last resting place.

The Renfrew band rendered the sad martial music, while over a hundred fellow-soldiers, in uniform, followed the body of their esteemed comrade.

This cortege was followed by the remains of his only two sons, and their mourners, the boy scouts, school companions and noted citizens.

Among those present at the funeral were Major Hooper, 2nd. Battalion Carleton Place; Brig.-General Swift, D. S. O., commandant school of musketry, Ottawa; and Capt. Flinter, Ottawa.

The late Major is survived by his wife, and brothter, Capt. Flinter.

BAND QUESTION BEFORE THE G.W.V.A.

SUGGESTION THAT A VETERANS-CITIZENS BAND BE ORGANIZED.

Following the close of the splendid recital given by the Vets' band on Sunday afternoon the city band grant loomed large at the regular meeting of the Peterborough branch G. W. V. A. last night.

The executive stated that they had interviewed the members of the band after the recital and that 39 out of 40 were willing to remain with the association, provided that some steps were taken to provide them with uniforms. They pointed out that at the present time they were using their service uniforms which were all worn out.

After much discussion on the matter it was finally decided that if the city would contribute $1,000 towards the band the Great War Veterans would contribute a like sum and make it a Veteran citizen's band. The lowest cost of uniforms was figured to be about $1,600 and this was at the rate of $40 a uniform which was thought to be a fairly low estimate.

Previous to this meeting steps had been taken to arrange for a joint Veterans and Machine Gun Corps band, but it was found that the band was not allowed on the strength of the corps and this fell through.

Raising of Rents

The action of Peterborough landlords in raising rents, and giving notice to tenants, when it was impossible to get houses was also a subject of much discussion. One speaker stated that he knew of a war widow with eight children who had been given three days to get out of a house. In this particular case legal advice was sought, and the landlord compelled to give one month's notice. It was decided to interview the City Council at the next meeting of that body with a view to having some action taken to provide protection for the tenants. The members present at this meeting will be the delegation that will put the case before the city council.

There was a considerable amount of discussion on affairs of minor importance during the general business. President Muir occupied the chair.

Y. M. C. A. BOYS' DEPT. OBSERVATION TOUR

Owing to stress of circumstances the observation tour of the Boys' Department of the Y.M.C.A., which was to have been through the plant of the Canadian Packing Company on Wednesday, has been changed to the city waterworks pumping station and the C. G. E. power house. These tours, which are held every Wednesday, are of great educational value and every boy in the city is invited to attend, whether he be a member of the Y.M.C.A. or not.

All with bicycles will meet at the "Y." building as soon after school as possible, and those who have not cycles will take the street car north on George street. Mr. Ross Dobbin, superintendent of the waterworks system, will be on hand to guide the party through both plants and explain fully the process of purifying the water supply of the city and the pumping into the mains. As this is something of interest to all and it is to be hoped that the boys will take full advantage of this opportunity.

DR. JOHNSON'S

whether it was by manual labor or otherwise.

Some Man Selfish.

The second law followed closely to the first and it was the law of love. "It is not good for man to be alone," God had said. This was evident today. A man who was alone generally become self-centred and selfish, and the second person was necessary to develop that altruism of spirit. The third law was that of obedience to the Supreme Being, as exemplified by the tree of which fruit the first pair were forbidden to eat. That was religion. It could be called by many names, but religion was the relationship of man and God—the recognition of a Being who shall say: "Thou mayst and Thou mayst not."

To illustrate these three laws Dr. Johnson mentioned the famous picture of the Angelus, which, he stated, showed the three laws clearly. There was the work in the fields, the love because the two of them were there, and the religion because they stopped in their labors at the appointed hour to lift their thoughts to God in prayer.

Only One Cure.

There was only one cure he knew for the restlessness and distress of the present age, and that was the return of mankind to therecognition of these essential thoughts and principles of human existence. This would be the brotherhood of man, the federation of nations, and the city of God. It was not only seers who had seen that city, for many through the ages had caught a glimpse of it, and had suffered persecution and died rather than lose or deny it. It was only by acknowledging these three laws that today we might contribute our part to the curing of the troubles of the times and assist the world to move on to the realization of the vision of those who saw the city of God.

Man's Folly.

In the beginning God gave man the dominion over creation, but this had been lost through man's folly. Through Jesus Christ it was to be recovered. It was believed in days gone by that science was opposed to religion, and sermons had been preached attempting to reconcile the two. It was now known that the two were different pages of the same volume. Every new discovery was a step towards the dominion over nature, until the time was reached when the lightning would be harnessed to do our will the winds controlled and fields of resources opened up that were never known before.

All Work Ministry.

Dr. Johnson believed that all work should be regarded as a ministry. As long as it was filling an essential place in the world it could be regarded as a ministry. Certain conditions today called on the workers of the world for more toil and labor instead of less. The cause was the disorganization and disruption caused by the war. In Belgium and France 1,500 towns and villages had been destroyed. 450,000 homes destroyed and 2,000,000 people left without a place to rest their head. In eight lands $150,000,000,000 in property had been destroyed, and this loss could not be readjusted in six months. Britain lost 1,000,000 killed and 1,500,000 crippled. France 1,400,000 killed and 3,500,000 crippled. Austria 2,000,000 killed and 2,000,000 crippled. Russia counted her dead at 6,000,000 and Germany counted her dead at 6,500,000. This terrible loss in manpower could not be replaced immediately. It was therefore necessary to get busy and produce, so that the conditions which were almost unbearable for many would be removed, and normal conditions would be again reached. In 1919 labor in Canada lost between nine and ten million dollars and capital lost double that. In the United States in the same year labor lost 723 millions of dollars and capital lost 1223 millions. In Great Britain 64 billion working hours had been lost by the six million toilers who had their working week reduced by 6½ hours. Instead of reducing the hours of work everyone should be working overtime for conditions would stay unbearable until production had increased to meet the demands.

Optimistic of Future.

However, he felt that the restlessness was not going to continue, and as a reason for this optimism he told of the great engineering work done in Colorado in fighting the great Colorado River, which after three years had been controlled by the hand of man. He felt that men who could accomplish these feats were not going to be beaten by the times.

KILLED BY AUTO

Fourteen-Year-Old Boy Met Death in Accident

Lindsay, May 4.— An auto fatality occurred near Burnt River on Sunday when William Morgan, aged 14 years, of Burnt River, met his death.

The accident occurred about 12 o'clock noon. A car driven by Arthur Suddaby, son of Postmaster Suddaby and containing Willie Morgan and a boy named Budd, was on its way to Kinmount. When about two and a half miles from Burnt River and near the railway crossing, the auto took to the ditch and dropped into the creek, turning turtle. The occupants were pinned under the car, but young Budd was able to extricate himself. He immediately ran for assistance and a number of men hurried to the scene. The car was overturned, when it was found that young Morgan had been smothered to death. Arthur Suddaby also sustained injuries, which fortunately are not of a very serious nature, consisting principally of bruises about the body.

Dr. Johnston, coroner of Fenelon Falls, was notified of the accident, and after the jury had viewed the body, a verdict of accidental death was rendered.

RAYBESTOS CO'S FACTORY WILL BE A WELCOME ADDITION TO OUR INDUSTRIES

Employees Nearly all High Paid Skilled Mechanics—Have Large and Prosperous Factories at Bridgeport, Conn., Officers Take Part in Civic Life—Members of City Council Visit New York and Return Especially Hopeful of Securing Still Another Industry.

Mayor McIntyre, Ald. G. N. Gordon, chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee, and the city clerk returned at noon on Tuesday from New York, where they had gone on Saturday to interview two industrial companies that contemplate locating branch factories in Canada. They are reticent, in the public interest, as to who the companies are or their line of manufacture until the negotiations are further advanced, but are satisfied with the results of their visit, and are especially hopeful that one of the companies will establish a factory here if certain arrangements desired can be made.

While in the vicinity they visited the factories of the Raybestos Company, at Bridgeport, Conn., which is about fifty-five miles from New York, and a manufacturing city of between 150,000 and 200,000 population. The electors of Peterborough will vote on May 19th on the bylaw to aid this company, which will take over the Lundy Shovel and Tool building. It will be remembered that the company will purchase this property and establish their factory in it if the bylaw is carried authorizing the procuring of the Edwards' lot on Perry street and the small triangular lot north of the Lundy building from the Canadian Pacific Railway, for the company and closes Stewart street between the railway and Perry street and conveys it to the company and also fixes their assessment at $10,000.00 for ten years. The total expense to the city of providing the extra land required will be less than $2,500.00.

The Raybestos Company's factories at Bridgeport are large and prosperous. The company began in 1906 with two small machines, about four feet long. Their original plant is in the western part of the city and the two original looms are still in the factory, but very many large machines are now in the extensive buildings, and their employees number about five hundred. The factory was enlarged as the years went past and their business grew until the space available was all used in holding the large buildings. The company purchased seventeen acres on the eastern side of the city and have erected three large buildings there and now have in the two plants 100,000 square feet, or over two acres, of floor space. Their employees are nearly all men who are paid a high rate of wages.

The company is in a good financial position. Their assets amount to over $3,500,000.00, of which $3,000,000.00 represent tangible assets, and the balance trade marks and goodwill.

The Raybestos Company believe in extensive advertising, and their attention to this has been an important factor in rapidly building up their large business. This year they are advertising in twenty-three different publications with a total circulation of nearly 8,000,000. In six monthly magazines, Review of Reviews, World's Work, Century, Harper's Atlantic Monthly and Scribner's, they have thirty pages of advertising, and also use the Literary Digest, Collier's, and other magazines and many trade publications. The company publishes a monthly journal, The Silver Edge, to assist its salesman and dealers. An efficient sales organization backs up this advertising, or is backed up by it, and the result is the products are well known, demanded and appreciated. When the Co.'s Canadian branch is established here Peterborough will receive benefit from this extensive advertising, as Bridgeport does now.

A list of the motor cars and motor trucks which use Raybestos products would be a list of all the well-known machines, including the Locomobile, Packard, Peerless, Cadillac, Willys-Overland, General Motors, Chandler, Pierce-Arrow, Stevens-Duryea, Hudson, etc., and they are used by the Gramin-Berstein and other truck companies, the Moline Plow Company, Warner Gear Company, Electric Wheel Company, Timkin-Detroit Axle Company, and numerous others, and in aeroplanes.

The company manufacturers other asbestor products besides the brake and clutch lining and also motor car brakes.

A scarcity of houses is felt in Bridgeport as well as in other cities, and the Raybestos Company has erected a number of neat and comfortable houses on the east side near their eastern plant for their employees. The Peterborough visitors were impressed with the design and finish of these houses.

The Raybestos Company is not only a prominent and important one in Bridgeport, but the officers of the company take an active part in the business and civic life. Mr. Summer Simpson, the president, is chairman of the Board of Directors of the Connecticut National Bank and president of the Trustees of the Bridgeport Hospital, a commodious and important institution. He is interested in the Y.M.C.A. and on Monday was engaged in promoting a drive in aid of the local Y.M.C.A. He is also active in the Rotary Club and other organisations.

The Raybestos Company's factory will be a welcome addition to Peterborough's industries and to the rapidly growing number of Canadian branches of important United States concerns.

CROSSES FOR GRAVES OF PETERBORO'S SOLDIER DEAD ON WAY FROM KINGSTON

Exactly Indentical With Those Marking Men's Last Resting Place in France.

Through the instrumentality of the Peterborough branch of the G.W.V.A. the Militia Department has been prevailed upon to supply crosses indentical to those placed on the graves of fallen soldiers in France for the graves of soldiers who died while in service and were buried at Little Lake Cemetery. Six of these are now on the way and are expected to arrive in the near future. They are for the graves of the following soldiers:

12512 Pte. Harry Nicholls, 39th Battalion, died April 15, 1915.

7649 Pte. Robert Levoir, 2nd Battalion, died November 4, 1916.

1012451 Pte. Wm. Dickson Metherel, 207th Battalion, died March 2 1917.

Secretary Whatley received a communication from the District Record Officer, Military District No. 3, Kingston, this morning with reference to the above matter. The communication stated that at the present time crosses were only being forwarded for soldiers who died while still in the strength of the C.E.F. The matter of providing crosses for the graves of those soldiers who died after being discharged is now under consideration and it is expected that crosses for these soldiers will be forwarded in the near future.

It is expected that when the crosses arrive a special day will be set aside by the officials and members of the G.W.V.A. to have them erected. Arrangements may possibly be made to have this done on the next annual decoration day, which will be held much earlier this year than has been done previously.

DR. KAPP DENIED HAVEN IN SWITZERLAND

(By Canadian Press.)

Geneva, May 5.—Dr. Wolfgang Kapp, leader of the recent revolution in Berlin, has been refused permission by the Swiss Government to reside in Switzerland.

Kapp recently wrote from Sweden seeking approval of the Swiss government to such a plan.

Four other German notables, including two reactionary generals, also have been denied a haven in Switzerland.

ALLEGED TRUSTS AND MONOPOLIES

ENGLAND STARTS INVESTIGATION OF PAST WAR GROWTH IN INDUSTRIES

PROFITEERING COM. NAMED

ACTIVITIES OF CERTAIN ELECTRIC LIGHT COMPANIES BEING LOOKED INTO

London, May 5.—England has started an investigation of the past-war growth of alleged trusts and monopolies.

A profiteering committee which has been looking into the activity of electric light companies and lamp bulb manufacturers, in a report recently made public, says that "a trade combination does exist among electric light manufacturers in this country and exercises a powerful influence over the conduct and development of the industry."

It is known as the Electric Light Manufacturers' Association, the report says, and has been created primarily in the interest of three firms—the British Thomson-Houston Co., the General Electric Co., and Siemens Brothers. It is reported to include from 90 to 95 per cent. of the industry, to fix and regulate output, says the profiteering committee.

The prices fixed by the association, the report says, become the standard for all lamps sold in this country, whether made by the association or non-association manufacturers, or imported from abroad. Because of this standard price policy the public reap no benefit from lamps of cheaper manufacture, the advantage going wholly to distributors.

Standard vacuum lamps, now sold to the public for three shillings, the report says, could be sold at two shillings, at which price the manufacturer and the distributor would still have a satisfactory working profit.

"One and a quarter million half-watt lamps," adds the report, "sold to the public in 1919 at twelve shillings and sixpence each, were purchased in Holland by three associated manufacturers at about three shillings a lamp. They could have been sold at not more than eight shillings, which would still have left ample margin for the importers and distributors. Importers and distributors between them made profits on these lamps of something like $1,400,000 over and above what would appear to us reasonable.

"Since the largest of the three dominant firms," continues the report, "is under the majority control of an American electrical concern, there is some danger that the interests of the British lamp industry may be subordinated to American interests.

"There is a possibility of an international combination comprising British, Dutch and American manufacturers, which would be able to control supplies and dominate prices over a considerable part of the world.

"The operations of an association which so effectively controls an important industry," concludes the report, "should be subject to public supervision and control."

PRESIDENT CARRANZA IS USING AIRPLANES TO HARRASS REBELS

Revolutionists Hold Towns in Neighborhood of Mexican Capital Being Shelled From Above—Revolt Reached Momentum That Cannot be Stopped—Toss up As to Who Wins.

(By Canadian Press.)

Washington, May 5.—Apparently unable to get under way any offensive military expedition against the revolutionists, President Carranza is using airplanes to harass the rebel-held towns in the neighborhood of the Mexian capital, according to advices to revolutionary agents here.

Cuernavaca and Cuautla, in the State of Morelos, are two of the points that they have smartly bombarded, reports stated.

Differs From Others.

Leaders here say that revolution now has such momentum that it cannot be stopped and that it differs from all others not only in the high character of those who have abandoned the Carranza regime as impossible, but in the actual amount of territory controlled. Much stress is laid on the fact that Gen. Pablo Gonzales, Carranza's ablest general, has left the council of generals at Mexico City and has joined the revolution.

It is apparently certain that, although the rebel armies will provoke no fighting, they will proceed southward towards the capital and clear the country for the election which has been denied by Carranza. That is said to be the one announcement made by General Gonzales when he withdrew from the Carranza council. In order to do this it is believed that only an advance will be necessary, as the Carranza forces, with the exception of a small engagement in the Tehuantepec Peninsula, has refrained from giving battle anywhere.

Chances Even.

The outlook from the whole of the areas in control of the rebels is that there has been no reaction. There has, however, been a decided change of opinion here among officials as to the outcome of the movement. It was stated yesterday that there are even chances for the success of either of the two big factions.

The Government apparently has had additional reports as to the "ferment," as it is still referred to by officials. It was stated, therefore, that there was perfect security for United States citizens in Chihuahua and everywhere else under rebel control. The ships ordered by the State Department will proceed to Vera Cruz and Tampico as a precautionary measure, however.

The railway line from Vera Cruz to Mexico City, which was broken, has again been put in running order. This was the most reassuring information received today.

PREMIER DRURY TURNS COLD SHOULDER TO ROUND ROBIN FOR INCREASED PAY

Liberal and Labor Members of Legislature Strong for Greater Indemnity.

Toronto, May 5.— The Premier disappointed man of his friends in the Legislature last night when he flatly refused to heed the siren call of the round robin and administer a thousand-dollar boost to the sessional indemnity. Incidentally the farmer members in the main lived up to their pre-election pledges of economy by supporting the Premier. The Conservatives, with one or two exceptions, also took no part in the higher indemnity demand.

It must not be inferred that the private members were asking for increased remuneration. Far be it from them to accept remuneration. H. Hartley Dewart, the Liberal leader, placed the matter upon the high plane to which it belonged when he declared that the members were asking "reasonable recognition, not remuneration," for services rendered, and his supporters and other members who supported the demand emphasized the fact.

The matter came up while the House was in Supply on the supplementary estimates, Hon. Mr. Drury drawing attention to the demand made in the round robin, and expressing his conviction that the demand should not be pressed. The people were looking to the members of the House for an example in economy. The Liberal leader at once took up the cudgels on behalf of the signatories of the round robin. He had not signed it himself, but he was in full accord with the request. The members who submitted it were entitled to something more than the "cavalier treatment" they had received from the Prime Minister. He claimed that the request was a reasonable one, in view of existing circumstances and the expenses under which members were placed in attending the session and looking after their constituency, and wound up with an expression of the hope that Hon. Mr. Drury would reconsider.

Views of Members

Then followed an hour of confessions. One by one the members who had signed the round robin got up and made a clean breast of it. M. M. Macbrade, Labor member for South Brant, marvelled at "the audacity of the Premier standing up and setting his judgment against [illegible] per cent. of the members [illegible] number who signed the circular [illegible]

PORT HOPE FREIGHT DERAILED TODAY

SERVICE BETWEEN HERE AND LAKE SHORE TOWN INTERRUPTED FOR SOME TIME

The 7 o'clock G.T.R. freight from Port Hope was derailed last night one mile east of Millbrook from causes unknown. Six cars of coal were involved and a shipment of about ninety dozen eggs which were badly damaged by the shock. The line was completely blocked and it was necessary to transferr the passengers from the 9.14 train from Peterborough to Port Hop last night and also the 8.20 train from Port Hope this morning. Howver, the 8.10 train this morning from Peterborough for Port Hope was able to get through to its destination, after some delay.

The Lindsay auxiliary was in attendance, and although the line to Port Hope is now clear for traffic it is still on the scene of the accident picking up cars.

REORGANIZE POLISH CABINET.

Newspapers Predict This Step—Socialists Demand Peace.

Warsaw, May 5.—A reorganization of the Polish cabinet in the near future is predicted by the newspapers of this city, which give as the reason the opposition aroused by the government's peace policy. Socialists are making insistent demands for peace, and have asked that they be recognized in government appointments.

Premier May Resign.

The resignation or dismissal of Stanislas Patek, the Premier, and Finance Minister Grabski is considered almost certain by newspapers. Count von Tarnow, who was sent by Austria as ambassador to the United States in 1916, but who was not received there, is mentioned as M. Patek's successor.

Both Socialist and National Democratic parties are opposing the government over the insistence upon Boriso as the seat of a peace conference with the Russian Bolsheviki. They say this is all that remains in the way of opening negotiations.

NAVAL STORY DECLARED ABSOLUTELY FALSE

(By Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, May 5.—Absolute denial of the story credited to the Halifax Echo, which said that the Government proposed carrying out the naval program recommended by Admiral Lord Jellicoe, was made this morning by Hon. C. C. Ballantyne, Minister of Marine.

"The story is absolutely false and a pure fabrication from beginning to end," said the Minister.

BILL AIMS TO END SUGAR SPECULAT'N

BANS RESALES EXCEPT UNDER GOVERNMENT RULES—PRICE REDUCTIONS

MEASURE IS APPROVED OF

STIFF PENALTY CLAUSE $10,000 AND TWO YEARS IN THE PENITENTIARY

Washington, May 5.—A bill which prohibits speculative resales of sugar among large dealers, except under rules to be prescribed by the Attorney General, was introduced in the House by Representative Howard of Oklahoma. The measure was approved by the Department of Justice.

The Department of Justice has come to the conclusion that additional legislation is necessary to reduce sugar prices. Mr. Howard said adding that it believes the blame for the present prices rests on the practice of speculative resales. Penalties of the bill are fixed at 10,000 fine, two years' imprisonment, or both.

"There is no one subject today that is disturbing the minds of the citizens of this country more than the extreme price and unequal distribution of sugar," said Mr. Howard. "Every family and every person is interested. There is no doubt that the element of speculation that has entered into the dealings in and the distribution of this commodity has had a very material effect in raising the price of it to the consumer.

"For some time the Department of Justice through the Food Administration and the Attorney General, has been wrestling with this question and moving every effort toward a more equitable distribution and the elimination of speculation and the curbing of the profiteer. Speculation has very materially increased as the result of resales within the trade.

"The Department of Justice has been unable to meet this situation because of inadequate legislation the only means now provided being the licensing system. With the declaration of peace or the repeal of war measures, the licensing system would automatically become obsolete and of no value. This would leave the people of the country entirely at the mercy of the sugar speculators.

"For this and other reasons I have introduced a measure seeking to curb this speculation and to remedy the handicap under which the Department of Justice is now laboring. The measure is largely the result of the special effort the Department of Justice has been and is making to regulate the distribution of and the price of this commodity."

WHO WILL REPRESENT CANADA IN STATES?

QUESTION IS REFERRED TO IN BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS

London, May 5.— A statement will be made shortly on behalf of the Government regarding Canadian representation at Washington, it was announced in the House of Commons today. It was also stated that the Franco-Canadian commercial convention had been denounced at the instance of the Canadian Government. It was further announced that the British Government was unaware whether Canada desired a further arrangement. Percy Hurd suggested the matter might be postponed until after the Imperial Conference, when all the nations of the Empire could have considered the question of joint negotiations.

FALSE FIRE ALARM

At one-thirty this afternoon somebody saw smoke in the vicinity of the Grand Trunk tracks up above Smith street and turned in the fire alarm. The department made a quick run to the supposed grass fire but when they reached the scene it was found that the employes of the railroad were burning fires along the tracks and this was the cause of all the smoke.

WORTHY OF SUPPORT.

THE SALVATION ARMY'S coming jubilee will be, as usual, accompanied by a self-denial week campaign, which has two objects—to provide for the work at home, and to aid the work in sixty-six countries that cannot help themselves. And the objective is well worthy of support from all classes, sorts and conditions of men, even as the Army itself carries its Christian endeavor into almost every clime and among many different races. Just think of it! This religious and self-denying organization, which first saw the light in the slums of Whitechapel, London, England, and had the tenacity to abide the shock of ridicule, and even abuse, carries now its banner into nearly evry corner of the earth, where it is accepted as an Army with a God-given mission.

The writer well remembers the Salvation Army's first appearance in London with a self-appointed work at that time left severly alone by the college graduated gentlemen of the broadcloth—that task of going into the highways and byways of darkest London and preaching the Gospel to men and women sunk deep in crime and vice and depravity. These people the Church could not, or at any rate did not, reach, and General Booth found those means of doing so which we now find embodied in the principles governing that Salvation Army organized by him.

At its inception, this organization's methods of attracting the rougher and more degraded elements of society to hear the Gospel preached were not taken either seriously or kindly, and in London it was customary that their barracks should be protected by the police. Their methods for reclaiming the lower elements of society were so contrary to those of the orthodox Church that persecution followed. Salvation lads and lassies as they then called them in England, were even physically maltreated at times, and here and there a business man who happened to fall a convert to them even suffered property damage.

However, the Salvation Army has lived down all this the organization has grown into mammoth proportions and invaded continents and countries, until today it is a world-wide institution for good, accepted as such by people, Church and State. Its efforts are in themselves Christian endeavors accentuated with self-denial and sacrifice, the half of which is never told. And above all its work is founded upon the Bible's teachings, and authenticated by the life of Christ.

For twenty-five years this organization's self-denial appeal has been an annual institution. Royalty, governors, leaders in Parliament, the Judiciary, business men, churches of all denominations, civic authorities and the public, irrespective of race, color or creed, have endorsed it and accepted it as personal to themselves in the gifts they have made. Let us hope this year of grace will see donations to this commendable work measure full, heaped up and overflowing. It might be interesting to mention here that the self-denial fund of the Salvation Army goes, among other purposes, towards the maintenance of the following:

Maternity Homes for poor mothers and their babies.

Children's Homes, not "orphanages" or "institutions," but small homes where parental care can be most closely approximated.

Rescue oHmes for wayward girls and unmarried mothers and their babies.

Police court work, where men and women not habitual criminals, are taken in hand and induced to go straight, and followed up.

Women's Shelters for temporary care of dependent cases.

Workingmen's Homes and Shelters, where men may have clean beds and decent surroundings at nominal charge, or, if they have not the price, free.

Free Labor Bureau. General oHspitals. Home Mission Department. Hospital Visiting Bands.

Lost and missing friends world-wide inquiry.

Military hostels for soldiers and dependents.

Military social service district visitors.

Training college for candidates for officership.

Young people's work.

In the words of His Majesty the King, "the Salvation Army are to be congratulated upon the mighty work of a system founded by General Booth. By its work of love and mercy, both in peace and war, it has become honored and endeared to the hearts of the world's nations."

PUBLIC WELFARE.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Social Service Council of Ontario will be held this year in Hamilton, May 9, 10, 11 and 12.

The Canadian Conference on Public Welfare has been in existence for nineteen years. Previous to 1917 it was known as the Canadian Conference of Charities and Corrections. The Conference exists for the purpose of free discussion and consideration of Canadian social problems. "The objects shall be to discuss the problems of public welfare in all its relations to secure and disseminate information and promote more effective methods of social progress." The Conference passes no motions and carries on no propaganda. Membership is open to all interested in these objects upon payment of the annual membership fee of 1.00.

Canadian social problems are today complex in their ramifications, and any movement to solve them and draw people together in amity and co-operation for this nation's uplift should be generously supported. The aim of this organization is to have a local council in every centre in Ontario, and it plans to have at least four distinct provincial secretaries to insure efficiency in organization and effort. Their program is one which should commend itself to all right-thinking men and women. It includes child welfare, public health, reconstruction, the abolition of patronage in politics, enforcement of all laws bearing on morals. The method of operation is vested in committee on each of these lines of work and on publicity and finance, both in the provincial and local councils.

The Council's president is Right Rev. J. F. Sweeney, D.D., Bishop of Toronto. Rev. Gilbert Agar is general secretary, and Mr. George B. Woods honorary treasurer.

EXPORTS OF ELECTRICAL APPARATUS.

CANADA IMPORTED eleven million dollars' worth of electric apparatus during the fiscal year 1919, while its exports reached only two million dollars. And so we again see the need of the made-in-Canada policy in this connection. However, Canada is improving in regard to its electrical apparatus export trade, and a movement for the expansion of this great modern industry is under way. Locally, the C. G. E. has arranged for large extensions to its already large plant. The adverse electrical trade balance as between Canada and the United States shows the need for this country's quickening in manufacture, and the growth of such industries as the C. G. E. is a desirable factor in the future of Canada.

The Electrical News, treating of this subject, gives the following interesting figures:

"Imports of American electrical goods of this kind have more than doubled during the last five years. In 1915 they were $5,137,333. Imports of electric supplies from other countries during the past year were:: Great Britain, $88.778; France, $3.083; Spain, $19,629; Sweden, $6.480. In January of the present year Canada imported $953,361 worth of electric and gas fixtures, of which $930,773 came from the United States. Canada is also becoming quite an exporter of electrical apparatus. In 1915 these exports were valued at $97,-870; in 1919 they were valued at $2.167,545.

"Though the manufacturing of electrical apparatus is one of the newer of the Canadian industries, it is making satisfactory progress. The report of the Bureau of Statistics for 1918 shows that there were sixty-eight plants in operation throughout the Dominion, forty-two being in Ontario, thirteen in Quebec, seven in Manitoba, three in British Columbia, two in Alberta and one in Saskatchewan. The total capital investment for the Dominion was put at $43,285,405. The total investment is divided among the provinces as follows:: Ontario, $26.426.129; Quebec, $16.525.454; Manitoba, $253,026; British Columbia, $42,881; Alberta, $19,736; Saskatchewan, $18,179. The number of employes is given as 8,862, while the salaries and wages paid during the year totalled $8,456,705.

"The total selling value of all articles produced at the works in 1918 was $30,045,399, the value of the principal products being: Dynamos, generators and converters, $1,503,433; transformers, $2,291,874; switchboards, panels, etc., $990,898; motors, $2,727,673; storage batteries, $213,634; primary batteries, $1,397,-635; incandescent lamps, $1,525,193; insulated wires and cables, $5,154,984; other electrical machinery, $1,-738,085; carbons, $1,362,666; other miscellaneous products, $8,492,643."

STANDARDIZING SHOES.

GREAT BRITAIN during the war established control over shoe prices by stamping the prices on the soles, insisting that they should be free from all adulterants. This scheme, which the public welcomed and under which approximately 25,000,000 pairs of boots and shoes were made, was withdrawn in April, 1919, when the War Office gave up control of the civilian boot trade.

The organization of British manufacturers realizes that the war-time boot scheme gave the public boots and shoes in considerable varieties of styles and of standard quality and of undoubted reliability, and they have expressed a willingness to reintroduce the scheme on a voluntary basis, which has been agreed to.

Such a scheme might be put into effect here; it would at least leave no question open as to whom is responsible for prices and qualities. Still, so far as one can see the best method for control is to allow the law of supply and demand to operate, with the public regulating the latter by refusing to pay excessive prices.

CONSTRUCTIVE CRITICISM BADLY NEEDED

CONSTRUCTIVE CRITICISM is so rare that many critics hardly know of it. They are hardly aware that there is any other criticism than the kind they write. Some of them may be surprised to learn that there is a sort of criticism too high for them ever to reach.

Matthew Arnold is ready with some good advice, however, when he says: "Juding is often spoken of as the critic's own business; and so in some senses it is; but the judgment which almost insensibly forms itself in a fair and clear mind, along with fresh knowledge, is the valuable one. And thus knowledge, and even fresh knowledge, must be the critic's great concern for himself; and it is by communicating fresh knowledge and letting his own judgment pass along with it, that he will generally do most good to his readers."

The constructive critic must add to the world's stock of knowledge of ideas, he must shed light on the composer; he must help the artist to a higher development.

THE CONCEIT OF LUDENDORFF

The Paris correspondent of The Times transmits a French view of the personality of General Ludendorff learned from General Buat, recently appointed chief of general staff in the peace organization of the French army. The correspondent writes:

General Buat is well qualified to pass a verdict upon Ludendorff, for after resisting with decisive success Ludendorff's furious onslaughts on the Montague de Reims in the summer of 1918, he was summoned to general headquarters to take an active part as major general in the offensive operations which led to the defeat of Germany.

General Buat says he is amazed by Ludendorff's conceit and continues: "Ludendorff alone struts, he alone has planned, prepared and directed everything. Over and over again he has saved the fatherland, and if Germany finally came to ruin it was simply because his advice was not followed. He not only tramples upon his fellow workers, but also delivers history's verdicts upon his own efforts.

"Ludendorff, if he is proud of himself, is even more proud and conceited of his country. Germany, to him, is every country which has ever ben trod by a German. She was prepared for victory, so well prepared that morally she was invincible. Arguing thus, he proves that since Germany was invincible, the fact that she was defeated was due to the failure of some of her leaders to carry out their duty. The army has obviously not been open to this suspicion; it is the country itself which is guilty, and, therefore, its Government leaders.

"His patriotism is almost mystic. His faith in the quasi-divine mission of Germany explain his obstinacy and his capacity for quiet decision. This also explains his innate hatred of all who in history have in any way opposed the Hohenzollern policy. He has for such the true believer's hatred of the heretic. He is as infantile in his spirit of revenge as he is in his pride.

Absolutely Blind.

"With regard to events Ludendorff remains stricken with absolute blindness. The origin of the reaction against militarism still is unknown to him. He still thinks his people made because they are badly led. He has turned prophet, and, like a new Moses, has given his people commandments. If necessary the German must go once more toward his death in battle in order to regain all that he has lost.

"Let us beware lest the voice of the old quartermaster-general find too soon a faithful echo. There are many symptoms to show that his popularity is returning. The time is not far distant when again the people will press around him, showering flowers upon him and giving him the incense of their cheers."

After recalling Ludendorff's reception by the crowd outside the Reichstag on November 13, General Buat continues:

"This 'gambler,' as he has been called, knows quite well that for at least a quarter of a century Europe will be shaken with 'Danube fever.' He won't hurry himself. He'll wait his chance, and if necessary he will make it, for he's a good organizer. Who knows if in the troubles which the future has in reserve for Europe there may not be room for a German, and, perhaps, even a Europan, dictator? Who knows if the liberators of Bolshevik Russia may not be the first servants of this great man of ambition?

THE POTATO CROP

The potato is one of our most important food crops, and yet it is one that very often does not receive the attention it should. It is the practice of many farmers to leave the planting of potatoes until practically all other crops are in. With the exception of, perhaps, some parts of the Maritime Provinces this late planting means a much smaller yield than there would be if the planting were done before the middle or by the middle of May. But the end of May or the beginning of June the seed potatoes have sprouted so much that when these are broken off at planting time the new shoots will not come on with the same vigour as they did early inthe season. Furthermore, it is important for the potato to get a good root system before the hot weather sets in.

It is of the greatest importance to use good seed. Two lots of seed of the same variety which look very much alike may give a difference of three hundred or more bushels an acre in the crop, as has been shown in experiments at the Experimental Farm, Ottawa. In 1919, for instance one lot of Irish Cobbler yielded at the rate of 378 bushels per acre and another 37 bushels per acre. The best Green Mountain stock yielded 330 bushels per acre and one of the poorest 46 bushels per acre.

If possible, one should know where the seed was grown the previous year that he is about to use. If it came from a crop, the plants of which grew vigorously until cut down by frost, then, if free from disease, it will, as a rule, yield a much better crop than if it is from a crop, the plants of which withered in the middle of summer and the tubers lay in hot soil the rest of the season. This year when the price of potatoes is so high there will be a temptation to use small potatoes for seed. If these small potatoes come from a good crop the previous year the results are likely to be satisfactory if the season is favorable, but if they are from a small crop the previous year when the plants dried up early the plants this year are likely to be weak and the yield not very good. Good sized sets of from one and a half to two ounces have been found the most satisfactory taking one year with another although if the season is particularly favorable smaller sets will produce a good crop, but one cannot tell what the seasonwill be, hence it is better to be onthe safe side.

The distance of planting which has beenfound most economical in most places in Canada is, rows two and a half to three feet apart and sets twelve to fourteen inches apart in the rows. While quite shallow planting has given the highest average yields at Ottawa, it is necessary to plant about four inches deep for field culture to enable one to harrow before the potatoes are up without pulling up the sets.

The varieties which have been most generally satisfactory in Canada are Irish Cobbler as an early potato and Green Mountain as a main crop or later variety. Other varieties which cannot be distinguished from Green Mountain and are included in the Green Mountain group are Gold Coin, Uncle Sams, Wee MacGregor and Delaware. The Dooley of the Rural group has done well in the warmer parts of Ontario, and in Coast climates Burbank is also popular.

BELGIAN INDUSTRIES REPORTED AS BOOMING

There is a Heavy Demand in All Lines

The following summary of the market situation in Belgium was recently published by the Revue du Travail, a Government organ issued in Brussels:

Coal.—Dmand is great. Home demand alone exceeds production. Application of eight hour day is causing decrease in production.

Coke.—Shipments are irregular, due to lack of transportation facilities.

Metallurgical Industries.—Lack of blooms, billets and coke have cut down production. Demands are heavy.

Mechanical Construction.—Orders booked and pending insure activity for many months to come. Manufacturers are seeking to stabilize workers' wages so that large contracts now pending can be closed. Manufacturers of railway equipment, boilers, machine tools, etc., are very active. Shortage of skilled workers is interfering with production in Ghent and several other districts. Many of these workers have gone to France. Contracts are being made in some cases on a cost plus percentage basis because of uncertainty of costs. Plants repairing bicycles and automobiles are extremely busy owing to the long delays in delivery of new cars.

Ceramic Industries.—Brick manufacturers are finding good demand, and if sufficient coal can be obtained they anticipate large production this spring. Porcelain and earthenware products are greatly in demand and production increasing. Good quality coal demanded from Germany by the treaty is anxiously awaited. Exportation to France suffers from inadequate transportation facilities.

Glass Industries.—Lack of coal is limiting production. Demands are far in excess of the supply.

Chemical Industries.—Sulphuric acid is much in demand both at home and abroad. Soap manufacturers have recently received large orders from the Netherlands, England, Switzerland, France and Luxemburg. Difficulty is being experienced in obtaining raw materials. Exports as yet are very small.

Artificial silk production is increasing, but is still unable to meet more than a fraction of the demand.

Textile Industries.—Jute factories are working two shifts for the most part. Demands are great for cotton yarn. No deliveries on new orders are being made in less than ten weeks. Linen yarn situation is becoming more and more serious, due to lack of flax. Hemp is being increasingly used in place of flax, which is exceedingly expensive. It is hoped that the opening of trade with the Russian co-oprative societies will mean the arrival of some much needed Russian flax. Produc-

GAVE THANKS FOR ARMISTICE

Fervent Gratitude to God Was First Thought of the Gallant Defenders of Verdun.

The artillery fire died out, and there was a pause that seemed like the sudden end of the world. Then from the 40 bells, high in the towers of the old cathedral at Verdun, pealed forth those silvery tones that proclaimed again, "Peace on earth." The armistice had come.

Slowly the great doors of the cathedral opened and in rushed 600 allied soldiers. Doctor Maurer of the Red Triangle, says a writer in Association Men, quietly walked to the altar rail and knelt there. Captains, lieutenants and soldiers reached for the bell ropes, and he feared the opportunity for religious service was lost. But they saw the lonely figure and came into the choir space. As he rose all was quiet.

"Boys," he said, "I believe we all want to sing and that we ought to sing the Doxology."

At its close Doctor Maurer raised his hands, and Mohammedans, Catholics, Protestants and Jews bowed their heads and fell on their knees. Amid the ruins 600 soldiers knelt—Mohammedans bumping their heads on the stones, Catholics devoutly crossing themselves, and Jews and Protestants with hands clasped, faces shining and eyes lifted.

Doctor Maurer led in that everwonderful prayer, "Our Father Which Art in Heaven." He then suggested that the Americans sing, "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," while the English sang "God Save the King." At the close of the singing the French soldiers pushed forward and sang, as only Frenchmen can sing, the "Marseillaise."

The French general came forward and took Doctor Maurer's hands. "I want to thank you," he said, "for leading these men on this occasion of grace to offer praise to God for the deliverance of France and for the safety of the world."

OLD TURKISH TRADE UNIONS

Guilds Formed of Members of Various Industrial Vocations Common in Constantinople.

Whatever may be the eventual government of Constantinople, the countless guilds or corporations created by members of the various industrial vocations followed by the population will probably respond slowly to the change. In Constantinople, says a writer on Turkish life, every trade and calling has its own union, many of which are of long ancestry: the esnaf, or guild, of the shoemakers, for example, is said to have been granted power to judge and punish its own members for public offenses as long ago as the sixteenth century, in return for some service which it then rendered Suleiman the Magnificent. Organized for the common benefit as traders or workers, the members of the guilds are admitted irrespective of race or religion so long as they follow that particular occupation. The business of the organization is conducted in lodges, the officers of which have been held responsible for the good behavior of members. Although future conditions in Constantinople will doubtless modify them, the esnafs will probably continue a power.

Schools of Dunkerque.

One of the things that deeply impressed the company of journalists from some twenty different nations who recently visited Dunkerque in a party was the story of the public schools. Dunkerque, although it escaped occupation, was under constant bombardment; the enemy at one time and another had the city under fire by land, sea and air, but, except for a short time in the beginning when the buildings were used for war purposes, the schools of Dunkerque, like those of Reims, continued in session, and new schoolhouses were built. Whenever the city was bombarded, the pupils, big and little, marched to the cellar in orderly procession, and sometimes the entire session was held there. If a schoolhouse was partly shattered, it was repaired at once, and school promptly resumed; nothing, in short, was allowed to interfere with the continuity of the schools of Dunkerque.

Orchid Hard to Secure.

Nearly all the orchids found in Burma can be grown with a little care and attention in private gardens. There is one exception, a sweet-smelling species called tazin by the Burmese, and which is usually brought to market in Christmas week in Rangoon. It only seems to flower in the most malarious and least frequented localities, and at a time of the year which is the tigers' mating season, and when they are most dangerous to human beings. It is in great demand by Burmese and sells for its weight in silver.

CAR JUST KEPT ON MOVING

Lucky for Sleeping Occupants That the Road Had Been Cut Up by Heavy Wagon.

I recall a funny motoring incident that might have turned out decidedly otherwise if it had not been for a mere chance, writes a correspondent. It occurred in the country during the early spring.

A young fellow and his sister were returning in the wee small hours from a dance in a neighboring town. He was driving a flivver. They were both very tired, and finally they both dropped off to sleep.

It so happened that late the day before a heavy farm wagon had passed that way, leaving deep ruts in the mud, and during the evening these had frozen solid. The car got into these ruts and ran along them with no one guiding it for some time. The tracks turned several corners and finally turned into a farmyard and went into the barn.

The fliv turned the corners and followed the tracks into the yard. It was going straight on and would have smashed into the barn door had not the girl waked in time to see the building looming up just in front of them. Realizing the situation immediately, she jammed on the brake and stopped the car a few feet from the closed door.

I am assured that this is a perfectly true story.

KNOWS NO NORTH OR SOUTH

Southern Doughboy Who Fought in France Is Strong for the Appellation "Yank."

The monicker, Yank, is going to stick. Just read what this fellow, who was born south of Mason and Dixon's line, writes:

"I come from a line of 'rebels' who boast that they did not surrender. Until I was quite a husky chap I believed that 'd—— Yankee' was one word and 'Republican' its synonym, and knew the 'rebel yell' as a varsity boy knows his college yell. Before the war I wore a slouch hat, rode horseback and shot squirrels. I still say cawn bread, think Dixie should be our national air, that Robert E. Lee was the world's greatest general, and Jefferson Davis, suh, the world's greatest statesman.

"But, speaking for myself and a not overly small bunch of fellow 'rebels,' I am exactly satisfied with the honest, hard-fisted, firm-jawed and seemingly inevitable nickname of Yank, and say, with one of the papers back home:

"'Let Yank be the official battle name of our boys, and the "rebel yell" their official battle cry.'"

In truth, the South and the North are welded.—Stars and Stripes.

Gem's Romantic History.

Truly romantic is the story of the Braganza diamond, a stone of 1,680 carats, and "as large as a goose's egg" which, for more than a century, has been the proudest possession of the Portuguese crown. This amazing stone, which Mr. Streeter, the great authority on gems, has valued at £58,000,000, was picked up by three Brazilian outlaws in the half-dried bed of the Abaite river, in the province of Minas Geraes.

The outlaws took the stone to the nearest village priest, who obtained access for them to the governor, into whose possession it was given. The diamond, the largest and finest hitherto found, was dispatched to Lisbon, with the result that the three outlaws received the royal pardon and a rich reward, while the padre to whose friendly offices they owed their good fortune was given high preferment in the church.

Flower Gardens of Holland.

It was only after the fall of Constantinople in 1453 that Holland became such a gay land of flowers as it now is. Many Dutchmen went to the East during the years of the great crusades, and those of them who loved beautiful things brought seeds with them. When these were planted in the rich soil of Holland such wondrous flowers appeared as had never before been seen in that country. The people became wildly enthusiastic over the new colors and scents and foliage brought to them from the East, and in Holland there sprang up a great love for gardening.

Peanut New Important Crop.

The peanut has accomplished wonders for agricultural development, and has increased production by acres and doubled the value of land in many sections. It similarly helped Alabama through the crisis when the appearance of the weevil played havoc in the cotton fields of that state. It has done well throughout the South, and Virginia, which formerly stood first in its production, has sunk to fifth place.

The peanut oil industry has added to the value of the crop, and this year the total harvest and value were the greatest ever recorded, in spite of a reduction in acreage. The once despised peanut has proved itself a valuable agricultural asset to the South and the country, and the end is not yet.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Everyone There Named Levy.

There is a peculiarity about Little Tancook Island, Lunenburg county, Nova Scotia, which is not generally known. Nearly all the residents are named Levy, and only a few years ago all the residents bore that name. In the majority of cases the given or Christian names is taken from the Old Testament. The Levys claim to be direct descendants of the men who followed the fisherman's calling on the shores of Galilee in the time of Christ.

STARTED IN JOKE

Explanation of Story of Roosevelt's Hard Drinking.

Colonel Informed Group of Newspaper Men How the Rumor Originated—Jesting Remark Caused All the Trouble.

Few things in Colonel Roosevelt's later life are fresher in the public memory than his suit against a Michigan editor who accused him of drunkenness, writes John J. Leary, Jr., in McClure's. The unfortunate editor, unable to produce a scintilla of proof, admitted his fault, and so far as the records go, the matter was disposed of. There was nothing developed, however, to show where the tale starter or what foundation, if any, it might have had.

Colonel Roosevelt, however, had an explanation. He gave it to us one afternoon in the trophy room in Oyster Bay; when passing the cigars around, he remarked that he would vouch for the quality. "They must be good," he remarked, "for they're some of Leonard Wood's. I never smoke myself, so I have to rely on the judgment of others."

"Did you ever smoke?" some one asked.

"There is where that story of my drinking started," he continued, not hearing the question or ignoring it.

"You see, when I would decline a cigar, saying I did not smoke, folks would often ask, in a joking way: 'What are your bad habits?' In the same spirit I would reply 'Prize fighting and strong drink.'

"Now, it so happens that the Lord in his infinite wisdom elected to create some folks with whom it is never safe to joke—solemn asses who lack a sense of humor. I am very fond of that story of Sidney Smith's who, playing with his children, stopped suddenly, saying: 'Children, we must now be serious—here comes a fool.' You know the kind he meant—those poor unfortunates who must take everything said to them literally.

"One of these to whom I made that remark said: 'Roosevelt, I hear drinks hard.' The other fool replied, 'Yes, that's true. He told me so himself.'

"And so it went."

"That is all there ever was to the talk of my drinking. From that start it spread and spread until, in self-defense, I was compelled to take action to stop it. Some folks have said I went out of my way to find a little editor who could not defend himself. The fact is, he was the one editor I could hold to account. There were and are editors nearer New York I gladly would have sued under like circumstances, but they knew better than to print what they knew was untrue. Had any one of them done so I would have hauled them up short, and with much more glee than I did the Michigan man, for the men I have in mind have real malice toward me, and he, I am satisfied, had none.

"We parted good friends. I certainly had nothing against him. In his zeal to do things, he put in print what shrewder and really malicious men who would harm me if they could, dare not do. I believe he was honestly sorry when he found his error.

"However, the thing had its value. We're never too old to learn, and I learned to be careful with whom I cracked the simplest joke. Thank God, there are many you can joke with in safety. If we couldn't laugh once in a while what a world this would be! It wouldn't be a world—it would be a mad-house."

Avoid All Form of Worry.

Worry is the skeleton that befouls many a secret chamber. To be sure it may be difficult to forestall the monster. A moment's unguarded speech may occasion the loss of friendships that can never be regained. A hasty decision may mean the loss of fortune. The indiscretion of friends may put us in jeopardy for the rest of our days. There is occasion enough to be alarmed when such things happen. The mind seems to revert its troubles as water does to its levels. If these things are permitted to remain as the creaking occupants of the mind, the result will be worry and mental friction. Like sand in the gears it will wear out the mental power and make people old before their time. You dare not allow your mental life to be sapped by friction. Exchange.

How Coal Is Tasted.

Coal sold on the basis of heating value is tested by the United States bureau of standards by the bomb calorimeter. A thirtieth of an ounce of coal is enclosed in a strong steel capsule, oxygen under high pressure is introduced, and, this bomb being placed in the calorimeter, the coal is ignited electrically. The heating effect is calculated from the rise of temperature of the water in the calorimeter. Coal samples of known heating value have been prepared, and are supplied to persons using the calorimeter to enable them to check their own results.

An Election Bet.

It was at the time of the presidential election. There were two boys, great chums, who expected to be married soon. One was a Republican, the other a Democrat. This young Republican was so sure of Hughes that he told his chum if his man lost he would go without a shave a week before and a week after the wedding. He lost, and was married before a large crowd, as grizzly as a bear. He almost lost his bride over this episode.

Two young women and four young men, students or graduates of Queens University, are leaving shortly for foreign mission field.

Famous Coffee House So'd

NEVER before have so many famous estates and ancient landmarks of England been offered for sale as at the present time. In a recent issue of a London paper were put up half a dozen castles known from one end of the country to the other, and some of them celebrated in history. A place having many literary and political associations which recently changed hands was the property in Blue Ball Yard, St. James street, London, which included the Cocoa Tree Club. Originally an offshoot of the Tory Chocolate House of the days of Queen Anne, it became one of the most noted political headquarters in England. There is a reference to it by Horace Walpole in 1746, which proves that by that time it must have become firmly established. He writes: "The Duke has given Brigadier Mordaunt the Pretender's couch on condition that he rode up to London on it. 'That I will, sir,' said he, 'and drive it till it stops of its own accord at the Cocoa Tree.'" It must not be inferred from the name that the Cocoa Tree was a temperance house. Like its contemporaries, Almack's, Brooke's and White's, [illegible] as coffee houses, it was the scene of notable orgies and [illegible].

In the social records of that period no figure stands out more prominently than Charles James Fox, one of the most reckless gamblers of his age, as well as an orator and statesman of the very highest rank. Walpole writes that in the debate on the Thirty-nine Articles, Fox did not shine, and continues: "Nor could it be wondered at. He had sat up playing at hazard at Almanack's from Tuesday evening, the 4th, until 5 in the afternoon of Wednesday the 5th. An hour before he had recovered £12,000 he had lost and by dinner, which was at 5 o'clock, he had ended by losing £11,000. On the Thursday he spoke in this debate; went to dinner at half-past eleven at night; from thence to White's, where he drank till seven the next morning; thence to Almanack's, where he won £6,000, and between three and four in the afternoon he set out for Newmarket for the races. His brother Stephen lost £11,000 two nights after, and Charles £10,000 more on the 13th. So that in a few nights the two sons of Lord Holland, the oldest not yet 25, lost some £32,000."

Fox occupied lodgings close to Brooke's and as soon as he rose, which was naturally very late, he went to the club where his political associates would gather to discuss their plans. A contemporary writer says: "His bristly black person, and shaggy breast, quite open and rarely purified by any ablutions, was wrapped in a foul linen nightgown, and his bushy hair disheveled. In those cynic weeds and in epicurean good humor did he dictate his policies." His whole time was divided between the gambling clubs and the House of Commons. Like every other gambler, he was frequently hard up, lacking even the odd shillings to supply his daily needs. He might lose a thousand pounds or ten thousand pounds, which he very frequently did, and then have to borrow some loose change from the waiter. There is a well authenticated story that on one occasion he played cards with Fitzpatrick at Brooke's from ten o'clock at night until nearly six the next afternoon, a waiter being employed to stand beside the table to tell whose deal it was, the players themselves being so sleepy that they did not know.

It is probable that Fox's upbringing was as much responsible as his inherited character for the excesses of which he was guilty. His father, Lord Holland, once said: "Let nothing be done to break his spirit; the world will do that for him." On his death he left his son about three-quarters of a million dollars to pay his debts. The sum was immediately swallowed up, and in a few days Fox was as needy as before. Fox was by no means singular in his generation. High play and deep drinking were fashionable. Lord Carlisle lost £10,000 one night and owed the house the entire sum. At one time he stood to win £50,000 on the turn of a card. We refer again to Walpole: "John Damier and his two brothers have contracted a debt one can scarcely be expected to believe out of England—£70,000. Can you believe that Lord Foley's sons have borrowed money so extravagantly that the interest they have contracted to pay amounts to £18,000 a year?" It all went over the card tables in these fashionable London clubs.

Walpole records that there was a cast at hazard in the Cocoa Tree, "the difference of which amounted to £180,000. Mr. O'Birne, an Irish gamester had won £100,000 from a young Mr. Harvey who had inherited an estate from his brother. O'Birne said: 'You can never pay me.' The youth replied: 'I can. My estate will sell for the debt.' 'No,' said O'Birne, 'I will win ten thousand. You shall throw for the odd ninety.'" So they threw and Harvey won. Gibbon was a member of the Cocoa Tree, and in his journal relates that every evening there one might see twenty or thirty of the first men in the kingdom in point of fashion and fortune supping at little tables covered with a napkin, in the middle of a coffee room, upon a bit of cold meat or a sandwich and drinking a glass of punch. Lord Byron also was a member, and indeed most of the celebrities of the day were proud of their membership in what nowadays would be considered a "joint," and would speedily be raided by the police.

Whale's Hearing Acute.

The orifice on the whale's ear is scarcely perceptible, yet it is said that the whale's hearing is so acute that a ship crossing its track half a mile distant will cause it to dive instantly.

The play, "One night in Rome," was again put on last night at the Garrick Theatre in London with entire success.

LAY ALL UNDER CONTRIBUTION

Persian Dervishes Demand Alms as a Right, and Simple People Readily Give Up.

A feature of Persian life which illustrates the simple and superstitious nature of the people of the mideast is their tolerance of the dervishes. These weird, gypsylike beggars infest the cities and annoy the village folk in passing from one place to another, according to their vows of itinerancy.

These are not the whirling dervishes of circus fame. Whirling would be too energetic a form of worship for the members of this most ancient leisure class. Their greatest exertion consists of walking slowly and blowing a horn to announce their presence.

The dervish of Persia is known by his begging bowl, conical cap, animal skin cape and club. The weapon, which is usually a stick driven through with nails, is carried conspicuously. It fact, it seems unpleasantly ready for use when its owner calmly demands tribute. It is true that there is small danger of its use, even if alms are refused, but a refusal however polite and apologetical, is sure to arouse the wrath of the dervish. His vocabulary may be unintelligible, but the meaning of his threats and prophecies is usually understood. Fellow citizens of the dervish tribe prefer to make a gift at any cost in order to avoid having the wrath of heaven called down upon them in the masterly language of an experienced heaven invoker.

The dervish makes himself useful to the community honored by his presence by telling fortunes and stories, reciting prayers, selling charms and even curing the sick by blowing his sacred breath on them—all in return for which he turns over to his chief after deducting a living wage.

GIVEN NAMES OF PRESIDENTS

Historical Appellations Bestowed on Summits of Mountain Range in Old Vermont.

Heretofore when one spoke of the presidential range everyone — every New Englander, at least—knew, without further particularizing, that Mount Washington and its attendant summits was the subject, writes Allen Chamberlain in the Boston Evening Transcript.

Henceforth one must needs be more specific, since during the last year a rival presidential range has appeared on the map in Vermont. That region, hitherto generally spoken of as the Bread Loaf Mountain section, lying between Middlebury gap and the Lincoln-Warren pass, was but little known, except in its southerly portion, until the Green Mountain club men ran their Skyline trail through. They found there a maze of unnamed summits grouped as in council, and seemingly worthy of being recognized as individuals of distinction.

Just north of these heights is the rugged mass whose summits have been known for more than half a century as Mounts Abraham and Lincoln. Quite naturally the idea of a new presidential range arose and, with great partisan restraint, four of the neighboring mountains were therefore named Mount Grant, Mount Grover Cleveland, Mount Roosevelt and Mount Woodrow Wilson.

DROVE CLEMENCEAU TO FIELD

Former Paris Cab Driver, Now in America, Tells of French Premier's Dueling Days.

Running a chicken ranch near Tacoma, Wash., is a man named Nicholas Thien, who, in his younger days was cab driver to Clemenceau, and who has accompanied the French premier to many a combat on the "field of honor."

"No one in any country," he remarked the other day, standing among his chickens, "has fought so many duels as M'sieu Clemenceau. They came from what he wrote in his paper. But he was so strong. He always won. No adversary could hold a sword against him.

"It was against the law, of course," added the old Frenchman, seventy-two now, in a whisper, "so we always slipped out of the city for these fights."

M'sieu Thien's cab stand used to be in front of L'Intransigeant, Clemenceau's paper. Almost nightly, he says, the present premier would come out of his office and hail cab 8068.

"He got the name 'Tiger,'" M. Thien explains, "because he was always the boss, like the big striped cat is the boss of all animals.

"Ah, my friend, those were the happy days! Of course I will not insult my chickens. They are good ones, as chickens go. But it is a tame life here. I dream often of the old days when M'sieu Clemenceau would hail me 'long about two o'clock in the morning and we'd be off."

PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH'S POLICY RE-CONTAGIOUS DISEASES CRITICIZED

Trustee J. W. Worth Thinks it Entails too Much Absence From School—Mrs. W. R. Morris Says it Does Seem to Inflict a Hardship in Some Cases.

The policy of the Provincial Board of Health that where such contagious diseases as mumps, and hooping cough, are in a family all the children shall stay home from school was questioned at the Board of Education meeting last evening.

Trustee J. W. Worth said that a boy of working age, near ready for the High School had returned to school after a month's absence with a certificate of health and had been sent back home to await the month's absence of two other members of the family suffering from a contagious disease. This entailed so long a stay at home from studies that his father gave up hope of the boy passing into the High School and sent him to work. Mr. Worth did not think such a policy in keeping with the interests of education.

It appears that the Provincial Health Act provides that each child in a family having one of the even minor contagious diseases shall stay home a month at least, and the other children also. In the case of the disease going the rounds of the whole family this entails considerable absence for some.

Chairman Denne said such is the law; the Board have no jurisdiction in the matter.

Trustee Cameron pointed out that if the heads of families would trouble themselves to enquire they would learn that allowance is made at examinations for scholars thus unavoidably kept at home, and their promotion is not delayed if they are sufficiently advanced to warrant such consideration.

Applied for Positions.

Misses Baird, Thompson and Sing applied for positions on the Public Schools teaching staff.

Doctor Resigns.

Dr. J. Malcolm McCulloch in tending his resignation as school medical officer appreciated those cordial relations which had existed between himself, the Board and teachers. He strongly eugolized the support given him in his duties by the school nurse. This resignation was accepted and is to take effect June 30th.

School Nurse Reports.

In her monthly report School Nurse Jory referred to the following absentees: For uncleanliness, 16; scabbies, 13; hooping cough, 17; mumps, 6; chicken-pox, 7.

Report on Institute.

Inspector Geo. F. Rogar reported conditions at the Collegiate Institute generally good. He referred to the high standing of its management and teaching staff and the fine spirit of the students. He reported two more teachers needed—one commercial and one for general work in relief of the principal who should not have to devote more than half his time to actual teaching. He also again emphasized the need of a new left wing to the building.

Inspector Leake, for household science and domestic science reported favorably as to accommodation and kitchen equipment. Comment on the character of teaching and pupils' work and grading be postponed.

Lack of Courtesy.

Principal H. R. H. Kenner complained of Inspector Leake's lack of courtesy in coming in and inspecting these departments under his jurisdiction without notifying him of his presence. He (the principal), never gets his eyes on the gentleman.

The Board will draw the department's attention to this.

Leave of Absence.

A letter from the principals and vice-principals of Public Schools complained that the Board's decision in regard to leave of absence in the case of death in the family was not broad enough in its scope. They suggested leave of absence to attend funerals of immediate relatives of wives, and where the connection is more remote that absence be allowed with only such deductions from salary as shall pay for supply.

This was received.

Who Were Present.

There were present Chairman Roland Denne. Trustees Mrs. W. R. Morris, Dr. Neal, J. M. Greene, G. O. Cameron, A. A. Fowler, J. A. McKone, J. W. Worth.

CENTRALS WON FROM QUEEN MARY SCHOOL

KEENLY CONTESTED PUBLIC SCHOOLS BASEBALL MATCH

In the Public School Baseball League yesterday, the Central School corralled avictory from the Queen Mary ball artists by a score of 11-9. It was a game of real baseball with few errors and plenty of excitement and exhibited that there is some splendid talent being developed for this line of sport in the local schools. The batteries were Dutton pitching and Miller catching for the Central School and Patterson pitching and Bishop catching for the Queen Mary school. This was the first game of the series between the two schools and was played on the Central school grounds.

CANADIAN WHISKEY MOISTENS DRY STATES

CLAIMED THAT WINDSOR IS SUPPLYING ILLICIT BOOZE TO DETROIT

New York, May 5.— Special despatches published in the New York World from its correspondents in various parts of the United States tend to strengthen the impression that a good deal of the present supply of "illicit booze" being vended in this country, is finding its way across the international boundary from points in Canada.

The correspondent at Detroit is convinced that there is no shortage there, and adds that Windsor keeps a section of the populace "wet" for a moderate charge of $5 to $6 a quart.

Nearly all the liquor handled by Seattle bootleggers is smuggled from Canada, the coast correspondent says. The same procedure of obtaining intoxicating refreshments prevails at St. Paul, according to the St. Paul correspondent, who says that a Canadian quart is obtainable from $7 to $20, the average charge being about $15.

Canadian whiskey is highly appraised in Cincinnati, by one offender at least, who is now in jail awaiting a hearing on a charge of being a party to a transaction which The price charged was $30. involved a small Canadian quart

The point under discussion is whether local tributaries to these rivers belong to both countries. Argument will be taken up tomorrow by Judge King, of Washington, representing the United States reclamation service, and then Canadian counsel will present their case

PREMIER DRURY

"I submit he has given us an example of autocracy," he said, "and we are here to represent democracy."

The representatives of democracy loudly applauded.

Peter Heenan, of Kenora, another Labor member, came next. His claim to distinction was that he was the first man to sign the round robin.

Then ensued a brief interval, during which the Premier breathed a little easier. Two U. F. O. members, J. C. Brown, of North Middlesex, and J. Cridland, o fSouth Norfolk, declared that they had not signed the round hobin. They had been elected on a platform of economy, and they wer egoing to stay on it. Besides, they were serving for the honor of it, not for profit.

J. A. Pinard, Liberal, of East Ottawa, was in favor of economy—for the other fellow. His proposal was that the economy be exercised on the salaries o fthe Ontario License Board, leading that much more for the needy members.

Lieut. K. S. Stover, another Liberal member, was unkind enough to drag up the entirely irrelevant fact that the Cabinet Ministers receive $6,000 plus indemnity, in "recognition," of their work. "They have so much better opportunity for service and so much more honor that they ought to be willing to serve for less than the private members," he remarked.

W. Stringer, of Haldimand, was another U. F. O. member who said he had refused to sign.

Hon. Mr. Drury repeated his earlier statement that the people were looking to the House for an example in economy. "I led the way," he said, modestly, "by voluntarily cutting the salary the previous Prime Minister received by $3,000."

It was the cue for applause, but somehow or other the members overlooked it, and as if that wasn't trying enough, that irrepressible person, the member for South Brant, was heartless enough to ask Mr. Drury how much he had left.

"It is $10,400 including the sessional indemnity," replied Mr Drury. Naturally he could not stop there, and for a few minutes the House listened while he explained how onerous were the duties of a Prime Minister.

Mr. MacBride wanted to know if the indemnity matter had been discussed in Council. He was told that the Ministers were pledged to keep silent about Council deliberations — but the Cabinet was a unit upon the matter.

Jorn O'Neill and J. W. Curry, K South-East Toronto, pleaded guilty to signing the document demanding more pay. Peter Heenan brok ein with a suggestion that the Premier arbitrate, but he caught no fish with the bait.

Andrew Hicks, the U. F. O. whip proposed that the matter stand for a year until the members foun dout what they were worth.

This Man Confessed

L. W. Oke, of East Lambton, was the first U. F. O. member to confess to signing up. He did so because he thought $1,400 a year was not enought for a member to "carry on." He wanted to know what sacrifice the Premier was making. Had he given up his farm?

Mr. Drury replied that he was carrying on his farm, but he expected to lose o nit.

"So do I," returned Mr. Oke. "I am here making a sacrifice." The Phime Minister laughed, which brought a warm reply from the Lambton member. He did not propose to sit there and be laughed at. He would like to tell the Premier what some of the people back home were saying about him. He had letters in his pocket that would make the Premier blush if he read them.

Hit at Cabinet

R. L. Brackin, of West Kent was an extra indemnity man. If the Cabinet ministers were sincere in heir desire for economy, they should give up their own indemnities. Up to this point not a single Conservative had confessed to signing the round robin. The first to do so was W. H. Ireland of West Hastings who had no apologies to offer. He was followed by T. Tooms, Labor member for Peterboro, who was in the same boat.

Mr. Macbride apparently thinking the time was ripe for another try, asked the Premier if he would consider allowing a private member to introduce a bill, providing the increase. They were ready to take the responsibility. The Premier declared that while believing in giving the private member the utmost freedom, the Government could not sanction such a departure from responsible Government. He was sure when the members had had time to think it over they would sio nnet to make any increase this session.

GEO. COPPEN GOES TO PRISON FOR LIFE

HIS DEATH SENTENCE WAS COMMUTED LATE LAST EVENING

Toronto May 5.—According to a wire received yesterday by Mr. T. A. Gibson, counsel for George Coppen, from Mr. Thomas Mulvey, Under Secretary of State, the death sentence imposed upon Coppen in February by Mr. Justice Lachford on the charge of murdering his wife, has been commuted to life imprisonment. Coppen was formerly sentenced to be hanged at Toronto jail this morning. The decision of the Department follows further representations which were made yesterday before the Department of Justice by Mr. T. F. Agar, counsel. Mr. Agar submitted the recent testimony of Dr. Silverthorne to the effect that the condition of the woman's body was not inconsistent with an accident and did not establish violence. Notification of the commutation of sentence was conveyed to Coppen yesterday afternoon by Sheriff Mowat. It is expected that Coppen will be removed to Kingston this week. Coppen was quite unmoved by his reprieve, and in fact his attitude throughout has been that of apparent indifference.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Table a tablespoonful of Salts if Back hurts or Bladder bothers.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headachs, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralise the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

TIME SIGNALS FROM BELGIUM

DECLARED IT WILL BE A BOON TO THE RAILROADS AND STEAMSHIPS.

Paris, May 4.—Wireless telegraphy may yet prove to be the means of preventing many railway and sea catastrophes. To this end, in fact, an International Time Bureau is being formed in Brussels, which intends to develop methods of transmitting throughout the world time signals of the greatest precision.

The bureau is in charge of M. Bigourdin, member of the French Academy of Sciences who for many years has been attached to the Paris Observatory. Discussing the aims of this new organization, M. Bigourdin has called attention to the fact that all through the war the Eiffel Tower sent daily signals that were picked up in the most remote quarters of the globe.

"It is most essential that navigators know at every instant the precise time," says M. Bigourdin. "Extensive experiments have been carried out in the last year and we have reason to believe that the efforts will lead to unexpected discoveries concerning the variations in actual longitude similar to those known to exist with respect to latitude. With precise knowledge of the time, the sun's location and the consequent geographical position ships will more easily avoid dangerous areas."

M. Bigourdin is confident that many sea accidents have been due to the impossibility of ships picking up accurate time signals. He points out also the necessity for the most reliable records for despatching trains in all countries. Further experiments will be conducted with intermittent Hertian waves, approximately 2,600 metres long, to replace those of shorter length now used.

M. Bigourdin, whose investigations are receiving support in all Allied countries, hopes to create a system whereby the expenses will be distributed among all nations, for it is obvious that once the signals begin to work there is nothing to prevent any mariner from taking advantage of an organization in which French scientists are taking an important part in putting into operation.

Music in the Home

MUSICIANS WHO LIVE IN WATER-TIGHT COMPARTMENTS.

The truth is that musicians are not taught now, and never have been taught, to consider music in relation to anything but itself. They live in a watertight compartment. There are brilliant exceptions; but it is principally true of the majority that they think of music as a thing by and for itself, and not as part of the general outline of the age. They think that music exists for the musicians only—not the musicians for music and for its higher development.

It is curious to reflect what they mean by the word musician. They mean some one who has learnt certain things in a certain way, and refuse to allow to the person who, without having had such training, yet loves it and is susceptible to its finer influences, the right of expressing any opinion about it all. It is small wonder, then, that a young musician with a fresh outlook, and perplexed by its aesthetic problems will turn for advice and sympathy to a lover of music who looks at it from an angle which is not that of his titular pastors and masters.

The professors always distrust and resent such things as an interference with their prerogative, and try to keep their pupils from them. It would show greater wisdom on their part to try to discover whence such influences derive their power, and to strive to replace them by spreading the light themselves. But those who do are vastly in the minority. Ninety-nine out of a hundred seem to have given up thinking about such things when they got their last certificate at the institution which bred them, and refuse to contemplate the possibility of any change. The average teacher accepts his Wagner as unhesitatingly today as his father condemned his, forty years ago, or as his grandfather desired to scalp the later Beethoven.

PEOPLE SHOULD BE LED TOWARD MUSIC.

Actual co-operation will bring more results to teachers of music than to almost any class of business people. The problem before the music teachers of a locality is larger and more complex than the problem before any ordinary business group. First of all, they are obliged to create a demand for their services. In the case of a lawyer, for example, disagreement and criminal matters being a natural demand for his services. The grocery man has a natural outlet for his products. On the other hand, the need for music is indefinite, and recognized only when special effort is made to demonstrate its value in life. Only in a very small number of cases do people absolutely crave the privilege of studying music. Most people must be led to music by being made to realize that it is an important factor in Mental development and much more than a mere accomplishment.

MAN'S INTEREST IN MUSIC

How the Question Looks to a Major.

To-day music is recognized as a man's pleasure, a man's recreation and a man's accomplishment and therefore should find a large place in a boy's education.

This idea was strongly emphasized in a recently published interview with Major Rupert Hughes who in addition to his military standing is an author and playwright of note. The Major pointed out that in the early days of the country our forefathers had little thought for anything but the most practical and necessary things. "But this very necessity" he says "seemed to lead many of them into the mistaken thought that music was, first of all, not in any way a necessity, and not being a necessity, it was therefore a feminine calling—something to while away the time of girls and women, whose men folk could afford to let them escape the slavery of the kitchen to say nothing of the field and the barn. Music became one of the chief studies of the young ladies' seminary—not music as we know it now, but music apparently made as a kind of background for crinolines and long curls. When one knows the interest men take in music today he is led to ask—what has brought this change?

"Knowing the business man as we all know him," argues the Major, in answer to this question, "let us admit that it was possibly the great success of the many musicians in the material side of musical work which led so many so-called 'Captains of Industry' to realize that perhaps there is something in music after all

"With musicians making fortunes of amazing size; with building after building going up in all parts of the country in honor of music; with the musical industries developing along sound lines it was not surprising that the gentlemen, who had been brought up to think that the one righteous and noble thing in human life was business, should suddenly realize that after all art, when it is art which the human appetite requires, is a wonderfully lucrative thing, even though it is not hitched up to a typewriter and adding machine. Whetted with just enough curiosity, Mr. Business-man gradually found himself taking more and more interest in music, until one day he made the discovery that he was actually reading articles upon music inthe daily papers, learning the names of singers, and perhaps wondering what their 'batting averages' were.

"Then came the player piano and the phonograph. Here he at least could go through part of the process of making music. It was not always to be locked up in the fingers of his wife or his daughter. Once tasting the joys of music-making, he found a new interest in life, a new and unexplored field for mental recuperation, a field which grew more and more lovely with every step. Mr Business-man became a music 'fan' as his friends said. He bought books on music, bought tickets for concerts, operas and recitals which he had formerly secretly pitied his wife for attending. Much to his surprise he found that this interest in music, like golf and the 'car' took his mind from other things, made his intellect rest, banished business for the time being, benefited him, exhilirated him, made him a better man for the workaday world."

GALT CITY TO BOOST POTATO PRODUCTION

COUNCIL RESPONDS TO DEMANDS OF MASS MEETING OF WOMEN.

Galt, Ont., May 4.—Under the auspices of the Women's Canadian Club a mass meeting for women to discuss the high cost of living was held last night in the City Hall, which was crowded to the doors, over 500 being present. The chief topic of discussion was the high price of potatoes. It was decided that the only way to bring down the price of potatoes was by greater production. To make this possible, a resolution was passed, which was submitted by a deputation to the City Council, requesting that the city purchase seed potatoes to be sold to producers at a reasonable rate. To bring down prices of other necessities it was declared, economy among women was necessary, and the meeting carried a resolution pledging all present to abstain from buying luxuries, and to buy Canadian goods until such time as prices become more moderate.

The City Council, in response to the request of the mass meeting, that the city purchase seed potatoes, appointed a committee composed of Mayor Mercer and Aldermen McLane and Goudy to investigate.

DENIM AND SPATS IN BRITISH COMMONS

REPORTED THAT OVERALLS WILL SHORTLY BE WORN IN PARLIAMENT

London, May 5. — Overalls are about to invade Parliament, but will be combined with spats to relieve the historic place of some of the shock. Major John Robert Pretyman Newman, Coalition Unionist member for the Finchley division of Middlesex, will be the man who will introduce denim to Westminster. The major has admitted his intention to wear overalls to the House, and says he has become a firm convert of this means of smashing clothing prices, which was inaugurated on May Day. He clings, however, to spats, and has told an interviewer he will wear them in connection with his unparliamentary garb.

ESCAPED PRISON BY MEANS OF A NEEDLE

DESPERATE CHARACTER CONFINED IN DEATH CELL MAKES GET-AWAY

Rawlins, Wyo., May 5. — With a needle obtained in the prison shirt factory as his only tool, Bert Loften has escaped from the State prison here. William Smith, his companion, was captured while trying to scale the prison wall.

Loften and Smith were confined to the death house cell because of their known desperate character. Loften found that a soft piece of steel covered a drain. With his great patience and skill he slowly cut a hole through the steel with the needle. After removing a pipe and a plate they crawled through the hole, picked the lock of a steel door connecting with the main corridor of the prison, scaled the tiers of cells, cut holes through the slate roof and dropped to the ground. In the prison yard they found a steel bar which the prisoners bent into a hook to fasten an improvised rope to the prison wall.

Loften escaped, but Smith was captured by a guard.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its color and lustre or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair, which is so attractive, use only this old time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

AWAITING OUTCOME OF U.S. MEN'S DEMANDS

COL. MORDEN HAS HOPE IN STEEL

TALKS ON IMPERIAL TRADE, COMBINATIONS AND EMPIRE RESOURCES

Toronto, May 5.—"The story of the production of steel on the American continent has been one of the most fascinating of tales," said President C. Marriott, of the Board of Trade, introducing Col. W. Grant Morden, who addressed the Board. "The possibility of having a steel corporation in Canada rivalling the United States Steel Corporation is almost bewildering. It would have tremendous results on production, and would be of great advantage to Canadian industry."

"I am always proud to proclaim myself as a Torontonian wherever I may be," said Colonel Morden, who spoke on "Empire Trade." "This city will in future, as in the past, be in the forefront in its participation in international trade. Every Canadian who realizes the potentialities of Canadian resources should play three strokes ahead.

"British merchants during the war saw a golden opportunity to obtain mastery of world trade. Other countries during the war broke their contracts and disrupted to extend business. But today British merchants are getting as much as 10 per cent. more than other countries for goods in South America because traders have learned that the British merchant under all circumstances keeps his contract."

IRELAND'S TROUBLES GROW DAY BY DAY

CONFLICTS OVER LAND ATTENDED BY ORGANIZED "CATTLE DRIVERS"

Dublin, May 5.—Conflicts over land attended by organized "cattle drives" to intimidate land owners and compel them to sell, have been added lately to Ireland's other troubles. The disturbances are a revival of conditions which prevailed thirty or more years ago when farmers and graziers were forced by similar methods to sell large land holdings.

The malcontents complain that most of the good land in the south and west of Ireland is being used for grazing purposes and that they are unable to purchase it. Consequently they have resorted to the "cattle drives" and threats of bodily harm to the owners. It is very difficult to police all the country, and many of the drives have resulted in three or four farmers losing all their cattle at one swoop.

The intimidators are represented as renters who are demanding longer leases of land, small owners and a certain number of holders of comparatively large tracts who believe their neighbors' land used for grazing is more suitable for tillage than the ground which they are trying to cultivate.

"It's the same story again of the eighties," said a former south of Ireland land holder. "They forced us to cut up our large holdings then by use of the same methods now employed."

The land troubles should not be confused with crimes resulting from the political unrest. They are separate and distinct and show evidences of being on the increase.

BRITAIN LOOKING AHEAD TO INSURE FUEL SUPPLY

London, May 5.—The Daily Mail of yesterday says that Lieut-General John Stevens Cowans is to be managing director of a new company under the control of the Shell Transport and Trading Co. for the development of the oil fields in Mesopotamia, which will be part of an extensive reorganization and expansion of the British oil industry, with a view to ensuring the nations' supply of fuel and other oils. The plan, which it is declared also concerns rich producing centres in many quarters of the globe and interests controlling hundreds of millions of pounds sterling, is nearing completion, and an announcement of the details of it are expected shortly, according to the Daily Mail.

ALLEGED SLANDER CASE BEING HEARD

TWO LABOR LEADERS SUING JAMES SIMPSON FOR STATEMENTS LAST YEAR

Toronto, May 4. Nearly a year after the charges in question were made, Arthur E. O'Leary is suing James Simpson, editorial of The Industrial Banner, for $10,000 damages for alleged libel and slander, before Mr. Justice Middleton and jury in the Assizes. Only two witnesses were called yesterday, and little light so far has been thrown on the case. W. L. Hevey, another member of the Trades and Labor Council, is also suing Mr. Simpson, but his case will come up later.

Mr. O'Leary was the first witness called yesterday and denied that either he or Hevey had made a proposal to the Employers' Association, asking for $5,000 to finance the publishing of a new Labor paper, as had been charged by the defendant at a meeting of the Trades and Labor Council last August.

He denied that he had ever talked with General Gunn about a new Labor paper.

Herbert Davis of the Imperial Foundry told the court of what had taken place at a meeting of the Employers' Association over a year ago. At the meeting, he stated, General Gunn had outlined a proposal to pay O'Leary and Heavey, whom he characterized as sane Labor leaders, $5,000 to aid them in financing a new Labor paper.

Mr. Davis retracted a statement which appeared in his affidavit to the effect that Hevey and O'Leary had collected sums of money from the various members after the meeting.

EDITOR LOST REPUTATION

Arthur Wallace Tells Montreal It Went to the Bad

Montreal, May 5.— Arthur Wallace associate editor of the Manchester Guardian addressing the Reform Club yesterday, said that in his 14,000 mile journey through Canada he had lost three pairs of gloves, two umbrellas, two trains and one ship, and he feared too that he had lost his reputation, temporarily at least, in Toronto, where he said he had made some injudicious remarks about prohibition and its efficiency.

Lindsay Crawford also spoke.

THOMAS KELLY IN STUART WALKER'S PRODUCTION OF BOOTH TARKINGTON'S "SEVENTEEN" AT THE GRAND.

IT'S GLORIOUNS TO BE JUST SEVENTEEN

SEE ALL THE LITTLE EPISODES THAT MAKE LIFE AMUSING

It's glorious to be seventeen. And if that is one of the joys of the past, the next best thing to live it again through your eyes and ears. This is just what you may do when Stuart Walker's New York production of Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen" comes to the Grand Monday evening only.

There are the joys and follies of youth, all the little episodes that make life at this age so amusing to others and so serious to youth. A visit to "Seventeen" is guaranteed to wipe out twenty or thirty years of your age, for one evening at any rate, and young people love it.

Here is a middle west town, the curtain is drawn back and reveals just such an assemblage as you may find in hundreds of such places; the youth, William Sylvanus Baxter, his imp sister, Jane, who like Nemesis never fails to shadow him and show him up, his hated rival Johnnie Watson, the girl of his puppy dreams, Lola Pratt, with the baby talk lure, and her adored dog, Flopit. And they dance and sing, have their little porch flirtation, even the farewell dance where William Sylvanus in father's evening clothes is sentenced to indescribable misery as the escort of the fat Ethel Boke, just as half of the audience has done.

Humorous, wholesome youth-giving and happy in its sincerity as the story is, much credit must be given to the cast, whose members give the impression that they are actually living the various episodes. Thomas Kelly has become known from coast to coast for his delightful characterization of Willie, the youth just beginning to realize his coming manhood—life is never quite so important and serious as at this age.—Elizabeth Black, the impish Jane, is the infant terrible of ten, in looks, in manners, in gestures and in that curious mixture of innocence. Lael Davis who plays the fascinating Lola Pratt, became the toast of the town during the show's run in New York and Boston.

KEEPING UP WITH "THE JONESES" COMING

MUSIC LOVERS WILL BE DELIGHTED WITH GUS HILL'S LATEST NOVELTY

Those who keep in touch with current theatrical events of the day will be delighted to learn that Gus Hill's latest musical novelty, "Keeping up with the Joneses," is scheduled to appear at the Grand Wednesday evening, May 10. This sparkling musical novelty is founded on the famous cartoons of Pop Momand appearing daily in the leading newspapers throughout the country. A large and well-known cast of Broadway comedians, singers and dancers will be seen in the principal roles. One of the features of the performance is the renowned chorus of charming young misses described by the management as "The Vanity Fair Girls."

Cutting the Nation's Tire Bill.

"Forty makes of motor tires were submitted to the bureau of standards by the office of the quartermaster general," writes Thomas H. Uzzell in Everybody's. "They were given laboratory 'durability runs,' after which they were autopsied by the rubber specialists. Their carcasses were cut up and the pieces boiled, roasted, stretched. The results were discouraging. Even the best of them seemed to suffer from 'improper 'toughening.'

"So into their little rubber-mill went the experts, with notes furnished them by the tire manufacturers, and proceeded to make up some tire rubber which had the proper degree of toughness. They succeeded. They passed out the word: 'The trouble is that you makers are not sifting your zinc oxid before mixing it with the rubber compound.'

"The makers began to sift. Better tires resulted. Some $30,000,000 were saved to the government. And today you are enjoying a cut in your tire bill by getting better tires—a result of that experiment with zinc oxid."

RICHARD W. TULLY ANNOUNCES PLANS

Richard Walton Tully, who returned on the "Adriatic" last week after nearly a year spent abroad, announced yesterday his plans for the coming season. He has already started rehearsals of the comedy "Keep Her Smiling," which was laid aside at the time of Sidney Drew's death, and in which Tully will now introduce to American audiences one of England's most popular comedians, David Miller, who recently completed a run of fourteen months in London in "Fair and Warmer," and who he believes is admirably suited to follow in the difficult part created by Drew. "Keep Her Smiling" will open in Montreal, May 3rd, from whence it will head for the Pacific Coast where it will play all summer returning to the middle west and south for engagements next season.

Guy Bates Post will continue under Tully's management his highly successful tour in "The Masquerader" and will this Summer fulfill return engagements in the far Western States. It is likely that Tully will in the near future present Post in an elaborate Shakesperean production. Tully has nearly completed writing a comedy with a novel theme which he anticipates producing some time next season three companies in Tully's ever-popular "The Bird of Paradise" instead of the two companies that have been the rule for the last nine years.

Before leaving London, Tully formed an association with Percy Burton, the well-known English manager who for many seasons sponsored the productions of Forbes-Robertson and Beerbom Tree, whereby Burton will have charge of Tully's continental interests and activities. At present Barton is managing the English presentations of "The Bird of Paradise" the London company of which opened early in September and is still playing to capacity business, while two other companies are touring Great Britain with fourth about to start rehearsals. Tully has been offered a theatre in Paris next Fall and is planning to produce "The Bird of Paradise" there in October or November.

With Percy Burton attending to his European affairs and James C. Peede, his general manager in charge of his American productions, Tully hopes to create a medium of exchange of artists and plays whereby the best new English plays may be sent to America as often as possible with their original casts, while he plans to present in England many of the American successes which he believes most adapted to British tastes.

"There has been much hue and cry," said Tully yesterday, "over a general slump in theatrical business in London, but as a matter of fact conditions have merely reverted to a pre-war basis. When London was filled, not only with her own troops but with thousands and thousands of American, Canadian and Australian soldiers practically everything on the boards was a lasting success. The withdrawal of soldier patronage has naturally caused a great slump in gross receipts, the bubble of martial inflation has been picked and business is in reality normal once more, and good plays will be successful in London just as in days gone by."

BELGIAN INDUSTRIES

tion of tissues of all sorts is insufficient to meet demands.

Hide and Leather Industries.—Tanned hides are finding good demand despite high prices. Liege shoe manufacturers are very active, but find production limited by the shortening of the working day. The shoe industry is suffering from the high cost of leather. Hatters' furs are beginning to reach pre-war production figures.

Tobacco Industry.—Manufacturers of cigars are suffering from shortage of labor and unfavorable exchange, which make purchase of American tobacco difficult.

Agricultural Industries.—The exodus of workers is resulting in much thought being given to mechanical cultivation. Flax merchants are now contracting with growers for the coming crop and are offering to supply the labor and so relieve the farmers. The cultivation of large fields in place of the existing small plats is also being considered in order to reduce hand labor to a minimum.

WILL ROAR TOWARD GERMANY

Position of Sculptured Lion on Famous Battlefield of Waterloo Is to Be Reversed.

The lion on the battlefield of Waterloo is to face the other way, and before long it will stand with open, ponderous paws roaring silently, after the manner of your fierce but considerate sculptured lions, toward Germany instead of France. Fortunately for the quiet of the countryside the roar is imaginary or the lion would long ago have become a nuisance whichever way he faced. The lion was set up by Belgium after the battle of Waterloo, and stood as a warning to France not to engage in any more Napoleonic dreams of conquest; and year after year it looked toward France, while behind it Germany prepared for the next effort to dominate other nations. It maintained its attitude, while Germany carried through the program that separated Alsace-Lorraine from France; but presently behind the lion's back Belgium began to fortify, and eventually left him in the ridiculous position of looking in one direction while the Belgian fortifications looked in another. A tame lion one might say, roaring for the edification of tourists and with no personal feeling about it. But now Belgium decides to turn him round and let him roar toward Germany as a solemn reminder of the unwisdom of dreams of world conquest.

THINK TERM IS EFFEMINATE

Some Tennis Players Object to Word "Love" as at Present Employed in Scoring System.

There is talk among the overlords of tennis of finding another word than "love" to mean "nothing" in the scoring system, for, although it may surprise many to hear it, the game is sometimes spoken of as effeminate, and this bit of terminology is held responsible. Nobody has ever explained why "love" means "nothing" in tennis, but there is a footnote in an old and rare book about card-playing which refers to an old Scottish word "luff," which meant "nothing," and this, perhaps, may have been somehow transferred into the game of tennis. Or, again, the term may be of far eastern origin, where a word sounding like "love" was used in the old form of tennis that was once popular in the orient. Whether or not the terminology undergoes change, the game is in no immediate danger of falling off in popularity, and the repeated shouting of these seeming endearments across the tennis net has occasioned much innocent merriment.—Christian Science Monitor.

Honor Cuban Generals.

Cuba is to pay honor to the memory of General Maximo Gomez, the island republic's military hero, by erecting a costly monument. A first prize of $25,000 was awarded recently to Aldo Gaba, an Italian sculptor, for a model of the memorial, which is to cost $200,000. Second and third prizes went respectively to Huertas Cabarrocas, a Spanish-Cuban, and Gutson Borglum, an American. General Gomez became popular as the leader of the Cuban forces in the war for independence from Spain, from 1895 to 1898. He also took a prominent part in the Ten Years' war, a revolt which began in 1868. On the day of his death, June 18, 1905, the general's family was presented with a gift of $100,000 by the government of Cuba. At the conclusion of the Spanish-American war, General Gomez was honored at a public reception given by the American forces occupying Havana at that time.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

KEPT SHOES AS ORNAMENTS

American Footgear Considered by Unfortunate Serbian Woman as Altogether Too Beautiful to Wear.

Anything that will keep the feet from the ground is considered a shoe in Serbia.

In the remote rural districts of the country it is said that many of the people live and die without owning a pair of shoes. In the bitterest weather they travel through mud and snow without adequate foot covering. They consider themselves fortunate if they can secure old gunny sacks or heavy cloth, which they tie about their feet with twine in winter.

The first American-made shoes that were distributed by the American Red Cross created a tremendous stir among the people of the distant villages. One old woman who had never owned a pair before took the shoes that had been given to her to her home and put them on a shelf above the fireplace. She was as pleased as a child to own them, but nothing could induce her to wear them. She said that she intended to save them for fetes, or perhaps for her burial. They were "much too beautiful to be worn," she said.

Helium Gas Cheapened.

Up to 1915 the total output of helium gas in all the world had probably been less than 100 cubic feet, and it was worth about $1,700 a cubic foot. But just before the armistice was signed a shipment of 150,000 cubic feet of helium gas was sent to Europe, and it costs less than 10 cents a cubic foot.

Helium gas was first discovered on the sun, by spectroscopy. It is the best gas for use in balloons, because it is not inflammable. It is now extracted from the natural gas of Texas and Kansas.

The method is delicate and complex, but is based upon the fact that the principal constituents of natural gas liquefy when cooled to about minus 320 degrees F., but that helium remains a gas at that temperature, and hence is easily separated.

Surveyors Use Airplanes.

Four airplanes are being used to survey the extensive forests of Labrador to determine the value of the wood pulp represented by the growing trees. Aerial photographs will be taken of many parts of the peninsula for use in compiling statistics. The surveying party, which left the United States recently for Nova Scotia, is composed of 40 persons and is headed by a man who served two years as a captain in the British air forces.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Our Native Birds.

One of the most valuable assets our nation has is its native birds. Too much cannot be written in their favor.

Destroy them and in a few years the injurious insects will have multiplied to such an extent that trees will be denuded of their foliage, plants and crops cannot be produced.

There are more than 1,200 species of our native birds, and millions of individuals. As a result of the examination of over 50,000 stomachs of birds, they established beyond a reasonable doubt that birds are of economic value, first in eating harmful insects, their eggs and larvae. Second, in eating the seeds of noxious weeds. Third, in devouring field mice, and other small rodents that injure the crops, and fourth, in acting as scavengers. While the economic value of birds should be kept in mind the esthetic value should also be considered. Man does not live by bread alone.

We should protect them for their graceful forms, their charming beauty, their delightful melody, and their joyous activity.

RAILWAY WORKERS STRIKE NEAR END

STRUGGLE IN FRANCE VIRTUALLY OVER, OFFICIAL QUARTERS REPORT.

VOLUNTEER HELP BIG FACTOR

LABOR ADMITS THAT COMPLETE TIE-UP OF INDUSTRY IS IMPOSSIBLE.

(By Canadian Press.)

Paris, May 5.—Announcement that the strike of railway workers throughout France is virtually over was made in official quarters here.

Volunteers Help.

Since Saturday traffic has been seriously embarrassed, but volunteers have given material aid, and yesterday a large number of strikers nreturned to their posts.

In the principal French ports, the strike of naval and wock workers is almost complete.

Miners in the Anzin Basin have voted to go on strike May 7, but the situation in Northern France seems to be improving.

35 Per Cent. Return.

Reports received show about 35 per cent. of the men at work and Labor leaders indicated a complete tie up of industry was impossible because of the failure of railroad men to call out all men engaged in transportation services.

FARMERS MAY GET $2.45 FOR WHEAT

PRICE MUCH HIGHER THAN THE MOST OPTIMISTIC HAD LOOKED FOR.

(By Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, May 5.—Canadian farmers may get as high as thirty cents per bushel for participation certificates on wheat sold through the Canadian wheat board, it was predicted today by members of the Commons who have watched the situation very closely.

With $2.15 already guaranteed, this will bring the price to $2.45. Many of the farmer members believe the price will indeed be much higher than the most optimistic had hoped for on account of an abnormal increase in the price of wheat from the time it left the far west until it was sold to European buyers.

1920 Crop Higher.

It is also freely predicted that the price of the 1920 crop will be high, some members believing that it will go to $3 per bushel, providing there are no internal troubles in any of the larger countries of the world.

CARPENTIER IN TORONTO SATDY.

EUROPEAN CHAMPION AND FRENCHMAN TO MEET IN BOXING BOUT

Toronto, May 5.—Georges Carpentier, the European heavyweight champion, will positively box at the Arena next Saturday night under the auspices of the Army and Navy Veterans. There is a full card of boxing.

Carpentier will arrive here Saturday morning, and will be tendered a luncheon by the S.P.A. at the King Edward at 1 o'clock as a type of true sportsman—in the war and out of it.

Under New Law.

Jersey City, N. J., May 4. — The first 12-round boxing bouts permitted under the amended state boxing law, increasing the limit from eight rounds, were fought here last night in the open air. Willie Beecher, of New York, outfought Young Andy Chaney, of Baltimore, earning the honors in eight of the rounds, with one even. Both are featherweights. In another 12-round contest Pal Moran a lightweight of New Orleans, outpointed Johnny Drummie of Jersey City.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 4.—Knockout Joe O'Donnell, Gloucester, N.J., defeated Joe Burman, Chicago, in a six-round bout here last night. O'Donnell had the advantage all the way.

St. Paul, Minn., May 4. Lew Tendler, of Philadelphia, outpointed Johnny Tillman, of Minneapolis, in a ten-round no decision boxing contest here last night. The men are lightweights.

Montreal Bouts.

Montreal, May 4. — Joey Fox, former bantamweight champion of England, knocked out Willie Mead, of Albany, last night in the first round. Mead was outclassed. Eugene Demers outpointed Young Russell by a wide margin. Young Green scored a knockout over Young Carroll, of Albany, in the second round.

PREPARING FOR SPRING MEETING

WELL-KNOWN HORSES GIVEN TRY-OUT AT WOODBINE TRACK

Toronto, May 5.—Over a fast track [illegible] were shown yesterday at the Woodbine. Although the opening day of the [illegible] meeting is less than three weeks away horses are beginning to round into condition.

Of course the centre of attraction for the coming meeting is the historic King's Plate. Nevertheless the Coronation Stakes for Canadian-bred two-year-olds runs it a close second. It is generally conceded that the winner of the stake is the most probable choice for the guineas the following year.

And from present appearances a great contest is assured for the stake at the coming meeting.

The best move shown by any candidates for two-year-olds was that of this morning, when Trainer Harry Gidding asked his pair, Chief Spansor and Health Bell, to show the railbirds their wares.

Chief Sponsor stepped away to the first quarter in 23 seconds and the ⅜ in 35 2-5. Heath Bell, a handsome brown filly, then stepped her first eighth in .11 2-5, ¼ in .22-4-5 and the ⅜ in .34 4-5, done in handy fashion.

Trainer Joe Doane gave his two-year-olds, Greybourne and Enslid, a smart ⅜ in .36 4-5. Ragged Robin and Motuse Ear ¼ in .26 2-5.

The Platers to work were:

Pleasure Bent, 1 mile in 1.51 3-5.
Lucky John, 1 mile in 1.53.
Safinmore, mile in 1.50.
Apple of Sodom, mile in 1.55.
Player, mile in 1.49 2-5.
Azreal, 1⅛ in 2.03 4-5.
Glow Worm, mile in 1.46 4-5.
Forward On, Lively Sleeper and Sleepy Dawn, mile and eighth in 2.03 4-5.

Other Moves.

Gallant Groom, ½ in .54 2-5.
Uncle John, ¾ in 1.25 2-5.
Master Fox, ⅝ in 1.11 2-5.
Ravencourt and Lady Benford, ⅝ in 1.06 2-5.
Mandarin, mile in 1.48 4-5.
Britain's Ally, ⅜ in .37 2-5.

Jockey James Metcalfe was an arrival this morning and will do the exercising for the Cornell Stable.

BRITISH ATHLETES TO STAY BEHIND

OXFORD-CAMBRIDGE MEN WILL LEAVE FOR HOME NEXT SATURDAY

New York, May 5.—The team of Oxford-Cambridge athletes, which smashed the two-mile world relay record at the games of the University of Pennsylvania last Saturday, will sail for home next Saturday on the steamship Lapland.

Two of the party of seven who came to this country will remain behind. Lieut.-Col. A. N. S. Jackson will go on a sight seeing tour of a month before he goes back to England, while it is reported that Alfred Shrubb, the trainer, may remain here, and accept a position with one of the American colleges, and may be asked to coach the U.S. Olympic team.

B. G. D. Rudd, W. R. Milligan, H. B. Stallard, W. G. Tatham and Kenneth Jeppe will make up the returning party.

FAST BALL IN LINDSAY

The Warder says:

"Arrangements are under way to have one of the fastest intermediate baseballs teams in Toronto play an exhibition game in Lindsay on the holiday, May 24th, namely, the team representing the Hebrew Literary Athletic Association.

"This team played fast baseball last year and will be one of the strong teams in the Toronto League this season.

"In Lindsay they will meet a picked team from the intermediate ranks.

"Watch for particulars."

COUGARS TAKEN ALIVE

UNIQUE FEATURE OF HUNTER IN KOOTENAY.

People of British Columbia Astonished by Daring Performance of Charles Ordist — Fur Company Paid Him Sum of $100 Each For the Live Animals.

FOR years past many hunters in British Columbia have hunted cougars for sport, finding it a fascinating and at times rather an exciting pastime. In addition it has its monetary benefits, there being a good bounty on the cougar's head and the skin fetches a fair price. But no hunter ever started after the big animals unless he was equipped with a reliable rifle so as to be able to bag them once they had taken to the trees. The only way a British Columbia hunter brings a cougar into camp is stone dead.

However, the other day Charles Ordist, a famous American hunter, crossed the line and took up quarters in the East Kootenays. He at once startled the inhabitants by announcing that he was going to take cougars alive, having been offered $100 by a Kansas City fur house for every beast he took in this manner. Shooting cougars was too prosaic for Ordist.

Some people looked upon Ordist's announcement as a little Yankee gusto, while others were afraid the man was suffering from a hallucination. It appeared like speculative venture with serious injury or even death, as the cougar measures between five and six feet from nose to tip of tail, and a female with cubs is rather a bad animal to pick trouble with. But Ordist talked about the cougar as though it were as small and harmless as a kitten.

The day arrived for Ordist to set out on his first expedition into the St. Mary's district and as he disappeared into the woods the watchers exhibited a certain uneasiness. He was accompanied by a pack of six dogs, highly trained and with a strain of bloodhound. A .32 long revolver was in a holster on his right hip. On his shoulder he carried a sack containing 120 feet of rope and provisions for himself and his hounds.

When well into the wilds Ordist unleashed his hounds and they sniffed about for a scent. On picking up a cougar's trail the dogs bounded off in pursuit, and on catching sight of their prey barked viciously. Not wishing to fight the pack the cougar took to the trees, and from a safe height snapped and snarled at the hounds. On coming up with his pack Ordist made ready to execute the job of capturing the treed beast. The ordinary hunter would consider his work practically done once the cougar took to the trees. A well-directed bullet would soon bring the brute down. But with Ordist the real work only begins with the treeing.

Boldly the hunter climbed the tree. As he ascended the cougar in alarm climbed to the topmost branches, where it clung with all fours, and spit and snapped in fear of falling among the hounds. In this precarious position the attention of the animal was diverted from Ordist to the baying hounds. Cautiously the hunter climbed to a level with the cougar, and with the assistance of a long stick passed a noose over the animal's head and immediately drew it taut. Quickly Ordist slipped to the ground and attached the rope to a simple device which permitted of a straight down-haul.

From then on there was a chance of a little excitement, even the intrepid Ordist was willing to admit. If the rope broke the hunter would have had to rely upon the accuracy of his revolver to save him from injury. More than once on his expeditions Ordist has faced such a contingency, but his gun has never failed him. However, as long as the noose remained taut the hunter had a stranglehold on the cougar. By strenuous heaving the beast was forced to relinquish its hold on the branches and slowly was lowered to the ground. The frantic pawing finally ceased through the strangling effect of the noose. Immediately the animal touched the ground Ordist roped it securely and when its strength revived it was helpless to battle on.

In this manner Ordist has captured 85 cougars. Altogether he had 400 cuts in his belt, having shot 315 when the situation became too acute to permit roping.—Toronto Star Weekly.

A Supreme Sacrifice

By AMALIES E. COBB

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

"Dear brother Victor—it's just like him," said Mrs. Eulette as she finished reading a letter that had just arrived.

"Is he coming on, mamma," eagerly questioned her daughter, Victoria. "Oh, how glad I shall be to see him."

There was genuine warmth and sincerity in the fresh young tones. Victoria had never seen the uncle she so cherished, but had always treasured the oft repeated tale of how when she was born the confirmed old bachelor after whom they had named her their first born, had come two thousand miles across the country to view the little mite he was so proud of.

Upon her every birthday, for eighteen years a few days before the natal occasion there arrived regularly some gift or memento. They kept pace with the maturing years. It was a silver cup, then a child's ring, then a wonderful doll, a tricycle, a talking machine, and so on until this strongly steadfast relative upon her graduation sent Victoria a watch and chain. After that for two years, every week, Victoria wrote a pleasant, loving letter and received in return a crudely fashioned epistle replete with tenderness and love.

She had last written him that she was about to marry Dudley Marsh. The Eulettes were comparatively poor people, and while Uncle Victor had been always profuse in his gifts, Mrs. Eulette had understood that her brother was scarcely even well to do. She was profoundly surprised, therefore, when she read in her brother's letter that he would be on hand by the wedding day and enclosed a draft for two thousand dollars.

"I want every cent of it spent for the wedding and for starting these young people out right in life," the epistle ran. "Dear little namesake, I feel that I must see her made happy at any cost."

Dudley Marsh demurred when he was made aware of the munificence of the generous Uncle Victor. He and Victoria had mapped out an ideal modest start in life, he said, and besides the dear old man was doing too much for her.

"You will break brother Victor's heart if you say one word to spoil his pleasure in showing his love for Victoria," declared Mrs. Eulette, and so the matter rested and Uncle Victor arrived, rugged, bronzed, suggesting a man who had known little else than hard work.

"You see, Bertha," he observed to his sister, "this is a wonderful event in the life of a man who never had chick nor child, and whose thoughts just revolve round and round the baby grown to a woman that was named after him," and to the last Uncle Victor smiled, chuckled, laughed, played the extravagant spendthrift to perfection, and as he left on the train for home and Victoria threw her arms about his neck and kissed him, the old man whispered rapturously to himself:

"It was worth it!"

Then the smile faded. His brow furrowed thoughtfully and all the long overland journey Uncle Victor sat grave faced and reflective as though turning over and over in his mind some serious problem. For twenty years he had conducted a restaurant in a little mining town. Making the supreme sacrifice of his life, he had followed an impulse he could not control when he learned of the approaching wedding. As a matter of fact he had cut away the only provision for his old age to give to Victoria comfort and happiness. Now, back home again, he found himself without a dollar in the world and started to work in one of the big mines of the district.

He received a few letters from Victoria bubbling over with the joys of a newly made bride, and these he treasured, for she did not write again after a year. Then sturdily he resigned himself to the arduous labor he had undertaken. One day there was a bad accident in this mine. A giant in strength, fearless, self-sacrificing, he fought his way to the surface four times, and each time carrying back to life an overcome miner, the last rescued one being the son of the wealthy owner of the mine.

For a month tenderly cared for at a hospital, a hero to all, the old man fought death and came off the victor, though a cripple for life. It was morning when his full senses had returned for the first time. Peacefully he lay on his cot, gazing out at the green-clad hills in the distance when a fluttering form crossed the room.

"Uncle! dear Uncle Victor!" cried Victoria Marsh, and she was kneeling at his side, her loving arms enclosing him. "Oh, you hero! and oh! you wicked, wicked to give up all you had for my happiness! But it is all right now, for Dudley has come into a great fortune, and he made me hurry to your side the moment we learned of all that had happened."

"I'm all right," declared Uncle Victor stanchly, "the mining boys have arranged to furnish me crutches and a home."

"Have they?" flared forth Victoria excitedly. "Well, they'll be disappointed! Right straight you are coming East with me, or Dudley will be out here with a posse to kidnap you. And," continued Victoria in a whisper, "there's a little child waiting for you, our first born, and we have named him after you—Victor!"

Retaining 23,485 Veterans.

In comparison with the United States, Canada continues to lead in the industrial re-training of disabled ex-service men. According to official figures published at Washington by the Federal Board of Vocational Education a total of 32,204 men have entered training out of 41,813 men who had been approved. In Canada at the same period 48,365 men had been approved of for courses under the vocational branch of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, and 43,124 had actually commenced retraining.

In the United States 3,409 men are recorded as having completed or discontinued training. During the same period in Canada 15,020 men graduated as trained. At present in Canada 25,185 men are shown as undergoing re-training. In all, 49,501 men have been approved for courses and 44,609 actually started on such re-training courses.

Agricultural Products In Sask.

Despite the very poor crop conditions that prevailed over the greater part of Saskatchewan last year, the total value of agricultural products in 1919, exclusive of the increase in the value of live stock, was $367,993,000, an increase of thirty million dollars over the year previous. The gain was chiefly due to better prices paid for grain crops, flax fibre, and to the growth of the dairy industry in that province. Oats, barley and flax were, generally speaking, better yielding crops in 1919 than in 1918.

He Was Wrong.

Perhaps you have already heard this incident of a Toronto motorist, and if you have, you may marvel that it does not occur oftener. The motorist stopped at a corner and offered to give a woman a ride downtown. "Sir!" she exclaimed, in great indignation, "what do you take me for?" "My mistake, madam," replied the motorist graciously, "I took you for a lady."

Love's Labor Lost.

There is an amusing little tale of a Hoover supporter, who, while in Washington recently, labored successfully to win a Wood supporter away from the general to Hoover. "I worked over him for half an hour," said the proselytizer. "Finally, with a sigh, he gave in, and said he guessed maybe I was right; I seemed to him to put up a pretty convincing line of argument. Flushed with triumph, I said to him, 'Where do you live?' His answer dashed hope to the ground and proved that all my effort was love's labor lost. 'Ottawa,' was his reply."

TOLD OF FOREIGN WORK OF Y.W.C.A.

THE NEEDS OF INDIA, CHINA AND OTHER FAR AWAY LANDS

A most interesting address was given by Miss Rose Beatty, National Foreign Secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association, at the Y.W.C.A. last night. Miss Layton, general secretary, presided, and after the opening exercises and a beautiful solo by Mrs. Frank Ellis, Miss Beatty spoke. She told of the foreign department of the Young Women's Christian Asociations and the six secretaries they support—three in India, two in China and one in Japan—and how another secretary is badly needed in Japan. Speaking of India, Miss Beaty said that the women there have no girlhood, and the way they are kept in seclusion makes them very hard to reach. The work of the association has been chiefly among students, nurses and the younger girls through the Girl Guide movement and among the Anglo-Indians. For all the millions of women and girls in China there are only ten associations. The two Canadian secretaries are in Hong Kong a city that has an association simply because the Chinese women refused to do without one. The great opportunity in Japan is among the industries and of these 60 per cent are under 20 years of age. Conditions under which many of these girls live and work are so bad that a large number of them contract tuberculosis.

Miss Beatty closed her address with an earnest appeal, asking each girl to remember that through the secretary she helps to send out she can hear the Master say, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

After hearing Miss Beatty's stirring address no one could help but feel that she must have a share, and a big share in the work in these foreign lands. The girls of the local association are trying to raise $200.00 for the work this week. Up to date Miss Brownscombes team is ahead.

BARRIE WELFARE CLUB DANCE

The crowning event of a season of social activities was the "at home" of the Barrie Welfare Club held last night in the hall of the Great War Veterans on Murray street. Miss Evelyn Ryan, of Belleville, who was to have provided the music for the dancing, telegraphed at the last minute to say that she was unable to be present on account of illness. For the moment the live committee which had the evening's arrangements in hand, were in a quandary, but the Follis' Orchestra, which plays for the weekly dances of the Veterans, was asked to step in the breach and this they did in a manner which brought for the praise of all the dancers. The committee in charge were Messrs. J. W. Irvine, Dennis Perdue, Oscar Nicholl's and George Kelly. It was the first dance held by the Welfare Club and the committee and the club members in general are to be heartily congratulated upon the success achieved in spite of difficulties against which they were compelled to work.

The patronesses were Mesdames Thomas Barrie, Edward Hiland, Francis Mather, Miss Freda Curtis and Miss Phyllis Goldy.

There were 22 dances on the program and after the 12th dance the gathering adjourned to the supper room above where refreshments in plentious abundance were supplied under the excellent catering of Cooper's confectioners.

At the commencement of the dance Mr. Francis Mather made a short apology for the absence of Miss Ryan, but at the close all were in accord that in view of the splendid music supplied by the Follis Orchestra no apologies were necessary at all.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Barrie, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Hiland, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Mather, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cressman, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fitzgerald, Mr. and Mrs. Hall; Messrs. Fred. BOYS' CAMP AT LEE'S.

An Ideal Spot for This Year's Back-To-Nature Outing.

The boys' camp, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. will be situated at Lee's Point this year. Mr. D. A. Loomis and Mr. F. G. McNeely of the Y.M.C.A. went by launch yesterday to Rice Lake to locate a site for the boys' camp this year and made the above choice. They visited Pine Tree Point, which they found to be an ideal spot with the exception that several of the advantages to be had at Lee's Point were missing. They traversed the south shore towards Bewdley and inspected the Lee's Point site, which they found to be most satisfactory in every respect.

To those residents of the city who are familiar with the old-time picnic grounds on the south shore of the lake, the name of Lee's Point will bring back memories which augur well for the boys' back-to-nature trip this year. The situation is ideal, rising from a sandy beach in a gentle slope covered by pines. It is also rumored that mosquitoes are almost an unknown quantity in this vicinity. The bathing beach is excellent and well sheltered from the lake by the point. There is also an excellent motor road into the camp, which is nowadays one of the first essentials of a successful camp.

TRADES COUNCIL DISCUSSED THAT APPOINTMENT OF ALDERMAN

Delegates Hold That Position Should be Filled Automatically by Next Highest Candidate at the Polls—Commendable Movement on Housing Question.

The question of appointing a new alderman to fill the vacancy in the City Council was the main subject of discussion at the Trades and Labor Council's regular meeting last night. After some discussion a resolution was passed on the motion of Delegate Frost to the effect that the Trades and Labor Council go on record as being opposed to the system adopted by the City Council for filling vacancies, and that the Council be requested to petition the Legislature to amend the Special Act under which the municipality of Peterborough is governed so as to omit the clause which allowed for the appointment by the other city fathers of an alderman to fill any vacancy. It was thought by the delegates that if this clause was omitted it would mean that vacancies would automatically be filled by the next highest candidate in the last elections.

Delegate Frost said that it was a mistake in the first place to allow this method of filling a vacancy.

Delegate Hartley thought that under the ward system they would have to go to the people to elect another alderman, but under the genral voting system as was used in Peterborough the councillors could appoint one.

Delegate Lane: "Brother Hartley is mistaken. The Municipal Act calls for the next candidate in the running to take the office, but Peterborough works under a special Act."

President Bolwell: "The change in the system was asked by the Trades and Labor Council some three years ago, when Brother Dillon brought up the matter of changing from the ward to the general system of voting. Labor did not have a chance whatever under the old ward system, but in asking for a change to the general system of voting we did not anticipate that it would give the councillors authority to appoint a man to fill any vacancy."

Alderman Crowe: "If Labor had the advantage in the Council it would be all right. City Clerk Armstrong would like to give the Trades Council a talk on municipal law, if given the opportunity."

Delegate Frost: "It is the principle of the thing and not just for the sake of the Labor party that I am fighting. The highest vote should decide who shall represent the people. It would not be all right if Labor was in power in the Council. If Labor was in power and still the same conditions existed it would be rotten."

Delegate Stevens: "It would be fairer to go back to the people to fill any vacancy."

Delegate Hartley interrupted that it was not necessary to open twenty-two polls for the sake of electing one man, and that the people had stated their choice at the last elections.

The Sign at the Bridge.

Delegates wanted to know who gave authority for placing a notice at the Hunter street bridge stating the scale of wages to be paid. Ald. Crowe was asked and did not know, and later when the Mayor entered he also was asked. The Mayor stated that it was not put up on his authority and that he did not know who put it up. As soon as he heard about the affair, he had the sign removed. Also he went to the men, asked them to go back to work, and promised them that their interests would be protected.

Characterized as Dangerous.

Another question asked was in reference to the street care going north and south on George street, which formerly stopped on the near side of Charlotte street, but which now passed the intersection before stopping. This was characteribed as dangerous and inconvenient and in many cases was the cause of people missing their car. No one seemed to know who was responsible. It was ugested that Ald. Crowe bring the matter before the Council, but he thought that if this discussion appeared in the press it would be just as effective.

Housing Question.

A communication with reference to the housing question was received from the Mayor. He asked that a conference between the Housing Commission and the Trades Council be ararnged to discus sthe proposition now before the Legislature. President Bolwell and Secretary Stevens were appointed a committee to get in tuoch with the Builders' Exchange and arrange for a meeting.

Two communications from the Winnipeg Defence Committee asking for moral support were received.

Resolutions expressing moral support to the Metal Polishers and also to the Meat Cutters and Butchers Workmen who are now out on strike were passed.

The chair was occupied by President Bolwell and there was a fair attendance. Next meeting, May 19.

Warsaw, May 6. — Fighting between the Poles and Bolsheviki for the possession of Kiev, the Ukrainian capital, continues day and night. In the entire semi-circle of Kiev bridgehead the Polish infantry is in contact with the Bolshevik infantry. The Poles are slowly pushing back the enemy in the face of machine-gun and artillery resistance.

Occupy Skvira.

Polish cavalry, operating in the offensive against the Bolsheviki, have occupied Skvira in a Polish thrust toward the Dnieper. Skvira, about sixty miles southwest of Kiev, was a Bolshevik stronghold.

Today's Polish communique announces that two Red divisions that wer cut off from the retreating Bolshevik army last week were annihilated. Fighting is continuing, the statement says, the Bolsheviki stubbornly defending their positions, although the Poles are making some progress.

POLISHERS QUIT WORK—REFUSED AN INCREASE OF 15c AN HOUR

(By Canadian Press.)

Schenectady, N. Y., May 6.—Nearly two thousand employes of the local plant of the General Electric Company are now out on strike, between 1,500 and 1,700 having quit work because the company refused to compel delinquent members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers to pay their dues.

Several hundred more, members of the Polishers' Union, are also on strike as a result of the refusal of the company to increase their pay from 85 cents to 1 per hour.

In connection with the I. B. E. W. strike, the company issued a statement to the effect that it would maintain a neutral attitude, considering the question of dues paying as one to be settled by the local union.

International officers of both unions are here and are supporting the demands of the employees.

ROBT. W. TRAVERS KILLED IN LONDON

AT ONE TIME MANAGER BANK OF MONTREAL PETERBOROUGH

HE WAS BORN IN THIS CITY

MET DEATH AS RESULT OF RAILWAY ACCIDENT YESTERDAY AFTERNOON

London, Ont., May 6.—Robert W Travers, manager of the main branch of the Bank of Montreal here, was instantly killed beneath the wheels of a westbound freight train in the Grand Trunk yards east of Waterloo street yesterday afternoon. Mr. Travers, who during the past six months had been in a serious condition of ill-health because of diabetes, left his residence at the bank early yesterday afternoon, and shortly afterward an appeal was made to the police to assist in locating him. He appeared at the Waterloo street crossing of the railway, and after walking along the tracks sat for a time on the freight house platform. He attracted the attenion of a railway man, who believed that he was a Railway Commission officer. Later William Burrows, the crossing watchman, sent W. T. Johnson, a fellow employe, to question Mr. Travers. As Johnson walked toward him the freight train passed, and he saw Mr. Travers suddenly step forward and fall beneath the wheels. Coroner Robert Ferguson stated that death was instantaneous. The law respecting railway accidents requires that an inquest be held, and the body was viewed by the jury today.

Deceased gentleman was born in Peterborough in 1860 in the premises now owned by the Peterborough Club, then used by the local branch of the Bank of Montreal for business purposes. His father, John N. Travers, was at that time manager here. The late Robert W. Travers was the godson of General Sir Robert Travers. He was educated at Trinity College School, Port Hope end had spent the greater part of his business life in the service of the Bank of Montreal. He was manager at Peterborough from 1909 to 1915, when be was transferred to London. His widow was formerly Miss da A. Smith, London.

The late Mr. Travers' business connection in Peterborough was of a successful nature. He was a courteous gentleman and made many friends in this city for himself and for his bank. Toward his staff he showed keen interest in their welfare, and his kindly consideration at all times was helpful and encouraging to many a young subordinate Grand Vizier Sends Two Emissaries in Hope of Effecting This Purpose—Doubtful if They'll Ever Return Caucasus May Turn Bolshevik.

(By Canadian Press.)

Constantinople, May 6.—After a consultation with his entire Cabinet Damad Ferid Pasha, Grand Vizier, decided today to send Nazim Pasha, former chief of staff, and Noureddine Pasha, formerly governor of Smyrna, to Angora for the purpose of effecting a compromise with Mustapha Kemal Pasha, Nationalist leader.

Prisoners Mutiny.

Efforts to induce Turkish troops to oppose Mustapha Kemal's forces appear to become more difficult daily. Three thousand Turkish prisoners, who had just been repatriated from Egypt, mutinied when told that they would be sent to Aantelia for this purpose.

May Not Return.

Doubt is expressed here if the two emissaries the Grand Vizier is sending to Angora wil lever return. Col. Jafar Tayor, who recently declared Adrianople independent, is reported to be preparing to resist Greek occupation.

No Serious Defence

Batum, Caucasia, May 6. — Azerbaijan troops, which were holding Baku when that city was approached by the Russian Bolshevik forces, failed to make any serious defence of that place, according to reports reaching here.

Bolshevik gunboats fired a few shells over the city, but there was little attempt to do actual damage.

British Prisoners.

Two British lieutenants and some British sailors who were captured by the Soviet army at Baku will be held, it is said, until an equal number of Turkish nationalists are released from Malta by the British.

The danger of the entire Caucasus region turning Bolshevik is causing great uneasiness among business men here.

SUCH IS AWARD OF COURT JURY IN SLANDER TRIAL

HOW JUDGE VIEWS THE CASE

CHARACTERIZES DEFENDANT AS NOT ACTING PART OF MANLY MAN

Toronto, May 6.—After an absence from the Asize Court yesterday of two and a half hours, a jury awarded Arthur E. O'Leary 1500 damages against James Simpson, editor of the Industrial Banner, from whom he claimed $10,000 for libel and slander. Simpson, in a statement at the Toronto District Labor Council, had accused O'Leary, a former president of seeking to betray his trust as a member of the Labor movement by an endeavor to induce the Employers' Association at a time when the metal trades strike was in progress to subscribe $5000 to a proposed new labor paper. In his charge to the jury Mr. Justice Middleton pointed to the serious aspect of the case insofar as at the time the charge was made O'Leary occupied a very important position in the Labor movement, was seeking re-election, and when defeated and Simpson was victorious, attributed his defeat to the charge which had been made against him of intriguing with the enemy. There was nothing more subtle and insidious than charges of that kind, and under the circumstances, in his lordship's opinion, the action of O'Leary was justified.

SPLENDID LECTURE ON GEN. ALLENBY IN PALESTINE, BY PROFESSOR MORRISON

Word Pictures of British Pluck and Gallantry in Fight For Holy Land

"With General Allenby in Palestine" was the topic of an illustrated lecture by Professor Morrison, of Queen's University, Kingston before the Women's Canadian Club in the assembly hall of the public library last evening.

Dr. E. V. Frederick occupied the chair and in introducing the speaker dwelt upon the desirability for more general interest in world-wide projects such as these which Professor Morrison would bring before us in his lecture. "We have," Dr. Frederick said," been broadened in our conception of things and events by the influence of a world war. Generally speaking the interests of the majority of us before the war were limited—they were narrow and purely local. Our attention was solely taken up with the City Council and such matters to the disregard of things that effect humanity at large. But we had undergone a change."

The Desert Campaign

Professor Morrison in his opening remarks touched briefly on the experiences of his military life in France and Palestine, dwelling principally on the desert campaign, and bringing to the front that gallant officer, "General Allenby."

Professor Morrison is the type of a speaker that can impel an audience to interested attention in spite of itself. A strong and magnetic personality with a pleasing Scotch account and a wealth of quaint humor, his lecture was as entertaining as it was instructive.

Military Life

The speaker, who was himself in command of a Scottish division, gave his audience a glimpse of military life in the East during those past strenuous days. Somehow or other we had formed the idea that soldiers engaged in warfare were an unhappy lot. This was anything but true, he said. There, in the silence of the Egyptian night, neath brilliant starshine, when he and his men wrapped their blankets around them and laid down to sleep, one of the deepest impressions was the sense of happiness. "There," Professor Morrison said, "was where he learned how to distinguish between luxuries and necessities." This was where he found out how little we can do with, and with this knowledge came a sense of freedom—freedom from all the petty conventionalities of modern life.

The Scottish Soldier

One of the most pleasing attributes of the Scottish soldier, was his never-failing humor—a quality that did not

NECESSITY THE MOTHER OF INVENTION.

MANY SOLUTIONS for present-day unrest are offered—by philosophers, students in world economics, ministers of the gospel, and ministers of national laws—but the question still remains to be solved. Archdeacon Warren, of Toronto, in a thoughtful sermon, found the solution, to his mind, in sacrifice as the underlying principle of that brotherhood of man the world was led to hope for as a result of the war. And perhaps the archdeacon was right, for if the world is ever to be adjusted on a plane of equality and universal justice the spirit of individual sacrifice to a more or less extent in the interests of the whole must obtain—and the first sacrifice needed is that of profiteering, if, indeed, such a term as sacrifice can be applied to the relinquishing of what is nothing but bare-faced robbery of brother and sister mortals.

Since the Armistice there has been nothing but an upward movemnt in everything—for labor, for living, for pleasure, and even for religion. And we are now facing a new cycle of demands. The worker finds he is no better off with increased wages than he was before. He still stands, as an exchange says, in the same relative position to his neighbor, and since there is less to divide after the ravages of war, the worker finds that the money in his pocket gives him no more command over the goods in the market than he possessed with less wages.

Another trouble is, we are all more or less imbued with the idea that in the general scramble now at its height some one class is going to reap a permanent advantage over the other, and each class is dominated maybe with the thought that it is the one the most deserving of such an advantage. And until some fundamental principle upon which values can be adjusted on an equitable basis to all is accepted, to the elimination of extortion in any direction, we shall continue to have unrest and more of it.

That greater production is needed there is no doubt. But perhaps we are all tired of being told that. The doctrine preached during the war was that we should as a result have a better world, shorter hours and sufficient remuneration with which to enjoy this beautiful world which is man's inheritance. Shorter hours and more pay have been obtained by the industrial class, but it seems there are less things to go around and wages are absorbed by the high cost of living. As to the average salaried man! God knows he doesn't live: he just exists.

And so, if we cannot or will not produce more, by manual exertion, the thought arises, can we look to some other source for accomplishing greater production? 'Tis an old maxim that necessity is the mother of invention. This principle has been applied to farming during the past decade, for with the demand for greater production than possible with available labor, there sprang into the market all sorts of farm machinery for eliminating what was in this country at one time practically slavery. And it looks as though the brains of the inventive genius have plenty of room for play these days in responding to the need for more efficiency in the world's industrial fields.

The Westminster Gazette contends that there has been a reversal of the natural process, in which the shorter hours and the higher nominal pay have preceded the other developments that make these changes possible with profit. If a mistake has been made in that way, the mistake was inevitable, and was, indeed encouraged by the loose talk of statesmen while the war was in progress. The mistake having been made, it may serve as a stimulus to a quicker reorganization than would otherwise have been likely.

A CITIZENS' BAND.

THERE HAS BEEN some talk of a citizens' band—one which can be pointed to as at the call of the municipality for this, that and the other occasion of a public nature. The idea is a good one and should be encouraged. Of course, the question really crystallizes in opportunity and ways and means for securing and maintaining such an organization. Then, a real citizens' band must be open to all applicants, and admission to membership not restricted to any particular body of men.

In this connection, the G. W. V. A. have agreed to an "open door" policy as regards membership to its present band, to contribute $1000 if the city increases its grant name this musical organization the Veterans' Band, and to hold itself at the municiways when band music is desired. The last Sunday afternoon the Veterans demonstrated that they have made rapid strides in efficiency, so much so that one alderman who happened to be present, was heard to remark to the effect that Ald. Crowe's adverse criticism had been quite uncalled for. There were forty-two bandsmen present on that occasion, their offerings were of a very creditable nature and showed that in that organization there are the makings of a band—citizens' or not—which would reflect a full measure of credit on its own home town wherever in competition with other provincial bands.

UTILIZE OUR RESOURCES.

URGING SCIENTIFIC development and utilization of federal and provincial resources, the Canadian Labor Press, which is the official organ of the Allied Trades and Labor Council at Ottawa, and has the endorsation of the Hamilton District Trades and Labor Council, the Hamilton Building Trades and Labor Council, and the Kitchener Twin City Trades and Labor Council, says in a special article:

"Association between science and industry gave Germany a strong position in the commercial world before the war. Association between science and industry will help to make Canada economically independent, create new wealth to meet war obligations, and so foster industrial development that new avenues of employment will be provided, and Canadian labor will be assured of steady work at good wages. In their own and in the national interest, Canadian trade unions could well memorialize governments throughout the Dominion to devote special attention to the scientific development and utilization of federal and provincial resources. The certainty of new wealth which such investigations would reveal, and the resultant establishment of primary processes of manufacture in Canada would attract capital, stimulate industrial progress, and improve the labor market.

"There is no question that adequate provision of facilities for scientific research should be one of the dominant considerations of government, of agricultural organizations, and of industrial workers in Canada today. There should be joint action to determine and develop the fish, forest and mineral resources of the country, and generous appropriations for the encouragement of agriculture and improvements of farm methods.

"The net federal debt is now nearly $1,900,000,000. In five years the per capita debt charge upon every man, woman and child in the Dominion has risen from $43.49 to nearly $210. Science can be made to pay the bill. There is wealth in the mines of northern Ontario, in the asbestos areas of Quebec, in the fisheries of the Maritime Provinces and the Pacific Coast. But the value of all combined gives only a suggestion of the total natural wealth of Canada if its resources could be scientifically determined and utilized."

AUSTRALIAN TARIFF.

A DETAILED ANALYSIS of the new Australian tariff fully bears out he cable report from the Canadian Trade Commissioner at Melbourne that the revised tariff was "strongly protective" with "marked increases" in the duties on a number of products. The Australian rates on imports run up to 55 per cent., whereas the highest rate in the Canadian tariff, even with war tax included, is 42½ per cent. Nor are the maximum rates in the Australian tariff limited to articles of luxury. On wearing apparel the general tariff is 55 per cent., and the British preferential tariff 40 per cent. On boots the import duty is about 50 per cent.; on chinaware, earthenware and glassware, 40 per cent.; and on pianos, 45 per cent. In the case of many products the Australian rates are in the form of specific duties which represent a high advalorem rate and mean increased protection to domestic industries in time of falling prices.

HARD ON LLOYD GEORGE.

THE HAMILTON HERALD says: "When that coroner's jury in Cork brought in a verdict charging Premier Lloyd George and Lord French, lord lieutenant of Ireland, with being guilty of the murder of the late lord mayor of Cork, the world laughed at what looked like a piece of malicious silliness. Of course, it was foolish; but there was method in it, for it has given the "friends of Irish freedom" one more excuse for their railings against British oppression. It is interesting to note that one of the "whereases" in the preamble of a resolution adopted at a Toronto meeting of friends of Irish freedom, declaring the right of the Irish people to establish a republic, was this: "Whereas the verdict of a coroner's jury charges the British Government with instigating the murder of the mayor of Cork."

"In a little while we shall probably be informed that all these murders that have been taking place in Ireland have been instigated by Lloyd George for the purpose of discrediting the inoffensive, peaceable and law-abiding people of Ireland, and the crop of 'whereases' will be multiplied exceedingly."

NOTES AND COMMENT.

LIBERTY BONDS have fallen so low that dishonest messengers are deserting Wall Street and seeking employment in sugar factories.

IN AN EFFORT to restrict imports and overcome the discount on Italian exchange, the government of Italy has prohibited the importation of foreign butter, cheese, condensed milk and other foodstuffs for the remainder of the year.

THE HAMILTON HERALD says: Hamilton is a standard-time island entirely surrounded by daylight saving neighbors. Let us try to enjoy our "splendid isolation." Well, like Peterborough, Hamilton has shown better sense than her neighbors in not adopting a time it was not within her jurisdiction to enforce. Daylight saving was of German origin, and, like a good many German measures, leaves confusion in its wake.

WAGES IN JAPAN are far below those in this country. The United States consul at Nagoya, in a report to the Department of Commerce at Washington, states that the wages of clock adjusters in his district run from $1.26 to $1.40 per day; woodworkers, joiners and finishers on piece are paid from $1.30 to $1.65 per day, while machine workers get from $1.23 to $1.50, and glass painters from $1.33 to $1.50 daily. These wages, it should be noted, are paid for skilled workers.

TWO SURE CROPS.

(Toronto Globe.)

There were 2,348 millionaires in the United States when the war began, and nearly 7,000 when it ended—a fact which causes the Saskatoon Star to reflect that war produces two sure crops, one misery, the other millionaires.

REPORT ON FARM CANDITIONS

The following is a summary of reports made by Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:—

The latter part of April was wet and cold, and the condition of vegetation was very backward for the opening of May, some Representatives putting progress of sowing as about two weeks later than usual. On Friday, however, work on the land had been generally resumed. Estimates of the acreage of spring grains in by the first of May range all the way from 15 to 60 per cent by counties; a few individual farmrs have finished, while others had almost nothing sown.

Much attention is being given to early potato planting, a considerable acreage already having been put in, in some cases before the land was really fit for the crop. There is a shortage of good seed in many localities.

Essex reports that early tomatoes already have been set outside under cotton in large quantities, while in Prince Edward county a considerable acreage of peas for canning factories has been got in.

Fall wheat and clover look well, speaking generally; but some representatives are of opinion that recent raw weather has given the former crop a slight setback.

Huron states that some farmers who are growing sweet clover say that the crop never came through the winter in better shape.

Kent tells of one farmer in that county who is growing one hundred acres of flax for fibre and fifty acres for seed, adding that the grower will have a small mill erected so that the flax may not only be grown but also progressed on the place. Huron also reports that several new flax mills will be started this year, and that the industry will open up a good deal of sod and pasture acreage, which is likely to make grazing land dear.

Fodder is so scant with some that live stock is being thrust on the grass before there is a really satisfying bite for them. Grain especially is scarce. Concentrates are almost impossibly high in values. Oxford asserts that some very poor bran, mixed with oat hulls, is selling in that county at $60 a ton.

Most of the live stock are still being carried along on little better than a maintenance ration. Even some working horses are getting only a small share of grain with their fodder. Vealing calves are being shipped by the carload from Prince Edward at from 14 to 16 cents a pound, but Lennox and Addington places prices at from 12 to 19 cents. Young pure-bred bulls in the latter county, the product of different breeders, have been selling at $200, $300 and $400. Good milch cows in Lanark are quoted at from $150 to $200, although lower prices are cited elsewhere.

Cheese sold at a little over 30½ cents a pound on the Picton Board, at its opening meeting last week, and at 30 cents on the Kingston Board.

Lennox and Addington also reports that nearly all the cheese factories in that district are skimming the whey. One factory that handled about 5,000,000 lbs. of milk last season said that from that quantity about 12,000 lbs. whey butter, which brought an average price of 50 cents a lb.

Fewer hogs are being fed, as a large number of brood sows were disposed of during the last six or eight months. Prices now range from $18 to $21 a cwt. Little pigs vary in value, ranging from $12 to $22 a pair according to locality.

Good young horses weighing around 1,500 lbs. are bringing from $500 to $550 per team in the Port Arthur district.

Norfolk reports a big demand in all lines of the poultry industry.

The Employment Service of the Department of Labor of the Ontario Government reports a decrease in placements for the week ending April 24. A total of 2133 applicants were placed within their own zone, 219 were transferred from one point within the province to another and 55 were transferred to other provinces.

Corresponding figures for the week ending April 24 were 2502 171 and 3. Three industries show decreases, laboring from 1029 to 800; lumbering from 277 to 296 and the manufacture of metals from 165 to 137. Agricultural placements increased from 157 to 195. Applications and re-applications numbered 3019, a decrease from 3268 the previous week. Vacancies notified were 3137 instead of 3461 during the week ending April 17.

In the Women's Department total placements were 139 with an additional 405 in casual work. This was a decrease from 175 regular placements and an increase from 349 casual jobs secured the preceding week. Commercial work and domestic and personal service were again the highest with 48 and 74 placements respectively.

MILLBROOK

(Special Correspondence.)

Millbrook, May 6.— The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. John Douglas and daughter will wish them continued success in their new home in Peterborough, but will regret their removal from this vicinity where they have been excellent citizens. Mr. Douglas has a large grain business at Fraserville and Omemeee and thought Peterborough was a better centre for his increasing business.

Several freight cars jumped the track just south of Millbrook Junction on Tuesday evening. They were loaded with eggs. Scambled eggs will be the main dish for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Nichols are leaving this week for Bailieborough where Mr. Nichols has been appointed manager of the Bank of Toronto branch there. Their many Millbrook friends are sorry to lose them but wish them success.

Mr. S. Thurston and Mrs. F. C. Gordon of Dunsford were the guests of Mrs. H. Skitch recently.

Rev. Canon Allen lost a valuable horse from paralysis on Tuesday.

The many friends of Mr. J. Collins will be sorry to learn he had the misfortune to fall down stairs in Chicago since he left here, and was laid up for a few days. He was coming out of a doctor's office when the accident happened. He fell down twenty-steps landing on his hip and head and received a bad scalp wound, several inches in length, but on bones were broken. When falling he thought he was going to be killed and thanked Providence for sparing his life. He expects to continue his trip West in a few days.

Miss Gertrude Spence of Burketon spent the week end with her parents

Brevities.

The death took place on Monday afternoon after a short illness of Mary Ann Feguson, wife of Mr. Jas. Andrews, in her 83rd year. There survive a husband, three sons, William, of Toronto; Harry, of Owen Sound, and the Rev. G. Andrews, of Dundoc; also two daughters, Mable, at home, and Mrs. Fred. Stewart, also of this village. The deceased has been a resident of Norwood for the past five years and was well liked by all who knew her.

Mr. Percy Ingtech, who has been ill in the hospital in Ottawa, arrived home on Saturday last. Mr. Shields of that city accompanied him.

Miss Reba Squire, of Peterborough, spent the week-end at her home here.

Mr. Alex. Weir, of Colborne, spent the week-end under the parental roof.

Mr. Norman McKelvie, of Belleville, was home for a few days this week.

ATTITUDE OF THE SAFETY LEAGUE

"Every now and then someone asks about the attitude of the Safety League towards traffic accidents" says R. B. Morley, General Manager of the Ontario Safety League in a statement isued today. "Our attitude was clearly defined years ago when we began our educational campaign in 1914. There are five classes of people using our streets who have to be considered in the question of traffic. These classes are: street-car operators, automobile drivers, teamsters, cyclists, and pedestrians. Each one of these classes has certain rights on the highways. Each has certain liabilities. Each must respect the rights of the otherse as the use of our streets is not confined to any one class. We need all classes of traffic for the complex life of our communities."

"The careless pedestrian known as the "jay-walker" is a menace to any city. The cyclist who does not obey the rules of the road is a menace. The teamster who hogs the road and takes unnecessary chances is a menace. The automobile driver who uses the streets regardless of the safety of others is a menace. The Street-ar operator who drives his car without adequate care for all who may be on the streets is a menace. Let us get together on this matter. Let us all use the streets in a proper and sane fashion. Let us each respect the rights of others. And above all let us have more safety on the public highways by the exercise of ordinary care."

COAL PRICES DROP

Relief in Western Canada Result of Recent Developments

(By Canadian Press.)

Winnipeg, Man., May 6— Prices of coal will be lowered throughout western Canada as hte result of extensive developments to be carried out on the Alberta coal branch where steam shovels will be used instead of the more costly mining process to open a 30-foot seam of bituminous coal. This claim was made by Geo. F. Macdonald, of Vancouver, who was a recent visitor here.

HIGH COST OF PEACE.

British Delegates Criticised For the Expenditures.

With a bill for £503.388 for expenses for the British Peace Mission in Paris already before the British House of Commons and other expenses to be listed, a cry of "gross extravagance" has been raised against the delegation. Members of the House, and especially Col. J. C. Wedgwood, Labor member from Newcastle-under-Lyme, declared that the bill when it is all in may reach the £2,000,000 mark. Charges of lavish expenditures for "the clothes of the typists, dances, bands and champagne" have been made.

Sir Alfred Mond, Commissioner of Works, has presented his bill, which totals £218,151, as follows: Rent in Paris £123,000; maintenance £12,000; reinstatement, £48,651; fuel, £9,000; staff, £5,560, and miscellaneous, £10,000.

The "staff" item refers to workers in the office of the Commissioner of Works, upon whom devolved the care and the management of the buildings occupied by the mission in Paris. There were 524 members of the British delegation. The item for "miscellaneous" expenses has not been described.

The British delegation had five hotels in Paris—the Majestic, staff headquarters; the Astoria, D'Albe Baltimore and La Perouse. In addition to these it used the Villa Majestic, where high officials of the Cabinet, army, navy were lodged; No. 23 Rue Nitot, where Premier Lloyd George and Arthur J. Balfour, Foreign Minister, lived, and a temporary building at the race course at Anteuil, where the printing was done. Also a flat was retained for the use of the First Lord of the Admiralty, but Col. Wedgwood declared that that official "only visited it once or twice."

Sir Alfred Mond admitted before the House that the American peace delegation had only one hotel in Paris, but he added that the British "did the thing very well," whereupon the House cheered ironically, and one member asserted that instead of wining, dining and dancing in Paris, members of the British delegation should have gone to bed each night and thought over the work of the conference instead of indulging in such relaxation.

It was emphasized during the debate that a large sum of money was spent in Paris for food for the staff and a host of officials who were constantly "running over there to give a hand in the making of peace." These expenditures will come under the head of traveling expenses, subsidies, allowances, etc. In addition there will be expenses for printing, telephoning, telegraphing, secret service, police and many other things, not the least of which will be that of special entertainment of British and foreign delegates.

Literary Ireland.

For true obliviousness there is nothing like the mind of the United States in regard to Canada says the New Republic. It is, as a continental act, unique. The citizen of the United States appropriates to himself the whole name of American, and no American of literary activity ever writes or thinks of writing his Canadian impressions. The American has nothing against Canada, nothing whatever. But Canada to him is a sort of backdrop to the American scene, or a lunge into the empty air. American ignorance of Canada is as simple and inclusive as a yawn. On this account, surely, we ought to be prepared for the reminder that Victorian England was hardly more aware of Ireland. This Victorian example in respect to Ireland held its own until Bernard Shaw and George Moore, and Oscar Wilde and Yeats, and Synge and George Russell invaded the consciousness—and the complacency—of literary England, and compelled literary England to ask, Where on earth did these fellows come from?

British Nickel Now.

The question of introducing nickel coinage in Great Britain has been under consideration for some time, but no actual decision has been arrived at. The present excessively high price of silver, which involves a loss on the mining of silver coin has brought the matter prominently to the front. There is considerable opinion in favor of nickel currency.

Great Britain is one of the few countries of the world that have not adopted the grey metal in this use, says an exchange. The best nickel coin made before the war was that of Austria, which was pure nickel, and not copper alloy, as are most. Germany also has a large nickel coinage circulation for sums under the mark, the 10-pfennig and 20-pfennig pieces being those most widely employed in both countries. However, the war claimed the metal for military use, and few coins are now found.

Spain's National Flower.

"And now, children," asked the teacher, "can you tell me the national flower of England?"

"The rose!" came the eager chorus.

"And of France?"

"Lilies," (after some hesitation).

"And Spain?"

Dead silence. The pupils looked blankly at each other. Then a hand was waved frantically in the air and a shrill voice piped out: "Bulrushes, Miss!"

A Canadian Protege of Beaverbrook.

The latest of the growing colony of editors of the London Mail, Sir Campbell Stuart, is nothing if not a diplomatist. He is a master of the honeyed word—something on the lines of what the Americans describe as "the warm hand and the marble heart." The curious thing is that he came over from Canada as a protege of Lord Beaverbrook. He is distinctly clever, but new, I think, to newspaper work.

THE DWINDLING DOLLAR.

Drop of Value Since 1896 Is Very Sensational.

The purchasing power of the dollar has declined greatly since 1914, but it was back in 1896 that the dollar had its greatest buying power.

Some figures have been given out from Washington showing how the value of the dollar has gone down steadily year by year since 1896. Taking the price in that year of about one hundred different commodities in general use and comparing the prices on these representative articles each year since, the purchasing value of the dollar is said to have decline as follows:

1896......	$1.00	1908......	$ .74
1897......	.97	1909......	.69
1888......	.90	1910......	.68
1899......	.82	1911......	[illegible]
1900......	.75	1912......	.64
1901......	.78	1913......	.61
1902......	.75	1914......	.63
1903......	.75	1915......	.60
1904......	.74	1916......	.50
1905......	.73	1917......	.36
1906......	.70	1918......	[illegible]
1907......	.66	1919......	.32

In the last month of 1919 the decline is said to have gone to 29 cents, although the average for the year was 32. These are American figures, but in Canada pretty much the same experience has been gone through. If the hundred commodities on which this calculation is based included everything a family would ordinarily purchase, or if in everything else here has been a similar increase in prices or decline in the buying power of money, it means that the man who earned $20 a week in 1896 was as well paid as he is to-day if he draws $60 per week, and the man who earned $2,000 in 1896 was as well off at that sum as he is now if he earns $6,000 a year. In the latter case however, if a man saved one-twentieth of his salary ($100) in 1896, and saved the same percentage now ($30) he might be better off to that extent, because it is the dollar that is spent, not the dollar saved, that has declined in value. The dollar that is saved may recover its purchasing value, or some part of it, in course of time.

It is not probable, and perhaps it is not at all desirable, that prices should ever drop to the 1896 level, or the dollar be as scarce and powerful as it then was. To-day a Toronto housekeeper pays $2.20 for a chicken; in 1896 she used to buy two for 35 cents—not as good chickens as those bought now, but deemed good at that time. Nearly everything is three or four times the price of 1896. No matter how wages may go up, it seems to be comparatively easy for prices to over-top them.

Chinaman Owns Airplane.

Henry Chew, of Galt, a Chinese restaurant magnate, is the first person in Canada to own his own airplane and pilot it as a civilian. Mr. Chew owns a J.N. 4, and wants hangar room at the Bishop-Barker Airdrome, Armour Heights, Toronto, from which he will fly to his places of business throughout Ontario. Chew learned to fly last summer at Armour Heights.

Invitation to Prince.

The city of Calgary is inviting the Prince of Wales to spend a two months' vacation in Alberta when returning to the Dominion. His Royal Highness has a ranch fifty miles southwest of Calgary, where he will raise ponies, sheep and cattle.

Was Afraid.

Little Elizabeth was spending a week with an aunt. On the first night, when bedtime came, the aunt asked her little guest if she was frightened in the dark. "Oh, no, auntie," replied Elizabeth. "That's lovely," said the aunt, with a sigh of relief. "I was a little afraid once," went on Elizabeth, "when I went into the pantry to get a cookey." "What were you afraid of then?" "I was afraid I couldn't find the cookey."

The official capital of Abyssinia is changed from time to time as the supply of firewood in the neighborhood becomes exhausted.

Successful Woman Trapper.

Trapping predatory animals is scarcely the kind of occupation in which a woman might be expected to distinguish herself, even with the great extension of the range of feminine activities to which we have been accustomed lately. Mrs. Ada Tingley of Idaho, is reported, however, by the Northwestern division of the United States biological survey, to be so successful in this employment that her male rivals are finding it hard to keep up with her records. Her victims are mainly coyotes, bob-cats, wolves, lynxes and mountain lions. At 8:30 every morning Mrs. Tingley mounts her cayuse and rides off to her traps, of which she runs six lines, of 50 each. She uses a fish bait prepared by a secret formula. On occasion she can use a 32 caliber rifle with almost perfect accuracy

CELESTA

By BRUCE BERESFORD

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

When father was cross and mother tired out and sister Emma in a bad temper, pretty, gentle Aida Percy had an unfailing source of respite and pleasure—Celesta.

Celesta was her pet canary. He was nothing of a singer, although he had a full vocabulary of little chirpings, of odd expressiveness, covering a gamut from pitiful pleading down to the harsh inflections of complaint and scolding. As to his cute capers and tricks, his gyrations on his perch and his taking ways of daintily picking a cherry from Aida's own ruby lips and swinging on her neck chain extended lengthwise, he was acrobatic, entertaining, guest and lover all in one. He greeted her with joyful whistle at dawn and all but kissed her good night. Friends might prove false and suitors tiresome, but Celesta thought only of Aida, lived only for her, and when one day he lay dead in the bottom of his cage Aida could not have mourned more sincerely if it had been a cherished member of the family.

Aida took no one into the matter of the final disposition of her dead pet.

"If there is a bird's heaven," she told her mother, "Celesta's spirit has gone there. As to the poor little body, it shall go back to the elements of nature that composed it."

So Aida went down to the basement where the janitor had his office. She had been to the florist's and had obtained a little box lined with soft white cotton. In this she placed the dead bird, covering him with flowers. This impromptu casket she covered with folds of soft tissue paper. The janitor was conversing with a bright faced, well dressed young man as Aida entered the office.

"Mr. Nelson," she spoke, extending the parcel in her hand, "will you please place this in the furnace. It is my dead pet bird, Celesta, and I have no place to bury him."

The young man had drawn aside to afford Aida an opportunity to proffer her request. As she told the object of her mission he removed his hat, and Aida was grateful for what she took to be a recognition of respect, fond interest in the dead companion of many happy hours. Tears were in her eyes as she parted with all that remained of her little favorite. She turned away with only a casual glance at the young man.

It was an impulsive remark of a close girl friend that caused her new uneasiness and worry after she had become quite resigned to her loss. Aida had told this friend of the fate of the little bird. "Oh, Aida! how could you have consented to such a shocking thing as having poor Celesta burned up!" exclaimed Winnie Towner, and the more Aida thought of the act the deeper grew her regret and melancholy. One day she came across the janitor.

"Of course you disposed of my bird as I suggested?" said Aida.

"No, Miss, I didn't," came the amazing reply. "Young Mr. Worrell asked me all about you that day you came to my office. He opened the little box and saw the flowers and everything. 'Nelson,' he says to me, 'I will take charge of this. We have a quiet pretty spot in our home garden where I am going to bury it.'"

"And who is Mr. Worrell?" questioned Aida, a load seeming to have been lifted from her heart.

"He and his sister own the building here," explained the janitor. "He is the young man who was here the day you brought the bird to me. He and his sister live in the big house with an iron fence all around a beautiful garden up on Mersey street, opposite the library building."

So little Celesta had appealed to other hearts than her own! A feeling of the most fervent gratitude toward Blake Worrell came to Aida, to remain permanently. One pleasant afternoon she walked slowly by the place the janitor described. Aida looked beyond the fence across the lovely flower beds and shrubbery, wondering where the grave of Celesta could be, and experiencing a sensation of rare relief and gladness to realize that her favorite reposed amid such beauty and peace.

A man and a woman came from the house and turned down the street toward the spot where Aida stood. She recognized the young man of the janitor's room. He half paused, slightly lifted his hat and passed on while Aida flushed, she knew not why. The pair halted a few feet further on and the sweet faced lady, Worrell's sister, came back to Aida.

"My brother tells me you are Miss Percy," she spoke. "Can I venture to think that you would like to see where we have placed Celesta, alongside of two of our own remembered household pets?"

That broke the ice and let loose a flood of fervid emotions in the impressible Aida. The three visited a little mound in a peaceful corner of the lovely garden, and when they parted Aida was warmly invited to again meet these true souled people, whose thoughts were so closely in harmony with her own.

And with the first flowers of spring blossoming, it was by the side of her husband that Aida Worrell looked down upon the little mound so precious to both.

Son of Whitby Irish Secretary

THE fifty years of life Sir Hamar Greenwood, the new Irish Secretary, have been divided exactly equally between Canada and the Motherland the first twenty-five in Canada, the last twenty-five in England. If in his early years he definitely planned a great career in British politics no one here knew of it. His trip to England as soon as he graduated from college was regarded by his friends merely as the caprice of a young graduate anxious to see a little of the world before settling down. Tradition has it, perhaps falsely, that he made that trip on a cattle boat, in charge of a consignment of stock on the hoof for the Liverpool market. Part of the payment for the service was a free trip home, but Greenwood didn't come home.

No pioneer challenging the wilderness for a fortune ever surpassed in romance the career of the Canadian youth, unknown and friendless, penniless, who challenged fate where life was most dense, complex and difficult, and who now holds in his hands the destiny of the most troublesome issue in modern domestic British politics.

When Greenwood lived in Toronto he was regarded as a born orator. It is not on record that he set the Thames on fire by his oratory, or that he has been classed by serious critics in the upper flights of great orators. But certain it is that he had even as a youth that comparatively rare thing known as platform magnetism.

It was as a forerunner of "Pussyfoot" Johnson that he got his first opening in England. Temperance societies were then getting active, but they found difficulty in getting speakers with ability and enough courage to go out on the platform and espouse a most unpopular cause. Greenwood had that ability and courage to burn.

Paralleling the cattle boat tradition is another story of one occasion when Greenwood was sent to deliver a speech and was for the visit put up as a guest at a pretentious country house. In the morning a valet of the house entered Greenwood's room to brush his suit. During the operation two shillings, all the money Greenwood possessed in the world, fell out. Significantly the valet picked them up, indicating to Greenwood where he laid them. "Oh, take them, my man," said the sleepy but quick-witted Greenwood, "I left them in that pocket for you."

Greenwood's experience as a temperance speaker was valuable in that it served as a stepping stone to politics, and he soon found steady employment in the Liberal organization. He studied law at the same time, and was called to the Bar. And in ten short years he had made himself so valuable to the party that a seat in Parliament was found for him, and he entered the House of Commons in the great Liberal triumph of 1906. It was not long before he was asked to take an under-secretaryship, and his progress has been uninterrupted. Apparently he has made no mistakes so far. If he settles Ireland who can say what future still lies ahead of him?

Before and during his university course Greenwood taught school and held positions as temporary clerk in some of the Government departments. Once he organized a theatrical troup which toured Western Ontario, but it is not on record that this venture helped much in a financial way. Greenwood was himself advance agent and heavy tragedian of the company. The striking figure he made when he struck a new one-night stand, with his silk hat, very long-skirted Prince Albert coat and bright patent leather shoes, is still remembered after twenty-five years in many an Ontario town. He always made a tour of the main street calling at all the shops, making himself agreeable, and drumming up business for the show. In those days he was, as he is yet, a fine figure of a man.

One of his early hobbies was military training and, while yet an undergraduate, he held a commission in the home town regiment of militia. Another story of him which also may be apocryphal is that he went to his first camp against his father's wishes. When his father followed him there Greenwood refused to recognize him but instead had him arrested and detained in the military jail. Does this incident give a forecast of what he will do in Ireland? A man who will arrest his own father and who has taken "Dare to be a Daniel" as his motto ought not to be lacking either in firmness or in humor.

In Whitby, his birthplace, and afterwards in Toronto he was always "Tom" Greenwood, but when he went to England he used his second name of Hamar and it is as Sir Hamar Greenwood, Bart, he is known now. His return visits to Canada since he left her shores have been infrequent. On his last visit he was accompanied by his wife, formerly Miss Spencer, a member of a distinguished and wealthy English family to whom he was married nine years ago.

Those who were intimately associated with Greenwood here regarded him as having the potentialities of a great man. Even in his theatrical outburst he was under restraint. And he had fire, mixed with coolness, judgment, courage, and tact. On one visit home an old friend asked him if he cultivated advancement in the English Liberal party by making a specialty of free trade. "No chance," he replied. "A schoolboy in England has forgotten more about the tariff issue than I ever knew. I talked to them about Canada, something I knew a lot about and they knew nothing."

Significance in Greenwood's appointment lies in the fact that as a Canadian he is familiar with Dominion Home Rule as it works out, as no purely British statesmen can be.

Torono's Board of Police Commissioners decided to engage a special squad of plainclothesmen to check auto speeding in the city.

Liquor Consumption Has Fallen Off in England; May Extend State Control

WITH a wave of prohibition sweeping the North American continent, many people ask: "Will England go dry?"

It must be recognized that an entirely new spirit of temperance is alive in England to-day. A few weeks ago at the lunch of the Rotary Club of Nottingham, the important lace manufacturing city in the Midlands of England, there were at least 80 of the leading business men of the city present of whom only three drank alcohol. All the rest had either water or ginger ale. Two night later at a dinner in London attended by many leading men, wine and whiskey were conspicuous by their absence. Rows of bottles of ginger ale replaced the magnums of champagne that would have been seen at a similar banquet in the years before the war.

Similarly, the public houses of England are changing rapidly. The luncheon rooms that are now open in most public houses afford means of obtaining a substantial meal rapidly and inexpensively. There is no temptation to drink in these rooms of licensed houses; jugs of water and tumblers are on every table.

It is now a commonplace to enter an English village hostelry and obtain a pot of tea and bread and butter. Yet ten years ago only the more enlightened public houses provided tea and light refreshments for travelers.

It has been found, too, that restriction of the hours during which drink is sold and curtailment of the output have diminished drunkenness. It should be noted, however, that at one time the serious shortage of beer in many parts of England caused unrest discontent, loss of time, loss of work and in some cases, even strikes. The British workman has inherited from his forefathers the tradition of drinking beer.

Nevertheless, progressive dilution of spirits and decline in the strength of beer have raised the standard of national sobriety.

The weekly average of conviction for drunkenness in Birmingham, Liverpool, Manchester and Glasgow, in the year 1913, were, respectively, 91, 285, 148 and 514. Within five years the weekly average had been reduced to 9, 83, 25 and 157 for the same cities.

The success of the Carlisle experiment, where the public houses were taken over during the war and managed by the Liquor Control Board, owing to the proximity of an immense national factory at Gretna, has made many men in England consider the advisability of extending state control. The Central Board, in managing these premises, aimed at providing an alternative to the practice of standing at the bar. Accordingly they provided the rooms with plenty of seats and small tables. Furthermore, they took care that there was a kitchen well equipped to supply substantial meals, and a comfortable dining room.

Although an enormous increase took place in the population of Carlisle and in the numbers passing through, the convictions for drunkenness decreased in an extraordinary manner.

It may be stated, however, with confidence that there is no immediate likelihood of Great Britain becoming dry. Great Britain is becoming steadily more temperate, but the British working man is not likely to give up his glass of beer for many a day.

Tanks.

The tank got its name through the methods the British War Office employed to produce the first tanks without permitting the enemy to know of their construction. The name is not derived from resemblance to any conventional tank. In England, when the tank experiments were started, a big inclosure was constructed and no one was allowed in it except workmen and others engaged in the work. Civilians were kept a safe distance by the circulation of a story that terrible explosives and poison gases were being manufactured in the inclosure. As the work progressed it became necessary to invent a better story to account for the existence of the plant. So, very clandestinely, it was allowed to become known from the War Office that oil tanks for Russia were being manufactured in great numbers. From this story the name "tank" came to be applied to the new form of armored car before their use in battle, and the name stuck.

Well on the Way.

It was their first trip alone in their new and expensive car, and they'd lost their way.

"There's a signpost, dear," said the lady in the fur coat to her husband, who got out of the car and turned his flashlight on the board.

"Are we on the right road?" she asked presently, as he didn't speak.

"'To the workhouse'," he read aloud. Then he added sadly: "Yes; we're on the right road and we didn't know it."—Tit-Bits.

PERMANENT BOARD FOR GOVT. SUPPLIES

RESOLUTIONS FROM WESTERN BOARDS OF TRADE ARE FORWARDED.

(By Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, May 5.—Communications from business interests throughout the country have been received by the government favoring a bill to establish a permanent board for the purchase of governmental and other supplies.

Resolutions in approval have been received from the boards of trade of Vancouver, Calgary, Moosejaw, Medicine Hat, Saskatoon and Winnipeg, British Columbia Associated Boards of Trade and the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

NEW YORK STORE REDUCES PRICES

CUT OF 20 PER CENT AT SPECIAL SALE OF CLOTHING IN GOTHAM

New York, May 5.—Following the announcement of a 20 per cent. reduction in the price of practically its entire stocvk by one of the largest department stores in the city, Ne wYork is hoping for a general lowering of prices by local merchants. Although there have been no further announcements of such sweeping reductions as was made by the big department store, a general downward tendency is noticeable. This applies particularly to clothing.

"Special sales" at greatly reduced prices are being advertised by many establishments and the price tickets in the windows of clothing stores indicate that a break in values has come. A few weeks ago the prevailing price for ready-made suits in the lower Broadway shops was from $45 to $60. Suits are displayed in the indews of many of these shops today at from $35 to $50. The overall campaign, although it never progressed any further than the talking stage in New York, is believed to have been largely responsible for these reductions. The prosecution of several profiteers in Brooklyn by the U. S. Government's "flying squad" of cost of living experts is also thoughtto have had the effect of making dealers in several other lines readjust their ideas of profit to a more reasonable level.

NEW STATES MAY FIGHT

London, May 5.—Diplomatic advices state that the Government of Azerbaijan sent an ultimatum Saturday to the Armenian Republic of Erivan, demanding that the latter withdraw from disputed frontier territory, failing which the Azerbaijan forces would cross into Armenia.

Armenia refused to comply with the ultimatum. No military action has thus far been reported, but the situation undoubtedly is serious.

The latest news from Baku, on the Caspian Sea, is dated April 29, the day after the Bolsheviki entered the seaport. It states that on that date all allied subjects in Baku were safe.

PAY MORE FOR FRUIT

Such is What Consumers in Alberta are Expecting

(By Canadian Press.)

Calgary, Alta., May 6.— If fruit prices to the trade hold to the same levels as 1919, the consumer in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba will pay an increased price; express rates are going to be advanced, and a conference between W. H. Burry, of Toronto, representing the Dominion Express Company, and members of the fruit trade associations is in progress and a decision as to the amount of the increase will be decided upon.

PEPSONALITIES FIGURE OVER CURRY'S BILL

MEASURE TO RENDER MUNICIPALITIES LIABLE FOR PROPERTY DAMAGE IN RIOTS.

(By Canadian Press.)

Toronto, May 5.—Sharp passages at arms, in which personalities figured featured a discussion in the Municipal Law Committee this morning, over Mr. Curry's bill to render municipalities liable for compensation for damages to property in riots.

Particular objection was taken to the clause to make the Act retroactive to January, 1917, such provision covering cases of restaurant proprietors in the Toronto riots of August, 1918.

The bill was thrown out by an overwhelming majority.

INCREASED PAY FOR COMMON'S M.P.'S

SUCH IS PRACTICALLY AGREED AGREED ON—ALSO INCREASED PENSIONS FOR SOLDIERS.

(By Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, May 5.—Indications in Parliamentary circles are now that increased indemnity for members as been practically agreed to.

The only drawback is that a majority of members favor accepting increases only in case pensions of disabled soldiers are increased. With the prospect of that twenty per cent. increase in pensions, members feel that they will be entitled to raise their own indemnity.

RAILWAY EXTENSION

Proposed Pacific Great Eastern Line to Peace River Country

(By Canadian Press.)

Vancouver, B. C., May 5.— The provincial Government has arranged to send out two parties of engineers this summer to conduct a survey north from Prince George for the proposed extension of the Pacific Great Eastern into the Peace River country. Premier Oliver formally announced while in the city recently. The extension will tap one of the richest tracts of territory in the province, and provide an outlet to the coast for the fertile area north of Edmonton, Alta., which is fed now simply by the Edmonton and Dunvegan railway.

JAMES SIMPSON

Charge Not Justified.

"Some people in private life may take such things lying down because their future does not depend on what is said against them," continued his lordship. "But a man in public life cannot afford to do so Mr. Simpson, as a leader in the labor world, was no insignificant man whose word could afford to be ignored. Therefore, when outrageous charges were made that Mr. O'Leary was intrigueing with the employers you can see how serious those charges were. No matter what you may think of them or how you may deal with them, Mr. O'Leary had no alternative but to take the action he has taken.

"You must take into consideration the position of the man who makes these charges. Mr. Simpson has not said, 'I undertake to prove the charges I have made.' The attitude he has taken here has not been the attitude of a strong, manly man who comes forward and says 'these charges are true and I can prove them.'

"If you agree with the only evidence placed before you you must believe that Mr. O'Leary did not do the thing charged against him," said his lordship.

His lordship said farther: "That pernicious doctrine of Bolshevism was getting a foothold in this city, and Gen. Gunn knew that, as leader of the military forces in this district he might be called on to meet the situation. I think it was an unworthy thing to suggest that Gen Gunn was going to the Labor Temple that night, not in perfect good faith, but as a sneaking representative of the capitalists.

"If you should find for the plaintiff, do not make your damages extravagant," said his lordship. "If you find for the plaintiff, I ask you to assess damages in two ways: First, how much do you allow for the written libel and how much for the spoken words."

A wise man suppresses fully two-thirds of his opinions.

Be sure of your aim before attempting to slap a mosquitto.

MRS. BARRETTE TELLS OF SPLENDID RESULTS

PROMINENT NEW HAMPSHIRE WOMAN SAYS TANLAC BROUGHT ABOUT A WONDERFUL CHANGE IN HER CONDITION.

MRS. AURORE BARRETTE, of Manchester, New Hampshire.

"Tanlac is a grand medicine, and I think every suffering woman ought to know about it," was the statement made recently by Mrs. Aurore Barrette, at her residence, 133 Second Street, Manchester, New Hampshire. Mrs. Barrette is a well known and highly respected resident of that city.

"I have not felt at all well for the past year or more," she continued. "I haven't been sick enough to be in bed, but I was far from being a well woman. At times I thought I had kidney trouble, for I suffered almost constantly from severe pains across my back, just over the kidneys. Whenever I tried to do any housework at all that dull pain would be there, and if I attempted to stoop over it just felt as though my back would break. I would got so weak and worn out I would have to sit down and rest several times a day, and I felt tired all the time.

"This condition made me awfully nervous, so that I rarely ever slept well at night, and every now and then I would jump in my sleep, as if in a fright, and my condition was really becoming serious.

"Only two bottles of Tanlac have brought about a wonderful change in my condition. In fact, the results I have received from this medicine have really surprised me. Those terrible pains in my back which used to trouble me every day have almost disappeared, and I am going to keep on taking Tanlac until they leave me entirely. I have lots of energy now and am not only able to do my housework, but I get through the day without feeling the least bit tired. I am no longer nervous like I was, and I sleep well at night.

"I shall always be thankful for what Tanlac has done for me."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by The Warne Drug Co., and by the leading druggists in every town.

PETERBORO OLD BOY CALGARY MAGISTRATE

PRESIDES OVER CASE BETWEEN DOMINION GOVT. AND COAL OPERATORS.

Calgary, Alberta, May 5. — Although the first round in the battle of the Dominion Government and the coal operators of Alberta and Eastern British Columbia with the One Big Union, has been adjudged by Magistrate W. S. Davidson, of Calgary, to have been won by the parties of the first part, other rounds are to follow and the fight is far from decided. It is the final struggle of the One Big Union to compel recognition by the Government and by the employers.

The O.B.U.'s contention is that the employers have no right to force miners to sign the check-off of the United Mine Workers of America as instructed by Coal Commissioner J. Armstrong, acting for the Dominion Government. Manager Morrow, of the Canmore Coal Company, enforced this order and when a number of his O.B.U. workmen refused to sign the check-off, he declined to allow them to continue on their jobs. They charged him in the Calgary police court with breaking the Industrial Disputes' Act for having prohibited them from working.

The D. S. Davidson referred to in the preceding paragraphs is a former Peterborough boy who went out West some years ago. He was born in this city and spent the greater part of his life here. For eight years prior to May, 1912, the date of his departure for the West, he was a member of the firm of Hall, Medd and Davidson, of Peterborough. Mrs. Hugh Davidson, his mother, at present resides on Aylmer street.

MUST SHIP ALL FREIGHT COLLECT

SO LONG AS RAILWAYS REFUSE TO ACCEPT PREPAYMENT OF CHARGES.

(By Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, May 6.—Canadian exporters will be obliged to ship freight to United States charges collect as long as Canadian railways refuse to accept prepayment of such charges.

Adverse Exchange.

The Canadian Railway Commission has issued an order dismissing, "for want of jurisdiction over subject matter thereof," complaints presented before the commission by the Boards of Trade of Toronto and Montreal and the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, protesting against the order to agents by Canadian railways not to accept repayment of freight charges to the United States on account of adverse exchange situation.

It is stated that United States roads will shortly issue an order demanding prepayment of freight charges on shipments from the United States to Canadian points following representations to the Canadian Railway Commission by importers in this country.

REVOLUTION MAY C

Ports Not Disclosed.

Alohtugh the ultimate port destination of the United States warships is not disclosed; the understanding is that most of them will be needed at Vera Crus. If Carranza should come out that way there is the chance of an outbreak, and he might ask the protection of the United States warship before leaving the capital. Officials indicated today that in the interests of peace he might be taken off at Vera Crus.

NOT UNFRIENDLY TO GREAT BRITAIN

ADMIRAL BENSON CANNOT RECALL EXACT WORDS TO ADMIRAL SIMMS.

(By Canadian Press.)

Washington, May 6.—Admiral W. S. Benson, war-time chief of naval operations, told the Senate Naval Investigating Committee today that both before and during the war he had warned Rear Admiral Simms not to let his friendship for the British unduly influence his official acts. Admiral Benson said he could not deny that he had told Admiral Sims "not to let the British pull wool over your eyes; we would as soon fight them as Germans." as he could not recall all details of the interview.

Witness did say, however, that a wrong interpretation had been placed on the statement attributed to him by Admiral Simms, and he added that as a result he had been done great injustice. He died that he was in any way unfriendly to the British.

SIX CENTS RAILWAY FARE

Will Go in Force at Regina Unless One-Man Cars are Used

(By Canadian Press.)

Regina, Sask., May 6— Superintendent D. W. Houston, of the street railway department, has written the city commissioners recommending the adoption of a six-cent fare on the street cars unless the people are prepared to endorse the operation of one man cars as a measure to meet the increasing cost of running the system, it was announced by Commissioner Thornton.

WILL DIP CATTLE

Lethbridge, Alta., May 5.—Ranchers and farmers in Southern Alberta are enthusiastically entering into the scheme for dipping cattle this summer in order that the ban on the animals in the mange area, which covers a large section of the south, will be lifted by the United States.

"Wake up, Hiram! somebody is screaming out in the pasture lot."

Mrs. Benson shook her somnolent better half vigorously, but he mumbled in a confused way. As she was about to call out to their son Sidney, who slept in another room, the young man in question hurried past the open door, pulling on his coat.

"Something is on fire, mother," he said, "but it isn't near the house. You had better get dressed while I see what the trouble is."

A series of new screams rang out as young Benson reached the yard, dazzled by a great glare, a direct view of which the intervening stables partially shut out. As he rounded a shed he saw that a haystack was ablaze. The flaming filaments were bearing directly toward the buildings. Sidney darted lightning quick for a pitchfork, dismantled, scattered and tramped out the menacing heap and stared hard at a figure crouching against the pasture gate.

"Was it you who screamed?" he challenged, and then his suspicious ones died down to gentleness. The intruder was a young girl, pale and trembling. She arose to her feet. In the dying glow of the fire her rare beauty shone forth with a vividness that thrilled Sidney. Her attire was rich to the point of extravagance and she wore two rings and a pin at her throat that sent back dazzling prismatic sparkles of color.

"Yes," she replied in a quavering tone. "I was tired with a long, long tramp and weak, too, from hunger. I was seeking shelter when I reached here. I sat down on the horse block for there was no light in the house. Then I thought I saw one behind the barn but it was only a rough-looking tramp lighting his pipe. When he saw me he ran, and I think it likely he dropped a match that started the fire. The hay rack blazed and I tried to wake up somebody in the house by screaming."

"It is a good thing you did, Miss," returned Sidney, approvingly. "If the barns had ever caught, the whole place would have gone. Are—are you a stranger around here?"

"Very much so," came the prompt reply, and Sidney was greatly puzzled. The girl showed no phase of boldness, yet she was clear and definite.

"We've got you to thank for saving the barns and probably the house," he said. "If you hadn't given the warning that blazing stack would soon have done its work. You had better come to the house. I think my mother will be up and—and she will see that you are made comfortable."

"Perhaps you don't exactly take me on trust," spoke the girl. "This dress does not belong to me and these blazing gems are stage diamonds. All I will tell you is that I am an orphan and I ran away from the school where my guardian had placed me and joined a traveling show. They were good people in it, but it failed and the sheriff seized everything except the clothing we had on."

"But what are you thinking of doing now?" questioned Benson.

"Oh, anything to earn a living," replied the girl. "I won't go back to school and, as I wrote my guardian I intend to choose my own way in life."

Sidney led the way to the house. His mother was down stairs and she viewed this strange guest with temerity. Midnight, and a beautiful girl dressed like a princess Mrs. Benson had only known through novels or the movie stage.

However, she could not refuse hospitality to one who had probably saved their home. She prepared a meal and saw that their visitor was comfortably installed in the best bedroom.

Next morning Adrienne Martel, as she told them her name was, became ill with a fever. It was a week before she was up and around. By that time she had won on the motherly regard of Mrs. Benson to an extent that would make parting a sorrow.

"Let me stay in the dear old place," suggested Adrianne. "I will be glad to work just to be among the kind good people you are."

There came about what might have been anticipated. From the first Sidney loved her; from the first she esteemed him as the manly, true-hearted fellow he was. They were quietly married.

One day an automobilist drove in to the farmyard for water. Sidney was getting it when joyous faced Adrianne came out of the house.

"Well! Well!" exclaimed the automobilist. "Found at last, eh, and prettier than ever. My dear girl, you have led us a long quest."

"Sidney," spoke Adrianne in her straightforward way, "this is my guardian that was. And Mr. Boyden, this is my husband and we are the happiest pair in the world."

"A femme sole no longer, then?" observed the lawyer.

"Don't call me names, dear old guardy, but what is a femme sole?"

"A single lady, my dear, but now, being a married one, I fancy I had better arrange with your husband to take over the fortune your father left you."

"Sidney never knew there was a fortune," said Adrianne, "and I never cared for it after finding a home in this real, beautiful sunshine land."

The trouble with good advice is that few of us recognize it when we hear it.

LEADER OF O. B. U.

Winch Carries on His Work in British Columbia.

Cordova street is one of the oldest highways of original Vancouver. It was the centre of old Gastown before the fire of 1886. Many of the buildings which face upon it are becoming mossy. Not a few are third-class hotels. Occupying the second and third floors of one of these are a pair of smart-looking girl stenographers, half a dozen young men clerks, a long table containing many thousands of cards—each of which represents a human unit—and a stooped and exceedingly cadaverous individual of 45. This prematurely-aged man is as much the proprietor of the institution as if he owned it. He is a dyspeptic crank, so cranky and so dyspetic that he can only eat one meal a day—and that tea and toast. The name of this man is E. Winch, and the institution he runs is all that is left of the O. B. U. in British Columbia.

The latter statement is general and means to be only approximate. In any event it is the only active and outward manifestation of the One Big Union which flourished in a dozen places a year ago. So far as one may judge of the position today compared with what it was in the weeks preceding the general strikes in Vancouver and Winnipeg last year, the O. B. U. has steadily lost ground and is not a real factor in the labor situation in British Columbia with one single exception—and that is in the case of the loggers union. Winch was at the head of the loggers' organization when the general strike took place. Its collapse did not cause him to quit, though it had that effect on many other active organizers, but in the case of the loggers the claim is made that their O. B. U. is stronger to-day than it ever has been before.

Winch is a curious individual in more ways than his habit of getting along without dinner or supper. He claims to have reduced the art of striking to an exact science, so as to play both ends against the middle and the angles as well. Because men are thrown out of work and consequently suffer in any large strike he does not believe in a general tie-up of industry. Nothing so crude as that is on Mr. Winch's program—which may account for the fact that up to this date he enjoys an eminence of comparative success in a sea of O. B. U. failure. Winch believes in compelling the industry—if he can—to finance and maintain the strikes while the latter are proceeding.

He points quite proudly to the episode of the Capilano Timber Co. The O. B. U. called a strike there six months ago and two logging camps were quickly tied up. The men wanted an eight-hour day, a $5 minimum and a lot of reforms in accommodation. The company sent out agents looking for new workmen and found them. To get them to go to work the company improved wages and conditions to some extent and was soon in full swing again. There was neither picketing nor other interference by the union or former employes, and apparently the company won out. But not according to Winch, who claims that everything was done on his schedule. "Their 'scabs' were our own men," he declares. "We furnished them, though the company did not realize it, and to-day we are in their camps just as strongly as before and under improved conditions of pay and accommodation.

For a feature act for the coming season Winch has his eyes on the paper mills. Eight hours and a five-dollar minmum are his aims in this industry. But nothing is farther from his thoughts than to attempt to tie it up all at once. Workers are to be called out in one mill at a time, according to the program mapped out, so that while that mill is idle they can still find useful and remunerative employment in other plants up and down the coast. When the time has come to recommence in No. 1 mill, the O. B. U. representatives in another plant will have found something to complain about and the shutdown stunt will be repeated there, with a loss of time to the workers extending very little beyond the limits of a welcome holiday.

In the card-index on the big table at O. B. U. headquarters are listed 17,000 loggers in "good standing." The larger half are in B. C., but organizers are busy around Fort William, in Northern Ontario, and are now pushing on into the Quebec woods. Each man pays dues of $1 per month. Apparently they pay promptly, for large expenditures are made from Winch's office. Ten thousand dollars has lately been invested in printing charges for propaganda. More than 50,000 O. B. U. buttons have been bought from an uptown store at 30 cents each; $1,000 per month has been contributed to the Winnipeg strikers defence fund. Altogether there is an air about the shabby offices as if somebody with cash in the bank was administering things.

In one particular Winch has been forced to confess defeat. Many Orientals labor in various capacities in B. C. lumber camps. The Japanese have freely joined the O. B. U., but no progress has been made with the Chinese. With native caution and clannishness they prefer to make their own bargains. If they join anything it is simply a One Big Chinese Union.

A Long Drag.

Peter Thompson went to visit his son in Montreal. It was his first visit to the city, and the young man showed him all the sights, concluding with an ascent of Mount Royal. In a burst of enthusiasm young Thompson said: "See, father, isn't it wonderful down there?" "Well," said his father, "if it's so wonderful down there what did you drag me up here for?"

He Knew.

"This," smiled the fond young wife, as she passed a plate of pudding to her husband, "is cottage pudding. I made it myself." The husband tasted it. "I'd have known it was cottage pudding," he returned. "Would you?" she asked delighted. "Yes; I can taste the plaster and the wallpaper."

Many a young man in search of a wife has passed through a peach orchard and pitched his tent in a lemon grove.

A Satisfied Man

By ALVAH JORDAN GARTH

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

"Those were the days, Burt; you know it and I know it, don't we?"

"Yes," nodded Raleigh Burt, just starting out for a two weeks' vacation jaunt, to his close friend, Walter Marston, just returned from one. "I fancy we didn't appreciate the old town during the happiest period of our lives."

"Wish we'd stayed there," declared Marston. "You got restless, and me ambitious, and broke away from the only place that will ever seem like real home to us. The city lured us. Well, we've had twenty years of it. I am still the slave of a soulless corporation at three thousand dollars a year. You are doing a little better, but who knows what luck might have struck us if we had stayed where we were brought up?"

"I haven't even heard from Rockton for nearly ten years," said Burt. "Did you stop there?"

"I didn't but I met old Ezra Perkins on the train. He gave me all the news. You know it was Gib Reeves who took your job at the general store. Well, it seems he studied law, got admitted to the bar, was elected judge and, according to Ezra, just rules the town—dignity, position, a sort of king about the district. Then there's Mort Sawyer—"

"Still in Rockton, is he?"

"Largely, conspicuously; you know he superseded me in my drug store position. Started in at four dollars a week. His old boss died rich and Sawyer married his daughter, Nance. Why, come to think of it, she was your early flame, wasn't she?"

"A pretty girl and a smart one," replied Burt, his eyes showing the glamour of memory.

"Well, she is now the richest woman in the county. Just think of the luck Sawyer fell into!"

"I have half a mind to put in my fourteen days at the old burg," remarked Burt thoughtfully.

Somehow Marston's reports of the success in life of Reeves and Sawyer made Burt thoughtful. Not that he was envious, but it appeared to him that fate had not been very kind to either himself or Marston, and yet they certainly had started out in life with better educations and business ability than those successful rivals in the race for success. Burt was not disloyal in the slightest degree when he recalled the bright, sprightly Nance Porter of his boyhood days, but he felt dissatisfied as he realized that his city-bred wife had been obliged to do without all the luxury and ease that of course the inherited wealth of the rich druggist had brought to his daughter. As to Reeves, too, he felt a twinge of restlessness, for had he not himself blocked out a legal career, but circumstances had drifted him into another line.

"Yes, I'll take in Rockton," decided Burt, and he did. About the only person who remembered and recognized him when he reached the town was antiquated, gossipy old Doc Kendall, the proprietor of the one pioneer hotel of the place, which Burt found was just as musty and dilapidated as in his boyhood days. Rockton itself, if anything, was more dead than of yore. It seemed to be asleep half the time.

Doc Kendall got Burt in a corner and began to pump him as to his history since he had left Rockton twenty years previous. The old gossip lived on curiosity and talk and entered with zest into Burt's affairs.

"Five thousand a year, a steady job, four children and a happy wife, eh?" he commented. "Well, I call that top notch, Burt."

"You do?" observed Burt.

"I should say so! Why, look at the old crowd you once knew around here. Vegetators, nearly all of 'em. Just took what came along and dream away their life and stick in the native mud."

"Why, I hear that Gib Reeves has reached the highest pinnacle of the ladder of fame."

"Ho! ho!" snorted Kendall, scoffing. "All front and frazzle. What's a district judge in Macon county, anyhow? Gib is what he always was, a great big balloon—all josh and brag. Say, I'll wager he has his home mortgaged up to the limit and yet he struts about as if he owned the town."

"And Mort Sawyer?"

"Oh, poor old Mort! Quick! There he goes with his wife. Why, you must remember Nance? There they are," and following the indication of Kendall's finger Burt saw a weazened old man and a wry-faced, faded woman driving along in a disreputable gig with a feeble, wobbling crowbait held up by the patched and splintered shafts.

"Say, Burt," continued Kendall in a confidential tone, "they say Nance has got so stingy they live on potato parings. She allows Gib a dollar a week for his tobacco and laundry and about all but mauls him if he breaks over the traces. Five thousand dollars a year, and healthy and prosperous-looking, and bringing up your family with all the advantages of society and education. Why, boy, you're living on the cream of life!"

And, his illusions dispelled, Raleigh Burt went back home and kissed his wife's cheek with an ardor that brought back all the freshness of youth, and looked over his little brood with new love and pride, himself a satisfied man.

Some would-be flatterers, after smearing on a lot of salve, spoil the effect by rubbing it in with a wire brush.

PRESIDENT BEATTY OF THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. REPORTS ON CONDITIONS

Urges That Readjustment of Rates is Warranted on Ground of Service.

(By Canadian Press.)

Montreal, May 5.—At the annual meeting of the shareholders of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, held at Montreal yesterday, Mr. E. W. Beatty, president of the company, gave the following address:

The annual report of the company and the statements attached, which have been in your possession for some time, reflect very vividly the situation prevailing generally in respect of increased costs of operation. Notwithstanding that the gross earnings of the company were the largest in its history and exceeded the gross earnings of 1918 by 19,391,362, the net earnings were less by $1,569,351. The large increase in working expense of $20,960,713, following as it does an increase of $17,191,993 in the working expenses during the year 1918, or a total increase in 1919 over 1917 of $36,152,706, is a striking example of the effect of the increased cost of wages and material in the operations of a company's system—one as conservatively and economically administered as are the affairs of your company.

Earns Dividends.

While it is a matter of great gratification that, even with these exceptional costs, your company has been able during the past two years to earn its fixed charges and usual dividends, and very moderate surpluses, it is nevertheless important that the relation between earnings and expenses should now receive the most careful consideration. The results of the operations during the past two years show an upward trend in costs which even an extensive increase in gross earnings and effective operating economies due to heavier lading, larger power and consequent reduced train mileage, have not equalized.

Commission's Work.

For the past sixteen years, the freight and passenger rates of all Canadian railways have been subject to review or have been fixed by the Dominion Railway Commission. The rates have been readjusted from time to time, first being lowered and then increased, but the extent of the increase has not equalled the increased costs which have recently been forced upon all companies, and reductions in which cannot with any confidence be predicted at this time.

Working Expenses.

During the fiscal year ended June 1914 the working expenses of your company, with mileage somewhat less than the operated mileage of last year, were 87,388,000, while for the year 1909 they had climbed to practically $144,000,000, an increase of 64 per cent. Within that period, increases of nominally 40 per cent. in freight rates and 15 per cent. in passenger rates have been authorized by the Railway Commission. The actual increases owing to the adjustment of rates made by the direction of the board were, in fact, 30 per cent. in freight rates and 10 per cent. in passenger rates. The result, therefore, has been that during the past five years the percentage increases in operating expenses was double the percentage increase in tolls accorded to the company.

States Affects Canada.

Owing to the parity of conditions existing between the United States and Canada, the Canadian roads were forced during the war to put into effect the high wage scale made effective under government control of the American roads, and they were also compelled to continue operating under tariffs substantially the same as those in force in the United States. These tariffs were entirely inadequate as results in the United States clearly demonstrated. By legislation recently enacted, the American carriers are assured of rates which will return a fixed percentage on the value of the undertakings used in the public service which will mean a reconsideration of an increase in the rates now current in that country. No doubt the necessity of rate adjustments in Canada will be given earnest consideration by the Government and the Dominion Railway Board. While it is not my purpose to anticipate any action which may be taken, it is only proper, I think, to say that a readjustment is amply warranted both on the ground of the value of the service rendered by the carriers and the cost to them of performing such service.

Value of Service.

It is further to be remembered, and I do not anticipate that it will be forgotten, that the value of any enterprise to the people it serves depends greatly upon its ability to progress and develop, and on the maintenance of a high credit, without which such development cannot take place. Waste, extravagances and improvidence must be discouraged, but I can imagine nothing more detrimental to Canada than that its railway systems should be unable to keep pace in their own development with the progress of the country, and that they should be unable to aid that progress by the expansion of facilities, the construction of necessary new lines, and by meeting the increasing demands of the public in the way of efficiency and comfort in service based upon accepted principles in other countries governing compensation due to transportation and other public service corporations.

The net earnings of your company have always yielded a moderate return upon the capital actually invested in the enterprise. The railway net earnings of the company for 1919 represent only a return of four per cent. on the actual cash invested in the railway itself.

The operations for the year 1911 after the payment of fixed charges and the usual performance and common stock dividends, showed a nominal surplus of $844,249, which has been placed in reserve to meet the special taxation imposed by the Dominion Government, which special taxation ended in 1919, and the fixed charges of the company are low. The interest on the preference stock is equally low, and the dividend of 7 per cent payable on common stock from railway earnings is moderate.

Factor Lost Sight Of.

A factor which seems to be lost sight of in these discussions of the returns between expenses and revenue, and the absolute necessity of a reasonable surplus and in the case of any corporation conducting an enterprise as extensive as that of your company, is that the gross earnings of the company for the year exceeded $176,000,000, and the surplus after deduction of the moderate fixed charges and dividends only amounted to less than half of one per cent of these earnings. Considering the importance of reasonable provision for working capital annually from the operations of the company, if its high credit and ability to progress is to be maintained, it will readily be appreciated that the revenues during the past two years have been to say the least inadequate.

Two Theories Mentioned

In the discussion which has taken place as to the desirability or otherwise of increased rates, and therefore increased revenues to the Canadian railways, two theories are publicly mentioned. The first is that rates should be increased, but that any surplus earnings thereby accruing to your company should be taken back through the medium of special taxes: the second is that these rates should not be increased, but that the Government railways deficits, if such occur, should be met out of the general revenues of the country.

Both theories are, in my opinion, unsound. Rates should be established which represent a fair return for the service rendered, and if by efficiency and economy and the character and extent of its equipment, a company can render its operations under such rates profitable, there is no warrant for the confiscation of these profits, nor can there be anything but doubtful honesty in the proposal that one company's revenue accruing to it from service actually rendered by it and well performed, should be taken from it to supplement the revenue of a competitor whose operations do not show favorable results. It is scarcely necessary for me to say that the fairness or otherwise of any rate basis is not necessarily marked by the strength or resources of a company or by the lack of them.

The second theory that rates should not be increased but that any deficits should be met from the general revenue of the country, is unsound economically and unfair alike to the government-owned and other railways. It is obvious that any system which permits services to shippers and others to be performed at unreasonably low rates is discriminatory in their favor and discriminatory against the public, whose taxes are increased as a contribution to those who have railway facilities.

How To Determine Rates.

In my opinion, the rates in this country should be determined, having regard to the cost and value of the services rendered by the companies and to the legitimate needs of the companies if they are to meet the transportation requirements of the country. No doubt a question so important and far reaching in its effect will be given the careful consideration to which it is entitled by those in authority and empowered to deal with it. I may say, however, that the properties of this company are in excellent condition, and a no time in its history has it been better equipped to perform its important public services or to play its full part in the advancement of the transportation future of this country.

Success Pronounced.

In the annual report reference has been made to the company's irrigation project in Alberta, the construction of which was undertaken some years ago, and in the earlier progress of which some difficulties were met. The project has now become firmly established and the success has been so pronounced during the past few years that further reference to this important undertaking is, I think, warranted. An area of 843,536 acres has been brought under irrigation through the medium of 3,969 miles of irrigation canals and distributing ditches. Of this area, 301,302 acres of irrigable land have been sold at an average price of $38.18 per acre. There is still for sale irrigable land for which there is at present a very active demand.

During the period from the commencement of construction to December 31, 1919, the company has expended in connection with the construction and maintenance of these irrigation works the sum of $15,186,348, and in their operation the sum of $1,761,268.

The introduction of irrigation in Southern Alberta has made it possible to successfully produce on irrigated lands splendid crops of alfalfa corn, small fruits, and vegetables which are not produced with equal success under dry farming conditions. Careful statistics covering eleven years indicate remarkable increases in ordinary crops grown on irrigated land over those produced on dry land, and the wisdom of the decision to undertake this extensive project has been more than justified. We are amply warranted in the belief that the irrigation block will ultimately be a closely settled and intensely cultivated and a considerable traffic-producing area tributary to the company's lines in Southern Alberta. The success of the company's undertaking in this respect combined with the obvious necessities of that portion of the country, will, I hope, lead to the extension of irrigation projects under the auspices of the Federal or Provincial Governments, which will in the end render the danger of crop failure in these districts practically negligible.

More Rolling Stock.

As indicated in the annual report, your directors thought it necessary to make provision for the construction of necessary additions to your company's rolling stock. Since the reports have been issued, arrangements have been concluded for an equipment trust agreement under which the payments for such equipment are spread over a period of twelve years.

The actual amount of the equipment trust issue is $12,000,000. By reason of the conditions existing at the time the transaction was concluded, highly favorable interest rates were secured.

You will have observed that since the issuance of the annual report for the year 1919 your board have considered it desirable to apply for an amendment to the company's character which will permit the increase of the number of directors from fifteen to eighteen, should that at any time appear necessary. The statute is purely empowering, and the amending bylaw will be submitted for their approval in the event of it being considered advisable to increase the directorate. The purpose of any increase will, of course, be to secure a larger representation on the board from those portions of Canada in which the company's interests are specially important.

Small Immigration.

I look forward to immigration to Canada on a large scale, and, while a period of retrenchment and financial conservation may conceivably be the part of wisdom, your directors have the same implicit faith in the future growth and prosperity of the country that the same always should, and also the same confidence in the ability of your company to play an important part in its development and prosperity.

Two Lonely Souls

By ALDEN CHAPMAN

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

A lovely pink rose described a circle in the air over the fence surrounding the grounds of a large rambling old-fashioned house and landed directly against the breast of Bruno Paxton. He clutched it as it was headed for the ground, glanced up and met the flashing eyes and smiling face of a lady half concealed by the shrubbery. Then the latter darted away, pursued by a little girl who, her apron full of flowers, pelted her out of view with the fragrant flowers.

Somehow the mind of Bruno was set in a turmoil. Had the lady in the floral battle aimed at her child opponent, or at himself? At all events, the episode set his mind in a whirl. He had reached thirty the same impressible idealist that he had been at twenty. He treasured the rose and dreamed dreams. He passed the same place slowly the next day. Half obscured by some lilacs was a feminine form. Bruno slightly raised his hat. Unmistakably in response there was the flutter of a handkerchief. He was noticed. It must be the lady of the rose battle! A vast ferment of sentiment and romanticism took place in his soul. The next morning it was raining, but from an upper window in the house a white hand moved as if in notice or greeting.

Passing down the street the next day with his close friend, Dale Armstrong, Bruno clutched his arm feverishly and indicating a lady crossing from the house now his center of attraction to an automobile, and whose face was that of the lady of the roses, he uttered tumultuously:

"Armstrong, you know everybody in town. Who is that girl?"

"Girl?" repeated Dale. "She is a married woman—Mrs. Walter Martin. Husband and child. What's your interest?"

"Nothing," he faltered in a sort of a collapsing groan. "Love blasted! my ideal vanished! Only a flirt!" he told himself in a suppressed undertone. It was the rude blighting of a possible romance in its budding that so crushed Bruno. He had woven a fairy fabric of ideality and it was humiliating, depressing, disappointing to have it thus rent asunder. Armstrong, coming into his office the next day, found him seated, morose and hollow-eyed at the window, staring out blankly at nothingness.

"What's the trouble, Bruno?" he hailed in his cheery, off-hand way.

"Oh, tired of life and its false [illegible]," returned the other dismally. "I don't seem to reach any goal in my experiences. Tell you, I'm almost suicidal in my present mood."

"That so?" rallied Armstrong blandly. "Well, over in my office I've got a real glittering stiletto, a true and honest, deadly revolver and a bottle of 'sure thing' cyanide. Want to make a choice?"

"Thank you, no," answered Bruno sourly, nettled at the badinage, good natured as it was. "If I ever step off abruptly the water route is the surest and cheapest."

There seemed to be a satisfaction in nursing his dark ideas. Bruno did not cheat himself by trying to believe that he had been incurably captivated by the lady of the roses. The verge of romance had had attracted him, but he had only glimpsed its confines when fate had abruptly transformed it into a dreary desert.

"Oh, for one true sympathetic soul!" he pondered as dejectedly he made his way homeward.

It was warm and he took off his coat. He was restless and irritated and began pacing up and down. He got directly up to the edge of the embankment overlooking the stream.

"Ah, placid waters, not so cruel as a heartless, disappointing world!" he uttered melodramatically.

"No—no—surely you are not thinking of—of—"

Bruno started. A slender, winsome woman had seized his arm. He did not know that it was she who had thrown the lilac spray in his path and had followed him. She was fair of face and graceful of form, although as far up in the twenties as himself, but there was a gentle sympathy in her eyes that somehow won upon him.

"If you mean I was going to jump in," he said, "no; I'd ought to though."

"Think of your friends!"

"I have none. Nobody cares for me."

"And you never noticed the lilac spray!" reproachfully censured the sentimental spinster—"after bowing to me in the garden and responding with a smile to my waving from the window!"

"Oh, it was you!" exclaimed Bruno.

"I haven't confided in my sister, Mrs. Martin," continued Miss Bella Weston, "but it has been very pleasant to think I was making a nearly sympathetic acquaintance."

She hung her head now. Bruno took another look at her, understanding his error as to the roses. He pitied her embarrassment. He appreciated her interest in himself.

"We seem to be two lonely ones," he said. "We come together in a queer way, don't we? Well, maybe it is fate."

"You wouldn't ever think again of that horrid river, and all that, would you?" pleaded Bella.

"Not as long as you care about it," responded Bruno tenderly.

CAMPHOR.

Canada Imports This Drug From Formosa.

Many people are interested in the question, "Where does our imports come from." The camphor industry in Formosa is now owned by Japan.

Formosa holds a practical monopoly in the world's market of this valuable drug. The life of a camphor worker is indeed an adventurous one. He is never safe from the Formosa head-hunters. Although a woodsman with an ax never moves except in the company of an armed guard, there is always danger of an ambush.

Tales of the camphor workers recall the days of our pioneer fathers in the times of the tomahawk, the poisoned arrow and the scalping knife. And yet if this menace had not existed, the camphor forests would have disappeared long ago. Thanks to the head-hunters, there are still large tracts of camphor forests in Formosa.

Camphor trees grow best on moderate, well-drained slopes, not over 4,000 feet in elevation, where the sun's rays can reach them.

Nowhere else in the world have these trees attained such height and girth as in Formosa. In the past, trees with a basal circumference of from 35 to 40 feet have been noted, but these have inevitably fallen victims of the woodman's ax. Perhaps in the uncharted forests, where the savage still holds sway, more of these noble specimens still grow unscathed. At present a camphor tree with a basal circumference of 20 feet is considered a very ample specimen.

In point of view of value, few trees can rival the camphor. An average tree, say with a basal circumference of 12 feet, will yield about 50 piculs of camphor (approximately 6,660 pounds) which, at the present market price, is worth about $5,000.

Strictly speaking, there are no camphor forests, as the camphor laurel is only one of a number of treets growing together. The camphor trees are unusually beautiful with shapely trunks and wide-spread ing branches profusely covered with graceful leaves of a soft green.

Native stills are scattered here and there throughout the districts where crude camphor is collected, packed in tins, and carried down precipitous mountain paths on coolies' backs to the nearest railway line, whence it goes to the refinery at Taihoku.

The stills are operated in a simple manner. Camphor chips are placed in a clip retort over boiling water, and as the camphor vapoizes it passes through pipes into submerged vats, which are so arranged that cool water from a mountain stream can run over them to accelerate crystallization. After the camphor has crystallized the vats are opened and the product is placed on wooden troughs to allow whatever free oil there may be to drain off. This oil will yield 90 per cent. of crude camphor in the process of refining."

Strikes During 1919.

That there were more strikes, labor disputes and general industrial turmoil with consequent time lost in Canada during 1919 than in any other year in the country's history, is revealed in a report compiled by the Labor Department at Ottawa. [illegible] carried over from 1918 there was a total of 298 strikes and lockouts in Canada during 1919. The number of employes involved was 148,988, and the number of employers 1,913. The total number of working days lost was 3,942,189. The previous record in working days lost was in 1911, when the record stood at 2,046,650 days lost. Classified by causes, 223 of the 298 strikes recorded involved wages. Twelve strikes involved union recognition. Altogether there were 16 sympathetic strikes. The record shows that 157 strikes terminated in favor of the employes and 88 in favor of the employers; 23 were compromise settlements and 30 indefinite.

Test Batteries With Potato.

If you are away from home and have to deal with a storage battery of which the polarity markings are obliterated, here is a simple test that will instantly reveal to you which is the positive and which the negative pole. It is given by Windsor Crowell in the Popular Science Monthly.

Get a fresh potato; cut a slice off one side and stick the terminal wires into the cut section, about an inch apart. The potato in contact with one wire begins to turn green. This is the positive pole, therefore the other is the negative.

Suppose you have no potato handy to make the test, proceed as follows: Pour a little of the electrolytic solution from the battery into a glass, place both wires in it, well apart, and watch the bubbles rise from them. Many more will rise from the negative side than from the positive.

A Dual Opposition.

The problem of the dual leadership of the Opposition in the Ontario Legislature is still unsolved. Ruling that the Opposition is composed of two distinct parties, each with a leader of its own, Hon. Nelson Parliament, Speaker, has refused to recognize H. H. Dewart as sole leader of the Opposition and has given as his decision that Messrs. Dewart and Ferguson are equally leaders. Whether under the ruling now given by the Speaker the salary of $5,000 payable to the Opposition leader should be divided between the Liberal and Conservative leaders, remains a matter of conjecture.

SUBSTITUTE FOR DAYLIGHT.

Artist's Discovery Important to the Industries.

Merchants, and their customers artists and others—all have a practical or pleasurable interest in a new method of creating artificial daylight, as brought forward by George Sheringham, an English designer of beautiful fans, panels, and silk goods. The Society of Illuminating Engineers, London, recently witnessed demonstrations of this latest invention in the realm of light.

Illuminating engineers who have attacked this problem have perhaps too often been influenced only by the laws of physics as they understood them. Apparently most of these engineers have failed to take into consideration the fact that light itself consists of color or, perhaps more accurately speaking, is color.

His training as an artist had given Sheringham a different conception of light than that commonly held. Therefore, he possessed an initial advantage in undertaking his peculiar task, says the Illustrated World.

No object in itself has color. Every school boy is at first nonplussed and incredulous when his teacher informs him that all objects in the dark are black. It is hard for him to imagine that his bright red tie can lose its glorious effulgence. The fact that objects take their color from the light rays they reflect never does become a part of the standard beliefs of the average person.

So this physical fact is often overlooked by the practical scientist when he is at work on the problem of retaining the natural colors under the rays of an artificial light. Of course, artificial light contains all the colors of daylight. But these colors are not in the same relative proportions. For example, while red retains its natural brightness and strength under the electric lamp, some shades of green lose about one-half and blues reveal only about one-ninth of their real color values. Certain shades, like navy blue, take on the appearance of black away from daylight.

With the new method as developed by Sheringham, even such elusive tones as light yellow, which are often completely lost, so much so, in fact, that some artists refuse to work with them except in daylight, do not pale under the evening lamps.

The invention consists of a shade, lined with a varied design in colors worked out in accordance with certain laws of mathematics. The light from an incandescent bulb striking the shade is reflected and diffused. The various colors of the spectrum, from red to violet, have their excess rays (as in the case of red) absorbed, and the contrast between the strongest and the weak is, therefore, become less marked. In other words, because the strong rays are toned down, the weaker rays gather brilliancy by the diminution in contrast. So every woman who wishes to match the [illegible] ribbon will be able to do so [illegible] more assured [illegible] no mistake and [illegible] what she went [illegible] color selector has been utilized in making the selection. Ties for men, dress goods, in fact everything in which color plays an important part in the purchase and sale of goods, can be bought much more conveniently and without the trouble of taking the material to the window or door of the store.

The most important use to which the discovery will be put [illegible], though, in the industries. In the manufacture of dyes, for instance, the matching and mixing of the colors is handicapped by the need of a reliable substitute for daylight. In color printing, in the making of wall paper, calicos, and the textile industries [illegible] several, a similar handicap exists. With artificial daylight established this handicap will be removed.

Too Prompt.

The Bishop of Southwark, who recently created a mild sensation by announcing his decision not to open any more bazaars, preferring, he said, to devote himself to other more important work, is famed in clerical circles as a teller of something unconventional stories. One of the best concerns a certain country parson who, during a long drought, offered up a fervent prayer for rain. When the service was over, a sexton offered his congratulations. "Your prayer for rain [illegible] answered, sir," he said. "It's pouring." "Dear me!" exclaimed the parson. "What a nuisance. I've left my umbrella at home."

The Origin of "Gob"?

A sidelight was thrown upon the word "gob" by the Scotchman, of August 4, 1890, which said that, when a meeting of the Coast Guard takes place the men indulge in protracted yarns, a draw of the pipe, and a friendly chew. Such a session is invariably productive of a considerable amount of good-natured banter, as well as free expectoration all around wherefrom our friends came to be known as "gobies" (from "gob," the mouth). In the process of time gob and gobie came to be applied to the ships manned by the gobs.

Training War Workers.

The British Ministry of Labor is training nearly 3,000 unemployed women war workers in 165 different courses. Thus far domestic work has attracted the most trainees. It is estimated that from July, 1914, to July, 1918, there were approximately 1,200,000 women entrants in industry in Great Britain. This number is exclusive of the 400,000 women who came from domestic service and smaller work shops.

Penguin Is a Wonderful Bird.

Do you know what a penguin is? You may have read of it, but probably never have seen one. The penguin is an aquatic bird found in the polar regions. It is remarkable for its peculiar structure. It has only stumps in place of wings and, for that reason, is unable to fly. But it is a good walker and an expert swimmer and diver.

The name of "penguin" has also been given to the training apparatus employed to teach prospective aviators the control of their airplane or seaplane. The name is well chosen, comments an exchange. The penguin used for training is as unable to fly as its arctic namesake. It consists of an airplane with wings so very small that the power of the motor is unable to lift the airplane off the water or ground.

It is supplied with ailerons, elevator, rudder and wheels exceptionally strong for running on the ground. The apprentice is encouraged to run this "penguin" to his heart's content; there is no danger that it will take to the air. In a short time he graduates to a real airplane that he can and does fly, and then he can give all his attention to the flying part without having to worry over the handling of the various controls. The sense of safety he enjoys while learning is a great nerve sedative to the experienced aviator.

Too Rich to Give.

A group of traders discussing the tightness of money were venturing their opinions as to the operations of call money lenders. Those opinions were not as a rule laudatory. One trader, whose judgment, marketwise, had been very poor, said that call money lenders reminded him of a certain constable in his home town who was also an elder in the church. "This man," he said, "had accumulated quite a fortune through money lending. He always managed to get high rate of interest on his money. One Sunday he attended church, but owing to a sore ankle he was compelled to sit in a pew during the services. I was asked to substitute as a collector, which I proudly did. When I arrived at his pew, I naturally expected a substantial offering, but what do you suppose he did? He flashed his shield on me."

British Libraries.

Circulating libraries were first established in London in 1750, and in Edinburgh in 1751. They increased so rapidly that some men proposed to tax them.

SENSATIONAL HIT OF CURRENT SEASON

One of the most substantial hits of the current season is the new Gus Hill triumph, "Keeping Up Wtih the Joneses" which is to be the attraction at the Grand Theatre, Wednesday evening. This new offering is based on the popular cartoons of Pop Momand's appearing in the New York Globe and a thousand other newspapers throughout the country. It is a musical comedy full of novel surprises and from all accounts is one of the best contributions of its kind seen hereabouts since the days of "Floradora." The cast contains thirty people, sixteen of whom are pretty and stunningly young women who know how to sing and dance with more than passing grace and skill.

BABY TALK TELLS OF VAMPIRE METHODS

MARC ANTHONY, PARIS, AND KIPLING'S "FOOL" SAYS LAEL DAVIS

"SEVENTEEN" EXPLAINS THIS

History is all wrong! At least its volumes on vampires. The man written stuff needs feminine fixing, if you ask Lael Davis, the siren of "Seventeen" for the Chroniclers from Herodotus to Kipling have all trodden the gronk tract. "Seventeen" is coming to the Grand Monday night next.

They have wasted their ink and parchment on green eyes and flamingo hair. They have warned every youth and bachelor to beware of sibilant whispers and sinuous wiles. They have poured their type-set wrath on all the harpies of Dame Fashion. But, Adam-like, they have stumblied all around the real pitfall. Wherefore countless masculine Waterloos.

Now that no vampire has time to vamp, what with striking and balloting, Miss Davis turns the spotlight on the apple of destruction that Eve has served since creation. It comes wrapped in 117 different languages, but to the knowing its label is always "baby talk."

Yes, says this little philosopher of twenty, if you read between the hieroglyphics of Cleopatra you will find that she was not a serpent of the Nile at all, but a "baby talk lady." Her piece de resistance was what seems to be unitiated, mere infantible babble. "My eutems crocodile," she murmured to Anthony. And the Roman may was dislocated.

And if Paris had been thoughtful enough to write "Confession of a young man," Helen of Troy would have been accredited with some such monologue—"Terrible mans! Who so indifferent to icle 'Elen" and "Flee with Thee? Yes, indeedums!" Is there mention of such vital speech in Homer's account? No, you see Homer happened to be a man.

Kipling's 'Fool There Was" as revealed by Miss Davis would have been as safe as a fat man if he had noted only the "rag and a bone and a hank of hair" in his Loralie's equipment. The trouble started when he harkened to her variations of "nicesies" and oooftums."

THE VANITY FAIR GIRLS COMING

FAMOUS CHORUS OF BEAUTIES FORM PICTURESQUE BACKGROUND

"The Vanity Fair Girls" is the way the management describes the famous chorus of Beauties that form a picturesque background for the many musical numbers in Gus Hill's delightful musical comedy, "Keeping up with the Joneses," which will be seen at the Grand on Wednesday evening, May 10. This sparkling musical novelty is based on the popular cartoons of the same name by Pop Momand. A splendid cast of well-known musical comedy favorites will be seen in the leading roles This fascinating musical comedy is said to be the final word in musical novelties)

Over a million francs collected in Denmark for the rebuilding of the Cathedral of Rheims were yesterday delivered to the French Minister in Copenhagen.

Men laugh at Willie Baxter in this play, says this stage heart wrecker. "They think he flops because he's seventeen but its the same from seventeen to seventy. While the hunted are busy dodging the sirens that are listed in their Baedecker - the felines and the snakes are others exotics that live mostly between covers and on smreens—the "baby talk" ladies sweep them whither they choose.

"They are really the only type that appeals. I am sure of that" insists this dainty little sprig of feminity. "But you must not expect the coquering contingent to be as frank as the heroine of "Seventeen."

CANADA SHOULD HAVE OWN DRAMA

TYRONE POWER, EMINENT ENGLISH ACTOR, ADDRESSES WOMEN'S CANADIAN CLUB

"The rise and fall of a nation may be inevitably through its drama declared Mr. Tyrone Power, the eminent English actor, addressing the Women's Canadian Club at London, Ont. while he [illegible].

Mr. Power [illegible] chiefly with the urgent need for a revival of the best in the great art of the drama. "We are living in one of the mose decadent ages of dramatic history," he said, "and the fault lies with you, and with the public, and only you and the public can bring about the change. What you demand, that you will get, see then that you ask only for the most splendid and elevating among dramas."

"It is time that Canada had a stage of her own, Mr. Power continued. "We have been too long at the mercy of the money-bags of the United States, and our stage has been not a Canadian stage at all, but American When I tell you that under our present system the best of plays will tour Canada from Halifax to Vancoucer I am not advertising myself, as it does not matter to me whether you come and see me act or not, I am but an instrument. I speak for the good of the soul in Canada, that has a right to the best that art can give. We are going to produce Canadian plays. London, England, has sent plays to us, we can send plays to London, England. There is nothing in the way of theatrical production that cannot be done in Canada.

"I can go into any public library and bring out blindfolded a handful of the most perfect plays, the most wonderful literature, but your manager will ask me, if there is any money in them. Mr. Power went on and to that I can only say that when I was born my mother did not ask if there was any money in it. We do not ask when we see a flower opening if there is any money in them then I am ready to sing with the stage that is big and fine and splendid."

Speaking of a recent attack made on the English stage by the church and the press, Mr. Power declared that the public is altogether to blame for anything vile or vicious that appears on the stage repeating that the demand of the public was always met and telling a story of Booth the great Shakespearian actor, who replied to the letter he received from a clergyman asking for a seat in the wings as the congregation objected to his attending plays. "Sir God can see every part of my theatre."

Mr. Power voiced the opinion that the lack of intelligent appreciation to be found among so many audiences was in a large measure due to the prevalence of the moving picture, which made little demand on the intelligence of the public.

"One of the saddest and most solemn passages in my present play was greeted with a roar of laughter in a theatre I played recently," he said. "I can only think this is due to this demand for burlesque and so called action which the moving picture supplies."

In closing, Mr. Power announced his intention of devoting [illegible] years of his theatrical career to the Canadian theatre, where he is confident great things will be produced and which will be the means of bringing about a Canadian renaissance in the art of the drama.

When Mr. Power appears at the Grand Opera House for one night only on Monday May 24th as a special return engagement under the direction of Trans-Canada Theatres Limited. He will be seen in another of his great successes "The Little Brother," a powerful drama of love and sacrifice from the joint pen of Milton Goldsmith and Benedict James.

The first number of the Western War cry of the Salvation Army was issued in Winnipeg yesterday.

Poisoned by Ink.

Behind the scenes at the Globe theater, where, to the delight of all playgoers, Miss Violet Vanbrugh has scored another wonderful success in "Trimmed in Scarlet," the famous actress told me this amusing story of her early days.

"We were playing 'Romeo and Juliet' on tour," she said, "and one night in the poison scene, Juliet found herself without a phial. The audience was waiting, and in despair she snatched an ink bottle from the stage carpenter, and gasping 'Is it empty?' rushed on.

"But when the hapless lady raised the bottle to her lips and tipped it downwards, a stream of ink descended over her chin and down her white dress. The house yelled at the comical sight."—London Tit-Bits.

No More Shiny Domes.

After the wonders which we have seen worked for the soldiers who suffered disfigurement during the war, it is not surprising that plastic surgeons are turning their attention to improving civilians also. Ugly noses, projecting ears, harelips and all sorts of other obstacles to good looks will probably be easily corrected in the not far-away future. The most interesting thing along this line which has been recently discovered is that no one need suffer from baldness any more. By grafting a piece of skin from some part of the head where hair is still growing onto the bald patch, a new covering is said to be insured.

Fiji Fashions.

Mr. R. W. Dalton, in his report of the trade of the Fiji Islands, says: "Shirts are gradually gaining in popularity among the Fijians. All kinds of soft tennis shirts with collar and pocket or collar and two pockets sell freely. These shirts are usually worn for dressy occasions, when the natives are generally clothed in white or cream. There is an increasing demand for khaki shorts and trousers. The shorts are either plain or with buckle knees and are being worn by Fijian men beneath or instead of a loin cloth. There is also a large sale for umbrellas.

FOR CADETS.

Referring to Cadet Summer Series, 1920, owing to a number of requests having been received for a postponement of the first match, in order that cadets may have an opportunity of practising with the S.M.L.E. rifle at the new pattern of target, the Executive Committee have decided, for this year only, to permit of entries being received up to 1st June, and to extend the time in which matches may be fired to July 17th. Cadet instructors will select suitable dates on which their respective corps will fire the four matches, the dates chosen to be notified to the secretary when making entry. It must be distinctly understood that no change of date will be allowed unless for exceptional circumstances, which on being represented to the secretary will be considered by the Executive Committee, who may assign another date.

COMING LAWN TENNIS TOURNEYS

NEW NATIONAL EVENT FOR WOMEN IN SEPARATE TOURNAMENT

New York, May 6. Close to 200 sanctioned tennis tournaments are listed in the annual schedule of the United States Lawn Tennis Association issued here today. Every section of the country is represented in the distribution of dates and indications point to one of the most successful seasons for the sport in the history of the organization.

Among the early season tournaments of importance is the Church Cup match to be played at Forest Hills, N. Y., May 21 and 22. Unusual interest is attached to this inter-city contest between New York, Boston and Philadelphia, because of the bearing it will have on the selection of the team to represent the United States abroad. As the team will sail early in June to enter the English championship and play Davis Cup ties in July, this will be the last important event before its members are chosen and the Davis Cup Committee will doubtlessd be guided in their selections by the showing made there.

An innovation is the change in the date of the Intercollegiate championship which will be held June 28 instead of in September as heretofore. The women's national championship has been changed from June to September and will be played at Philadelphia, during the week beginning September 13. A new national event for women has been created in a separate tournament for the clay court titles, which previously have been played with the men's events. This year the women's titles will be contested at the Detroit Tennis Club the week of June 21, while the men's events take place July 10 at Chicago. The men's championship of the United States is scheduled to begin August 30 at Forest Hills, N.Y.

All the sectional doubles tournaments are listed except the Intermountain event, covering Colorado and Utah which has not been arranged. These precede the national doubles championship at Longwood on August 16. The New York event has been awarded to the Crescent Athletic Club. A new event, an intercity doubles match, has been awarded to Cleveland for July 21.

The official list of sanctioned tournaments follows:

June 14: Agawam Hunt Club, Providence, R. I., Rhode Island championship; women, Sept. 5. Bingham Tennis Club, Binghampton, N.Y., open tournament.

Change in Dates

July 12: Germantown Club's date Middle States and Section Doub. Championships.

June 28. Idaho State championship scheduled for Lewiston Country Club is awarded to Boise Y.M.C.A. Tennis Club.

June 21: Hamilton Tennis Club, Southern Ohio championship, is changed to August 28.

June 14: New Orleans Lawn Tennis Club, Southern championship is changed to June 21.

HUMOROUS BOYCOTT.

Shops Closed When Milner Commission Is Expected.

In Egypt the boycott of the Milner Mission has its amusing side, as the following story will show: The housing problem has become acute in Cairo as elsewhere, and officials of the Government, not already provided with houses, are finding themselves in great difficulties owing to increasing rents and lack of accommodation. The Government is therefore considering building, as rapidly as possible, some cheap houses for officials in order to relieve the pressure.

Accordingly it has asked for a return, giving the size of the families of all those officials likely to be affected by the scheme. Fearing this was a ruse to get some useful information on the part of the Milner Mission, some fanatical Nationalists in the Government refused to fill in the required form until they had been assured by their colleagues that it would be obviously to their advantage to comply with the request, and to give the necessary information.

Owing to the maltreatment of certain Egyptians by fanatical Nationalists in the provinces because they received one of the members of the mission, the members have been lately in the habit of going about unannounced, and it has not been until after they have left a place that it has became known who the visitors were. One small town, however, having been told that a stranger had arrived, immediately closed its shops and organized processions demanding independence, only to find later on that no member of the Milner Mission had been near them at all. "And thus," remarked one man ruefully, "a whole day's business was lost!"

In another case, however, the boycott was carried to much greater lengths, involving even personal inconvenience, by an individual, a goldsmith, who went to buy a safe. Unfortunately the safes which he was shown bore the legend "Milner." That was enough for the patriotic Egyptian. He would not have a Milner safe any more than he would have a Milner Mission.

THE "CONAN DOYLE"

Presentation to Plucky Skipper of British Trawler.

The plucky skipper of a British trawler that is named after Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, recently was made even a prouder and happier man than he previously had been by unexpectedly receiving from the famous creator of Sherlock Holmes, a handsome cigarette case bearing the following inscription:

"To Skipper William Addy, D.S.C., from Arthur Conan Doyle. In memory of June 20, 1918."

Sir Arthur, in his turn, is soon to be presented by Skipper Addy with a historic souvenir—the ship's bell of the "Conan Doyle," bearing the honored name that is hers and his. No doubt this bell, recalling as it does as dogged a fight as perhaps ever was put up at sea, will have a place of honor among the many momentoes and relics of widely differing kinds which Sir Arthur takes pride in showing to distinguished visitors to "Windlesham," his home at Crowborough, in Sussex, England.

This exchange of compliments between the distinguished author and the master of Sir Arthur's maritime namesake is a sequel to an exceptionally lively incident of the war, in which both the "Conan Doyle" and her skipper covered themselves with glory. It took the form of a fight between the "Conan Doyle" and a big German submarine in which, after a running battle lasting over four hours, the trawler emerged victorious, sinking the U-boat with all hands by means of a direct hit just below the conning tower.

For his gallant conduct in this action — conduct which undoubtedly saved a whole convoy of Hull trawlers from destruction, Skipper Addy received the Distinguished Service Cross, and the episode, when, months afterwards, it became publicly known, made him a local if not a national hero. Now Sir Arthur Conan Doyle had added to the skipper's renown and incidentally to that of the craft which bears the famous author's name, by his graceful act in commemoration of the part that ship and master played in a truly Homeric combat.

Take Care of Your Shoes.

By the exercise of a little care the life of leather shoes may be considerably prolonged, says the Thrift Magazine. It is a well-known fact that if a wet shoe is placed too close to a fire the interior of the sole is sometimes utterly ruined before the surface of the leather shows appreciable signs of injury. Wet shoes should be dried slowly and shoe trees inserted to prevent their losing shape and becoming uncomfortable. It is economy to keep at least two pairs of shoes, wearing them in rotation. Some shoe manufacturers claim that two pairs of shoes worn alternately will outwear three pairs of shoes worn consecutively.

Figures: Lest We Forget

BRITAIN'S share in the victory of the Allies over Germany is revealed with official authority in figures that follow. So far as man-power is concerned, notes the London Times, pride of place goes to France. Out of the French masculine population of military age, that is, from eighteen to fifty years, according to authorities of the French Government, 89.3 per cent., or 8,392,000 men of a total of 9,356,000, saw service either at the front or in the army zone at some time during the years of war. Great Britain occupies second place in respect of contingents contributed for military service; and the third largest contribution was made by the United States, which sent close to two million men to fight in France. The Times publishes the official figures on Britain's quota, as follows:

TOTAL OF BRITISH TROOPS

British Isles	5,704,416
Canada	640,886
Australia	416,809
New Zealand	220,099
South Africa	136,070
India	1,401,350
Other Colonies*	134,837
Total	8,654,467

*Includes colored troops recruited from South Africa, West Indies, etc.

TOTAL CASUALTIES.

Approximate killed, died of wounds, and died: British Isles, 662,083; Canada, 56,119; Australia, 58,460; New Zealand, 16,132; South Africa, 6,928; India, 47,746; other colonies (including colored troops from South Africa, etc., but excludes 44,262 African native followers—i.e., died and killed, 42,318; wounded, 1,322; missing, 622. The deaths were due mainly to epidemics.) 3,649. Total 851,117.

Approximate missing and prisoners (prisoners repatriated not shown)—British Isles, 140,312; Canada, 306; Australia, 161; New Zealand, 5; South Africa, 35; India, 871; other colonies, 366. Total, 142,057.

Wounded—British Isles, 1,644,786; Canada, 149,733; Australia, 152,100; New Zealand, 40,749; South Africa, 11,444; India, 65,126; other colonies, 3,504. Total 2,067,442.

In the appended table on the British army in France in 1918, it is explained that the "ration strength" comprises the total number of men—excluding colored labor and prisoners of war who were being fed from army stocks in France. The figures under this heading include thousands of men whose duty it was not to fight, but to supply, equip, and in other ways assist the fighting men. The "combatant strength" includes all fighting troops, together with the troops in divisional or base depots:

	Ration Strength.	Combatant Strength.
March 11	1,828,098	1,293,000
April 1	1,667,701	1,131,124
September 23	1,752,829	1,200,181
November 11	1,731,578	1,164,790

Comparable figures for the United States, remarks the Times, as taken from official sources, read as follows:

U. S. ARMY IN FRANCE, 1918.

	Ration Strength.	Combatant Strength.
March 11	245,000	123,000
April 1	319,000	214,000
September 25	1,641,000	1,195,000
November 11	1,924,000	1,160,000

During the victorious offensive against the Germany army between July 18 and November 11 the captures of prisoners and guns in France are thus recorded:

	Prisoners.	Guns.
British armies	200,000	2,540
French armies	135,720	1,880
American armies	43,300	1,421
Belgian armies	14,500	474

In addition, this London daily points out, there were eighty thousand British combatant troops in Italy who co-operated most effectively in the final defeat of the Austrian army at Vittorio-Veneto, capturing thirty thousand prisoners. In the eastern theatres of war, Palestine and Mesopotamia, where about four hundred thousand British troops were fighting throughout 1918, the complete defeat and destruction of the Turkish army were effected by the British alone, and a total of 85,000 prisoners was taken.

Australia's Oil.

While Australia is offering a bonus of £10,000 for the discovery of commercial oil in the Commonwealth, Mexico is likely to absorb oil activities for some time, according to the verdict of G. D. Mendell, a Victorian oil expert who has been touring in western America. He found, he says, that the leading oil companies are so heavily committed in Mexico that Australia's bonus is not attractive. The British and Australian Governments, however, have agreed to test thoroughly former German New Guinea and Papua for oil-bearing territory.

SPLENDID LECTURE

desert him even in the face of death; and at times this humor was not free from profanity. There was however, deep in the heart of every Scotchman the fundamentals of religion, which needed only slight encouragement to be drawn out.

A Gallant Corps.

Speaking of the gallantry of his men, the professor said that they did things which would bring tears to his eyes in remembering—deeds of bravery and sacrifice that would touch the heart strings of the most hardened. He told of their gallant attack on Jerusalem. He described minutely the plan of campaign, and pointed out the disheartening drawbacks which they faced and finally overcame by sheer initiative — by pure brain work and unfaltering courage. It had not been his privilege to be present at the fall of Jerusalem, the speaker said, as he and his troops were on duty in France at the time, but he drew out in a clear manner the exact method by which Gen. Allenby and his splendid army overcame the Turk and captured the Holy City.

General Allenby was an ideal English general. He was a man of character—a man who would take equal risks with his men, who would push forward personally into the most dangerous positions, and so his men feared him for his fine sense of justice and loved him for his consideration and his gallantry.

Medical Corps.

The professor dwelt at length upon the splendid service of the medical corps at the front—a corps to which the chairman of the evening Dr. Frederick, had belonged. By their splendid organization and efficient service many lives had been saved. He also touched on the excellent work of the field ambulance corps.

One of the most remarkable works of warfare in the East was the laying of a railroad over the road into Jerusalem—the road that we read of in the Scriptures as being the one over which Abraham had trod. And what would be the astonishment of that patriarch were he to assume mortality again and see an express speeding into Jerusalem over the road of his toilsome journey.

BIG SEIZURE OF DRUGS IN RAID

EIGHTY THOUSAND DOLLARS WORTH OF COCAINE AND MORPHINE TAKEN.

(By Canadian Press)

Vancouver, May 6.—Local police made another big seizure of cocaine morphine and other drugs in a raid yesterday.

The retail price of the drugs taken amounts to about $80,000. Last week $50,000 worth were seized at the same place. The police are of the opinion that the house on Grant street was used as a storehouse for a gigantic drug ring.

CALEDONIAN CLUB FOR SOUTH BEACH

ARRANGEMENTS FOR EXCURSION ON DOMINION DAY IN THE MAKING

An excursion will be held by the Caledonian Club to South Beach on July 1st next. Arrangements for this event were begun at a meeting of the Caledonians held in their hall on George street last night. It was decided that the journey to the beach should be made by rail to Lakefield and a special boat chartered to convey the party from there to the beach. This plan was agreed upon so as to allow for more time at the beach. The return trip, however, will be made entirely by water from the beach to Peterborough.

Plans were also discussed for the holding of a sale of work on Saturday, May 15. It was decided that the sale should take place during the afternoon and until seven in the evening, after which the remainder of the evening until 11 o'clock should be spent in a social way.

The ladies will meet next Wednesday night for a social evening and a small program will be arranged for that date.

There was also a meeting of the Pipe Band of the club last night and great progress in the organization of the band was reported. There are now 15 members enrolled in the band and three regular pipers and four drummers.

At last night's meeting it was decided to send away to Scotland immediately for the chanters for instructional purposes and also for other equipment for the band. It is expected that in the near future Peterborough will have a pipe band that will be able to compare favorably with any other in the Province.

THE KING GEORGE SCHOOL ORGANIZES

ANOTHER SCHOOL AND HOME ASSOCIATION—OFFICERS ELECTED

A very successful meeting was held at the King George School on Wednesday, May 5th, for the purpose of organizing a school and Home Association.

Mrs. Morris in her opening remarks spoke in a general way of the great possibilities that lie before such associations. She also pointed out the far-reaching influence that they may exert along both educational and social lines.

Mrs. Medd followed with a more detailed account of some of the various activities carried on by such societies. It was emphasized that the membership of these organizations will, it is hopeful, include not only the parents of pupils now in attendance, but also all others who are interested in the welfare of our children.

THE CHIEF'S OPINION

Explains Why Change in Where Cars Shall Stop.

Chief Thompson when seen this morning with reference to the new system of having the north and south cars on George street stop on the south side instead of the north side as formerly, stated that this action had been taken in connection with the traffic regulation. Under the old system there used to be a conjestion of traffic at this corner caused by the street car stopping which was positively dangerous and in order to overcome this difficulty arrangements had been made to have the cars cross Charlotte street before stopping.

There is no reason why this arrangement should be any more inconvenient than the former one and it is simply a matter of the people getting used to the fact that the change has been made.

CHARGED WITH ASSAULT

Complainant Did Not Appear—Will Have to Pay Costs.

In the Police Court this morning a charge of assault, which had been laid against William Vilneff by Ephraim Lindsay, came up for hearing, but as the complainant did not appear to prosecute the case, it was dismissed and Lindsay will be called upon to pay the costs of the court amounting to $8.10.

Y.M.C.A. BOYS ON OBSERVATION TOUR

THEY VISITED WATERWORKS AND C. G. E. POWER HOUSE YESTERDAY

About 35 boys cycled out to the pumping station yesterday to take part in the first of a series of educational observation tours which are being conducted to different points of interest through the city by the Y.M.C.A.

At the plant they were met by Mr. Ross Dobbin, superintendent of the Water Works, and Mr. R. Cotton, of the Canadian General Electric Company. The party was divided into groups and were taken through the complete process of handling water, each being explained in detail. After having seen the entire mechanical methods of screening, pumping and purifying, the boys were taken into the testing room where the process of mixing chlorine with the water prior to being pumped into the city pipes was shown. They also saw the testing for bacteria and other impurities, etc. Afterwards the boys gathered around the big dial which registered the pressure and a test fire alarm was rung in to illustrate how in a minute or so the maximum pressure could be applied at the pumping station in case of serious fires.

Mr. Cotton took the boys through the C.G.E. power house, which is on the same dam and which carries part of the load of the C.G.E. works. He showed them the way in which lightning would be taken care of in case it struck the building and how it would be prevented from injuring the machinery or fixtures. Fortunately the boys were at the power house just at the moment of the day when the plant shuts down after the words close.

All the boys were greatly impressed by what they saw and it is safe to say that the trip had some real educational value for every boy present besides being extremely satisfying to their boyish curiosity. It is expected that there will be a much larger turnout for the next observation tour.

BASEBALL SATURDAY

Thistles and War Veterans Will Clash in Exhibition Match.

"Play ball" will be heard for the first time this season at the Riverside Park on Saturday next when the Thistles will meet the War Veterans in an exhibition match. While the Thistles have a formidable line-up it is also believed that the War Veterans have a team which will be able to give a good account of itself against any opponents in the City League and the result of Saturday's game cannot by any means be taken for granted.

Much has been heard about the Thistles but this will be the first opportunity that has been presented of seeing them in action and fans who wish to size up two of the most promising teams in the league before the opening game would do well to be on hand at the diamond on Saturday afternoon next.

FOOTBALL TONIGHT

Machine Gun Co. and Caledonians Will Play at Oval.

The Machine Gun Company will play their second schedule game tonight at the Oval, which is their home pitche when they meet the Caledonians. As this team gave a good account of themselves once before in an exhibition game with the Caledonians, tonight's game should be interesting.

The following will be the line-up:

Machine Gun Company—W. Flowers, goal; J. Crow and D. Perry, backs; J. Darling, R. G. McLeish, A. Metcalfe, half backs; J. Roberts, L. Frazer, W. Bell, J. Bell and H. Darling.

Caledonians—A. Brunton, goal; J. Willshaw and Robert Willshaw, backs; J. Frost, S. McMillan and Alex. Hardie, half-backs; R. Hannah, Mat. Shaw, James Shaw, Ed. Hardie and R. McDowall, forwards.

Mr. Wiggin, who was to have refereed the game, will be unable to do so and Mr. C. P. Lloyd will act in his place.

MORE SCOTCHMEN COME

Another party of Scotchmen reached the city yesterday. All are mechanics and have obtained employment at the local factories. The Caledonian Club are particularly elated over the fact that among the new arrivals are a piper and an experienced football player. It is understood that the new player will shortly appear on the line-up of the Caledonian team. Since the opening up of immigration several parties of Scotchmen have reached the city and all have naturally made haste to join the Caledonian Club, which is growing in prosperity every day.

War Cemeteries

SALVATION ARMY INSTITUTES A A SCHEME OF SERVICE INVALUABLE TO MANY

In view of the early opening of War Cemeteries in France and Belgium, relatives, anxious to visit the resting places of their men-folk who made the great sacrifice, will note with interest that the general has instituted a branch of service embracing an Inquiry Bureau, Hostels at the ports of Ostend, Calais and Boulogne, and Hostels at what might well be termed the cemetery-gates of Ypres, Amiens and Arras.

Already many requests for aid in this direction have reached International Headquarters, and these are receiving the personal attention of Mrs. Commissioner Higgins, who will be closely associated with the matter.

This new departure means that people desirous of journeying to France and Belgium for the purpose outlined above can do so under the army's care at the minimum cost of transit and food expenses; Salvation service, however, is gratis.

Travelling by rail and boat is arranged by the Army's Shipping Department; Salvationists attend to the travellers at the ports of arrival, conducting them to the Hostels established for their benefit, and later directing, and in needy cases accompanying them to the sacred places of rest.

Further particulars concerning this valuable scheme of service may be had on application to International Headquarters, 101 Queen Victoria Street, London, England. Communications should be addressed to Mrs. Commissioner Higgins.

JOFFE AT MARK STREET

Mr. Louis Joffe, who has been lecturing in the city for some time past on Russia, will speak at the Mark Street Church on Sunday evening next. The subject of his address will be announced later.

CITY FATHERS APPOINT MEMBERS OF THREE CIVIC DEPARTMENTS

Nagle Phelan, Son of Late Ald. Phelan, For Alderman, G. Walter Green to City Trust, and Ex-Mayor Geo. H. Duncan to Utilities.

The City Council last night in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to select appointments to the offices of alderman and members of the Peterborough Utilities Commission and City Trust.

On motion of Ald. Whitehouse and Copping, Nagle Phelan, son of the late Alderman Phelan, was recommended as the new alderman. Ald. Whitehouse, in moving, said there was a general feeling among the Roman Catholics that the son should in this case succeed his father, and thus retain their representation on the Board.

Ald. Morrison contended that the appointment should go to the next highest candidate at the last elections, J. A. Sharpe. He also is of the same faith as the late Ald. Phelan.

Ald. Morrison and Crowe moved an amendment in this direction, but the motion received only the support of the mover and seconder and Ald. Gainey for the City Trust. Ald. Jones and Whitehouse moved for ex-Ald. G. Walter Green.

Ald. Gainey—"What's the matter with you fellows? You held a caucus and agreed on ex-mayor Duffus, and now you come along with the name of Mr. Green."

Ald. Jones—"I want it distinctly understood that I never committed myself to Mr. Duffus' name."

Ald. Gordon here proposed that a ballot be taken for these appointments.

Ald. Gainey contended that such was not legal. The appointments should be made in open Council.

Ald. Gordon replied that balloting was quite legal as whatever it decided on would be but a recommendation to Council, where the vote must be open.

A ballot was here taken for the City Trust appointment on the names of ex-Mayor Duffus and ex-Ald. G Walter Green, and the result was four-four.

Ald. Gainey did not vote. He said on such appointments he would not cast a ballot. His only vote, he said, would be in open Council, where the matter belongs.

This brought action in regard to these appointments to a close, and Committee adjourned to the Council chamber upstairs.

Nagle Phelan Alderman

Subsequently in Council, on motion of Ald. Copping and Whitehouse, Nagle Phelan was appointed Alderman to succeed his father, Harry Phelan deceased.

Mr. Phelan on invitation at once took his seat after being sworn in.

He thanked Council for the honor conferred on him, which he considered a high mark of respect to his deceased father and a great compliment to himself. He would do his best for his home city, and his one aim would be for a greater and better Peterborough (Applause.)

For Utilities Commission

Ex-Mayor George H. Duncan received this appointment on motion of Ald. Hamilton and Turner.

Ex-Mayor Joseph J. Duffus was nominated by Ald. Gordon and Gainey but the motion was lost.

For City Trust.

G. Walter Green received this appointment, on motion of Aldermen Jones and Copping.

Richard J. Sheehy was nominated by Ald. Gainey and Nagle Phelan and Joseph J. Duffus by the Mayor and Ald. Turner.

These nominations were both lost

Mr. Ritchie Resigns.

Mr. Ryerson Ritchie submitted his resignation as member of the City Development Commission, and Mr. J. J Hartley was appointed in his place. This was the motion of Ald. Turner and Hamilton.

Housing Question

Council will meet in Committee of the whole early next week on the question of housing.

Ald. Whitehouse, Chairman

Ald. Whitehouse was appointed chairman of the Board of Works. The youngest Alderman Nagle Phelan was named for membership on all the committees on which his father served except the Board of Works.

Ald. Jones was placed on the Board of Works and Ald. Whitehouse added to the Finance Committee.

Two six-year-old boys were injured by automobiles in the streets of the city of Toronto yesterday.

LOOKS LIKE ANOTHER INDUSTRY COMING

Ald. Gordon reported to the City Council last night that as a result of the trip to New York by the Mayor, City Clerk Armstrong and himself, he had received word yesterday that another very substantial industry for Peterborough is practically assured. The terms are a fixed assessment on one-half of the company's realty.

REPORTED THAT PARIS STRIKERS HOLD SENTIMENT FOR CALLING OFF STRIKE

Large Number of Railwaymen Extremists Have Been Arrested.

(By Canadian Press.)

Paris, May 7.—There was no apparent change in strike situation in this city and throughout France this morning. During the past day or two a large number of extremist railroad workers have been arrested, but many of these have been discharged.

Executive Met.

The Executive Committee of the Railway Workers' Federation met last night, at which it is understood there was a strong sentiment in favor of calling off the strike if it could be done without appearing to capitulate to the Government.

Miners in the northern coal fields have finally decided to strike next Monday.

No Change Here.

The situation among dock workers and seamen shows no change. There appears to be some division among outlaw metal workers who have struck, as their movement so far has involved only twenty thousand of two hundred thousand men engaged in the various trades affected.

QUESTION OF CITY BAND GRANTS STILL TO BE THRESHED OUT TO SETTLEMENT

G.W.V.A. Makes Proposition For Veterans—Goes to Committee.

The question of band grants was sent to the Committee of the Whole Council last night for reconsideration.

R. E. Layfield presented Council with a proposition for a Veterans'-Citizens' Band, as outlined in The Review's editorial last night, that the city contribute $1000 to another $1000 for this purpose. Mr. Layfield said that the Machine Gun Brigade wanted to take over the Veterans' band, but the G. W. V. A. could not incline to that view, and thus sever all connection with a band the Association had organised and cared for.

To Ald. Crowe, Mr. Layfield said that the G. W. V. A. had been unanimous on this proposition for a Veterans'-Citizens' Band on Monday night in regular session.

When the Parks Committee submitted their report that $500 be granted the G. W. V. A. and the 57th Bands, Ald. Crowe moved in amendment that the 57th Band of thirty members play in the parks when called on by the city at $62 a concert and that its bandmaster be responsible for such service. He then, without waiting for a seconder, suggested that this whole question be sent to the Committee of the Whole for reconsideration.

Ald. Hamilton and Jones then moved in this direction and the motion carried.

On Monday next Sir Richard Winfrey, M.P. and Mayor of Peterborough, England, who is visiting the country with the British Brotherhood delegation, will be in the city, according to a communication received from the secretary of the Christian Men's Brotherhood Federation of Canada.

Sir Richard Winfrey was twice elected mayor of Peterborough, Lincolnshire, England, and now represents that constituency in the British House of Commons. The communication referred to suggested that a mass meeting should be held in some public hall.

PLENTY OF POWER FOR PETERBOROUGH

At the meeting of the Engineering Institute last night Mr. Sisson presented a verbal report on behalf of the committee appointed to investigate the power situation in the Trent Valley. It contains some interesting figures on the supply of power and was coupled with the suggestion of Mr. Sisson that, although there was at present sources of power for double the present population of Peterborough, yet a year from now the city might have to look for new sources of additional power, which will unquestionably be forthcoming.

He stated that in the Trent Valley there was power available to the amount of 70,000 h.p., of which up to the present only 28,000 had been developed. In connection with this latter figure Mr. Sisson pointed out that his figures referred to the power actually produced and not to the total capacity of the installations and machinery.

The demand at present was three or four thousand kilowatt less than the supply available, but it was more than likely that this margin would be eaten up in the near future.

Mr. Sisson stated that a complete and detailed report on the power situation would be issued at a later date.

IMPENDING FAMINE IN MEXICAN CAPITAL FORCES CARRANZA'S HAND

President Said to be Seeking a Compromise With Revolutionists—Consideration of Proposal Not Likely Until Conditions are Outlined—Mobilization of Troops

(By Canadian Press.)

Elpaso, Mexico, May 7.—Mobilization of troops believed to be intended for use in Mexico City continued today at Jurez, as authentic information regarding numerous reports of President Carranza's flight to suppress revolution was [illegible]ed.

Son-in-Law Helps.

According to reports here Carranza's son-in-law, Candido Aguilar, went to Vera Cruz several days ago to prepare for the president's coming. T. R. Beltran, commercial agent of the Liberal constitutional party at Elpaso, is authority for the statement that impending famine in Mexico City had forced Carranza to seek a compromise with the revolutionary forces

Compromise in Doubt.

General Calles, commander of Northern Mexico troops, stated yesterday, however, that he did not believe the revolutionists would consider any proposal until actual conditions upon which a compromise would be made were outlined.

[illegible] Vera Government.

Washington May 7.—Concentration by Carranza of troops at Mexico City caused [illegible] representatives here to believe yesterday it might indicate the president's determination to gather about him a force sufficiently strong to enable him to transfer his seat of government. The obvious purpose of such concentration, it was explained, would be the defense of the capital, but, according to military experts, Mexico City is so difficult to defend that Carranza might be expected to employ the same tactics he did when Villa gained the ascendancy in 1914, and again set up his capital at Vera Cruz.

It would be possible for Carranza to take with him to Vera Cruz or to some other point the officials of the Supreme Court and a considerable quantity of supplies and money, but, observers asserted his position would then be no stronger than that of Villa or any other leader conducting independent operations. The possible success of such tactics, they declared depended wholly upon a radical change in popular opinion.

CIVIC EMPLOYEES' WAGE SCALE NOT ADOPTED BY CITY COUNCIL

Counter Proposition by City Fathers—Intermediary Committee Appointed to Endeavor to Bring Contesting Parties in in Labor Disputes Together

As a result of action by the City Council last night, civic employees have not got the wages they were asking, and they intimated indirectly that the city's proposition would not be accepted.

In brief, the men asked the following wages per hour:

Street sweepers: 50 cents.

General labourers, 55 cents.

Sewer and concrete workers: 60 cts.

Carpenters. 85 cents.

Housting and concrete mixing engineers. 85 cents.

An eight hour day; time and a half for over time, and a [illegible] months' agreement.

Council voted on two resolutions.

One by Ald. Hamilton and Turner that street sweepers get 40 cents an hour; labourers 50 cents; carpenters 75 cents, housting engineers 75 cents and concrete mixers 70 cents. This to be a minimum rate and men in authority to have power to increase where workmen are worth it.

A motion in amendment by Ald. Gainey and Morrison that the wages be as follows: Labourers, 50 and 55 cents an hour; carpenters 80 cents from May first and 85 cents from June first; street sweepers 45 cents; hoisting and mixing engineers 80 cents from May first and 85 cents from June first.

The amendment of Ald. Gainey and Morrison was lost on the following division:

Yeas— Ald. Crowe, Morrison, Gainey and the Mayor.

Nays— Ald. Copping, Whitehouse, Jones, Hamilton, Turner and Gordon.

The original motion carried on the same division.

In Committee

Committee of the whole City Council held a couple of hours' session preparatory to a general Council meeting.

The object was to hear deputations on the wage question as regards city employees on the bridge and otherwise.

Mr. Joseph Wearing appeared in company with Messrs. Arthur Pinch George Blodgett and J. Leahy, representing the Labourers' Union, which has asked for its members higher pay to meet the higher cost of living over last year. The scale submitted was: Street sweepers, 50 cents per hour; general labourers, 55 cents and sewer and concrete workers, 60 cents, per hour; for an eight-hour day in a year's agreement.

Mr. Wearing put up the argument that labouring work, especially on concrete and sewer work, was particularly hard too much so to engage in for nine hours a day.

[illegible] Gordon.—Mr. Wearing did not think the men had considered the city's counter proposition of 50 cents an hour for labourers and 60 cents for sewer and concrete men, up to the middle of August or September 1, to see what the general tendency in prices is at that time.

Ald. Turner— "Is the work any harder now than when the men worked nine hours on the lift lock and on the Quaker Oats building?"

Mr. Wearing—"When men work a long day they soldier."

Ald. Gordon.— "Have these delegates power to compromise on a third of a year's agreement?"

The delegates had not.

Ald Turner— "The men are willing to work an extra hour a day, but at time and a half; but according to your agreement, Mr. Wearing, they would not be in a condition to deliver the goods after eight hours' work."

Mr. Wearing— "The men don't went overtime."

Arthur Pinch argued that on the bridge there are too many non-producing bosses at a loss to the city—a boss over four or five men. He suggested that labor men pick such bosses, who would honestly lead in an honest day's work and not confine themselves to unwarrantably "driving" men alone. He hinted that too much driving, like in the case of the horse, does not produce the best results.

George Blodgett declared the city to be getting more work today in eight hours than previously in nine hours. He has teamed considerably for the corporation.

MOTHERS' DAY.

SUNDAY IS "MOTHERS' DAY" in the Protestant churches—an established Sabbath now on which honor shall be paid to that motherhood from which we all sprang. The services are of a specially fitting character, flower decorations are resorted to, and committees of the various congregations delegated to arrange that even the very aged and infirm shall be offered opportunity for reaching church on at least his one day in the year. We understand that for this purpose twenty-five cars will be at the service of Park Street Baptist Church under a directing head, and other churches have made similar arrangements. It is indeed a graceful tribute to our womanhood, this Mothers' Day, when congregations assemble to honor the feminine parents of a great Christian race such as the Anglo-Saxon speaking, the fount from which sprang that glorious young manhood who girded their loins, so to speak, in the defence of the weak against the strong; and in that great war so happily ended fought in protection of motherhood in general and all that that revered name implies.

For over four years of destructive and in some part barbarous war, Canada had quickened reason to honor her great army of devoted mothers, many of whom gave their only beloved to fight the good fight against that tyranny and oppression which threatened the human race. And added glory was reflected on our motherhood in that without its loyal and untiring patriotism at home, Canada's noble forces of gallant sons would have missed many a well-filled box, to say nothing of industriously knitted socks, the gifts of an equally gallant army of women who found no task in the Allies' cause too arduous for loving hands to understake.

When congregations assemble on Sunday next in places of Divine worship bedecked with fragrant floral tributes to Canada's glorious womanhood, let their thoughts go out to those mourning mothers bereaved so cruelly by the call to arms in defence of every man, woman and child within our land. And may their hearts incline in loyal sympathy to those present among them—and there will be some, most likely, in every church—whose sons or husbands lie buried in a soldier's grave, or what is perhaps the hardest thought of all to live with, classed as "missing."

REDUCE DROWNING FATALITIES.

THE SEASON is rapidly approaching when, basing our fears on yearly happenings, our waters, at Peterboro's doors and adjacent thereto, may take their toll of human life through deplorable drowning fatalities. One sound, sensible way to reduce this toll is to offer opportunity for young folk, and even those of adult age, to learn to swim. Many a promising life has been cut short for lack of this accomplishment, and the preservation of human life is a duty we owe to home, community and the State.

In this connection an exchange draws attention to and strongly commends the action of Ottawa city's Y. M. C. A. in, for a period of six weeks, on four days of each week, teaching boys to swim in that institution's indoor tank. An instructor is present, no charge is made. The only thing an applicant needs is to be a mere boy. We agree heartily in this plan, and can only just add that it is to be hoped the girls, too, will not be overlooked.

A suggestion that swimming be taught in schools looks good, but the difficulties in its way of practical application seem almost insurmountable. But the Y. M. C. A. idea could surely be worked out generally throughout Canada, and contributions from the public, if necessary, to such a purpose would be assisting in one of the greatest of all projects—the conserving of a large portion of Canada's manhood and womanhood annually lost through ignorance of the art of swimming.

CARDINAL MERCIER'S OWN STORY.

THIS BOOK is a record of the long conflict between spiritual power and brute force waged by Cardinal Mercier against the German occupiers of Belgium. It tells the story of the man who was "the equal of a Prussian division," in Berlin reckoning, who was threatened, virtually imprisoned, insulted by German commanders and war governors, but who was never silenced, who bade Belgium, and through her the whole Allied world, lift up its heart and bide its time. No other book to come out of Europe has such a tremendous appeal as this work by Cardinal Mercier. ". . . . He awoke the conscience of the world."

Cardinal Mercier is a scientist of world-wide reputation, an administrator of great executive ability, a controversial philosopher of no mean attainments, and a man of powerful and magnetic personality. For some years he was professor at the University in Louvain, before he was called to the Archiepiscopal See of Malines. During the war he stood alone in the face of the invaders of Belgium, the one man whom they dared not touch.

INTERNATIONAL FINANCES.

AT THE FINANCIAL Conference of the Council of the League of Nations, to be held in Brussels, the United States has been invited to send representation. It is desirable that the Council should hear evidence as to the economic conditions in that great country to the south, which up to the present stands apart from the League of Nations for which its President was so strong. In the words of an English authority, the financial affairs of some of the Allies are in a bad enough state, but they are simplicity itself compared with those of the Central Powers. The first essential of financial stability is the rehabilitation of Germany and Austria, and the resumption of trade with them, so that once more the civilized world will be able to draw upon the work and resources of all its members. If the League is to be in a position to do anything considerable in the way of reconstruction by means of any Council, not only must the state of Germany and Austria be most carefully studied, but all the financial circumstances of those countries, including the bruden of indemnities, will have to be brought within the scope of its inquiry.

THAT NEW YORK TRIP.

THAT TRIP by the Mayor, Alderman Gordon and City Clerk Armstrong to New York is to be commended as exemplifying the right spirit animating our city authorities in regard to the acquisition of new industries. Anything worth having is worth going after, and in this instance two very desirable industries were in question. One, they have every reason to hope, will be secured as a result of that trip. Another is also a live probability. And Peterborough's hope for the futre lies in new industries and industrial expansion generally.

FACTORY COUNCILS ABOLISHED.

FACTORY COUNCILS have been abolished in Soviet Russia, and the decree by which they were eliminated gives the following explanation:

"The chief cause of this catastrophic state of affairs is the complete lack of discipline and good order. The factory councils and committees, the function of which was to maintain order, have done only harm. They have destroyed the last remnant of discipline, and have wasted or stolen the plant and materials belonging to the mills. As a result of these abuses, we are now compelled to abolish altogether the factory councils, and to place at the head of every industrial concern of importance a dictator who will have absolute power of life and death over all manual employes."

SOMEWHERE.

I want to go somewhere, far away,
And watch the birds and the chipmunks play;
I want to go where there's something free,
And the H. C. L. can't shoot at me.

I want to go somewhere, far away,
And live in a tent from day to day,
With never a tax bill lurking near,
Or the greedy clutch of a profiteer.

I want to go somewhere, far away,
Where nobody strikes for higher pay,
Where a man can rest, and the only light
Is the cheerful fire that burns at night.

I want to go somewhere, far away,
And when I get there I want to stay
Till things run smooth as they did before,
And this old world is sane once more.

WISE ECONOMY.

(Toronto Globe.)

The Dominion Public Works Department is right in refusing to erect post office buildings in this year of high prices and financial strain. Why is not the same desire for economy shown in all branches of the public service?

GOOD ONLOOKERS.

(Ottawa Journal.)

The American Government has an "official observer" at San Remo. That was what our friend and ally had in the Great War up to 1917. Most Canadians like Uncle Sam well enough to wish he would get into the game and carry his share of the burden of reconstruction.

FAIRLY CHEEKY.

(Brantford Expositor.)

The members of Parliament who refused the additional gratuities to returned soldiers on the ground of the urgent need of national economy, have a lot of assurance to propose an increase of 60 per cent. on their sessional allowance.

WISE, BUT UNNECESSARY.

(Kingston Standard.)

France is following the example of forbidding the importation of luxuries; it is a wise course, but most of us have difficulty enough in finding the money to pay for necessaries and we are even considering how many of these we can just manage to do without.

HARD ON ENGLAND, TOO.

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

Jim Larkin may be philosophical about his conviction as a criminal anarchist, but it cuts him to the quick to have proof presented that he's a native Englishman and not a native Irishman. That, at least, is cruel and inhuman punishment.

READING THE GREAT BOOK.

(Chicago Evening Post.)

A good deal is said in these days of the need of quieting the unrest and nervous excitement that prevail among all sorts of people. Possibly a course of Bible study would prove a better cure than anything yet tried. Also it might have its effect in encouraging the better Americanism we all profess so much desire to establish. Certainly the Bible reading plan ought to meet with wide acceptance.

JAYS—RIDING AND AFOOT.

(Ottawa Journal.)

A motorist having the other day referred to a certain class of pedestrians as "jay walkers," the retort discourteous is being made by pedestrians. It is probable that motorists are just as open to the epithet of "jayism" as are pedestrians. There are not a few men and women driving cars in Ottawa today who, either because of temperament or sheer inability to exercise common sense, never should be permitted to sit at the wheel of an automobile. Every hour and every day lives are endangered on our city streets through the reckless and foolish conduct of motor car drivers.

OUGHT TO BE REACHED.

(Philadelphia Record.)

It is quite true that the law cannot make a man work if he does not want to, but there are circumstances under which he cannot drop his job without getting into trouble with the law. The train crew that abandoned the Chicago express on the Erie railroad with 250 passengers, milk and the mails on board at Port Jarvis ought to be reached in some way. The men were under obligation to take the train through to its destination. If they did not wish to go out on another run, that was their affair. But to abandon the train between terminals is absolutely indefensible.

London Times Writes on Salvation Army Jubilee Appeal

Fifty years and a little more after its foundation, the Salvation Army today makes a direct appeal to the sympathy and practical generocity of the public for funds to enable it to pursue and enlarge the manifold philanthropic enterprises to which it is committed.

General Booth asks, for reasons which at this stage in the history of The Salvation Army should need neither explanation nor apology, a definite sum of money, large enough for the purposes which he indicates, but not too large, in our opinion, for the purses of those who wish him God-speed.

The demand, when all things are considered, cannot be regarded as immoderate. The Salvation Army bears the responsibility of a great and noble trust, which, out of piety to its Founder, and for the love of humanity, it cannot be expected to let suffer, especially after the exhausting years of war, for want of that material basis on which even the most spiritual ideals, when embodied in a voluntary organization, must depend.

The Salvation is, perhaps, the freest of all Christian bodies; its work lies in many spheres, and is directed and performed by men and women who take no thought of the morrow; and therein lies no small part of the secret of its power. A truly apostolic simplicity of life, which has declined no hardship and shirked no danger, has enabled it, as everybody knows, to effect spiritual and moral regeneration where all other agencies have failed.

Funds, therefore, it must naturally have, and such has been the nature of its labors that when it asks for money it asks for it of a society which, even on the lowest and most selfish grounds, ought to recognize the unique value of its services. Schemes and dreams of social reformation and a new order, practical and unpractical, are just now on the lips and before the eyes of all; but collective effort, however prudently conceived and energetically promoted, must always leave a wide field for personal endeavour.

While thinking of the mass, we can never afford to forget the individual. To raise up them that fall, to restore this or that victim of weakness or of circumstance to self-respect and happiness, is beyond the capacity of legislative measures, which can at the best succeed in being only preventive. Philanthropy of such a kind as The Salvation Army's is not, and cannot be, in any sense political. When the mischief is done, not the legislator but the practical healer, has to undo it. It is not a case of doctoring the symptoms; the ills in the social body which the Salvation Army searches out are not such as can be cured by a tincture or an infusion into another part.

They demand, because their subjects are human beings with final values of their own, the remedy which the personal touch of human kindness can alone provide. Because The Salvation Army, with high devotion and persistent courage for over fifty years, has set itself primarily to applying the only medicine which in the last resort is capable of rehabilitating the most abject and the most degraded, its appeal today for more means deserves to meet the response of all who profess to have regard for their fellow-men.

GARDEN SLUG VALUABLE IN WAR

The common garden slug helped importantly to win the war.

It was—and the fact has only just been revealed—the sole efficient and officially recognized detector of poison gases in the American battle area.

When the slug gave warning, the gas alarm was immediately sounded and the doughboys put on their masks.

Thanks to the slug (for a reason presently to be explained) it happened in a great many instances that one or two Yanks were able at night to steal across no man's land and literally drag anywhere from a dozen to fifty Huns out of their trenches, making them prisoners.

The Germans were at a frightful disadvantage, because the secret of the slug was unknown to them. The slimy little mollusks were to be found in plenty all over the battle zone, but the idea of using them to detect poison gases never occurred to the enemy.

Toward the close of the war, after the Americans really got into the fray, both sides made use of "camouflage gas"—i.e., gases that merely protended to be poisonous, and which were not so at all. Suppose, then, a case where the men on one side were obliged to wear masks night and day, perhaps for 48 hours or more—their efficiency being reduced thereby to next to nothing at all—while the men on the other side were not compelled to adopt any such means of self-protection.

Canaries are more sensitive to noxious gases than human beings. Exposed to them, they begin to droop and show signs of collapsing before men are perceptibly affected. It is the same way with mice, whose actions quickly betray the presence of such gases in the atmosphere. Mice and canaries were commonly used by the Germans and by the allies during the war. But they were not altogether satisfactory. They did not give warning quickly enough; and—what was of extreme important—they were affected by camouflage gases.

But right here it will be as well to go back and find out how this remarkable and valuable discovery, in regard to the supersensitiveness of the slug to poison gases, came to be made.

The discoverer was Dr. Paul Bartsch, head of the department of mollusks in the national museum at Washington, and his finding out of the fact in question was due largely to accident. One day the cover was knocked off the box containing the slugs and the latter, crawling out, sought hiding places, so that the doctor had considerable difficulty in finding them.

The box was in the furnace room. At the night the slugs which had eluded capture—they are nocturnal animals—would come out and look for food. A dish of mashed potatoes, accidentally left on the dining room table, attracted them, and they partook of it. When this had happened once, Dr. Bartsch purposely put more mashed potatoes in the same place, for experiment's sake.

A slug might be called a snail without a shell. Snails are notoriously slow travellers. But the slug, relatively speaking, is a racer. It can probably journey at a rate of 50 yards an hour. Thus to cover the distance from the furnace room to the dining room was no feat at all for the doctor's pets.

Slugs are extremely fond of mashed potatoes. But how did they know where to look for it? Obviously, they were attracted to it by an extraordinarily keen sense of smell.

Having established this fact, Dr. Bartsch thought no more about the matter. It was not until the war gas question came up and our military authorities were anxiously looking for some animal that would serve as a "gas watch dog" that the supersense of the slug recurred to his mind.

The war department promptly grabbed the idea, and soon the doctor was directing an elaborate series of experiments in the army laboratories at the American university, near Washington. They were most gratifyingly successful. It was found that any garden slug, exposed to poison gas in various carefully measured strengths, would declare not only the presence of the gas, but exactly how much of the latter there was in the air.

Thus, if there was one part of gas in 10,000,000 of air, the animal would slightly retract its "horns." When there was one part in 8,000,000 it would withdraw them further. The load being increased to one part in 4,000,000, it would draw them in altogether. It was found possible actually to measure with accuracy the strength of the gaseous solution by observing the creature's actions.

We live on a farm, so there is lots to do, but many who felt as I did would have been in bed. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it did me a world of good. I tried other remedies but I put Vegetable Compound ahead of them all, and I tell every one I know how much good it has done me."—Mrs. DUNCAN BROWN, Lascelles, Prov. Quebec.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ear, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and dizziness should be heeded by middle-aged women, and let Lydia E. Snow Storm In Jerusalem

(The following extracts are contained in a letter from Mr. E. O. Jago to Mr. A. E. Thompson, February 17, 1920, and give interesting news of the tryig time through which Jerusalem has passed.ACSn).

The last few days here beggar description. With drifts ten feet high and with all wood practically gone from the city, it almost looks as if we were "in the Tribulation" as far as this ctiv is concerned. The few trees that were left are almost all broken down and lying in yards or across the roads. The railroads are all washed out. We have had hardly any heat all winter. During the week of terrible storm, one small stove with a little wood in it was our heating equipment and source of a little lief.

The Military Y. M. C. A. collapsed in the storm. Nine men were sleeping in the building, but got out just before the building fell, or they would All the force at the mission headquarters had to turn out and shovel for two days. The windows in the lower part of the church were forced in by the falling drifts from the church roof falling on the drifts on the cistern and partly broken. The detonations from the three feet or more of wet snow falling from the church roof t the cistern sounded like cannon shots The lower rooms were swimming with water, although I had a man pumping the cisterns constanly to keep them from bursting, and the poor girls down stairs were most miserable.

Here is a section from today's paper: "The main roads leading to the city are practically impassable. We can only conjecture how deep the snow may be. Making our way through metre-high snow, we plunge slowly along the arched-over streets inside the city walls. The old is still standing. The moderns, in the shape of corrugated iron awnings over shop and dwelling, has disappeared. Not a living person is to be seen. All have deserted their posts and remained indoors. Out through the Jaffa Gate, where the snow is breast high, British soldiers, urged on by their officers, are tackling the drifts. Trees are lying everywhere. Here a house has been crushed to nothingness; there a planing mill has been utterly destroyed, the falling timbers breaking much of the machinery. A local cinema, whose walls have witnessed many tragedies on the screen, is now the chief actor in the biggest tragedy of its career. Its fallen roof will prevent its being used for many a day, etc. etc.

During the storm a Jew died and twenty five pounds was paid to dig his grave. Scores have died all over the city and pdices of necessities have been very high. On Saturday, the 14th eggs sold at twelve and one-half cts each and othter goods in proportion.

We kept our services, however, and it is remarnable how people have been coming. The Non-Conformist Chapplain has asked for and received permission for the troops who do not belong to the Church of England to come here to our services. The Colonel of the Chaplains, stationed in Cairo, a Baptist from Spurgeon's College, and who is to be transferred to Jerusalem in March, has been here within the past hour and expressed his pleasure that the Non-Conformist troops have a place to come.

INCREASED PASSENGER RATES

Ottawa, May 6.—It is understood that Canadian railways will present their case for increased passenger rates to the United States before the Canadian Railway Commission shortly, probably at the regular sitting of the Commission on May 18.

MEDITATIVE MUSSELS

Every one knows the mussels. Their empty shells slip among the pebbles of the wide world's waterways, salt and fresh alike. Vacant houses are these; the inhabited ones cluster among the rocks that lie exposed only at low tides, or bury themselves in muddy bottoms that are bared only in driving winds. But nobody can claim an acquaintance with them. They are not expansive to callers. They resent your intrusion on their privacy by a vigorous closing of their shelly doors.

But this exclusiveness is not due to any pride in their antiquity; their antiquity rather is due to their retiring habit, for they are toothsome morsels. And they know it. Mussels are not unintelligent in their way. Any creature who can evolve a strong, often highly decorated pair of shells, who will provide means of guarding its infants, until they attain the age of discretion, in its blanketing gills, should certainly be classed above such fatalistic ephemera of the sea as take no thought of the future. And the adventurous young mussel who prolongs his horny threads, which is more sedate age will anchor him to a stone, into a lariat to snare a fish and catch a free ride, meals ingenious. This is practically the only way he can see the world; he always does it—unless the fish sees (and eats) him first.

But it is as a morsel served a la Bordelaise, that I find them most interesting. So do others. Some snails are their constant enemies. I suspect all of the fishing birds—I once saw one clamped on the back of a marauding gull. And once, on a hilltop well back from the sea, near Monterey, I found a pile of broken shells. It was left by neither feasting Indians nor a tidal wave; it was merely where the raven, nesting in the next ravine, dropped them to shatter on the stones and scooped their poor stunned inmates to feed her young.

That is how birds can manage them. But what of the coon, the skunk, the mink and the muskrat? Can they risk their sensitive noses between the shells of every mussel it takes to make a meal? In vain it haunted the ever-fresh shell-piles on the beach for evidence. It was eBrt who caught a muskrat in the very act of capture. He dove, and he came up with the mussel clamped harmlessly to a claw. A sharp tooth down the mussel's leathery hinge, a gulp, and he was off to let another capture him. But how could the most meditative hermit, secluded in his shell, dream that was exactly what the muskrat wanted?

To the Editor of Review:

I notice the City Council has passed a grant of $100 to the Carpenters to help to defray expenses of the coming convention. As a member of T.A.S., W.C.T.U., Belmont Club, Commercial Travellers' Association, W. O. W., I.O.O.F., Bricklayers, Masons, Plumbers, Steam-fitters, Bank Clerks, Engineers, Laborers, Printers, and any other organization, I would ask if it is the intention of the Council to give financial support to each of the above organizations or any other organization that decides to hold a convention in Peterborough in the future. I do not see how they can justify a refusal to pass a grant to any organization if they sanction this one.

LET ALL PROVINCES NOW ASSUME AUTHORITY REGARDING STRIKE

Mr. Burnham Offers Solution for Deplorable Industrial Unrest—Letter to Peterborough Labor.

Ottawa, May 6, 1920.

To the Editor of the Review:

Dear Sir,—As agreed by me on May 6th with gentlemen of Peterborough, I consulted the Minister of Labor regarding the matter of the Matthews' Packing House strike, and was informed by him that it was impossible for him to interfere because the matter did not come under the Industrial Disputes Act which alone gave him authority to interfere whether the parties consented or not. The Industrial Disputes Act deals with public utilities only and gives the Minister the right to intervene in a strike without having the matter referred to him by the parties. Strikes such as the present one cannot be dealt with by him in that way because they are not on public utilities and therefore not under the Industrial Disputes Act. You will ask why it is that the jurisdiction of the Government has not been extended, and the answer is that strikes not on public utilities deal with matters of "property and civil rights" and come under the B. N. A. Act, which gives provinces jurisdiction but not the Dominion. Until such time, therefore, as the provinces have agreed that the Minister of Labor at Ottawa can interfere in all strikes without the consent of either employer or employed, his position as arbitrator in what may be called "trade strikes" is non-existent.

Today I had a long chat with the Minister and the Deputy Minister whom he called in, and we went into the whole situation. It is quite clear that the situation is this:

The Labor Conference held at Washington recommended the adoption of the 8-hour day and the extension of Governmental arbitration to all matters affecting employer and employed, whether referred to the Government or not by consent. These recommendations of the conference were all to come into effect in 1921 after the next meeting of the conference, it being expected that in the interim the various governments represented at the conference would crystalize these recommendations into law so that the final recommendation of the Washington conference to the world would be backed up by the various countries (and the provinces were represented at the conference) represented at the conference, and by the actual laws in vogue there. Otherwise, of course, a recommendation of the conference would be of no use. The Government at Ottawa, therefore, hoped and expected that the provinces would pass legislation enabling their governments and the Dominion Government as well, to extend intervention in strikes to every strike. Do not forget that no Government can interfere without consent as the law stands at present in strikes that occur on anything but public utilities. If, therefore, the provinces had passed the 8-hour day law and such laws as I am referring to, the conference meeting at Washington next year would declare that these immense advances leading to harmony in relations between employer and employed, would be dated from the year 1921; after which, whenever a strike occurred, Governments would step in and settle strikes without any of the delays and losses which occur at the present time.

The provinces, however, have done nothing to back up the Washington Conference or to empower the Dominion to extend its authority in strike matters. You will see, therefore, that unless the provinces take these matters up and deal with them promptly, it is possible that the conference may meet next year at Washington without any recommendation from Canada at all in this respect, and with the result that the confusion that exists now will be continued indefinitely. Such a state of affairs would be deplorable, and I think Labor in Peterborough should take these matters up with my friend, Mr. Tooms, M.P.P., and have him bring them up at Toronto at once, so that there may be no further delay.

It is useless to say that Ontario has no jurisdiction and that Ottawa has, because it is quite clear that the B.N.A. Act excludes Ottawa, and it is also clear that the Dominion is willing to back up the provinces. It is surely absurd that such sidestepping jurisdiction between the provinces and the Dominion should result in the continuance of the present disastrous relations existing between labor and employers. I know nothing more seriously reflecting upon the common sense of the people of Canada than these facts.

As a conclusion of what I have stated, I repeat that the Dominion cannot interfere in the Matthews' Packing Housestrike because one of the parties of the strike has not consented to the intervention of the Dominion, and as I have shown, as the law is now, cannot be compelled to consent. That the Dominion or any other Government should be allowed to interfere only when the parties to a strike both consent, is a serious reflection upon the civilization of this country.

Let Ontario and all the other provinces rise promptly to this opportunity and assume authority in strikes themselves or make it possible for Ottawa to do so, and another twelve months will have seen the last of strikes which cannot now be settled without prolonged suffering to all concerned, not excepting the public itself. The present Peterborough strike furnishes Mr. Tooms and myself with a chance to bring about something of the greatest advantage to Canada.

Yours truly,
J. H. BURNHAM.

IMMENSE APPLE CROP THIS YEAR

Ottawa, May 7.—There is every prospect of an immense apple crop throughout Ontario this year, Gordon Wilson, member for Wentworth told the agricultural committee this morning, when fruit package regulations were under discussion.

Orders-in-Council.

The lengthy discussion turned on a point of future regulations being left to the Minister of Agriculture through order-in-Council. Members who have strongly opposed those orders-in-Council on other matters agreed that in trade matters this form of legislation was desirable.

CIVIC COMMITTEE FOR LABOR TROUBLE

TO ACT AS INTERMEDIARY BODY IN EFFORT TO EFFECT SETTLEMENT

On motion of Ald. Gordon and Crowe in Council last night, a committee was appointed to act as an intermediary body between both the parties in the labor troubles.

This committee is composed of the Mayor, Ald. Gainey, Hamilton, and Whitehouse.

Their duty will be to try and bring together the contending parties in strikes and threatened strikes with a view to an adjustment of differences.

This committee also carries the power to offer recommendations and suggestions in regard to a maximum wage settlement over the minimum wage fixed by Council for civic employes last night, should circumstances call for any further action.

Ald. Gordon raised the above suggestions, called for, he said, by the number of men already out of work through wage and hour disputes.

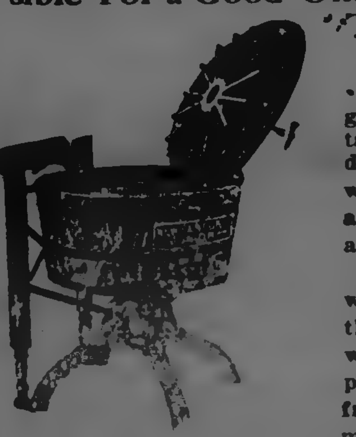
If You Want To Own a Washing Machine And Want To Pay The Smallest Price Possible For a Good One Then Step Into Our Third Floor Department To-Morrow



The family washing is the greatest and most disagreeable task of housekeeping, if it is done in the old fashioned way with wash board and tub. Such a method is hard on the clothes and hard on yourself.

To-morrow we offer four washing machines at prices that cannot be equalled anywhere. Even if you had the privilege of purchasing direct from the factory you would pay more than our Saturday price.

New Century Junior Regular $17 For $12.95

It is a hand washer operated by a rotary motion of the hand on a wooden handle; running on hardened steel balls, it is aided by powerful Helical steel springs that in reality are responsible for most of the action.

Ideal Power Regular $28 For $19.95

This machine is operated by water power, and does it all without any effort on the part of the housewife. Just lift the lid, place the clothes in the tub, and attach the rubber hose to the tap, the same as you would a garden hose, and the water pressure drives the mechanism.

"Sea Foam Electric" Regular $125 For $87

Electricity is the power that sets the machinery in motion. It is very effective and has the reputation of being one of the finest washers on the market.

"Apex Electric" Regular $195 For $175

This machine differs greatly from all others. It has a metal tub in apex shape, and a grooved lining. The tub itself is set in motion and by this means the action of the water on the clothing is similar to rubbing on a washboard.

STORE OPENS 9 A.M. The CRESSMAN Company Limited CLOSES SATURDAY 9.30 P.M

CIVIC EMPLOYEES

The scale of wages presented asked an increase of from 67 1-2 to 85 cents of a jump of 17 1-2 cents.

Mr. Daggett presented a very reasonable case for his men. He said in most all towns and cities in this district, advances from 20 cents to 25 cents had been allowed. Guelph he admitted was paying less than the scale asked here, but there the men had always been paid less than the trade in most other Ontario places. But the Guelph men have been allowed a 20 cents increase from May first and another 10 cents advance on August 30th, which is a greater percentage.

Question of Tools

Mr. Daggett pointed out that it costs carpenters more for tools than any other building trades members from $200 to $300. Then there is the lost time through weather and other conditions, which it is computed on Toronto amounts to from 12 to 1 weeks each year, and that has to be taken into consideration when adjusting wages.

The Mayor thought the men's demands justified by living and other conditions. Taking everything into consideration, the scales presented would only net labourers $1,000 a year and carpenters $1400.

"Would any of us consider $1,400 a living income," he asked.

Ald. Gordon—"No, because we are higher skilled than the labourer. That is the answer."

Ald. Whitehouse— "We are spending public money and have to look at the question from both sides."

Ald. Jones— "We are getting his half the production. And I'm not going to stand for that."

Leave Town

Mr. McMurray declared that if the scale presented is not accepted, the city will lose its best men in the carpentering line. They, like him, would go elsewhere where living wages are paid.

Nine-Hour Cry.

Ald. Turner— "Why not work nine hours and help make good lost time in winter and through weather conditions?"

Mr. Dagett "That would be violating the peace treaty which stipulated for legislation in the direction of eight hours.

Turner— "How reduce the cost of living if not work for greater production?"

Mr. Daggett—"eliminate the middleman, and you'll save 15 per cent in the cost of living."

Ald. Turner replied that in Peterborough the selling of potatoes on the market direct by farmers to consumers refuted that argument.

Ald. Turner here pointed out that there had been no legislature enactment for eight hours.

Mr. Dagget "That because the legislature and the Federal Government are each shouldering such jurisdiction on the othter. However," he said "carpenters in Toronto are getting an eight-hour day in all departments of Government and public work."

Mr. Parliament— "Here in Peterborough three-quarters of the business houses give their clerks an eight hour day and a half day each week in the summer months

Treat Them Generously

Ald. Crowe would treat the men interested as generously as the city did the civic officials.

To Ald. Gordon, Ald. Crowe said there might be room in the scales submitted to get together. But still he would like to see, if possible, the men get all they ask.

He believed the labourers would compromise, still it would be hardly fair to take advantage of them.

Ald. Jones—"Our rates will set those for the rest of the employers of labor."

The wage resolutions in the lead of this report were here voted on in favor of Ald. Hamilton's original motion, which was subsequently carried in Council.

That Notice

Ald. Hamilton declared the bridge committee had nothing to do with posting that notice of wages to be paid on the bridge construction.

Ald. Gainey— "Mr. Townsend should have consulted with the Mayor before posting any notice."

TWO RESIGNATIONS FROM COMMITTEE

ANOTHER SENSATION OVER GEN. H. N. McLEAN'S ALLEGED STATEMENT.

COL. H. C. COOPER WITHDRAWS

RESENTS PRIVATE'S WIDOWS BEING CHARACTERIZED AS OF SERVANT CLASS.

(By Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, May 6.—Another sensation to that which developed when Col. Peck, V.C., resigned from the Parliamentary Committee on Pensions because of an alleged statement from General H. N. McLean that widows of private soldiers were of servant class, occurred today when Chairman Hume Cronyn announced that he had received the resignation of Col. R. C. Cooper, member for Vancouver.

Col. Cooper's resignation and that of Col. Peck camebefore the committee this morning, but no formal action was taken. It was suggested that in view of a full instigation of the incidents surrounding these resignations, they should now be withdrawn, and also suggested that these resignations could only be made through the House, as the committee had been appointed in that way

SITE FOR SEWAGE DISPOSAL SETTLED

CITY PAYS THE WILSON BROTHERS $17,000 FOR THEIR LAND

The city has now taken over the Wilson property in North Monaghan as the site for the sewer disposal plant. The following is the report of the Committee of the Whole last night in this direction, which report was adopted:

"That Wilson Brothers' offer to sell to the city for $17,000 that part of their property required by the city as a site for a sewage disposal plant, and the elimination by them of all claim for all future damages, be accepted, and that the city solicitor be instructed to prepare an agreement for the purchase of the property by the city."

RUSSIA TO RESPECT FOREIGNERS' PROPERTY

SOVIET AUTHORITIES AT MOSCOW ISSUE DECREE TO THIS EFFECT

Copenhagen, May 6.—M. Krassin, the Russian Bolshevik Minister of Trade and Commerce, at the request of the nations engaged in the Copenhagen negotiations, has sent a message to the Central Soviet insistingthat the property of foreign subjects shall be inviolate. Owing to a breakdown in the Petrograd wireless service, however, no direct reply had been received. A Copenhagen firm today received a telegram from Irkutsk, by way of Harbin, to the effect that the Soviet authorities had issued a decree that goods belonging to the subjects of foreign nations shall not be sequestrated, except on a special resolution and after a Taxation Commission has fixed a fair valuation.

HISTORY ALL WRONG SAYS SEVENTEEH BABY

CONSULT HER AT THE GRAND THEATRE NEXT MONDAY

History is all wrong! At least its volumes on vampires. The man-written stuff needs feminine fixing, if you ask Lael Davis, the siren of "Seventeen," for the chroniclers from Harodotus to Kipling have all trodden the wrong tract.

They have wasted their ink and parchment on greeneyes and flamingo hair. They have warned every youth and bachelor to beware of sibilant whispers and sinuous wiles. They have poured their type-set wrath on all the haries of Dame Fashion. But, Adam-like, they have stumbled all around the real pitfall. Wherefore countless masculine Waterloos.

Now that no vampire has time to vamp, what with striking and balloting, Miss Davis turns the spotlight on the apple of destruction that Eve has served since creation. It comes wrapped in 117 different languages, but to the knowing its label is always "baby talk."

Yes, says this little philosopher of twenty, if you read between the hieroglyphis of Cleopatra you will find that she was not a serpent of the Nile at all, but a "baby talk" lady." Her piece de resistance was what seems to be uninitiated, mere infantile babble. "My cutems crocodile," she murmured to Anthony. And the Roman map was dislocated.

And if Paris had been thoughtful enough to write "Confessions of a Young Man," Helen of Troy would have been accredited with some such monologue: "Terrible mans! Who so indifferent to icle 'Elen," and "Flee with thee? Yes, undeedums." Is there mention of such vital speech in Homer's account? No, you see, Homer happened to be a man.

Kipling's "Fool There Was," as revealed by Miss Davis, would have been as safe as a fat man if he had noted only the "rag and a bone and a hank of hair" in his Loralle's equipment. The trouble started when he hearkened to her variations of "nicekins" and "boofums."

Men laugh at Willie Baxter in this play, says this stage heart-wrecker. "They think he flops because he's seventeen, but it's the same from seventeen to seventy. While the hunted are busy watching the sirens that are listed in their Baedecker—the felines and the snakes are other exotics that live mostly between covers and on the screens—the 'baby talk' ladies sweep them whither they choose.

SURE HIT OF THE THEATRE SEASON

KEEPING UP WITH THE JONES'S FULL OF SCREAMING CREATIONS

The hit of the season may be aptly applied to the latest Gus Hill triumph, 'Keeping up With the Joneses," which is to be the next attraction at the Grand Theatre on Wednesday evening only. This new play is based on the popular cartoons of Pop Momand, whose screamingly funny creations first appeared in the pages of the New York Globe. It was Mr. Hill who first saw the possibilites of bringing cartoon to life, as attested by the success of "Mutt and Jeff" and "Bringing Up Father." Those who have seen this latest landslide of laughter claim that in point of popularity it will surely eclipse the success of any musical comedy of its kind offered hereabouts in seasons. If millions have enjoyed the cartoons, it is easy to predict that millions more will enjoy the play. Startling surprises, plenty of singing and dancing, novelties, pretty women, glittering costumes, a large and capable cast, jingling and effervescent music, fantasy and sensational features comprise this contribution. It is a show built on unusual lines and calculated to set a new departure in productions which will be difficult for other managers to emulate.

Parliament Helpless?

W. N. Tilley, K.C., representing the Manufacturers' Association and other organizations, argued that the Canadian Parliament had not the power to compel the disposition of property within the province for the benefit of the whole country, or to prevent the holding of property for a rise in prices.

W. F. O'Connor, K.C., will present his case for the Attorney-General this afternoon.

STATES WILL TAKE CENSUS OF HIDES

DETERMINED TO SEE TO IT THAT SHOE PRICES ARE REDUCED

Washington, May 6.—Relief from the present high prices of shoes is of a bill favorably reported to the House today by the Census Committee.

The bill authorizes the director of the census to take a census every month of the number of hides in the country, and makes it mandatory upon all hide owners to give full information to the census takers.

"The committee is of the opinion," said Chairman Siegel, "that there was no necessity for the increases in the prices of hides, and the present high prices of shoes are entirely unnecessary, uncalled for and unprecedented. The alleged shortage of leather is a pure subterfuge put forward as a justification for increasing prices."

TO WITHDRAW THE OPTION OF A FINE

IMPRISONMENT ONLY PUNISHMENT FOR DRIVING CAR WHEN DRUNK

Toronto, May 6.—Hon. W. E. Raney introduced in the Legislature yesterday an amendment to the Motor Vehicles Act, that raised a round of applause from all parts of the House.

"There is just one point to it," he explained after moving first reading. "It makes the penalty for being in charge of a motor vehicle when intoxicated, imprisonment without the option of a fine."

Dr. Stevenson of London, wanted to know if the bill proposed to confiscate the vehicle of convicted persons "for the time the man was in prison." When told that there was no such provision, he suggested that the convicted man's car be utilized while he was in prison and the revenue from it taken by the Crown.

CLOSE SHAVE FOR CALLIES LAST NIGHT

JUST A LITTLE IN THE WAY OF LUCK AVERTED DEFEAT

The football game last night at the Oval between the Machine Gun Company and the Caladonians was the closest shave for the "Callies" that they have had so far this season, and but for a little in the way of luck, would have been their first defeat. After a close game, which was anybody's until the last second of play, the Caledonians won by a score of 3-2.

At the kick off there was no wind at all, and consequently no advantage to be gained for either side from that quarter but the M. G. C. gained a slight advantage for the first half in that the Caledonians were forced to play directly into the sun. This advantage was not reversed for the second half as by that time the sun had gone down.

For the first half both teams scored, and could get no further although for a time the M. G. C. looked very dangerous and were pressing the "Callies" hard. They were unable to crown their rushes with a goal and the whistle blowing for half time found the score remaining at one all.

In the second half the "Callies" managed to score twice and the M. G. C. once, although one of the goals scored by the Caledonians was extremely lucky. Frazer, playing centre for the M. G. C., had an eleventh hour opportunity to tie the score, but the excitement of the moment proved to be too much for him and he muffed it. The shot seemed almost a certainty, and it is quite possible that this fact was the only thing that saved the "Callies" from experiencing the bitterness of defeat for the first time.

Perry playing back for the M. G. C. played a very good game all through and was most favorably criticized by the spectators. The whole M. G. C. team have shown wonderful improvement in the last week or so and there is no doubt that they will be a powerful consideration in the League for the future.

The line-up:

Machine Gun Company— W. Flowers, goal; J. Crow and D. Perry backs; J. Darling, R. G. McLeish, A. Metcalfe, half backs; J. Roberts, L. Frazer, W. Bell, J. Bell and H. Darling.

Caledonians— A. Brunton, goal; J. Willshaw and Robert Willshaw, backs; J. Frost, S. McMillan and Alex. Hardie, half-backs; R. Hannah Mat. Shaw, James Shaw, Ed. Hardie, and R. McDowall, forwards.

PETERBOROUGH BRANCH ENGINEERING INSTITUTE ELECT OFFICERS FOR YEAR

Members Favor Extending Voting Privileges to the Juniors.

At the annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada held in the Board of Trade rooms last night the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Hon Chairman—R. B. Rogers.
Chairman—R. H. Parsons.
Vice-chairman—P. L. Allison
Secretary—R. L. Dobbin.
Treasurer—D. L. McLaren.
Committee—C. E. Sisson, P. P. Westbye, Jas. McIntosh, D. D. W. Magie and C. H. Rogers.

Mr. Sisson, who acted as chairman, explained how he came to be in that position. City Engineer Parsons, the vice-chairman, was in New Orleans and before leaving he had been unable to get in touch with Mr. R. B. Rogers so he had requested Mr. Sisson to act as chairman for the meeting.

Mr. Sisson made a short resume of the work of the branch for the past year. He expressed great regret that the past chairman, Mr. Reid Munro, was prevented by death from presenting his report. He also regretted the absence of the vice-chairman, Mr. Parsons, which prevented him from giving his inaugural address as the new chairman.

The outstanding event of the past year had been the changing of what was then the Engineering Club to a branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada. There had been some doubts as to the advisability of this plan when it was first suggested and opposition came chiefly from the electrical engineers as it was felt that the Engideering Institute sprang from what was formerly the Society of Civil Engineers that civil engineers would dominate the institute. Subsequent events and the officers at present on the executive went to show that there was no cause for this feeling. He thought that the present officers of the institute were well divided amongst the different branches of engineering.

He was glad to be able to state that at the present time almost all of the engineers in the city and district were members of the branch. There had also been a very gratifying inaugural meeting with many prominent engineers from outside present who were still taking a keen interest in the growth of the branch. He felt that they would all be ready to agree that it had been a move in the right direction when a branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada had been organized in Peterborough.

Owing to the fact that two of the three jduges of election were unable to act (Mr. Sisson was in the chair and Mr. Parsons absent), Mr. Reid and Mr. Stavert were elected to act with Mr. R. B. Rogers as judges.

Reports.

Mr. D. L. McLennan, the treasurer, presented his financial report, showing a balance on hand of $6.72.

Mr. E. R. Shirley presented a report on readings and lectures for the year. He reported a most successful season. He stated the committee was greatly indebted to the Y M C.A. and Mr. McNeely for the work done in connection with slides and films for the lectures.

Mr. P. L. Allison reported on the growth of the membership. His report showed a tremendous growth during the year. He suggested an alteration in the bylaws to permit junior members to have the privilege of voting and holding all offices except that of chairman.

The opinion of some members on this question was that the juniors if they obtained full privileges might not want to become associate members until they were compelled to by reason of the age limit.

The chairman favored the idea. He thought that the requirements for a junior member were such that he should be able to take an active interest in the organization.

There was a considerable amount of discussion on this subject in the course of which various methods of placing a check on the possible desire of junior members to remain as such were suggested. The discussion was, however, quite open and no notice of motion in connection with the matter was brought in. It is likely that the matter will again be dealt with at the next meeting.

Mr. P. L. Allison, the new vice-chairman, was called upon to give his inaugural address in the absence of Mr. Parsons, the new chairman, but he declined, stating that Mr. Parsons would be able to do that for himself at the next meeting. He appreciated the honor done him tonight.

Mr. Shirley and Mr. Dobbin were nominated to take the late Mr. Munro's place on the Provincial Executive of the Engineering Institute of Canada. By a standing vote Mr. Dobbin was declared elected.

Shield for C. E. Canfield.

The shield which has been manufactured to present to Mr. C. E. Canfield, E.E., by the members of the Peterborough Engineering Club as a recognition of his many services to the club prior to the forming of the Peterborough Branch of the Engineering Institute, was exhibited to the members at the meeting last night. It is a handsome silver shield mounted on mahogany with a beaver crest at the top and will undoubtedly be a valuable memento for Mr. Canfield. The date, Nov. 1st, which is the date the Engineering Club became the Peterborough branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada, is inscribed on it.

After the formal business of the meeting had been disposed of the gathering took on an informal nature and several reels of pictures were thrown on to the screen for the amusement of the members. Light refreshments were then served in the way of "hot dogs," etc. and the meeting dispersed.

EXAMINER TEAM IN THE HOT AIR CLASS

REVIEW CHEERFULLY ACCEPTS CHALLENGE OF CONTEMPORARY'S ARTISTS

There is a warm breeze emanating from the vicinity of the Examiner office. The ink splashers and metal butchers there, becoming slightly affected by the increasing strength of the sun's rays, have suddenly begun to fancy themselves as ball players and have hurled a challenge to The Review. They go even further. In their sporting columns they dare to suggest that any delay in the fixing of the date for such a game will be on account of the nervous temperament of The Review ballplayers. Let them have no worries on that score. While The Review ball artists have no desire to emerge from a long winter of hibernation right into a desperate conflict without a little preliminary practice yet it is safe to say that the date for the encounter, if left in the hands of The Review, will be settled perhaps a trifle quicker than the boasting ink splashers of George street desire. A word to the wise is sufficient. Let them remember the old adage that "He laughs best who laughs last."

STICKS TO FIRST LOVE.

Belleville, May 7.—"Peeney" Mills, the clever backstop of the champion Beleville Ontarios last season, who was reported to have left for Brantford to sign with Knotty Lee, has decided to stick to his first love and will be behind the bat for Belleville this season, with Freddy Goyer on the slab.

Mills was seen by Lindsay fans who attended the baseball game at Toronto yesterday, and stated that although he had received tempting offers to turn pro, he thought it best to assist his old team mates another season. He is in fine shape and states that Belleville will be strong this year in the Central League.

TWO FOOTBALL GAMES TOMORROW

Two good games of football are promised tomorrow afternoon, both being scheduled at the Exhibition grounds. On the east pitch the Great War Veterans will meet the DeLaval for the first time and if the DeLaval keep up the pace they set last week the Veterans will have their work cut out to beat them. On the west pitch the Caledonians will play the Canadian Woollens. Although the Canadian Woollens were defeated last Saturday by the DeLaval, they put up a very good game, so much so that many of the spectators went away from the game convinced that they were the better team. They should therefore be able to put up a good fight against the Caledonians. The line-up of the Canadian Woollens had not been decided this afternoon, but it is not likely that it will vary much from the team which played on Saturday last.

The other line-ups for tomorrow are as follows:

Great War Veterans— Goal, Griffin; backs A. Bishop and W. Hawthorne; half-backs, H. Burrows, H. Norman, A. Edwards; forwards, S. Curtis, G. Monks, P. Ryan, F. McKinley, S. Evans; reserves, E. Jones and A. Piggott.

Caledonians— Goal, A. Brunton; J. Willshaw and Robert Willshaw, backs; J. Frost, S. McMillan and Alex. Hardie, half-backs; R. Hannah, Mat. Shaw, James Shaw, Ed Hardie and R. McDowall, forwards.

DeLaval— Goal, Jones; backs, Hartshorn and Hillman; half-backs, Styles, Humpage and Brown; forwards, Hartshorn, Cullen, Abraham, Nicholls, Goodman; reserves, Cooper.

Civic Luncheon.

At the meeting this afternoon it was decided that Sir Richard Winfrey should be tendered a civic luncheon at the Empress Hotel as soon as he arrives, and that after the luncheon the Board of Trade should take over the arrangements and conduct him and the other visiting gentlemen over the different points of interest in the city. In the evening there will be an open mass meeting, which will probably be held in St. Paul's Church, in the interests of the Christian Men's Brotherhood Federation of Canada.

Here Monday Noon.

Rev. Dr. Malott explained to the meeting that it was originally intended that Sir Richard Winfrey should arrive in the city on Saturday and stay until Monday, but under the more recent plans he would probably reach the city on the noon C. P. R. train from Toronto Monday.

The question as to how many could be accommodated at the luncheon was left to the reception committee of the City Council. The number will be either sixty-five or one hundred, according to whether or not the large dining-room of the [illegible] can be secured for the occasion. The committee will also decide as to who shall be invited, although it was the opinion of the meeting that the guests should include all men who have taken a prominent part in the public life of the city at any time.

From City's Namesake.

In the course of the discussion it was pointed out that when Mr. Denne visited Peterborough, England, after he had been elected mayor of this city, he was tendered a civic welcome by the municipal authorities of Peterborough, England. Mr. Worth stated that on the occasion of the disastrous fire at the Quaker Oats Co.'s factory the first telegram of regret received was from the city of Peterborough, England,

The City Council last night carried the following resolution unanimously:

Moved by Ald. Gordon, seconded by Ald. Crowe:

"That this Council give expression to the sense of loss it feels the city has sustained by the death of Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C. Mr. Moore was an active and valuable member of this Council for several years, and in addition was a commissioner of the Peterborough City Trust, and during several years chairman of the trust, and was for over fourteen years a member of the Utilities Commission and chairman of that commission also at the time of his death. In these several public positions, as well as a director and chairman of the board of directors of the Little Lake Cemetery Company and in other public associations, Mr. Moore always evinced a sincere desire to serve the public efficiently, and his ability enabled him to carry out that desire during the many years he devoted to public service with great benefit to the community. Highly esteemed personally, and appreciated for his public services, his death is sincerely regretted by the people of the city and district, and this Council joins in expressing to the bereaved members of this family their deep sympathy."

REFUSED RIGHT-OF-WAY?

Charge of Breach of Motor Vehicle Act Dismissed.

A local doctor appeared in the Police Court this morning to answer a charge of a breach of the Motor Vehicles Act in that he refused to give the right-of-way to a horse and rig which was proceeding east along King street. The doctor in question was supposed to have been proceeding south along George street.

Constable Young gave evidence to the effect that he witnessed the occurrence at about nine o'clock in the morning and took the number of the car by which the owner was traced. Another doctor appeared in the witness box and declared that both he and the doctor charged were at the Nicholls Hospital at nine o'clock on the day of the occurrence and it therefore could not have been the doctor who committed the offense.

Magistrate Dumble was inclined to doubt the ability of the doctor to be two places at the same time and in view of the evidence the chief of police did not press the charge which was consequently dismissed. The constable when recalled to the box admitted that it might have been possible for him to have taken the wrong number.

BUILDERS' EXCHANGE.

Take Some Time To Get Meeting on Housing Question.

It will, apparently, be some little time before a conference between the civic Housing Commission and the Trades and Labor Council to discuss the housing legislation now before the Provincial Government, as suggested by the Mayor in a communication read at the last meeting of the Trades Council, can take place.

The Trades and Labor Council feel that it is essential that the Builders' Exchange, which represents all the building trades of the city, should be included in the conference, and Secretary McKinley of that body, when seen this morning, explained that it would take some time to get a meeting together. There had not been a meeting since last November, and before he could call another one he would have to be in possession of a new list of delegates, for which he had written to the various trades, and was awaiting a reply. As soon as he is in receipt of this information a meeting will be called to take up the matter of a conference as suggested by the Mayor.

BURGLARIES IN BERLIN INCREASE

SUCCESSOR OF THE WAR PROFITEERS FLAUNT NEWLY ACQUIRED WEALTH

MANY SCORES OF HOLD-UPS

MAN ON STREET STRIPPED OF CLOTHES AND LEFT IN UNDERWEAR

(By Canadian Press.)

Berlin, May 8.—In these disturbed days, when the "revolution profiteer"—the successor of the war profiteer—flaunts his newly acquired wealth in the face of an impoverished populace, robberies and burglaries in Berlin increase at an abnormal pace. Street signs are full of announcements offering rewards for the return of stolen goods, and in one of the main business streets of Berlin a fancy goods store displays this notice:

"Gentlemen burglars are requested not to break open the shoe front nor to tamper with the locks. There is nothing to steal here. All property is removed from the shop windows at night."

There have been scores of holdups, and the other day a man was stripped of his clothes, shoes and hat and left on the side-walk in his underclothes.

It is not safe for hotel guests to leave any portable property of any description in their rooms. Articles of clothing have a way of vanishing into thin air, and hotel proprietors decline all responsibility. Police statistics indicate that the number of hotel robberies has trebled within the last five years.

To leave typewriters unpadlocked is sheer culpable negligence on the part of the owner. The Berlin criminal police has been obliged to organize a special department dealing exclusively with stolen machines.

Cases of housebreaking have quadrupled within the last three years. Articles of clothing, bedclothes, carpets and curtains are the objects most desired by the thieving fraternity.

Dishonesty among factory hands has grown to a deplorable extent, the police say. Leather belting disappears wholesale; it is cut up and sold to shoe repairers.

Nor are churches, cemeteries and museums immune from robberies, the booty carried off being mostly ancient gold ornaments and jewelry.

$28,000 FOR TEN CARS OF POTATOES

MURPHIES FETCH FABULOUS PRICE IN EDMONTON, ALBERTA, RECENTLY

(By Canadian Press.)

Edmonton, Alta., May 7.—Twenty-eight thousand dollars seems a fabulous price to pay for ten car loads of potatoes, but such a sum changed hands when a dealer of Yakima, Washington, purchased approximately 7,000 bushels of Edmonton grown tubers at $3.90 per bushel, the highest on record for such a large shipment. The potatoes are to be shipped to various points in the state of Montana.

EIGHT DAYS ENOUGH

Trail, B.C., Quickly Has Enough of Daylight Saving.

(By Canadian Press.)

Trail, B.C., May 7.—The city of Trail has again reverted to standard time after a short trial of eight day only of daylight saving. Notices to the effect that the offices would be open during the usual hours as per standard time have been posted at the City Hall, thus settling the much vexed question at least as far as official action goes.

KIEV CITY CAPTURED BY POLES, ENTERED CAPITAL THURSDAY

Retired Later to Left Bank of Dnieper River in Good Order; Enemy Broke Into Outskirts of Town, But Held up in Counter Attack.

(By Canadian Press.)

London, May 8.— Polish and Ukrainian troops captured Kiev on Thursday night, according to an official statement issued at Moscow, yesterday, and received here by wireless.

Enemy Broke

The text of the statement says: "In Kiev region during the night of May 6 and 7, our troops engaged superior enemy forces northwest and southwest of Kiev. Toward evening the enemy broke into the outskirts of the town, but were held up by our counter-tatacks. Later our troops, in accordance with orders, started to withdraw in order to the left bank of the Dnieper River."

Repulsed Reds.

"In the direction of Pytsloff, our troops repulsed an enemy advance, twenty miles south of Karsny.

In the direction of Igumen, (east of Minsk,' the enemy attempted to cross the Beresina River, but was driven back across the river."

Using Chinese.

Russian marines and Chinese forces were brought up by the Bolshevik for the defence of Kiev, according to reports received here from the front. The marines defended the ground north of Kiev. The Chinese, the reports indicate, are being used in the front line in places.

Lettish Troops Also.

Reinforcements sent in by the Bolshevik, it is stated, also include Bolshevik Lettish troops, some of whom were captured by the Poles. Ground held by the Poles at various places in front of Kiev was taken by bayonet charges, Bolsheviki defending the villages and entrenchments on the hills until they were killed or taken prisoners.

SUPPOSED BOMB FOUND ON RAILWAY TRACKS IN SUBWAY THIS MORNING

Paris, May 8.—Many of the striking railwaymen are resuming work, it was said today in official circles, and the service has improved.

Laborites, however, assert that four-fifths of the railwaymen are on strike.

The General Federation of Labor announced this afternoon that it would inaugurate a campaign of propaganda to strengthen the effectiveness of the strike movement at certain weak points.

The police have made three raids and arrested five persons in connection with the circulation of revolutionary pamphlets.

(By Canadian Press.)

After Profiteers

Mr. Lauck, who yesterday charged corporate profiteers with being responsible for present living costs, presented today a demand on behalf of America's 2,500,000 railway employees for the establishment of a minimum wage throughout the industry. He presented to the board a compilation of budgets on the cost of living in the United States, based on studies made under his supervision and by Federal and State agencies.

LOCAL VETERANS TO TAKE ACTION

The local branch of the Great War Veterans' Association intends getting into line with the action being taken by Veterans' organizations all over the country in protesting against the statements made by General McLean recently, and which have already caused much comment.

It was learned at the Veterans' hall this morning that a resolution asking the Dominion Command of the G.W.V.A. to condemn the action of General McLean, and demand his resignation from the committee, has been drafted and will be placed before the executive of this branch on Monday night for approval. The feeling of all Veterans on the matter is such that there is no doubt of the resolution being passed by the executive.

It also commends the action of Colonel Pack, V.C., and Colonel H. C. Cooper in tendering their resignations following the incident. A copy of the resolution will be sent to the representative of this riding in the Federal House.

NITTI OF ITALY RISKS OVERTHROW

CATHOLIC PARTY UNITED IN ITS DECISION TO VOTE AGAINST HIM.

PREMIER SHOWED WEAKNESS

TOO LENIENT IN TREATMENT OF THE SOCIALISTS IN NORTHERN ITALY.

Rome, May 8.— Opinion in Parliamentary circles is that Premier Nitti is running the risk of being overthrown. This is said to be due to a decision of the Catholic party to vote against the Premier, members of the party considering that he showed weakness in his lenient attitude toward Socialists during recent disturbances in Northern Italy.

Fall Seems Certain

The leader of the Catholic party said today: "If no agreement is reached before a vote is taken in the Chamber of Deputies Nitt's fall is certain. In fact all Socialist Deputies numberng 156 despite Nitti's favoritism towards them, must vote against him as a matter of principle."

(By Canadian Press.)

New York, May 8.— Sentiment in the stock market this week favored a long account, partly as a result of further stock dividends which range from 10 to 200 per cent. There was a visible dimunition of activity, however, due to public apathy.

Credit Situation

The credit situation continued to engross the attention of the financial community, interest in that quarter being heightened by a detailed statement of the local federal reserve board, reviewing conditions of the first four months of this year. This suggested that further restrictions are needed to adjust economic conditions.

Transportaiton Shares

Transportation shares improved not only because of less tense relation in the labor situation, but to a greater degree from the general belief that railroads are almost certain to receive substantial relief in the form of higher freight rates.

General Conditions

General industrial conditions were somewhat obscured by the strike of New England textile workers, and signs that the schedules for steel and kindred finished products for autumn delivery are tending downward. Reports from leading centres of merchandise distribution pointed to a reduced demand accompanied by lower quotations for various staples, but foodstuffs ruled at or near maximum levels.

Loans Easier

In local market demand loans esied but offerings of time funds continued to be limited almost entirely to thiry and sixty day renewals with fewer acceptances of commercial paper.

DISTRIBUTION OF PATRIOTIC FUND DECLARED PRACTICAL

Hon. Secretary W. H. Nickle Appreciates Handling of Great National Service

The honorary secretary, Mr. W. H. Nickle, of Kingston, has addressed a letter to the several branches of the patriotic fund throughout Canada, enclosing a copy of a communication from the Acting-Premier, Sir George E. Foster, and calling attention to the request of the Acting-Premier that the contents of his letter be communicated to the members of committees and officials of the several branches.

Following is copy of the letter:—

Prime Minister's Office,
Ottawa, April 29, 1920.

Dear Mr. Nickle:— As I understand that the administration of the Federal Emergency Appropriation is practically completed, I desire on behalf of the Government to convey to you and to your officers, associates and local workers our sincere and grateful appreciation of the splendid manner in which the patriotic fund rendered a great national service during the past winter months in handlig this most difficult problem.

When Sir Robert Borden last December requested your organization to undertake the work we all realized its magnitude and the many difficulties that surrounded it. Now that the work is completed it is gratifying to know that the confidence placed in the patriotic fund which has rendered such valuable service in the past has been fully realized.

Faithfully yours,
(Signed.) GEO. E. FOSTER.
Acting Prime Minister.

It has come to be accepted as a truism, during the last five-years of war work, that nearly always anticipated conditions do noet present thmeselves in the shape as anticipated. It has proved to be the case in this latest work, that of distribution of the emergency relief.

When the Government set aside a sum, so large as $40,000,000, it was anticipated that circumstances of unemployment existed to a larger extent than proved to be the case. Not only was there less of it, but the fact developed that the object of the returned soldier man was not to secure relief as a gift but rather that employment should be found for him whereby he could earn that which he wanted.

As applications came in cases were investigated it was seen that the greatest beneficial factor that could be made use of was to secure employment. Pressure was placed on the distribution, from Ottawa, that so rapidly as at all possible positions and places should be found for those who claimed to be without work. It developed that in no space of time, all over the country, were so many men placed as in the last five months. Securing employment lessend the demand on the apropriation.

Then a material factor in the situation was the large number of men who had applied and did apply for courses of instruction in the several trades and occupations. Each one awarded a course, presently drew the usual allowances for himself, and if a man of family, for his wife and children. The course taking in a term of six months, and the allowances existing during that time made quite a factor in lessening the calls on the appropriation.

TWENTY-FOUR HRS. OFF EACH WEEK

WHAT T. TOOM'S BILL GOVERNING FIREMEN REALLY MEANS

PENALTY FOR BREACH OF ACT

BOTH SUPERINTENDENTS AND MEN ARE SUBJECT TO THIS FINE

Toronto, May 8.—One day off in seven will be granted to the firemen throughout the Province under a bill which passed through the municipal committee of the Legislature yesterday without a single dissenting voice. Peter Hurd, of the Toronto Firefighters' Association, waived the enforcement of the clause until January, 1921.

The Act provides "Twenty-four hours off in every calender week, but where what is known as the double platoon is in operation, the twenty-four hours' release shall not be regarded as a day off duty."

One clause of the bill provided that where any superintendent of a fire department compelled any employe to violate the provisions of the Act that he should incur a penalty of not less than $10 and not more than $100 and that every employe who violated the provision of the Act should incur a penalty not exceeding $10.

Effect in Peterborough.

Fire Chief Grange when interviewed yesterday, said that the bill will mean an addition of three more men to the Peterborough brigade.

Situation in Toronto.

Corporation Counsel Geary represented the city, and Fire Chief Russell the fire department. Mr. Geary said: "I have no instructions to say anything in regard to the principle of the bill. The situation with us is that in view of certain additions to the men's salaries they would not press for the enforcement of the concession this year."

Col. Cooper and Captain Jack Ramsden both spoke briefly in favor of the bill.

"The matter of the day a week for firemen comes before the legislation committee today. We should oppose it," said the Mayor to the controllers yesterday.

The city has reached an understanding with the members of the Toronto force, as far as the present year goes, and the board did not take any action.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

SATURDAY, MAY 8, 1920.

TOMORROW LOCAL JEWS REJOICE.

THE JEW HAS AT LAST found a national home in that land of his original growth as a nation—the land flowing with milk and honey promised to the children of Israel of old. Forty years the Jews wandered in the wilderness before allowed by God to enter that promised earthly Eldorado, and for going on two thousand years have they been a race without a national country of their own. To them the war has been a stupendous turning point in their history, in being the means of returning to them possession of Palestine with its ancient city of Jerusalem, in which King Solomon's magnificent temple to Jehovah once stood. And how fitting that the British, who, while not agreeing with the Jews as to the divinity of Christ, still accept with them the Old Testament's teachings, should be constituted protectors of that race of which in human form He Whom Christians worship was a son.

The Jews in Peterborough will celebrate in their own way tomorrow the acceptance by Britain of a mandate over their restored national State. They feel they have cause for rejoicing that they have found protection by a nation whose flag bears the cross of freedom, justice and liberty of religion. Their compatriots the world over are one with them in this general rejoicing over the support of a never-failing champion in their re-establishment as a race in the home of their ancestors.

Palestine is but a small strip of land on the Mediterranean coast, but it is the land of Abraham, and as such is dear to all Jewish hearts, no matter of what citizenship. Altogether quite inadequate to offer a home to even a fair proportion of the race, they still have sufficient inherent love for their fatherland which impels sentimental gratification that they will now have a settled Jewish state in Palestine of old, theirs by right and Divine promise.

ALD. PHELAN AND A BETTER PETERBORO.

MR. NAGLE PHELAN, in having been appointed alderman of this city to succeed his father, Alderman Harry Phelan, deceased, has had an honor conferred upon which which does not often fall to the lot of a citizen of his years, for he is a very young man. In accepting that honor at the hands of his now colleagues Thursday night, he said he appreciated the appointment as one reflecting great respect on his father, and no doubt Council were to no inconsiderable extent actuated with that intent in their choice. Alderman Nagle Phelan also said his one aim would be for a greater and better Peterborough, and as the youngest alderman in our Council Board, with a long life before him, in the natural course of nature, he will have ample opportunity to live up to that aim should he continue in public life.

And that so very frequently expressed slogan, "a greater and a better Peterborough," leads one up to the thought, what is needed to assure a "better" Peterborough? Well, just now we need conditions settled down into a normal course and a chance to live and let live without industrial strife. It is not so much an inflated pay envelope that is to be desired, but prices of necessities which will leave a few dollars in that envelope after a week's expenditure—a dollar or two to "inflate," if it is permissible to use that term, a nest egg in the bank.

However, these conditions of unrest and high prices are pretty general the world over—caused by the war we are told, and perhaps by a reckless expenditure for war work and supplies adopted by governments who thus set the pace for a follow-the-leader chase after high prices. Let us hope that in the near future a "better Peterborough" will see a readjustment of conditions all round, which will remove all cause for unrest, discontent, and eliminate that everlasting expectation of still greater depreciation in the purchasing power of the present-day very insignificant dollar.

NEED IN WORK.

THE NECESSITY for work as the only means by which the world economic situation can be relieved is characteristically expressed by Kipling in the following stanza from his latest verse:

"In the Carboniferous Epoch we were promised abundance for all,
By robbing selective Peter to pay collective Paul;
And, though we had plenty of money, there was nothing our money would buy.
And the Gods of the Copybook Maxims said:—'If you don't work you die.'"

A PROVINCIAL MATTER!

"THAT THE MAYOR be authorized to send the city engineer to New Orleans and Huston to examine the sewage disposal plants in those cities with a view to economy in installing and economy and efficiency in operating the sewage disposal plant here."

The foregoing was clause 8 in the Committee of the Whole Council's report to Council in general session Thursday night.

And Alderman Gainey promptly rose and moved that the Provincial Board of Health be requested to contribute toward the expenses of this trip of the city engineer's; also that the Minister of Health's attention be drawn to this matter. Council adopted Alderman Gainey's motion.

A suggestion from the provincial sanitary engineer that Peterborough would be wise to send its engineer to these southern cities named for the purpose advanced led to this city agreeing to send Engineer Parsons on so long and expensive a trip. The provincial sanitary engineer frankly admitted that the data thus in view had not been given the publicity it deserved in Ontario in the interests of sanitation, and Alderman Gainey promptly suggested that if the information it was advised Mr. Parsons should go after was of value to the Province from a sewage disposal standpoint, then the Provincial Board of Health should acquire and pay for it, and adopt the same in the plans it enforces on municipalities. This was in Committee of the Whole, but Alderman Gainey received no encouragement.

The Review, appreciating Alderman Gainey's stand, followed with an editorial based on his viewpoint, and Council has given instructions to point out to the Provincial Board of Health that Peterborough city should not be expected to bear all the expense of gleaning data which the provincial sanitary engineer intimates will be of value to his department in the Province's sanitary interests.

BETTER TO READ ABOUT THEM!

"DIARIST" writing in the Westminster Gazette says there must be a great many people—all of those, surely, who delight in old-world gardens, in quiet orchards, and in the countless charms of the open air, when the sky is blue and the sun is doing its best—who have made up their minds, at some time or other, that they would buy hives, and swarms, and fumigators, and drones, and all the other necessary paraphernalia, and become bee-keepers. Most of us are in the position of our old "Punch" friend who was determined to "keep a bee," because he was fond of honey; but how many know anything at all about bees? For my part, I know that they sting, that they make strange music, and that I like to watch them at their labors—it always adds to the restfulness of a holiday to watch other people working!—but that is all.

Now, however, my chance has come, while the apple-blossom is still at its best and the cherry trees have not quite lost their snowy burden. Mr. Stanley Paul, the publisher, has sent me a neat little book, of most convenient pocket size, "The Bee-keeper's Vade-Mecum," in which Mr. Henry Geary, who really does know all about the subject, makes a most praiseworthy effort to "put me wise." He tempts me almost as strongly as Mr. Tickner Edwardes used to do, and I am half inclined to go home to-night with a skep under one arm and a honey-extractor under the other; but, after all—well, perhaps it is better to read about them, and to buy my honey from the man whose bees haunt my garden!

OVERALLS VS. OLD CLOTHES.

(New York Evening Sun.)

ON the other hand, the overall crusade is a thing of very doubtful utility. Its only appreciable effect is apt to be a sudden rise in the denim market. Clothes are dear because the cost of producing them is high; if the public is to wear clothes this cost must be met.

In so far, however, as the move makes for real economy it is proper and wise. If the men of the country would take down last year's suits, have the tailor clean them, alter and repair them and make them do for another summer a real saving would be affected. Thrift and frugality can do more to emancipate the country from high prices than the wearing of overalls, even in the august national Senate Chamber.

HALF-WITTED DRIVERS.

(Toronto Star.)

There are some who cannot drive safely—who so handle their cars that sooner or later the tragedy happens. They do not mean to kill anybody, but they drive in such a way that they are forever putting it up to the people to get out of their way and keep from under their wheels. A motor car in the hands of such a person is a dangerous engine, and likely at any moment to become a murderous one. Anybody can drive a car, but half-wits should be prevented from doing it. It will become necessary to cancel the right of men to drive cars who have been shown to be deficient in the good sense that the job calls for. Until wild driving is vigorously punished without the slightest regard for pull and influence, there will be a steady increase in the number of these tragedies as the population grows and cars multiply in number.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

A NEW DEVELOPMENT.

(Baltimore American.)

A plumbing firm in Denver lost a suit for damages because it was proved their workmen loafed on the job. This decision is revolutionary in thus attacking a time-honored practice.

CHEAP MONEY

(New York Evening Sun.)

The paper money of the world has increased from $7,000,000,000 at the beginning of the war to $56,000,000,000 at the present time. No wonder that the dollar is the only cheap commodity to be had!

THE SPEED LIMIT.

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

The legal speed limit of 20 miles an hour in the cities is too high. When 15 miles was the limit, few prosecutions occurred unless actual speed was more than 20 miles. Now about 25 miles seems to be the prosecution rate. When children and vehicles abound on the streets of the large cities, a maximum of 20 miles is sufficient for any careful motorist.

SINISTER FORCES.

(Christian Science Monitor.)

A pertinent query at this time seems to be: If hidden forces in America, England, and elsewhere who dread closer Anglo-Saxon friendship did not have the so-called Irish question to stir up strife, what other pretext would be used? And it might further be asked: How long will certain sections of the Irish people allow themselves to be used as pawns for a very questionable group of players on international chess boards?

SOCIETY IN THE FAR NORTH.

(Bonnie Brier Cor. to Alaska News.)

Each person upon entering the room was presented with a heart of a broken nature, and it was expected that the possessor would find its broken part and therefore have a mate for the evening, and perhaps the remainder of life. [illegible] sad to relate, some of the gents failed to get their broken heart spliced and were obliged to eat alone and live in hopes of better results at the next leap year dance.

PRESIDENT'S LEADERSHIP.

(New York Globe.)

There is much discontent with the Democratic party. The President's personal influence is still at low tide; but nevertheless it is only under his leadership that the party can be held together. It is only on the record of his administration in war and in peace that a Democratic candidate for President will have the shadow of a chance of election.

Chats About Books and Their Authors

There are certain books in the Library which have never been taken out since their purchase, many years before the present Library came into existence. We have also lives of the ancient writers, including critical commentaries on their works. These are, of course, most interesting. Not the least so is the one relating to Pliny the Younger, in which an account is given of the famous eruption of Mount Vesuvius, A.D. 79. This was the cataclysm in which the cities of Herculaneum and Pompeii were utterly destroyed. The account is somewhat imperfect in its details, but enough is presented to show how great was the damage inflicted and with what awe the doomed inhabitants viewed the visitation. They regarded it as the end of the world, as, doubtless, in many other like happenings in the world's history, such as the great earthquake at Lisbon, the terrible eruptions at St. Pierre and at Messina, the same fear must have presented itself to people's minds.

Pliny's early years were passed in the latter portion of the reign of Nero, and terrible years they were indeed for the State. But a brighter era dawned under Vespasian, who proved himself a patron of the arts, although a man uncultured and unrefined. Pliny's uncle, the naturalist, found a friend in Vespasian, and that he continued in favor is shown by the fact that he dedicated his great work on natural history to Titus, his son and successor.

It is well worth while to read such a series of books as the one referred to, for by them we learn something of the habits and customs of the people of old time. The great majority of us are far too much absorbed in our present-day occupations to take into account how much really hinges on having a working knowledge of the sayings and doings of those who have gone before us. We never seem to realize that the great value of history lies in the help that it gives us in marking where the world has progressed and where it shows signs of falling back in the scale of civilization. We have wonderful institutions and great advantages, but it is a clear sign of selfish unconcern for anyone to be content to take the goods that fortune confers on him without casting a grateful thought back to those whose pioneer work in the arts and sciences has rendered it possible for him to enjoy his present-day blessings. Without a knowledge of history and the feelings of noblesse oblige which it creates, we are less emboldened to carry on the good work that has been accomplished in so many fields by the great men and women of the world. Vespasian founded a great public library in Rome. It may be news to those who even in this day cannot see the great importance of such an institution in a community to be told that away back in the dim years of the reign of Sardanapalus, the great king of Assyria, a library was in existence. It consisted of tablets of clay, covered with cuneiform characters. There were some ten thousand distinct works properly arranged and catalogued in this ancient library, and it was thrown open by the king to his subjects. In every age since then libraries have been in evidence in various countries. There were provincial libraries hundreds upon hundreds of years ago in Italy and in Greece.

Mr. Coulson Kernahan has written a very interesting book entitled "In Good Company." He is a well-known English writer, and was for many years adviser to Ward, Lock & Co. In the course of his career he has come into close touch with many celebrated men, amongst others with Swinburne, Watts-Dunton, Lord Roberts, Edward Whymper, the famous traveller, and Oscar Wilde. There are many good things in the book, for there is little that is more interesting than to come upon facts dealing with the lives of eminent people. In dealing with Wilde, Kernahan says that he never knew him to write a thing that would not have passed muster in the most refined society, and that he could not regard him as by any means irreligious or irreclaimably bad. When one comes to think of it, a man's life and a man's genius should be judged apart. There have been many instances where the mantle of time having rendered the world oblivious to a man's acts, his genius has been given full and admiring recognition, and perhaps this will some day be the case with Wilde, whose genius was of an indubitably high order.

The best articles in the book are those which deal with Lord Roberts, Swinburne and Watts-Dunton. Kernahan reveals a great deal concerning their chief characteristics and throws incidentally many sidelights on other notabilities. He has also something to say about Stephen Phillips, a brilliant young poet who was cut off in his early prime. Phillips was a cousin of the Shakespearean actor, Sir F. R. Benson, and for some time was a member of his theatrical company. He was a very well-known reciter, and Kernahan tells us that his reading was marvellous. His rendition of the second chorus in Swinburne's Atalanta in Calydon was extraordinarily fine. Many of us have read that beautiful piece, beginning,

Before the beginning of years
There came to the making of man
Time, with a gift of tears;
Grief, with a glass that ran;
Pleasure, with pain for leaven;
Summer, with flowers that fell;
Remembrance, fallen from heaven;
And madness, risen from hell;
Strength without hands to smite;
Love that endures for a breath;
Night, the shadow of Light,
And Life, the shadow of death.

Kernahan says that when Phillips came to the last four lines of the poem,

"He weaves and is clothed with derision,
Sows, and he shall not reap,
His life is a watch or a vision
Between a sleep and a sleep"— with the last word "sleep" as it came from his lips the very world itself seemed to close tired eyes, to wander away into unconsciousness and finally to fall on sleep.

RELICS OF HISTORIC VALUE

Philadelphia, May 8— Gold ornaments, idols, crowns, armor and other relics of great historic value which date from the civilizations of the Incas, Aztecs and other Mexican and Central and South American peoples are contained in a collection of 300 specimens recently placed on view for the first time in the museum of the University of Pennsylvania.

The exhibit was only recently brought to its present completeness by the purchase of objects which had been in possession of a noble French family for generations, but which were sold at Paris because the family was impoverished.

Gold was used by the Aztects and Incas only for ornaments, religious emblems and attire. These objects, shipped to Spain by Pizzaro, Cortez and others in the 16th and 17th This explains the rarity of the original golden objects.

A grave recently opened in Colombia proved a rich trove of them. It was apparently the burying place of a princess. Enough golden ornaments were discovered completely to clothe a modern woman for her appearance in a ballroom. There were, besides a crown, a breast plate, girdle armlets and various other appendages aside from a great quantity of jewels. Rings and necklaces of amazing beauty are among the objejcts.

LESS IMPORTS EMPHASIZED

The rapid increase in the value of imports from Europe emphasizes the necessity, in order to maintain industrial stability in this country and to guard against further exchange difficulties, of keeping all imports to the lowest possible amount. The way in which European imports into Canada are increasing is indicated by the following comparative figures:

	1919 January.	1920 January.
United K'g'm	$6,709,200	$16,415,503
France	287,500	1,485,080
Germany . . .	9	13,114
Norway . . .	262	82,764
Sweden . . .	12,614	87,639
Switzerland .	102,939	1,636,208
Turkey	nil	23,375

The rising tide of imports into the United States already is causing serious concern in that country. For the nine months ended with March, 1920, imports into the Republic totalled $3,719,600,000, or approximately one and a half billion dollars more than for the corresponding period of the previous year.

German Agents Plotted For Morganatic Marriage Of Crown Prince Charles

"IT was German agents who manoeuvred and brought about the marriage of my son Charles," said the Queen of Roumania in speaking of the morganatic marriage contracted in September, 1918, between Crown Prince Charles of Roumania and Zyzis Lambrino, a young woman who is said previously to have had little social rank and wealth.

"The reconstruction of Roumania is the great task for which we now are working," were the opening words of the talk of the Queen. "This is one of the reasons I hope to visit America, possibly in September," she added.

The Queen requested the correspondent to give her explanation of the marriage owing, as she said, to there having been many untrue reports of the action of herself and King Ferdinand, who, she declared, had been pictured as tearing asunder a loving couple.

"I am convinced that it was not a case of true love, except on the side of Charles," said Queen Marie. "I have never seen the girl, except at public affairs. She is not pretty, but she succeeded in capturing the affections of Charles. She is intelligent and ambitious. She saw her chance to obtain great advantage and she took it.

"However, it was against the public policy to have a member of the royal family intermarry locally and thus become mixed in party intrigues. It was against this that the country sought a foreign king and queen.

"I begged my son to consider these facts and he promised to forego his personal wishes for the benefit of the country. Nevertheless the marriage took place at Odessa, aided by Germans. It was annulled as illegal, both under laws of Roumania and of old Russia, as no bans were published.

"Later Charles joined his regiment, which he was compelled to do under military discipline, and went to Budapest with our army. Associated with patriotic Roumanians, he saw his duty and realized how foolish he had been to lose his country for a girl. He has accepted a mission to Japan, where he will stay for six months. Should the girl marry another person the affair will be ended."

The Queen received the correspondent in a comfortable sitting-room in the palace, a roomy, rambling structure, formerly a convent, perched on a wooded slope outside the city. There is no pomp about the place. The word "home" suits it better than "palace."

Queen Marie retains her hold on the affections of the people and she is sought by everybody when there is something to be done.

"My English blood kept up my courage when we retired to Jassy," she said. "There I opposed the peace which we finally were compelled to make. I was for sticking it out to the bitter end. I suffered the terrible grief of losing my youngest child, and arrived in Jassy with sorrow in my heart. We had many dark hours then, cut off from our allies. With the Bolsheviki operating in Russia, we felt like shipwrecked persons on a desert island.

"It is an old tradition that a queen should wear a crown. I have had several very smart ones. It is uncomfortable to go abroad and feel shabby. I do not know if the Bolsheviki have sold my crowns. However, the safety of the national treasury is guaranteed by the Allies."

The Queen is writing a story of Roumania's part in the war. Each morning she is busily engaged in this task.

A Magyar Legend.

Similar to the story of Romulus and Remus, is the legend told Hungarian Magyar children of the founding of their nation. While two youths were hunting in the forests of Asia one day, a snow white deer attracted their attention. Coveting the possession of so handsome an animal, they chased the deer far into the forest and when night fell the boys knew not where they were. Losing their sense of direction they wandered on and on until they came to the fertile soil of present Hungary. Not far from the place they chose to locate was a race of primitive people who had many festivals. During one of these, the two youths stole two of the fairest maidens and returning to their chosen country established homes. From one, Honus, sprung the Hungarians, and from the other another Southern European race originated.

AN HISTORIC PAGEANT.

250th Anniversary of Hudson Bay Company Marked.

With Indian fur brigades and York boats laden with peltries on Red river, council fires burning at Lower Fort Garry, and the smoke of the peace pipe scenting the air, the romance of wilderness days will live again at the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the Hudson Bay Company, which will be inaugurated in Winnipeg May 3.

Sir Robert Kindersley, G.B.E., latest of the distinguished line of Hudson Bay Company governors that began with Prince Rupert, valiant champion of the house of Stuart in the Cromwellian wars, will come from England and take part in the river pageant and in the subsequent street pageants which will be held successively in Edmonton, Calgary, Vancouver and Victoria.

The Red river pageant, which promises to be one of the most interesting historical spectacles ever staged in Canada, will start from the site of old Fort Garry, early capital of the company's once vast empire and about which Winnipeg grew, and pass down stream eighteen miles to Lower Fort Garry. Tricked out in bravery of paint, feathers and beaded buckskin, Indians from a dozen tribes will man York boats and canoes in fur brigade formation. To do honor to the company to which their ancestors paid loyal allegiance, Crees will come from the shores of Hudson Bay; Swampy Crees from James Bay, Ojibways from the Lake Superior fur country, plain Crees from Northern Saskatchewan, Blackfeet, Piegans and Assiniboines from the prairies and the Rocky Mountains, and tribesmen from the Athabasca and British Columbia.

A flotilla of freight boats piled high with bales of furs will trail in the wake of the York boats in charge of factors and trappers in pioneer costumes. As it glides in long procession through a countryside famous in Hudson Bay traditions, past the site of old Fort Douglas, the scenes of Lord Selkirk's Red River settlements and the battlefield of Seven Oaks where Governor Semple and twenty men fell in conflict with their rivals of the Northwest Company the pageant will seem to sail out of the past of 250 years ago.

When it reaches Lower Fort Garry whose stone buildings and battlemented stone walls still preserve the picturesqueness of early days, two ancient brass cannons at the gate will boom a salute from their rusty throats. Within the walls of the old stronghold where the first treaty was signed between Canada and the western Indians in 1871, Governor Kindersley will seal anew the ancient friendship between the Redmen and the company by smoking the calumet of peace. The pipe, specially designed for the occasion, will bear carved upon its stem the totems of all the tribes and will be presented to the governor as a souvenir. Sir Robert will confer upon each of the braves a medal struck in honor of the anniversary, and at a council at which the Indians will squat upon the ground in a wide semi-circle, will reply to orations by the sachems and chieftains. After the speeches, the Indians will present a wampum belt to the governor in ratification of their pledges of fealty, and will partake of an old-fashioned feast.

CANADA --- THE NEW SWITZERLAND

Where the Appetite is Always Keen.

Sections of the Alpine Club of Canada in all parts of the Dominion have received the anniversary message of the director, Arthur O. Wheeler, interprovincial boundary survey commissioner for B.C. There is much in this document of special interest to members of the club, but there is also a great deal which affects the general public, since it looks forward to a greatly increased tide of summer travel into the fastnesses of the great hills.

The director's message opens with comments on the prosperous standing of the club and the success of the camp at Yoho lake last summer. Thanks are also tendered to many who helped to make the camp successful. Mention is made of renewed photographic activities in the mountains and of the fact that the challenge cup for competition by amateur mountain photographers was won last summer by Dr. H. E. Bulyea of Edmonton.

With reference to the erection of a suitable memorial to the soldier members of the Alpine club, the director says: "It is decided to do this on two separate lines, first, to place a record of all our members on military service and particularly those who have joined the supreme honor roll, on the club house grounds at Banff, and second, the erection of a hut above timber line at some serviceable place in the Canadian Rockies for the use of our members and possibly the public who are interested in making mountain climbs."

With reference to independent mountaineering during the past year mention is made of the first ascents of Mt. King George, and several other peaks of the Royal Group, lying in a hitherto unexplored district fifty miles southwest of Banff. Mt. Sir Douglas and Mt. Joffre were also climbed for the first time last summer.

After some comment on the Banff winter carnival, in which the Alpine club takes an active interest, having been donors of a challenge cup for hockey, the director takes up the matter of the forthcoming "Welcome Home" camp to be held at Mt. Assiniboine from July 20th to 31st, 1920. At this camp more than 300 people will be placed under canvas and the special feature will be the fact that all returned members will attend as guests of the club. The camp will be situated three days' journey from the railroad and transportation of baggage will be by a specially organized pack train known as the "Alpine club pack train." Of special interest to the general public is the fact that this pack train will be in operation throughout the summer and anyone wishing to make a really interesting trip into the heart of the mountains can do so at a minimum expense. The camp at Mt. Assiniboine and the "Overnight Camps" on the way thither from Banff will be open to the public from the first of July until the end of September, except during the two weeks when they will be occupied by members of the Alpine club. At any time during the summer walking tours may be taken to Mount Assiniboine and these camps will be open to furnish good meals and a bed to the tramper at the end of his day's journey. There is only one way to really see the mountain and that is on foot, but so far this pleasure has been confined to the very few, on account of the difficulty of carrying food and bedding. These difficulties are now to be removed and it is planned in coming years to arrange many such walking and riding tours for the benefit of the public.

In conclusion the director quotes the verses of a gifted Calgary poetess, Miss Marian L. Moodie:

Oh wind that comes out of the West,
the land of the sunset skies,
Where far o'er yon mountain's crest
those glorious colors rise,
You bring me the fragrance of pine,
the coolness of mountain snow,
The music of falling streams by the hills where the lilies grow.

Oh wind that comes out of the West,
you sigh on your way to the plain.
The mountain land is the best. Will you not come back again?
Glow skies with your golden light,
Blow softly wind from the hill
For my heart has a longing tonight, that only the mountains can fill.

Mount Assiniboine, Canadian Pacific Rockies.

X-RAY FAILED

Mechanic Gives Evidence

There are cases where science in its most profound phases is absolutely balked, yet other help is at hand.

This is proved by the testimony of a mechanic, 35 years of age, who suffered, at times, positive torture from stone in the bladder. After trying many remedies without result, he had an X-Ray photograph taken, which also failed to show where the trouble was. Fortunately, just at this juncture, when he almost had given up hope of any relief, Gin Pills were brought to his notice. These famous Pills in a very short time enabled him to pass the stone which was the cause of his trouble. We will give the name of this man on request.

Kidney and Bladder troubles should not be neglected. The first symptoms should be sufficient warning. Pain in the sides or back, constant headaches, neuralgic and sciatic pains, rheumatism, dizziness, constipation, gravel, highly-colored urine, specks before the eyes, all point to derangement. Gin Pills should be obtained without delay. Druggists and dealers carry them—50c—your money refunded if not satisfied. Free sample on request.

CARNIVAL QUEEN CHOSEN.

Picturesque Custom Revived in Paris Since the War.

The picturesque French custom of electing a carnival queen has been revived at Paris for the first time since 1914, the correspondent of the Manchester Guardian writes from the French capital.

The unaccustomed rumble of traffic in the narrow side streets of Paris betokened that once more the crowd had invaded the grand boulevards and turned the autobus into new routes. March 12 was the first fete of Mi-Careme since the outbreak of hostilities and was strongly to the taste of the Parisian public, ever greedy for a spectacle. For weeks before the papers have been full of photos and selections of girls who were to figure in the processions as queens of the different trades and Paris learned with the greatest enthusiasm that the selection had at last been made, in accord with immemorial custom, of a Queen of Queens.

Long before the procession was due to start the boulevard was crowded with those eager to see her and her fair companions pass. At three o'clock the cortege appeared on its way from a visit to the President in his palace, headed by the band of Guardes Republicans. For once the man in the street had the best view, for the high-festooned carriages which enshrined the fair queens—queen of blanchisseuses, queen of great shops, queen of perfumers, corporation and the rest—gave only a meagre view to those who crowded the windows and roofs along the way.

Mlle. Lucie Batalile, Queen of Queens, the crowned beauty of Paris for the day, aroused the greatest pleasure among both connoisseurs and the crowd, and this little typist, blond, with long hair streaming over her regal dress, enjoyed a greater cheer than Gen. Foch had himself at the head of his troops.

Before her car, gilded and flowered to the corners, passed the Italian queens of beauty, come in the name of King Carnival to welcome her first coronation in Paris. After them passed the great figure of Carnival himself, for this year figured by Charles Chaplin, whose sad destiny it would have been in prehistoric years of the beginning of the fete to be burned as an effigy of King Winter to bring back by sympathetic magic the sun and the Spring. Various cars followed the regiments, trumpeters and bands of cavaliers, and after them bourgeois Paris surged and ebbed up the boulevard all afternoon.

Thirty-Five Canadian V.C.'s Living.

Canadian recipients of the Victoria Cross during the great war of 1914-1918 are given as numbering 56 by the Canadian Almanac of 1920, which has just been issued. Of this number 21 were either killed in action or died of wounds, leaving only 35 living ex-members of the Canadian expeditionary forces who hold the coveted distinction. Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, who were thus rewarded for individual instances of meritorious or distinguished services in the great war number 557. This naval and military order of distinction was instituted by Queen Victoria, September 6, 1886, and only those who hold at the time of their nomination a commission in the navy, in land forces, or marines, or in the Indian or colonial naval or military forces are eligible for the honor.

A COLUMN FOR VETERANS

(By Mike.)

The Veterans certainly have every reason to feel proud of the splendid showing made by their band at the recital on Sunday last and, following so closely on the remarks made in Council by Alderman Crowe, it was a fitting answer to his baseless charges of disintegration.

• • • •

Ald. Crowe apparently gained a wrong impression from the fact that an attempt had already been made to form a joint band for the Veterans and the Machine Gun Corps, but this step was defeated by military regulations, and yet the G.W.V.A. band is still going strong.

• • • •

At the regular meeting of the G. W. V. A. on Monday last it appeared that the band has been working under difficulties up to the present. They are badly in need of uniforms and the cost of each equipment would amount to somewhere around $1,600. With these facts in mind the association brings forth the offer to form a joint Veterans and citizens band with a $1,000 grant from the association and from the City Council. From the showing made on Sunday last the city officials would be wise to accept this easy way out of the difficulty.

• • • •

There is trouble brewing in the Ottawa G.W.V.A. over the statement made by General McLean, a member of the Special Parliamentary Committee on Pensions, to the effect that the wives of the private soldiers were of the servant class and should be encouraged to work instead of getting a pension. Men who make such statements as these should be driven out of public life. Coming from a returned officer such a statement is liable to have a serious effect on the relations of returned officers and men for which his fellow officers will not be inclined to thank him.

• • • •

Returned soldiers are inclined to take an opposite view and hold the belief that the widow of a private soldier who died for his country is entitled to exactly as much in the way of a pension as the widow of a general (where one was unfortunate enough to be killed).

• • • •

In the columns of this paper on Monday there appeared an account of unfair reductions in pensions, which caused serious hardship to the dependent relatives of fallen soldiers. Surely the Pensions Board, if they have to continue this investigating, can put on competent men who will go into the matter fully before reporting on cases. It would prevent injustice being done in many cases if these investigators would seek the co-operation of the local G.W.V.A. whereevere possible. Possibly they are over zealous and anxious to show the necessity for their jobs.

• • • •

Congratulations are due to Secretary Whatley on the arrival of a daughter on Thursday last.

• • • •

Word has been received by the secretary of the local branch, G.W.V.A., to the effect that six crosses for comrades who died while in the service and lie buried in Lakefield Cemetery are now on the way from Kingston. This is one of the many evidences of the silent work which is daily being conducted by the local branch in the interests of all returned men.

• • • •

The offer made by the G.W.V.A. at the last meeting with reference to the band question evidently met with some favor at the meeting of the city fathers. Anyway the recommendation of the committee that $500 be paid to each band was not acted upon and the question was referred to a committee of the whole. That will probably mean that the offer made by the Veterans will be seriously considered.

• • • •

It is noted that a conference is to be arranged between the Housing Commission and the Trades Council to discuss the housing legislation now before the Provincial House. The question of housing is a live one with the returned soldiers and was brought up at the last meeting of the G.W.V.A. when the matter of exhorbitant rents was discussed. It would therefore be a wise plan for the proposed conference to include representatives of the Great War Veterans' Association.

• • • •

The Veterans' football team has not made the showing that was hoped for up to the present, but still the season is only just commenced and there is lots of time yet for improvement.

• • • •

Toronto, May 7.—Sentence of five months at the jail farm was meted out to Albert Fafard in yesterday's Police Court for the theft of a soldier's watch and a veteran's button. The crown attorney took occasion to remark that "anyone can have a watch, but a soldier's button has cost more than some men have been willing to pay."

HOPES NOT REALIZED.

Bell Boys Did Not Electrocute the Separators Last Night.

The hopes of the Bell boys that they would electrocute the Separator makers were not realized, and instead they themselves were well "separated" from victory by the tidy score of 9-3.

"Dick" Lush pitched a fine game for the Telephonists, but he did not get al lthe support that he deserved. Errors predominated on both sides and it is a matter of dispute as to which team had the most.

The Bell boys were doing all right except in the third inning, when something happened and eight runs were put across for the De Laval. Apart from this inning the Telephone men showed a certain amount of class and might have walked away with a victory.

Mr. G. O. Cameron, the popular manager of the local telephone office, acted as umpire, and was satisfactory to both teams. The team from the De Laval was composed of the office staff, and it is likely that both this team and the Telephone men will enter the Mercantile League if such is formed.

The game was played at the Fair grounds and was only five innings on account of the darkness.

Johnny Wilson of Boston outpointed Mike O'Dowd, world's champion middleweight boxer, in twelve rounds last night.

BRITISH PAPERS RESENT U.S. CABLE

PRACTICALLY TELLS AMERICA NOT TO INTERFERE IN IRISH AFFAIRS

London, May 8.—Only two of yesterday morn's newspapers comment on the memorandum sent by American Congressmen to Premier Lloyd George relative to the Irish situation, and the tone of their editorials is somewhat resentful against "outside interference" in British internal affairs.

"It is an elementary maxim of the foreign policy of most civilized nations that one State Department should not interfere with the internal affairs of another nation," says the Daily Graphic, which seems to view the memorandum as a political move. "No legislator of any country has the right to imperil the good relationship existing between his nation and any other merely because he wants to attract votes to himself." The newspaper declares Irishmen have the same redress, if wronged, that is given any other citizens of the United Kingdom ,and it points to the wholesale arrest of Bolsheviki in America as analogous to the situation in Ireland.

Re-establishment of the British Bureau of Information in America, which was closed at the time of the armistice, is urged upon the Government by the Morning Post, which says it could counter anti-British agitation in the United States. Referring to the action of American Congressmen on behalf of the Irish Republic, the newspaper says: "Were Great Britain to pass a resolution in both houses of Parliament in favor of granting self-government to the Philippine Islands, we imagine the British Foreign Office would hear of it within twenty-four hours."

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

SYMPATHETIC MOVE

Pension Commission Will Now Probably Make Interim Report.

Ottawa, May 8. — The Special Committee on Pensions and Re-establishment is having a brief rest after the trying incidents of this week. The committee has adjourned until Tuesday, when it is hoped to begin hearing evidence on the re-establishment end of the inquiry. The intervening time will be spent in preparing for the hearing of witnesses.

It is intimated that as a result of the situation which has arisen through the resignations of Col. Peck and Col. Cooper over the Gen. McLean incident, the committee may make an interim report to the House on pensions before going ahead with re-establishment. This would be an answer to the charges of lack of sympathy on the part of the committee which have been made by veterans at many points.

FEELS FULLY 20 YEARS YOUNGER

MRS. TREMBLAY GAINS TWENTY POUNDS AND NEVER INTENDS TO BE WITHOUT TANLAC.

"After what Tanlac has done for me, I never expect to be without it in my house, for I don't think a home is complete without it," said Mrs. Adele Tremblay, wife of a retired farmer living in Albert street, Victoriaville, Canada, while on a visit to her daughter at 65 Marble street, Burlington, Vt.

"For the past twenty-five years," she said, "I had suffered from stomach trouble, and although during that time I had tried many different treatments and medicines, until I started taking Tanlac I had never found anything that did me any good. I gradually got worse as the years went by until finally I had no appetite at all, and when I did manage to eat a little something it would distress me for hours. I suffered with a terrible burning sensation as if there was fire in my stomach after every meal, and the formation of gas was so bad it would nearly choke me. I could sleep but very little, and often when I did go to sleep, would wake up in perfect misery. In the mornings I felt tired and worn out, actually worse than when I went to bed, and barely able to stand on my feet.

"One night my daughter read a statement from someone who described their trouble as being very similar to mine, saying they had been entirely relieved by Tanlac, and my husband right then decided to have me give it a trial. Well, it began to help me almost at once, and now, after taking only three bottles my stomach trouble is gone entirely. I have a splendid appetite, and can eat just anything I want without feeling the slightest sign of that terrible burning sensation or gas. I sleep well at night, and always wake up feeling greatly refreshed, and my general health is so good I feel twenty years younger. I will lalways praise Tanlac, and I hope others will profit by my experience."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by The Warne Drug Co., and by the leading druggists in every town.

WILL NOW PROBE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS

COL. COOPER INSISTS ON MORE LIGHT AS TO EXPENDITURES

Toronto, May 8.—Col. H. S. Cooper, North-West Toronto, presented a motion to the Public Accounts Committee of the Legislature yesterday asking that correspondence, vouchers and full particulars be furnished relating to the sum of $350,000 under the head Organization of Resources Committee, expenses of Patriotic Fund, and Red Cross fund for expenses of the campaign on increased production. Col. Cooper also moved that correspondence, vouchers and full particulars be furnished relating to $88,853 under the heading, "McPherson, Hon. W. D., Accountable."

Another motion by W. E. N Sinclair summoning Barnet Stone, of Toronto, to give evidence with respect to the purchase, sale and distribution of vishnick was also adopted.

TRADE UNIONS MUST BE INCORPORATED

SUCH ACTION NECESSARY BEFORE MAKING ARBITRATION COMPULSORY.

Calgary, May 8.—"Trade unions would have to be incorporated before making arbitration compulsory," remarked Alex. Ross, M.L.A. in the course of an interview in discussing the proposed action of the Federal Government in the matter. "Quite a number of the unions are incorporated," he said, "but speaking generally, the unions have always been opposed to this because it places a tremendous weapon in the hands of the capitalists," he continued. Mr. Ross stated that if they were compelled to incorporate it would mean that all their activities as industrial organizations would be subject to legislation passed at Ottawa.

MUTINY IN FIUME OF D'ANNUNZIO'S FORCES

Trieste, May 8.—A mutiny broke out in Fiume at five o'clock last evening, a fierce battle between the carabiniers and the arditi developing.

The troops involved are those of Gabriele D'Annunzio's forces.

WATER TRAFFIC TO BREAK ALL RECORDS

FREIGHT ON WESTERN WATERS PROMISES TO BE UNUSUALLY LARGE.

(By Canadian Press.)

The Pas, Man., May 8.—Water traffic on the Saskatchewan River at The Pas during the coming season gives early promise of breaking all records. There are millions of board feet of logs to come down from the Carrot River for The Pas Lumber Company; thousands of tie,and large shipments of ore. The Mandy ore haul requires the largest number of boats, and four steam tugs and eight barges have been placed in commission for this work. There are 8,000 tons of copper ore lying on the dump at Surgeon Landing, and it is planned to transport every pound of this to The Pas for transhipment to the smelter at Trail, B.C., before the end of September.

The only passenger boat in the north is the steamer Nipawin, of the Ross Navigation Company, plying from The Pas to the mine fields of Athapapuskow and Flin-Flon and all river points, carrying passengers, mail, express and freight. She is modern throughout with stateroom accommodation for 30 people, and deck space accommodation for as many more.

POLICE IN IRELAND ARE VERY RESTLESS

ASK FOR MORE PROTECTION—THINK SOLDIERS SHOULD BE USED MORE.

London, May 8.— The Press Associaton announces that, as far as the Belfast members of the Irish constabulary are concerned, nothing is known of a contemplated strike movement among that force.

The announcement admits there is unrest among the police in all the disaffected regions in Ireland, consequent on the dangers to which the men are exposed and what it says appears to be lack of support by the authorities.

The announcement asserts that there have been complaints that the military should have been more fully utilized to aid in the enforcement of the law in Ireland, but says the whole tradition of the Irish constabulary force is against the strike.

The Star's Belfast correspondent said that he had learned from an authoritative source that arrangements are contemplated for a general strike of the Irish constabulary in the event of the Government being further unable to take necessary steps to protect policemen in the execution of their duty.

Fifty hunger-strikers were released from the Wormwood Scrubbs Prison today.

Twenty-seven hunger-strikers who were removed from the Belfast jail to the hospital during the week were discharged today, and departed for their homes in the south.

It is reported that the curfew order in Dublin is to rescinded at the end of the month.

THE MARQUESANS.

Natives of South Seas Killed by Civilization.

Somehow or another it is not easy to think of France as a factor in the Pacific nowadays. Travelers, as a rule, have little to say of any French possessions in that part of the world. Everything seems to be marked down to the credit of the British, or the Germans, or the Americans, or more recently, of course, to the Japanese. Perhaps this is because the frequented routes touch more of these interests than of the French. Still the French are there, and although their islands lie farther to the south and east than the groups more frequently visited by travelers, they are not inconsiderable, and from a standpoint of racial significance they are almost more interesting than many other South Sea groups.

For among the French holdings are the Marquesas Islands, once the home of thousands of care-free natives and of a thriving trade, but now almost forgotten to the world, with trade gone and the native population rapidly fading away. Few travelers of the present generation have ever heard of the islands. Tourists are practically unknown upon them. No liners touch at their shores, and no cables or wireless apparatus keep them in touch with the rest of the world. They might almost have passed out of the world's ken, in spite of the nominal governance by successive French officials, if it had not been that, of late, their very isolation and mystery have put them once more on the map. This time the world's attention can hardly be withdrawn until the far-away isles shall become better known, for a wealthy Yale alumnus has provided money for sending thither a company of university professors and their assistants, all learned men, and all specialists in one branch of knowledge or another, who will study the islands and their half-forgotten people and tell a waiting world all about them.

Very likely the professors will discover one of those race tragedies such as are not uncommon in the South Seas. For apparently the Marquesans are perishing largely from inability to withstand contact with what the world calls civilization. Whether they would have had a better racial history if their sultry islets had never fallen in the way of the Spaniards, or the doughty mariners of Captain Cook, or ever been discovered and rediscovered by British, American, and French sailors, is hard to say. What seems clear is that, from the time when the islanders first came under the influence of such visitations, they slowly retrograded until now those that remain are only a remnant. Yet perhaps they may be of the same racial stock, ages ago, as their more civilized visitors. Perhaps, as some aver, the grandfathers and grandmothers of these islanders, many generations back, migrated to the place where their descendants are now to be found, from the ancient heart of the world, in Asia. If so, it is hinted that they traveled not from island to island, but that they could roam over a vast continent, now submerged, of which many of the islands of to-day mark only the highest points. The professors' party will try to find out the truth about these matters.

And the professors are likely to have some novel experiences. Not that they are likely to suffer the fate of some of those who visited the Marquesas in early times, who discovered too late for their own good that the inhabitants were cannibals. The Marquesans are no longer in a mood to fight off all invaders, or to feast upon the unfortunate individuals whom they get within their power; those days are past. But the visitors will have to live more or less as the natives do. There are no cities, no hotels. Even the climate and the aspect of the islands may be surprising to some. Basaltic rock cliffs, rising straight out of the sea, are as forbidding in their aspect as are the stories of the warlike cannibalistic habits of the islanders. At first glance, there is little to suggest the South Sea Islands of song and story, the islands of balmy airs, sunny skies, and flowers. A visitor, unless he choose well the time of his visitation, is likely to find the tops of his Marquesan cliffs, and the mountain ridges behind them, blanketed with mist, if indeed they are not being drenched with rain. And the atmosphere will be wet and hot, as in fact one might anticipate for islands so close to the equator. Yet between the forking ridges of the broken surface of the Marquesas isles there are delightful valleys, fanned by the trade winds, green with never-failing tropical verdure, where a man may almost pluck what food he needs from the trees and plants all about him, and where the natives, at least, take no thought for the morrow. Beaches, where these valleys open upon the sea, provide a base for fishing boats to-day, as they did for starting off the war canoes in the days of old.

The Marquesans, accustomed to the stern and forbidding aspect of their own shores, look to happy sparkling, flower-decked Tahiti, 750 miles away to the southwest, as the capital of the world. Tahiti also is French.

One can only wonder if they will concern themselves much with professors who usually speak English, and who hail from a land thousands of miles to the north and east—whether, indeed, they can be induced, even by professors, to tell their own true story. Once the "vikings of the South Seas," the Marquesans are vikings no longer, and as civilization has passed them by, they are waiting, just waiting.

Worse Than That.

An unhappily married Scot was met by a friend who said, "Man, Jamie, this is an awfu' thing that has befallen you. It's a great pity that your wife has gone and left you." "Deed, man," quoth Jamie, "she'll dae waur than that yet." "What waur can she do than that?" "She'll come back again," replied Jamie ruefully.

Picture Hidden From Huns.

How Peter Paul Rubens' greatest masterpiece, "The Descent from the Cross," which had hung for years in the famous Antwerp Cathedral, was hidden during the German occupation of Belgium has just been described by Henri Maurice, famous Belgian engineer, who remained in the city during the period of German possession.

The painting, so precious, according to art authorities, that "no money can buy it," was taken from its place in the cathedral when the Germans were approaching the city and hidden in a dugout on the outskirts of the town. In order to avoid suspicion it was removed from its frame, rolled, and concealed in a common piece of canvas wrapping cloth.

"It was evident that the Germans knew of the presence of the valuable picture and would lose no time in searching for it," said M. Maurice.

"We puzzled many hours over the best place to hide it and finally decided to conceal it in the wall of one of the rooms of my house.

"As the Germans were actually entering Antwerp we began work on the place. We removed the picture from the dugout without discovery, although it was actually inspected by a German non-commissioned officer who didn't realize its value. We concealed it, and although for four years the invaders made determined efforts to find it they were unsuccessful."

SPIRITIST IS EXPOSED

PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE DEAD WERE FAKED.

American Society of Psychical Research Denounces the Famous Bocock Spirit Pictures as Frauds and Gives Lengthy Reasons for Believing That Mrs. Lee Was Dupe of Unscrupulous Medium.

A REPORT recently made public by the American Society for Psychical Research denounces as a fake the Bocock spirit pictures, known to all spiritists and supposed by most of them to provide actual proof that ghosts can be photographed. The pictures were made with the assistance of Dr. William M. Keeler, of Washington. The Keeler named and denounced in the report of the society is now about eighty years old and is employed by the United States Government as a photographer.

The American Society for Psychical Research became interested in the Bocock spirit pictures in 1914 when it was presented with sixteen spirit photographs by Mrs. Marguerite du Pont Lee, a Washington woman well known for philanthropy. Some of them purported to be pictures of Rev. Kemper Bocock, who had passed over some time before and who in his lifetime was a friend and fellow-worker with Mrs. Lee. The society, which may claim to be a scientific body since it is quite as willing to expose fraud among mediums as it is to collect data in support of the belief, investigated the photographs and Prof. James Hyslop, secretary of the organization, made a report on the subject. He found Mrs. Lee to be an absolutely honest woman whom it would be impossible to suspect of intentional fraud. She said that some time after her friend the clergyman died his spirit appeared and she acquired the gift of automatic writing. Later she was informed that she possessed that rarest of mediumistic gifts—the ability to take spirit photographs. She was naturally flattered and began to experiment. Her success was not extravagant. Some formless blobs and blotches appeared on the plates, which might have been made by spirits or by other agencies.

Prof. Hyslop's report did not declare definitely upon the subject, but it did speak with suspicion of Keeler who refused to give evidence or submit to what the society calls "test conditions." So the matter has rested until now, when a final report is written by Dr. Walter F. Prince. He speaks with due respect of Mrs. Lee, but does not hesitate to refer to "fraudulent mediums, notably the Keelers," and declares that Dr. Keeler is the sole author of the mysterious photographs, which scientific spiritists will now have to discard as bogus. It appears that it was only after Mrs. Lee got Keeler to help her that she made any real progress in taking the pictures. While she gave testimony that Keeler himself did not take the pictures, she admits that none was taken unless he was present to guide her. She first got into touch with him through another supposed spirit photographer, Dr. Hansmann, of Washington, who recommended Keeler, and it is suggested that Dr. Hansmann handed over this promising customer only because his own health was failing.

Dr. Prince has examined some hundreds of these photographs, and he can examine still more if he likes, for it appears that Keeler is still making them. Most of them were photographs of Rev. Mr. Bocock. Some were photographs of spirit writings, the authors being such distinguished ghosts as Socrates, Abraham Lincoln, Philips Brooks, and Henry Ward Beecher. He learned from Rev. Bocock's brother that only two photographs had been made in his lifetime. Both of them showed him seated and showing only his head and chest. The first thing that struck the investigator in looking over the hundreds of spirit photographs was that they all showed the face at precisely the same angle, one third left or one third right. The face held not only the same rigid angle, never varying by a fraction of a degree, but the same expression. Rev. Bocock was shown dancing, standing amid the glories of the Yosemite, addressing a great gathering of some kind, at ease in some gorgeous apartments or playing the violin. But his expression never varied. He did not open his lips when speaking. He did not look at his partner when dancing or at his audience when addressing it. He showed no rapture either in the Yosemite or in the music he was producing.

He was shown in various costumes, which Dr. Keeler explained were the costumes worn by some of his ancestors. His face was shown in a court costume of Elizabeth's day, but curiously enough the dress was that worn by ladies and not by gallants. Some of the photographs showed clearly where a paper figure had been superimposed, and there were other crudities. Another curiosity was that, although the face of Rev. Bocock never changed, his figure was never twice the same. Sometimes he would appear tall, at other times short, sometimes stout, sometimes thin. Now the hands would be muscular and large, again they would be thin and delicate. A handwriting expert examined the spirit writings, and compared them with the hand of Dr. Keeler, and he pronounced all to have been written by the same person. The whole thing now stands out as having been the impudent fraud of a skilled photographer, and one does not need more than three guesses to discover his name.

Moscow Honors Bolshevism's Foe

IN Moscow, centre of Bolshevist power in Russia, has been erected an obelisk to a man who, in his lifetime, was one of Bolshevism's most bitter foes. His last literary work before his death last September was a vehement denunciation of Bolshevism, and Leonid Andreyeff's "S. O. S." has been translated into every European language. It was an appeal for the salvation of his country and the release of its mind-locked people from the nightmare of the rule of Lenine and Trotsky—an appeal from a danger which his warnings had been unable to avert. With all the art at his command—and few of his day had a more powerful gift of eloquence than Leonid Andreyeff—he had sought to save his people from their own folly. And then, in 1917, his pleas and warnings unheeded, he wrote bitterly of the extremity to which Russia had been led by anarchy.

"To crown our ignominy," he said, "everything that is alive in Russia is striving toward disunion, as if driven by a mysterious centrifugal power. One county which has a supply of oats refuses seed to a neighboring county, and the fields remain unsown. In other places the local committees have abolished private property, have seized the [illegible] have been persistently urged by the Bolsheviki; have confiscated implements, seed, live stock. Every Ivan is his own ruler, and a dozen Ivans make up a Vendee! And here is Finland, definitely and brusquely proclaiming its separation. Henceforth we are merely a respected neighbor. And here is also Ukrainia hinting at something more than autonomy. Siberia, too, has a strange look in her eyes. Who else? Who else detests Russia so deeply as to demand immediate separation from her—from her who is dying? Go to, club her, tear to shreds the decrepit imbecile, pull the keys from under her pillow, plunder all you can! Rejoice, you marauders, dealers in stolen goods, despoilers of the dead, honest loons, revolutionary hypocrites and maniacs! Why pity her who does not pity herself? Why preserve her and force upon her salvation when she lacerates her own flesh, blindly seeks death, and in thousands of voices chants her own funeral mass!"

So wrote Andreyeff, the one-time revolutionist. For Andreyeff, like his patron, Maxine Gorky, had rebelled against the autocracy of the Romanoffs. While still a young journalist in Moscow, with only a few short stories to his credit, Andreyeff had become a protege of Gorky, and was steeped in the ideals of the revolutionists. He was one of a little band of writers, of whom Gorky was a leader, suspected by the Czar's agents of plotting the overthroww of the Government. But, if Andreyeff ever gave his support to any such movement, it may be assumed from his writings that he already had some idea of another form of government to succeed that which was ended. He was ever opposed to that state in which "every Ivan is his own Czar." And, more bitterly than ever he reviled the Romanoff autocracy did he denounce anarchy.

"In an evil hour our Russian liberty was born," he wrote soon after the revolution. "A youthful bride decked with white flowers—may she not perish on her way to the wedding feast!"

And again, in 1917, in caustic irony he addressed the men who had overthrown one despot to take his place in even more despotic rule.

"You gentlemen of the Provisional Government," he wrote, "persist in proclaiming tragically that 'without authority there is no responsibility'; keep standing by the roadside with extended palms begging the passerby for a pennyworth of powder—just a pennyworth, for the sake of Christ!

"You gentlemen of the council of the Executive Committee, do not for an instant remove your eyes from the Government, guard closely these 'bourgeois,' scan minutely every regulation—beware, they may deceive you!

"You parties, multiply and subdivide into fractions and subtractions, firmly and scrupulously observe every shade of your tenets, and, pray, do not forget to hate each other!

"You soldiers, distrust the officers, they are all traitors! Do not obey the generals, they are all Judases!

"As for you, bourgeoin, flee to the Crimea and the Caucasus, and if you can obtain no railroad ticket, bang up your shutters, put out the lights and tremble.

"I accuse no one," he continued, "And whom, pray, shall I accuse when all are guilty? Whom shall we chastise when we are all criminals? If that which I dread with mortal anguish comes to pass many will be our accusers and executioners. We shall not unto the seventh generation exhaust the cup of ignominy which the outraged and indignant world will present to us."

Saved King's Life.

A remarkable story of how a peasant girl probably saved the life of King Albert, of the Belgians, has just been made public. The girl is Mlle. Angelica Vercammen, who, while riding in a train on her way to Antwerp overheard a conversation between a German officer and a nurse, in which they plotted to blow up the Palace in Brussels on February 19, 1919, while King Albert was in conference with allied officers. Mlle. Vercammen informed a guard at Antwerp of her discoveries and the pair were arrested. Documents found on the German officer proved the truth of the girl's charges and the officer and nurse were both convicted and shot. King Albert, on hearing the story, sent for the peasant girl and personally decorated her with the Croix de Guerre, Order of Leopold and the Croix de la Elizabeth.

If a man is a loafer he has but little to live for.

It's a pity that more of us are not willing to follow the advice we give others.

I was pale, breathless at the least exertion and could hardly do any housework without stopping to rest. I often had severe headaches, and my appetite was poor and fickle, and I would get up in the morning without feeling the least bit rested. I had tried several medicines but did not get benefit from anything until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. When I had taken two boxes I could see an improvement, and after using six boxes I found my health fully restored. I feel altogether different since I used the pills that I strongly advise them for all weak, run down people."

A TALK ON FASHION

Lovely spring—its with us once again! The birds are calling out their sweet full notes across the greening fields; golden sunbeams, warm with a hint of summer, coax out the crimson maple birds, glimmer on the rushing stream and dance across the lawn.

And so milady, the debutante dives religiously into the scented depths of last summer's wardrobe and brings forth one dainty garment after another, scanning each with a critical eye in an effort to ascertain to which category it belongs. Speaking of categories, there are three in milady's wardrobe. First there is the hopelessly irretrievably down and out, second comes the possibly presentable with re-designing and thirdly comes the select and limited category of perfectly presentables.

An investigation of the average young lady's wardrobe this spring will show that a goodly number of wearables come under the first mention, while, by far the greater number, are assigned to second place and only a few in the third.

Possibly, there are more gowns and hats set aside for re-making and re-trimming this year than ever before, and there are reasons: The young woman of today is a public-spirited member of our citizenship—she has a thorough grasp of the idea of conservation. Perhaps, its true that she does employ her dainty "kerchief" to stifle a laugh when she sees her masculine friend strutting around in a suit of gaudy blue jeans and wearing a sort of a "hang-dog" "just look at me" pitiful-like expression on his face, but at the same time she usually has a sane conception of what true economy means.

The first attention is directed, of course, to the more staple matter-of-fact skirts and dresses for morning wear and for the street. In the creation or re-designing of these garments it is always well to remember that material which in itself is beautiful will need very little elaboration of outline or complexity of design and to adhere closely to the tailor-made—as closely as possible—and still retain your personality. Simplicity is a beautiful thing that's true, but don't be afraid to introduce a favorite pocket or a few fancy buttons if it suits you any the better.

And though we must, as ladies, observe proper decorum, if we are not a bit wilful with dame fashion at times, she will get the idea that she can rule us entirely, which won't do atall. Fasten your favorite flower right on the lapel of your morning suit and let those who don't like it look. Then there are the hats to match. It doesn't matter much what the lines and material as long as the hat likes your face, but why not have at least one hat that can be worn with any suit, or coat. This is usually black with unimposing lines and is a valuable accessory to the spring wardrobe.

Visions of smiling summer skies and welcome breezes will turn our thoughts to the lighter daintier creations that harmonize with such conditions. Always there is the voile, plain or flowered, the washable silks, and in fact an endless variety of material from which to choose.

Especially popular for summer wear this season is the charming skirt of moon-glo white crepe. This is a beautiful and serviceable garment and can be worn effectively with any dainty blouse. Then there is the one-piece dress of spiral crepe exquisitely embroidered in silk. This gown is worn with a wide-brimmed hat with top to match the collar and facing of dark satin. In order to be complete the wardrobe should contain a [illegible] of this [illegible]. What of the summer dance frock? This will receive for the time undivided attention. And there are so many designs, so many materials and so many shades from which to make a selection. There is the gracefully draped evening dress of [illegible] cream colored silk with satin brocaded train and pearl embroidery—this with a corsage bouquet of pink sweet-heart roses is most ideal. Then there is an ethereal costume of sky blue georgette crepe with gracefully draped skirt and edged with tiny pink moss roses. This is a charming creation and one that is always in taste for evening wear.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed with Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre at Once.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

DISTRIBUTION OF

It is seen that the appropriation was a substantial benefit that accrued to men, who being in need of medical attention, were enabled to go in that service and yet have a source of income while under treatment. If the affliction were due to service, then the applicant was assigned to treatment at Kingston, and the medical disability allowances apportioned. But there were a number of cases where the rules of the D. S. C. R., allowed for treatment but for no allowances. Such cases were at once taken care of from the appropriation supporting the family, if one, while the man was in hospital or under treatment in his home. This feature of the appropriation work proved most serviceable.

There were many cases of what was defined as 'inadequately remunerated employment.' Where the man was earning money but not enough to meet the needs of the family, it was permissible, and acted on, to make allowance sufficient to bring the family income up to normal. In numbers of cases this was a positive relief and removed anxiety during the winter months. Cases of absolute unemployment were [illegible] attention in due form and for periods as determinen until employment could be found.

Taken in all, the distribution was practical. In some ways it was hampered by the rules existing in other branches of the S. C. R., forming delays that could not be avoided. These were remedied so far as possible, and difficulties smoothed out. The cost of the work to the Government, in the district covering the city and county of Peterborough, and also reaching as far East as Campbellford and south to Port Hope and Millbrook, was only 1 and 3-10 per cent on the dollar as distributed.

THEATRICAL

"SEVENTEEN" UNUSUAL PLAY OF FUN AND MUSIC

ONE OF AMERICA'S GREATEST SUCCESSES AT GRAND MONDAY ONLY

Thomas Kelly, who plays Willie Baxter in Stuart Walker's production of Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen," which will be the next attraction at the Grand Theatre, has had a very curious and successful career, as both actor and author.

His entire life on the stage has been with the leading actors and actresses of America, appearing in the companies of Ethel Barrymore in "Cousin Kate" and other of her successes, with John Drew in "A Single Man," with Virginia Harned and E. H. Southern, Wm. H. Cane, Maxine Elliott and many others. After a season of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," with the original London company, he returned to America and joined Ottis Skinner in "Kismet," playing with him for two seasons.

As an author, the first poem Mr. Kelly wrote was published by the Green Book magazine—it was called "The Wall of Marionette." The lure of motion picture money being strong, he dashed off a scenario which was purchased by William A. Brady for the World Film and was played by Ethel Clayton. His first play, a one-actor, called "The Son of Isis," was produced by Stuart Walker, for his portmanteau Theatre company, and his first short story found a ready market. While in France with the 58th Artillery C.A.C., he entered the Zymole Trokeys contest which ran in "Life," and captured first prize with a four-line ditty. He feels that he will either have to concentrate on one line of literary effort or else discover new fields to try his luck at. He is at present at work on a book depicting the lighter side of the great war.

The man milliners of the U.S. in session at New York have promised not to raise the price of hats.

KEEPING UP WITH THE JONES'S AT THE GRAND WEDNESDA YNIGHT

"Keeping Up With the Joneses" is the title of the latest Gus Hill musical comedy triumph underlined to hold forth at the Grand Theatre Wednesday evening only. The new offering is based on the popular newspaper comics of Pop Momand, appearing in the New York Globe and hundreds of other dailies throughout the United States and Canada. From all accounts this unusual play of fun, music and innovations is the final word in musical comedy and destined to inaugurate a new era in up-to-the-minute entertainment. If millions of people have laughed over Mr. Momand's cartoons, it is almost a sure wager that millions will also enjoy the play. The company is composed of thirty people, mostly women. It is replete with startling surprises, original and sensational features, and all told is a novelty to be conjured with even in these days of progressive and phenomenal stage hits. The first act showes the gorgeous home of the Joneses, and the second shifts to Havana, Cuba, the new haven of liberty, wine, song and the old fashioned glass of beer.

FRANCE REVIVING

The renaissance of France, after her devastation by the enemy, is beginning to be manifest, and when the grape is full the vineyards will smile" and a large part of France will be itself again. So the French peasants are saying in their spring meetings. Facts support the optimism of their outlook. Out of 1,403 miles of railway lines destroyed during the war, France has made 1,267½ miles ready for use by the end of September. Out of 1,160 destroyed bridges, she has reconstructed 657. Out of 672 miles of canals, 437½ miles were ready for use by the end of August. Out of three hundred thousand agricultural instruments destroyed or removed by the Germans, two hundred thousand had been replaced. Out of 550,000 houses destroyed, 80,000 have been sufficiently repaired to be utilized; 16,225 huts have been constructed by the end of the past year. Out of 6,950 square miles of tillable land devastated, 1,540 square miles have been made fit for cultivation at the same time, and 14 million cubic metres of trench excavation have been filled in.

Goods To Be Returned.

"We Canadians are the most generous buyers in the world," said an after-dinner speaker. "We are also very lavish in returning to the accommodating dealers the things we have bought. A traveler was being shown over Warwick Castle. 'This tower,' said the guide to him impressively, 'goes back to William the Conqueror.' 'Why, what's the matter with it?' said the traveler. 'Ain't it satisfactory?'"

What He Misses.

"Some men are so strong that they always have their own way." "Yes, but a man who always has his own way is liable to be a little disappointed when he stops once in a while and looks around and listens for the applause."

A Boy In Parliament.

The interest of the House of Commons is divided between its two newest members—Lady Astor, the first woman M.P., and Mr. Ernest Harmsworth, 21, the youngest M.P., nephew of Lord Northcliffe, says the London Mail. A very hearty welcome was given to Mr. Harmsworth the other day when he was seated.

The tall, fair, slender looking young member stood a head taller than his escort, and it was recognized that he will be one of the tallest members of the House. From the peers' gallery above Lord Rothermere looked down on the introduction of his son with a father's pride.

Mr. Harmsworth was escorted to the table by F. A. Macquisten, the witty Scottish member, and G. C. H. Wheeler, the representative of Faversham, the constituency next to Mr. Harmsworth's.

Too Late.

A middle-aged bachelor was in a restaurant at breakfast when he noticed this inscription on an egg: "To whom it may concern. Should this meet the eye of some young lady who desires to marry a farmer's daughter, eighteen years of age, kindly communicate with—." After reading this he made haste to write to the girl, offering marriage, and in a few days received this note: "Your note came too late. I have been married [illegible] today!"—

DEFIED THE HUNS.

Cardinal Mercier of Belgium Was Not a Pacifist.

It is difficult to exaggerate the splendor and the significance of the historical role played by Cardinal Mercier. Under the very guns and bayonets of the German invaders he never ceased to denounce the moral iniquity of the German attack, to assert his country's inalienable right to independence, and to prophesy the ultimate triumph of right and justice. His fearless pastoral letters, shot through with faith and patriotism, strengthened the hearts of his people in the darkest hours of the war. More than any other man he embodied and crystalized the moral righteousness of the allied cause.

"Cardinal Mercier's Own Story" is a full and ably edited record of the cardinal's correspondence with the German occupying authorities. There is a remarkably dramatic quality about this correspondence; the cardinal's courage and frankness and nobility stand out in striking relief against the arrogance and bullying and duplicity of Von Bissing and Von der Lancken. The Germans hated and feared Mercier from the bottom of their hearts; they would have liked to visit condign punishment upon him. But they were afraid of the bad effect which an open attack upon so venerable and highly esteemed a prelate would have produced in Roman Catholic circles everywhere. So, with the ingenuity of mean and petty minds, they sought to wound him through his humbler friends and supporters. They instituted a systematic persecution of the patriotic Belgian priests; and they invariably arrested and punished the men who printed his pastoral letters.

Even this peculiarly vexatious method of attack failed to shake the cardinal's high serenity. He always firmly rejected any agreement with the German authorities which would have compromised his principles or his patriotism. At the same time he did not hesitate to sink purely personal considerations when he felt that, by doing so, he might alleviate the fate of the unfortunate victims of German tyranny.

Cardinal Mercier was no pacifist. In spite of the repeated protests of Von Bissing he consistently praised the Belgian young men who slipped through the German guards and joined their national army. With what trumpet tones he could appeal to the patriotism of his people is well illustrated in the following passage from a speech delivered in the Church of St. Gudule, in Brussels:

"There may be certain effeminate souls in whose eyes war is merely the exploding of mines, the bursting of shells, the butchery of men, the shedding of blood and the piling up of corpses. Short-sighted politicians may still be found with low views, for whom the stakes of battle are but a passing interest, the seizure or reconquest of ground or of a province.

"No. If, in spite of its horrors, war understand a just war—possesses such stern attractions, it is simply because it is the disinterested act of a people that yields up or is disposed to yield up its most precious possessions, its life in defence and in vindication of something that cannot be weighed, or counted, or purchased—justice, honor, peace and liberty."

This stirring address was delivered on the Belgian National Day, July 21, 1916, and it is not surprising to learn that the "Brabanconne," the Belgian national anthem, was played with tremendous spirit at the conclusion of the service.

Sea-Serpent Tales.

There may be some who class with fishermen's yarns the story of the diver at Tobermory who was recently attacked by a 15-foot conger. There is no reason for doing so. Congers grow to a gigantic size, and eels of all sorts are ugly customers.

Some years ago a giant conger was caught in shallow water off the beach at Snettisham, in Norfolk. It measured eight feet eight inches in length, and weighed 148 pounds. Such a brute, if caught on a line and drawn into a boat, would be a dangerous capture. Congers half that size have been known to bite a man's hand in two and to have driven their teeth through the blade of an oar.

In 1913 Kahanamoku, the champion Olympic swimmer of Honolulu, was attacked by a giant eel which dragged him under water and held him there for nearly two minutes. He escaped at last, but at the cost of the first finger of his right hand.

Eels attain an immense size in the rivers of New Zealand, and have been known to attack bathers. Many cases of bathers being drowned occurred in a river near an out-station owned by a relative of Col. Meysey-Thompson, and it was at last definitely ascertained that eels dragged them down.

In April, 1913, an eel caused the death of a fisherman at Singapore. The man was fishing off Swettenham Pier with a line which he had foolishly fastened around his wrist. An eel, estimated to be ten feet long, swallowed the hook, and, despite his struggles, he was dragged in and drowned. His dead body was afterwards found under the pier with the line, now severed, still attached to his wrist.—Tit-Bits.

Sheffield's Publicity Campaign.

The reading public is on the way to hear a good deal about Sheffield, England, for Sheffield has a town-development committee, which, among other things, has started a campaign of publicity which includes the press of India, South America, Canada, Australia, and the United States. The intention is to make the name "Sheffield" famous in the markets of the world; or, one might say, more famous, for the campaign starts with a name already so associated with cutlery that one can hardly buy a pocket knife without thinking of it. But even while the world is hearing more and more about Sheffield, it is evidently the intention of this remarkably active town-development committee to make the town more and more worth talking about. A new Sheffield is in prospect, the "distinguished architect" engaged for that purpose is probably already mulling over his plans for civic improvement, and the committee is encouraging manufacturers to rebuild out-of-date premises, and has started a campaign for the elimination of smoke by changing over from coal to gas or electricity. Proposals are under consideration to modernize the waterways between Sheffield and the Humber ports, and there will probably be a new canal navigable for boats of at least 300 tons, and new wharf accommodations for the loading of manufactured products. An air service is also one of the aims of the committee, which has already held two flying meets to familiarize the manufacturers and citizens of the town with the practical value of the latest means of transportation. Sheffield, in short, is being planned out for fifty years to come.

Symptoms of Eyestrain.

The symptoms of eyestrain are varied. A common symptom is congestion or inflammation of the edges of the eyelids, not infrequently that goes on to the formation of a stye. Headache, especially an evening headache, is one of the most frequent results of eyestrain; eyeache, coming on early in the day, as soon as one begins to use the eyes, is not uncommon. Indigestion that does not yield to dieting and drugs sometimes disappears as if by magic when eyestrain is corrected. Eyestrain cannot always be corrected merely by fitting the eyes with the proper glasses, it may be that the underlying cause is systemic, and that the treatment calls for tonics, good feeding and rest from overwork and worry.

BOXER CARPENTIER THE IDOL OF FRANCE

TORONTO FANS WILL GASP IN SURPRISE AT HIS ACTION

Toronto fans are going to gasp in surprise, says the Toronto Star, when they see Georges Carpentier in action at the Army and Navy show at the Arena Saturday night. New York Fans did when they saw him last week.

The idol of France boxes Jules Lansers the Belgian heavyweight champion, four rounds here tonight, and the exhibition promises to be full of "pep," because Carpentier has all the love of a Frenchman for the limelight and applause.

Looks Better in the Ring.

Carpentier is much more impressive in fighting trunks than in street attire. He is muscular and well built—relying his frail, flat-chested appearance in "civies."

Dempsey will not have a set-up if he ever meets the Frenchman.

Carpentier is very fast and a good boxer. Above all, he is intelligent. Jack will not hit him on the chin in the first round, anyway.

He stands high up on his toes and creates an unusual appearance. He moves around with the ease and grace of a toe dancer, shooting in short, snappy blows with great rapidity.

When he hits he throws the weight of his entire body behind the blow. He lunges with such force that if the blow misses he is carried half-way across the ring. This sounds awkward—but it is not. He keeps himself well covered up. He mixes up his boxing and uses a variety of blows. He stands high on his toes to shoot them in from above and bends very low to swing them over from below. He has a better right hand than Dempsey. He is like a featherweight with his head ducking, and he comes back after ducking like a flash. He will be a difficult man to fight because he is so versatile in attack and defence. He moves in and out like a flashy lightweight, and has everything from speed of foot to snappy brain. If he only weighed 20 pounds more he would be favorite for the championship.

MOUNT FOREST BOWLERS HOLD TOURNEY IN JULY

Mount Forest, May 7.—At the annual meeting of the local bowling club, Tuesday and Wednesday, July 6 and 7, were decided on as the dates for this year's tournament.

A resolution was passed instructing the Property Committee to purchase the bowling green, as the lease expires this year.

MIKE O'DOWD WENT OUT EX-CHAMPION

WENT DOWN TO DEFEAT AT HANDS OF SECOND RATER

Boston, May 7.—Mike O'Dowd stepped into Boston last night middleweight champion of the world—and stepped out today ex-champion. Johnny Wilson of Boston, a second rater of no particular rating, who looked like a "set-up" for O'Dowd, won O'Dowd's title on Referee Hector McInnes' decision after a 12-round bout.

O'Dowd was the aggressor throughout the contest, but Wilson, a left-hand boxer, scored repeatedly with his right. O'Dowd excelled in fighting, but seemed unable to fathom Wilson's style of boxing. Eight of the rounds went to Wilson, two to O'Dowd, and two were even.

O'Dowd Down.

The only knockdown in the bout came in the second round, when Wilson caught O'Dowd with a straight right to the jaw, O'Dowd going down for the count of four. Wilson surprised the followers of the game by scoring so many times with his right, breaking through O'Dowd's defense often.

Wilson scored continually with right jabs to O'Dowd's face.

The pace set by the men was fast, and at the end of the twelfth round both were unsteady on their feet. A capacity crowd witnessed the bout. The St Paul boy was a big favorite before the bout The general betting was 10 to 3.

Wilson has participated in many bouts against second-raters in the last year, and has appeared in many cities, principally in New England. Last night's bout was his first against a leading boxer.

O'Dowd won the title from Al. McCoy in 1917.

When the gong sounded for the end of the twelfth round and Referee MacInnes pointed to Wilson's corner in token of the local boy's victory, O'Dowd protested the decision, claiming he was entitled to a draw at least.

FOUR TEAM LEAGUE

LINDSAY BALL ENTHUSIASTS ORGANIZE TOWN LEAGUE

(Lindsay Warder.)

A meeting was held last night for the purpose of organizing an Intermediate Town Baseball League, and although only two teams were represented, there were a number of enthusiasts present, and prospects are reported to be good for a four-team league.

It was felt that there should be some league, or organization, to provide baseball for the players and fans during the months of June, July and August.

Last night the Hustlers, under the management of Perce Houzer, entered, and Mr. Norman Mark also entered a team, the name to be decided on later. It is felt that the K. of C. should enter a team to defend the cup which they won last year, and it is expected another team will be secured from some of the following: Horn's, East Ward Veteran, L.C.I., O.R.B. and Arsenal.

Officers Elected.

Officers were elected as follows:

Hon. President—S. Butler.

President—M. J. Dedman.

Secretary-Treasurer—Ford Moynes.

Executive—N. Mark, P. Houser and the managers of two teams yet to be organized.

Will Enter O.B.A.A.

It was unanimously decided to enter the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association, which keeps a tab on all players. The winner of the league in Lindsay will no doubt play off with the winner of the Whitby Intermediate League or the Trent Valley League winners.

An entrance fee of $2 will be charged each team.

It is expected that all players who are signed with, or play one or more games in the Central League, will be barred from the Town League.

CURLERS FOR OLD COUNTRY

Winnipeg, May .—Some 23 men have been nominated by Manitoba clubs as eligible to be members of the Canadian curling team which will sail for Scotland next December to spend three months in curling. The Manitoba association will select eight members from a list submitted from the different clubs at a meeting to be held Saturday. The Canadian team will be made up of 32 players, and each member is required to pay his own expenses.

The bill providing for the merging of the Dominion and Noca Scotia Steel Companies into the British American Steel Corporation passed its second reading unanimously in the Nova Scotia House of Assembly.

A Romance In Colors

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

"Something of a mystery, your new boarder, isn't he?" queried Mrs. Doty of her neighbor at the nearest farm place to her own home.

"Oh, I think not," was the smiling reply of the young matron, Mrs. Ransom, who was the mother of two children whom this new boarder had all but adopted so far as kindness and liberality were concerned. "On the contrary Mr. Wharton is bluff, free and open, and acts like a man glad to get out in the country where he can do just as he pleases. No indeed, not at all mysterious, but I can say 'queer.'"

"In what way, now?" urged Mrs. Doty, who was a confirmed gossip.

"Well, he spends half of his time with the children, romps with them, takes them on long auto rides, buys them all kinds of toys and makes kites for them; in fact he seems extravagantly fond of juvenile company."

"Going to stay long with you?"

"A week or two vacation he told me when he first came," replied Mrs. Ransom. "But it has run into his third week, and he shows no signs of going as yet."

The inquisitive Mrs. Doty having disappointedly exhausted the theme under discussion, chose a new subject challenging her inquisitiveness.

"Who are the folks who have taken the Gale place?" she inquired.

"Now, there may be a mystery," spoke Mrs. Ransom sprightly. "They are new people and keep closely to themselves—a sour-visaged old man, his spinster sister, and, they say, a niece. I haven't seen the girl close at hand, for, you know, the Gale place is surrounded by that high-walled brick wall, but a glimpse now and then from our bay window shows that this niece is graceful, and, I think, pretty. She never leaves the grounds, and one or the other of the man and woman is with her whenever she is in the garden."

Just then there sounded out echoes of joyous, excited shouts and, pointing through the open window space, Mrs. Ransom said: "There is Mr. Wharton now," and the neighbor peered curiously at the new boarder.

Mrs. Ransom had reason to especially notice this fact, for the day previous he had presented one of the children with a large rubber ball tastefully decorated with alternate red and blue stripes. In a game of toss and catch he had sent it spinning over the brick wall of the Gale place, and that was the last seen of it, and he consoled the little lad to whom he had presented it with a promise to place it.

That night at dusk Mr. Wharton had an animated juvenile escort as he sent up the red and blue kite with a red and blue lantern attached to its tail. As he guided it aloft the string broke, and it, too, fell within the extensive grounds of the Gale place.

"And he did it a-purpose," declared little Benny to his mother later on. "I saw him snap the string."

It was two days later that the man who had taken the Gale place came over to the Ransom home and arranged for a regular supply of fresh eggs, butter and milk. Their delivery became the task of little Benny. The second evening of this function he startled his mother and very much interested Mr. Wharton by handing the latter a folded note.

"The pretty girl over there gave me the letter," said Benny, "and half a dollar not to tell anything about it. She said I was to give the letter to the red and blue man and forget all about it."

"That's me, and here's a dollar to help you forget it, Benny," observed Mr. Wharton, and he hastily perused the note and went at once to his room, chuckling riotously.

"Mrs. Doty was right—there is a mystery here!" soliloquized the puzzled Mrs. Ransom.

Mr. Wharton was gone into the village all that evening and Mrs. Ransom went to bed after his return to lie awake trying to solve the enigma of his queer actions. She dozed, to be awakened by a soft chugging sound coming apparently from the rear of the house, and hastened to a window that overlooked the back garden.

There stood an automobile, red and blue, and Mr. Wharton was just helping a young lady into it, whom the driver drew into his arms and kissed rapturously. Away went the machine, Mr. Wharton, all smiles, waving his hand after its inmates suggested a fatherly blessing.

Next morning, when Mrs. Ransom came downstairs she found her boarder awaiting her, his suitcase at his side.

"You dear little woman," he said, "I'm leaving a neat little bonus in addition to my board money, as I have got to get back to business."

"And the young lady, sir, and the young man and the automobile?" fluttered Mrs. Ransom.

"Oh! you saw the elopement, eh? Well, my son was the young man, whom I have assisted in getting away with the poor, persecuted victim of relatives interested in her fortune. Man and wife by this time. You see, I had to use Don's favorite college colors, with which Lucia was familiar, to attract her attention and get a note to her. You like a romance don't you? Well, you have been an [illegible] agent in making two loving souls happy!"

EASTER ISLAND.

Mysterious Land Was Swallowed and Thrown Up By the Sea.

It was on Easter Sunday, 1722, that the Dutch navigator Roggeveen discovered a previously unknown island in the Pacific, 2,100 miles west of the South American coast and close to the Tropic of Capricorn.

He called it Easter Island, and sailed around it but did not attempt a landing, although much struck by an extraordinary spectacle that met his gaze.

At intervals along the shore he beheld great platforms, on which huge stone giants stood in rows, facing the sea. He saw them first and was last to see them, for Easter Island thereupon became "lost" again to navigators for more than half a century, and when it was rediscovered all the giants had been thrown down.

What had happened? Nobody will ever know. The island—wholly volcanic, thrown up out of the depths of the sea and 1,100 miles from nearest land—is the most mysterious spot on earth. Its history is lost; the population it had when Roggeveen saw it had wholly disappeared at the time of its rediscovery.

But the stone giants remain; also the platforms of cut stone (more or less intact) on which they stood. One of these platforms was 540 feet long, and on it were placed fifteen of the huge images, varying in stature from forty to sixty feet.

Most of the images wore crowns, weighing two or three tons apiece, of reddish volcanic tufa. Some of them represented females apparently, and each one was modeled in the likeness of the upper half of a human being, the head disproportionately large. They are carved out of gray lava, and it is surmised that they were designed as portraits of royal or otherwise distinguished personages.

The origin of the giants is no puzzle. They are found to-day on the island in all stages of the making, the quarry from which they came being located in the crater of an extinct volcano at an elevation of 1,327 feet above the sea. There some of them may be seen merely sketched out upon the rocky walls, while others are in a state of partial completion and yet others stand or lie where they were left while in process of transportation to the coast.

In all, 555 of the statues have been found. The largest, seventy feet high, remains unfinished in the crater. The crater is cup-shaped; perfectly circular, half a mile in diameter, and contains a small lake that is alleged to be "bottomless," sounding lines 300 feet long having failed to reach bottom.

The rim of the crater is broken at one point, where a stream of lava formerly poured through on its way to the sea. It was through this gap that some images carved inside the crater were dragged. Their transportation down the mountain and to the coast was a tremendous performance, in the absence of steam-hoists and other machinery, but the supposition is that they were lowered by chocks and wedges, and drawn by hundreds of men along roads covered with seaweed. On reaching the seashore, they were probably rolled up inclined planes of earth to the tops of the platforms where they were placed erect.

[illegible] are ninety-three images, forty of them finished and ready for removal. They weigh from twelve to forty tons apiece. Outside the crater is another quarry, in which there are 150 stone giants in various stages. The rock is soft and easily carved, and the final step was to cut the back of the statue away from the matrix.

It is evident that the island in the days of the image-makers had a large population relatively to its size, its length being only thirteen miles and its width seven. Chambers beneath the stone platforms are crowded with human skeletons, wrapped in grass and laid with their heads toward the sea. One subterranean vault of great size is filled with skulls.

Apparently some sort of calamity overwhelmed the island, wiping out its entire population. It may have been an epidemic of disease. But how about the overthrown images? That suggests an earthquake, which may have been coincident with an eruption of the volcano. All surmises on the subject are mere guesswork.

There are now on the island about 150 people of Polynesian stock. But they do not seem to be descendants of the image-makers and in regard to the latter they have not even any traditions, for all time to come Easter Island and its stone giants are likely to remain an unsolved mystery.

Who are these [illegible]" he shouted excitedly. "They belong to the army of Shereef Hussein, who is in revolt against the Turks," I replied. "Who is Shereef Hussein?" the German asked in perfect English. "He is ruler of this part of Arabia," I replied. "And what am I?" "You are a prisoner." "Will they take me to Mecca?" "No, to Egypt." "Is sugar very high over there?" "Very cheap." "Good!" and he marched off happy to be out of the war and heading for a place where he could have plenty of sugar.

The world's record of sugar plantations [illegible] contains 13,000 acres, has thirty miles of railway and employs 1,500 people.

BORN ON BRINY GETS BRINY NAME

BIRTH AT SEA ON LINER CORCICAN— CAPTAIN IS GOD FATHER

Montreal, May 8.—The birth of a child to Mrs. R. H. Day, of Regina, on board the S. S Corsican, which docked here last night, while the ship was in mid-Atlantic, created much excitement. The baby was christened Dorothy Joan Corinne Ryman Day, the name being suggestive of her arrival, Corinne being a compound of the captain's name, Rennie, and the ship's name, Corsican.

Capt. K. R. Davies, who was also on board, is returning to his ranch in British Columbia, which he has not seen since 1914. His last duties overseas were of the most tragic in the aftermath of the war, namely, the exhumation of lonely soldier graves in France and Flanders. Capt Davies supervised the removal of the bodies of many thousands of Canadian soldiers from odd spots, sometime in ditches, a yard from the roadside, to properly registered cemeteries, where a cross was erected over the remains, and details of the dead soldier inscribed.

BARN DESTROYED

At 5 o'clock last night an unoccupied barn at the end of Lisbon street, owned by Mrs. Hurley, was completely destroyed by fire, the cause of which is unknown. The fire department made a quick run to the scene of the fire, but unable to do anything to save the building as the blaze had too much of a start before they were called.

POTATOES $6.50 A BAG

If there is a potato boycott in effect in the city it certainly is not having the desired result as far as the price of potatoes is concerned. On the market this morning various prices were asked, but nearly all were above the $6 mark. One man was asking $5 "and take as many bags as you like," but his samples were obviously of an inferior quality. The majority of farmers were asking the limit which was $6.50 and they seemed to have no difficulty in getting it. One farmers' wife asked that price and even then declined to deliver to the East City. Other prices were pretty much the same as on last Saturday.

TEN THOUSAND JEWS CELEBRATE SUNDAY

MOST OF PETERBOROUGH'S JEWISH FRATERNITY IN TORONTO TOMORROW

Tomorrow the Hebrews of many cities in Ontario will celebrate the granting of a mandate over Palestine to Great Britain. The date fixed for the celebration was Wednesday, May 5, but in many cities of Ontario, including Peterborough, is was found that arrangements for a celebration befitting the importance of the occasion could not be made on such short notice, and the date was therefore extended until tomorrow.

There will be nothing in the way of a celebration in Peterborough it was learned among the local Hebrews this morning. The reason given for this was that there are only twenty families of Hebrews in the city, and it is expected that the majority of these will go to join relatives in Toronto for the celebration.

In Toronto the demonstration will assume broad dimensions and will include a street parade in the afternoon in which Jews will take part and for which music will be provided by no less than 15 bands. The morning will be of praise and thankgiving for the freedom of Palestine from Turkish domination.

Has Human Touch Says London Telegraph

The place which the Salvation Army now holds in public estimation it has won not as one of the innumerable religious sects which flourish—or languish—but as an organization for the social uplifting of the poorest classes of the people. That is the great work which the Salvation Army has acomplished. Long since we have all growned accustomed to the Army and its bands and flags and processions. Its methods no longer startle and shock. Its "enthusiasm" is no longer questioned as to whether it is diabolic or inspired.

The Army is now an established Church with branches all over the world, doing a work which not even the most bigoted sceptics can challenge. Its dogmas are few, but staunchly held, and the one that makes the most universal appeal is that no man ever falls so low as to be not worth picking out of the gutter.

This is the glowing core, as we understand, it of Salvationism. Its special sphere of social work is among the outcast, and it holds religion to be the strongest regenerating force in the world.

The Salvation Army is bold in experiment, and not all its social experiments have fulfilled the high hopes which led to their inception. But it works its hardest wherever there is suffering; it hates vice but pities the vicious, and it has the human touch without condescension or disdain. The human touch! That is what so many of the Churches seem to have lost in the opinion of the very poor, who surely must be held to be the best judges of their own feelings.

We hope this appeal will be generously answered. The Salvation Army is one of the most living forces of our time in its care for the bodies and the souls of men.

A FURTHER STUDY ON ART

(BY A. A. MACAULAY)

In the last study Truth was held to be the touchstone of Art. It would be interesting to go further now and to divide Truth into sections thus:

True Feeling, Perception, Conception, Form, Live Colour, Composition, Hamony.

True Feeling

True feeling in regard to art is a very fine subject for analysis. On gazing at a certain scene or on meditating on a certain subject, thoughts and emotions arise. These may be transient or may be eternal according to the subject. For instance to take a very simple and much used subject for a picture—the Virgin and the Divine Child—The love expressed in motherhood has from the early days appealed to Christian artists. Cimabue, the master of Giotto, has left for us his conception. In our eyes, crude, out of drawing, stiff almost hard, and yet the grandeur of selfless love and baby innocence stand out. His pupil, Giotto, was able to put a little more beauty into his conception though perhaps not quite so such strength. The aim of this study is not to discuss the diverse paintings of the Madonna and Child, but to draw attention to the power of true feeling. After the Italian and Dutch masters' conceptions of the subject, the small prettiness of the Frenchman Bougereau, comes as a shock. In the place of the true feeling is a material sentimentalism. It is this same sentimentalism that has been for so many years the enemy of good music. Bougereua, in France, it had a host of contemporaries in England of the same calibre. Against this petty school of Bougereau arose the whole force of artistic intellect, towards the close of the last century Matisse, Pizarro, Cezanne, their followers, the Impressionists, the Cubists, the Post, Impressionists, the Turists, all the brains of the art world cried out against the idols of the public. During the Victorian era, the Royal Academy had gathered into its walls such insignificance, such petty appeals to passing emotions, that the great foundations of art had seemed to totter. As soon as real artists grasped the fact that the public taste had been stuffed and stodged with over-sweet doses, they whirled themselves almost panic-stricken along the opposite path. Just as the militant suffragettes broke down the rules of law and order so as to bring their cause before the eyes of the people, so did the artists break every canon of art. Give them the bitter, the ugly, the bold, anything, anything but sugar. The result was the amazed public was asked to gaze at distorted faces, mathematics, in the form of cubes, skeletons, bare facts anything that came to hand to be painted. "Is that Art?" cried the people. "Give us back our Leighton's, our Bourgereau's, our pretty chocolate box pictures."

But lo and behold a miracle! The public has discovered it cannot go back to mere prettiness. Wild and almost mad as the school of painting has been for the last twenty years it has raised up true feeling from its low position of mere sentiment.

IN MEMORIAM.

HUGHES—In loving memory of my beloved mother, Mrs. John Hughes, who died two years ago today, May 8th, 1918.

When the evening shades are falling
And I'm sitting all alone,
To my heart there comes a longing:
If she only could be home.
Oft and oft my thoughts do wander
To a grave so far away
Where we laid our darling mother
Just two years ago today.
Surrounded by friends I am lonely,
Amidst pleasures I feel blue;
A smile on my face and a heartache,
Aching and longing for you.

CANADIAN CLUB OF NEW YORK CITY

ANNUAL MEETING TOMORROW IN CLUB ROOMS BELMONT HOTEL

SUCCESSFUL YEAR EVERY WAY

PRESIDENT ARTHUR KNOWLSON AND D. R. HENDERSON FOR PRESIDENCY

(By Canadian Press.)

New York, May 10.—The annual meeting of the Canadian Club of New York will be held tomorrow evening in the club rooms in the Belmont Hotel.

The club has had a successful year both from the social and financial standpoint. The reports to be presented tomorrow night will show an increase in membership and a widening of the sphere of activities of the club during the past twelve months. A number of prominent Canadians, including General Sir Arthur Currie, delivered addresses under the auspices of the club, and the increased interest of New Yorkers in Canada and Canadian affairs was reflected in the large attendance at these events.

What is declared to be the only problem which officials of the Canadian Club have had to worry them will be thrashed out at tomorrow night's meeting. Ladies have very liberal privileges in connection with the club under the present rules. There are special parlors for members' wives and also a small dining room where they may hold luncheon parties. The majority of the social functions conducted by the club are participated in by the ladies. Some of the members take the view that the club should be more of a man's institution. They favor more "smokers" and fewer dances, and declare some of the ladies do not stay butin the rooms allotted to them, but wonder into the man's department; yes, even into the sacred precincts of the card room so that a man may not give vent to a good old-fashioned Canadian cuss in his own club without danger of being overheard by some member of the fair sex. It is said that these, and similar hardships, will be reviewed by the "men only" section of the membership at tomorrow night's meeting. The champions of the ladies will argue for the retention of the present privileges for members' wives, and an interesting debate is in prospect.

Arthur Knowlson, the present president of the club, and Douglas R. Henderson, are on the slate for the presidency. There will also be contests for all of the other offices.

SOVIET GOVT. WILL NOT ADMIT REPRESENTATIVES OF LEAGUE

Declares Military Considerations Will Not Permit—Newspaperman and Trade Unions' Delegates, However Will Be Received at Proper Moment—League Has Failed

(By Canadian Press.)

London, May 10.—A Central Soviet Morcow wireless announces that in view of the fact that certain members of the League of Nations are actively supporting Ukrain and Poland, warring on Russia, it cannot by reason of military considerations admit into Russia any delegation which includes representatives of those nations, although the Soviet supports principles of the league's decision to send an investigating delegation into Russia.

Failed to Protest.

Statement complains that the league has failed to protest against Poland's action.

Admit Newspapermen.

The message declares that the Soviet is ready to admit all newspaper representatives giving guarantees that they will not abuse the hospitality of the Russian people, and will afford facilities to British trades union delegation as guests of the Russian trade unions. It concludes by stating that a committee has been appointed, who, jointly with Tchitcherin, Foreign Minister, are authorized to admit at the proper time League of Nations' delegation without convoking a meeting of all the Russian Central Executive Committee.

AFTER RECKLESS MOTOR DRIVER

$2,500 FOR ARREST OF MOTORIST WHO STRUCK DOWN BROWN

Rewards totalling two thousand and five hundred dollars are now offered for the arrest and conviction of the motorist who struck down the late C. A. B. Brown in Toronto. The city has authorized $500.00; the Ontario Motor League $1,000; the Ontario Safety League $500.00; and the Toronto Automobile Trade Association $500.00. The Safety League is working on the question of reward and expects that other public-spirited organizations will increase this total materially.

PETERBORO CITY NOT HELD LIABLE FOR PROTECTION AT SIMCOE ST. CROSSING

Mr. C. R. Widdifield, City Solicitor, to-day received an order from the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada, ordering that the spurs of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company at Simcoe Street, leading to the premises of the Quaker Oats Company, be protected by watchmen, and that the cost of such protection be borne and paid by the Quaker Oats Company. It will be remembered that on April 15th the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada sat at Peterborough in order to hear the Application by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company in regard to protection at Simcoe Street Crossing, and to decide whether the cost should be paid by the City of Peterborough or the Quaker Oats Company.

J. D. Spence, Esq., C. P. R. Solicitor, Toronto, appeared for the Railway Company; F. D. Kerr, Esq., for the Quaker Oats Company and C. R. Widdifield for the City. The matter was gone into thoroughly and after extensive arguments the Board reserved their judgment.

The argument of the Quaker Oats Company was to the effect that it should not be bound to provide or pay for the cost of protection at Simcoe Street, because they still found it necessary to maintain watchmen at Hunter Street for the protection of their own workmen and customers.

Mr. Widdifield, on behalf of the City, argued that if the Quaker Oats Company found it necessary to continue watchmen at Hunter Street in order to protect its own employees and those doing business with it, that was a matter of its own concern, and to which the City should not be asked to contribute, and that these spurs are private tracks for the use of the Quaker Oats Company only and are not used by any other persons or for any other purpose except for the business of their Company; that by temporarily diverting the traffic to Simcoe Street no new danger to the public had been created other than that caused by the traffic on these tracks for the purpose of the Company only. That is to say, that the mere building of the temporary bridge and the diversion of traffic was not in itself a danger to the public and if these tracks had not been there no protection would have been required. This contention on the part of the City was alowed by the Board, and consequently the City was relieved from any cost or expense in the matter.

PREMIER AT OTTAWA WEDNESDAY

(By Canadian Press.)

New York, May 10.—Sir Robt. Borden will leave here tomorrow evening, arriving in Ottawa at noon Wednesday.

Sir Robert will at once take up the duties which for his health sake he was obliged to lay down temporarily in December last.

At Ottawa many people thought the Premier would arrive Sunday, but it was understood, however, by Sir Robert's intimate friends here, that he would spend some days in New York on his way northward from Asheville, North Carolina.

PARIS WILL SOLVE HOUSING PROBLEM

MILLIONS OF DOLARS APPROPRIATED FOR WORKMEN'S APARTMENTS

Paris, May 10.—Paris has taken in hand the housing problem and proposes to spend about $340,000,000 to solve it. It plans to build 1,476 new two-room workmen's apartments at once, with 950 more later. Many half-finished houses being built for wealthy persons may be requisitioned and turned over to workmen's families.

Shortage of housing facilities has raised a cry from many quarters, and to meet the situation many miniature "skyscrapers" have been built in Montmartre, much to the disgust of the artists. They have formed a parliament to discuss the question and have organized parties, which take their names after the art school to which they belong, the "Cubistes," the "Montmartrois," the "Sauvagisis," the "Dadaistes" and the "Gasieristes."

Some extremists are so enraged over the encroachment of the "skyscraper" builders into their district that they are urging all artists in the Monmartre to move to Marseilles.

EXPRESS TRAINS MEET HEAD ON

WERE TRAVELLING SLOWLY, HOWEVER, AND BUT LITTLE DAMAGE RESULTED

Cobourg, May 10.—Two C.P.R. passenger trains, Montreal to Toronto and Toronto to Montreal expresses, respectively, collided head-on shortly before [illegible] o'clock Saturday afternoon at a siding three and a half miles east of Cobourg. Fortunately both were traveling slowly at the time, as the siding where the accident happened is the place where the two trains customarily pass. It is surmised that the mishap was due to the failure of the air-brakes on one of the expresses. Two or three passengers received slight cuts, while all were more or less shaken up. All were able to continue on their journeys however. There was no serious damage to the rolling stock, although damage to the roadbed tied up the line until evening. Neither of the locomotives nor any of the cars left the rails.

They are Sir George Perley High Commission; J. [illegible] Toronto and G. G Cassels, manager of the Bank of Montreal, London.

PINNED BENEATH ENGINE'S TENDER

LOCOMOTIVE AND CARS PLUNGE DOWN 50-FOOT EMBANKMENT INTO RIVER

ENGINEER GILLIE IS MISSING

FIREMAN SCALDED—ACCIDENT ON CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS TODAY

(By Canadian Press.)

Frederiction, N.B., May 10.—Locomotive of a way freight train on the Canadian National Railways plunged into the Nashwaak River early this morning, two miles north of Marysville, dragging the tender and one freight car into the river with it.

Driver Missing.

Driver J. Gille, of New Castle, is missing, and it is believed his body is in the river.

John Estabrooks, brakeman, is pinned under the tender with only his head and neck out of the water, while frantic efforts are being made to lift the tender and thus release him.

Clifford Hughes, fireman, was badly scalded.

Cause of Accident.

Following heavy rain on Sunday a dam on the Nashwaak gave way and a rush of logs thus tore away the embankment causing the loss of the engine and cars which rolled down the embankment of almost fifty feet.

Traffic on the eastern division of the C.N.R. is tied up.

Declined to Amputate.

Several doctors who were in attendance at the wreck had declined to accede to Estabrook's wishes that his leg be amputated before he died but continued administering restoratives in the hope of keeping him alive until the wrecking crew were able to move the tender under which he was pinned.

Estabrooks Dies.

About nine this morning Estabrooks died before the tender could be raised because of other reckage piled on it, and it was only by cutting off his leg below knee that his body could be rescued from the water.

The body of Gilles was found under the boiler of the locomotive but cannot be removed until wrecking crew succeed in moving engine. He is married and leaves a widow and four children at New Castle.

Estabrooks is married and resides in this city, but has no children.

JUST FOUR NAMES FOR CLOCK TIME

EASTERN STANDARD, SUN STANDARD, CENTRAL STANDARD ADVANCED STANDARD

(By Canadian Press.)

Columbus, O., May 9.—Ohio will have four different names for its clock time this summer, and three actually different kinds of time. They are: eastern standard, sun time, central standard and advanced central standard.

The last mentioned is a name only, for its coincides with eastern standard time. The name came about through action of communities in Western Ohio deciding to advance their clocks one hour. It was the same as eastern standard time, but they preferred to call it advanced central standard.

About half of Ohio is on eastern standard time because the regular dividing line runs midstate from north to south.

When it is noon at Youngstown, it will be 11 a.m. at Cincinnati, Dayton and Toledo, but it will be noon at Hamilton and Springfield, which are but a few miles out of Cincinnati and Dayton. At the same time, it will be 11.30 o'clock sun time in some other places.

PRESIDENT CARRANZA IF CAUGHT WILL BE TRIED BY CIVIL COURTS

Revolutionists, However, Would be Pleased Were He to Succeed in Leaving Mexico—Plans for Land Settlement Simular to U. S. System—Establishment of Schools

(By Canadian Press.)

Agua Prieta, Sonora, May 10.—Should President Carranza be captured by the revolutionary troops, he must stand trial in the civil courts for any misdeeds of which he may have been guilty while chief executive.

General Calles, commander of the revolting troops in the northwest announced last night just before he left for Juarez, if Carranza succeeds in getting out of Mexico, the revolutionists will be pleased, however.

General Calles also said that a provisional president will be named to serve until the elections, in accordance with the plans of Agua Prieta.

Boost Settlement.

Revolutionists desire to acquire through purchase or legal procedure all big land holdings, which will be taken over by the new government and opened for settlement, under a plan similar to that used in the United States, according to General Calles.

Schools and Education.

A plan for the establishment of schools and educating the people is to be launched as soon as the revolution is settled, General Calles declared.

COTTON GROWING IN MESOPOTAMIA

SOIL AND CLIMATE IS PECULIARLY SUITABLE FOR THIS PRODUCT

(By Canadian Press.)

Oldham, Eng., May 9.—The British cotton growing association has received a report from an investigator to the effect that Mesopotamia is likely to produce a large amount of cotton in the next few years. This opinion is expressed by B. Crapper, vice-president of the Oldham Chamber of Commerce, who went to the east to investigate the possibilities of increasing cotton growing in Mesopotamia, Egypt and the Sudan.

Mr. Crapper has told the British Cotton Growing Association that Mesopotamia possesses soil and climate to grow excellent cotton but that its production is limited by its small population of 3,000,000 persons, lack of irrigatio nand transport facilities and the need of instruction in scientific methods of production.

Hesaid that the Gash delta in the Sudan afforded an opportunity for substantially increasing the production of Egyptian cotton but there was need of better transport facilities.

One of the drawbacks he found in Egypt was improper distribution of seed.

5 IRISH POLICE IN PLUCKY STAND

HELD BARRACKS OUTHOUSE AND ROUTED 300 SINN FEINERS

Dublin, May 10.—The authorities are continuing the policy of shutting down the small police barracks in the rural districts and sending the men to the larger central stations. Two organized attacks occurred at small barracks last midnight. At Cloyne, County Cork, the small garrison of seven, after a prolonged fight, was compelled to surrender, one of the men being wounded.

The other raid was more serious. It took place at the village of Newtown Hamilton, South Armagh, where 300 Sinn Feiners attacked the barracks garrisoned by five men. The fight lasted two and a half hours. The building was sprinkled with petrol and burned, driving the garrison into an outhouse where they continued their gallant defence. The raiders ultimately [illegible]

MURDER LEAGUE AT WORK IN EGYPT

BOMB THROWN AT FINANCE MINISTER IN CAIRO SATURDAY

UNIVERSITY STUDENT HURT

MINISTER ESCAPED INJURY, BUT HIS CHAUFFEUR WAS SLIGHTLY INJURED

Cairo, May 10;—A bomb was thrown at Hussein Darwiche the Minister of Works, as he was motoring homeward from his office Saturday evening. The bomb struck the gasoline tank of the motor car, slightly injuring the chaffeur. The minister, however, was unhurt.

A university student standing near the scene was mortally wounded by the explosion and died this morning. Two other students were slightly injured.

In the course of a melee between soldiers at midnight, when a lorry patrol was trying to suppress, some shots were fired and an European supposed to be an Italian, was kilet.

The servant of a British officer, recently killed has been arrested on suspicion of complicity in the crime.

The British troops in Cairo are restive under recent attempts at assassination, culminating last week in the murder of a lieutenant by four young Egyptians in one of the main thoroughfores. The assassins fired point-blank at a range of a few feet.

A few days ago, two British orderlies were shot and wounded. The police recently arrested a student agitator, and his confessions led to the arrest of others, who are believed to be directors of the so-called "vengeance gang," which is sending out "Black Hand" letters.

Searches of houses here have resulted in the discovery of Black Hand documents indicating a widespread seditious conspiracy in the provinces, according to the authorities. A number of students have been arrested in connection with the alleged plot. It is not believed the conspirators enjoy the confidence of the Nationalist Committee, with headquarters in this city.

St. Catharines City Council and Chamber of Commerce have agreed upon a joint housing scheme.

SIR RICHARD WINFREY HIMSELF IS A PRACTICAL AGRICULTURIST

Distinguished Visitor From Peterboro, England Gives Views on Land Settlement—Talks of Activities in Small Land Holdings Movement in Old Land.

Sir Richard Winfrey arrived in the city with his son, Mr. R. P. Winfrey, from Ottawa, this morning to address a meeting on behalf of the World Brotherhood Federation. H[illegible] in Parliament for a large agricultural constituency in the county of Norfolk, which he has represented thirteen years. He is very proud of his agricultural connections. His father was a farmer and his mother was a farmer's daughter. Sir Richard himself, although a newspaper proprietor, has always done a little farming himself, and consequently looks on himself as a practical agriculturist.

He tells us that owing to the high crease in the value of land, and the war and which still prevail in the Old Country, the farmers are doing well especially in his own district, where the land is exceptionally fine quality. During the last season the potato crop, which is one of the stable products, has been exceptionally remunerative. Many farmers produced ten tons of potatoes per acre and realized £14 a ton, equal to $60 of our own money. This made a total per acre on potatoes of $[illegible]. This fact together with the high price of cereal and fruit has resulted in a large increase in the value of land, and the large land-owners have been putting their estates on the market in unprecedented manner. Sir R[illegible] himself before leaving home sold some of his agricultural land at the high price of $[illegible] per acre.

Small Holding Move

He has always been a believer in what is known as the small holdings movement. That is the cutting up of the large farms into smaller holdings and giving the agricultural laborer a chance to climb the ladder and become his own master.

Twenty years ago he started an association known as the Lincoln and Norfolk small holdings association. This association has purchased land and in other cases leased it for a term of years for the purpose of dividing it up into small holdings of from five to fifty acres in extent. The association, of which he is the president, has now 260 tenants all of whom were once agricultural laborers, and now each has his own house and buildings and an average of about

MR. BURNHAM FAVORED FOR THE SENATE

Word was received from Ottawa this morning that a canvass in favor of Mr. Burnham, West Peterborough's member of the House of Commons, for the Senate is meeting with approval.

It is freely expressed in many quarters at the capital that Peterborough has for some time been entitled to representation in the Upper House, and that indications point to Mr. Burnham receiving the appointment.

INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS.

MR. BURNHAM, West Peterborough's member in the House of Commons, writes in criticism of the Pioneer's views on prohibition as follows:

"The Editor of the Pioneer:

"Your deliberate avowal of the doctrine of Force, as that is, of course, what prohibition is, in no respect differs from the avowal of a doctrine of Force by any other persons on their alleging that, in their opinion, it is for the best interests of the nation.

"You are defying the law of individual and moral responsibility, and, therefore, liberty, as established by God Himself. You are at once an infidel and a Bolshevist.

"You have a strange idea of people if you think that they will allow their natural rights to be rifled from them by you and your salaried pals, without recrimination. It is a mighty poor rule that does not work both ways."

The Pioneer, in reply, admires Mr. Burnham's outspoken, forceful way in expressing his ideas on prohibition, and evidently regrets that all are not equally frank. The Pioneer also says that Mr. Burnham stands lonely in his views. Well, we cannot concede that point, you know, for the daily press reveals quite an army of free-born citizens with ideas on prohibiton running in the same channel as those of Mr. Burnham.

The Pioneer also goes on to say that Mr. Burnham "represents a type of thought that is rapidly disappearing owing to the advance of Christian civilization, and the enthroning more fully in law the principle of 'brotherhood' and the 'golden rule'."

Now, if we know Mr. Burnham, and we should, there is nothing more to be desired by him than the practice of "the golden rule," which he most likely interprets in this way in regard to prohibition: There should be no law to deprive a man of his individual liberty any more than there should be an enforcement of one man's exrcise of that liberty on another. That is to say, Mr. Burnham would allow the use of fermented beverages, under certain restrictions maybe, but that privilege would not force the use of such beverages on any person. Mr. Burnham applies the rule, "do unto others as ye would they should do unto you," in this broad sense, and not narrowed in any way by fanaticism.

KNOCKING AT OUR DOORS.

ON JANUARY 15, 1917, Mr. A. C. Flumerfelt, of Vancouver, B. C., at a regular luncheon of the Canadian Club, Toronto, gave an interesting talk on Canada's producing resources awaiting development. Then, as now, the need of greater production was loudly proclaimed from the housetops, so to speak; now as then, in so far as Canada's vast agricultural resources awaiting development are concerned, the same vast areas of rich land still await cultivation.

Broadly speaking, the real wealth of a nation comes from the soil, from which are derived those commodities upon which the race depends for its actual livelihood. And its cultivation must be intensified, and, if possible encouraged, if Canada is to become substantially prosperous, if living, in the main, is to be cheapened in commensuration with that enormous natural wealth which is Canadians' heritage.

Now, let us take a glimpse of what Canada's agricultural opportunities really are, and in doing so we quote from Mr. Flumerfelt's address in 1917, when he referred to three provinces alone, and his figures are startling. Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba alone have a combined area of 485,000,000 acres. Assume that 246,-495,000 acres of this area wer under cultivation (about half the total area of the three provinces), and that the yield per acre was approximately the same as in 1913, it would represent 2,720,406,000 bushels of wheat, 3,151,369,000 bushels of oats, and 403,780,000 bushels of barley, in addition to a large quantity of flax and mixed grains. The International Institute of Agriculture published in 1914 the total production of grains as follows: Wheat, 2,697,000,000 bushels; oats, 3,286,000,-000 bushels, and barley, 1,164,000,000 bushels. Thus a little more than half the area of these three provinces, if put under cultivation, could produce approximately the total of the world yield for 1914.

This same authority from British Columbia had also sized up the agricultural situation in Ontario. Regarding the population of Canada, which, he argued, should be increased by a well-regulated immigration policy which would bring the right type of men to this country, he divided Canada in two by a line north and south through Peterborough. One-eighth of Canada's population is found between Peterborough and Hamilton another eighth etween Hamilton and Port Arthur, and one-fourth from there to the coast. And yet, in 1917, thousands of acres alone between Toronto and Peterborough were lying idle, and in the Province millions of acres were non-productive.

Now, have conditions materially changed since Mr. Flumerfelt addressed the Canadian Club in 1917? Not so, we think, on genral lines of agricultural production Taking this question as a whole in relation to available resources and the world demand for such, the foregoing figures are timely enough today for comparison between Canada's opportunities and her response thereto. We are told that farmers are apathetic this year about production; that they cannot get help. Our cities and towns are teeming with rural populations—men, and women, too, who have fled farm life for the attractions of urban residence; we are importing when we should be exporting, over-populating where living conditions are congested. So long as this principle obtains Canada is neglecting her inherent opportunities by neglecting the substance for a shadowy prosperity, the bubble of which is liable to be pricked at any moment.

Why should Canada import sheep from the United States for slaughter, mutton from Austialia, and also import about two-thirds as much wool as is produced in Canada? In 1916 we consumed 700,000,000 pounds of sugar and raised 37,000,000. And yet the sugar beet will grow in Ontario, in Manitoba and in British Columbia. Again, why should we import vegetables from the United States, apples and butter from Australia and New Zealand? These and other questions relating to importation were asked by Mr. A. C. Flumerfelt in 1917. Those questions are live ones today, and the answer is the same as then—too many people in our cities.

Back to the land must be a dominating policy in Canada if we are to increase in prosperity as Dame Nature is inviting us to do, and settlement on the millions of acres of rich vacant soil must be fostered. The Provincial Government has instituted a policy of consolidated schools, and that should help. Settlements should be more or less consolidated, especially in the great Northwest, where distances are so great, with conveniences centralized and of easy access. This would offer the advantages of companionship, social life, religious and educational training, the lack of which has in too many instances, where the isolation of farm life existed, driven men and women into urban districts, where populations were already in excess of living opportunities.

Canada has a great future ahead of her, if her tremendous wealth of agricultural land and mineral resources are brought into the service of her people "Made in Canada" is a slogan which needs to be enlarged to "grown and mined in Canada," before Canadians will be reaping full advantage of their opportunities to rival her great neighbor to the south as one of the biggest exporting countries in the world. From now henceforth Canadians should aim to be self-sustaining and exporters of many necessities of which Canada is importing far too much to foster her future prosperity

WORLD SHORTAGE IN SUGAR.

SUGAR, LIKE MANY other commodities, will soon reach a prohibitive price to many, if, indeed, it has not done so already, so for as some sections of the community are concerned. Not only are sugar prices high, but the article itself is growing scarcer. But if conditions enforce upon us economy in the use of this sweetening delicacy, cannot we not submit with grace and content? The diminishing of the sugar supply surely is not so alarming in its ultimate effect on the human system that we cannot, if needed, submit to the inevitable retrenchment in its use without fear of impairment of health or strength. Some people never use sugar in tea, coffee and such drinks, others do so to extravagance—so much so that the original taste of the beverage itself is obliterated. In fact, it is questionable if sugar can be classed as a necessity. Many an inveterate sugar gormand has cut his or her use of it down to quantities that are infinitesimal, and is the better for it. Over-indulgence in sweets today, the main ingredient of which is sugar, creates the dentists' harvest. In fact, an inordinate consumer of sugar suffers a reaction in his physical well-being, and any enforced curtailing of its use will come to him as a blessing in disguise. It's an ill wind indeed which blows good for no one, and this world shortage of sugar should not be taken with too much alarm. For sugar is not essentially an indispensable staple of life; it is more or less of a luxury which can be eliminated to a very considerable extent. We have been accustomed to it, 'tis true but custom can be moderated; and if feverish speculation is a large factor in the boosting of prices, why not retaliate by speculating in turn on just how much sugar we can eliminate in our daily menu?

Turning to the advertised world shortage of sugar, according to the May bulletin issued by the Royal Bank of Canada, Europe's crop of beet sugar in 1913-14 was 8,500,000 tons—sufficient for its own needs and affording a surplus for export. The crop of 1919-20 will not exceed 3,000,000 tons, the falling off in production being due to lack of fertilizers and fuel, industrial confusion, and the concentration of agricultural activities upon the raising of grain, which is needed more than sugar. So Europe is not producing enough for its own needs and will have to be partly supplied by importation. British India is not producing enough for its own requirements. The Java crop is 25 per cent. short. Cuba is the chief source of supply for cane sugar, and, owing mainly to drought, the Cuban crop this year will be smaller than last year, the estimate of 4,000,000 tons having been reduced to 3,900,000 tons.

The London Economist's Review of 1919 contains the following figures of the world's supplies of beet cane sugar: 1917-18, 18,400,243 tons; 1918-19, 17,853,730; 1919-20, 17,178,763; estimated decrease this year, 674,-967 tons. Since these figures wer first published the estimated supply for the present year has been cut down to a point 1,300,000 tons below last years' supply.

"It is interesting to note," says the Royal Bank's bulletin, "that the average annual increase in the world's consumption before the war was about 500,000 tons. Normally, therefore, annual consumption would have increased 2,500,000 tons during the last five years, a period in which production has actually declined over 3,000,000 tons, the gain in cane sugar not having come within that amount of the loss in beet."

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

MAKING DIVORCE EASIER.

(Le Devoir.)

There is a movement on foot in England directed to increase the number of legal causes for divorce. This is a natural tendency everywhere a reach has once been made in the sacred wall. And that is surely what will happen in Canada if Parliament, enlarging the present rule, adopts the Ross project of law. A double movement then will soon be made in order to apply the law to all the provinces and render divorce easeir. For the present the Province of Quebec is excluded from Senator Ross's measure, but it is none the less necessary that we should combat the proposal generally in the interest of the country, and particularly as a measure of protection for our own province.

AN OPPRESSIVE ANOMALY.

(Birmingham Post.)

Viscountess Astor wants legislation to enable a widow to marry the brother of her dead husband. She asked in the British House of Commons, if the Home Secretary was aware of the urgent need of an alteration of the marriage laws to make it legal for a woman to marry her dead husband's brother. Our one lady M.P. has chosen a good cause to champion, which, as she pointed out, is of especial importance to thousands of war widows in this country. The legal bar to such unions is as unscriptural and as wrong from every point of view as was the long, obstinately upheld veto of marriage with a deceased wife's sister. No more palpable absurdity was ever perpetrated by a parliament of feeble compromises than that the one disability should have been abolished without the other.

J.H. BURNHAM'S RECORD IN PARLIAMENT

(COMPILED FROM HANSARD REPORTS)

War Tax on Medicine.

On February 1st, 1917, on the question of patent medicines, Mr. Burnham said:

"Suppose three people go into a chemist's shop; one is a poor man, the other two, we will say, are evidently not poor. The poor man buys, because he has to buy, a bottle of patent medicine, and pays four cents war tax on it. The second man buys a camera, on which there is no war tax. The third man, perhaps, has a young lady with him, and buys a two or threedollar box of sweets on which there is also no war tax. Some one may say that the ingredients are taxed, but that is true of the three purchases.

"I am also told that the doctors of the present day sometimes prescribe patent medicines to the extent of probably 25 per cent. of their prescriptions, and if any portion of the medicine is taken out of the patent medicine bottle there has to be a corresponding amount of war tax paid upon it. I have never heard of anyone except the honorable member for North Oxford wanting to buy a bottle of patent medicine because he regarded it as a luxury. This purchaser I refer to buys it because, perhaps, he has a little child at home who needs it. He sees the man come in and buy a camera, and the other man come in and buy a box of sweets, while neither has to pay a war tax. He is infuriated; and who can blame him?"

A Friend of the Veterans.

On May 21st, 1917, the question as to the scale of pensions of returned soldiers came up, on a resolution by Mr. Burnham, "that in the opinion of this House it is desirable that this House should favor legislation providing for those who have fought for their country, so that they may not be compelled to resort to unsuitable measures to eke out a livelihood which should be provided by the country for those practically disabled and unable to find suitable employment...... That this matter should be considered immediately...... and, therefore, that pensions and other provisions on behalf of soldiers and their families should automatically fluctuate as prices do, so that the amounts thereof be not curtailed or decreased as at present by the rise in prices to the detriment of those for whom Canada is under obligation to provide."

This resolution led to a long discussion, during which it was admitted that the report issued by the joint committee of the Whole House on Pensions had some very glaring defects, notably, that a man who had 60 per cent. disability got 60 per cent. disability pension, but a man who had anywhere between 60 and 70 per cent. disability got 60 per cent. disability. In other words, the disabled soldier was cheated out of the pension corresponding to the disablement between 50 and 60 per cent. and 60 and 70 per cent., and so on. This Mr. Burnham characterized as a fraud on the soldier. Amid considerable excitement, it was promised that the pensions would be reviewed with a view to changing some of the most serious discrepancies.

Trent Water Powers.

Mr. Burnham: "I think we may safely say that the synopsis which the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals, Mr. Graham, has given of the history of the Trent water powers is both clear and reasonable up to a certain point...... The history of the Trent water powers may be summed up by saying that when that district ceased to be a revenue-producing district from a timber point of view to the Ontario Government, they were quite willing to get rid of it to anyody who would take it. The Dominion Government had an interest in it, the interest of navigation. They were then beginning to develop the waterway known as the Trent Canal. They wanted control over the water, and in 1905 and 1906 the two governments, the Ontario Government and the Dominion Government, came together and completed transfer. At that time there appeared to be, and there were, a great many valuable water powers. Now, I find serious fault with the late Government, with the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals, and with his predecesor in that they did not foresee the necessity of retaining for the people of Canada ownership of these same water powers. They had no objection to devising a policy of the utmost value in theory to the people of that district, not, however, for the Government of Canada to carry out, but for other people to carry out. Here was a lot of water power that would soon be exceedingly valuable to the public, but strange to say, although it seemed to be an extremely valuable asset, the Government alienated it for next to nothing. There is where the inexcusable blunder took place. The result has been that we have had recently to buy back our own water powers for eight millions and a half in order to develop and round off a policy which should have been foreseen and provided for by any reasonable government in the past."

Then followed a very long debate in which the leading members of both sides took part, endeavoring to show, without bringing forward any evidence, that there must have been some reason for such an outrageous lease. But the pages of Hansard and the records of the Department fail to show that it was anything more than a common job for the benefit of favorites who included in their number senators and some of the richest men in the Province who were willing to make a large sum at the expense of the people, and then, no doubt, wonder that the people want to get back at them.

3—Add Burnham

The Menace of Bolshevism.

In the session beginning February 20th, 1919, Mr. Burnham spoke upon the causes of Bolshevism and the necessity of realizing that if those in charge of governments did not administer the affairs of the people impartially the people would of necessity have to administer them themselves. This has happened in Russia—and it will happen elsewhere. He suggested that it would be a good idea for the various dominions to exchange eminent men as Governors-General. He urged upon the Government the necessity of doing away with speculation in vacant land, as it meant a great hardship upon the people, who felt it in a very great many ways, and it had the effect of shutting the people out from the land. Mr. Burnham also spoke upon the desirality of preserving the immense peat bogs in Canada as fertilizers, and pointed out that many years before he had called the Department's attention to discoveries in this regard.

Grand Trunk Railway Purchase.

When this bargain came to be discussed before Parliament, it was found that instead of leaving the value of the various stocks, such as guaranteed, preferred, common, etc., to arbitration, as had been ordered by Parliament, these stocks were loaded by the proposed bill with the statement that they should not bear more than a certain rate of interest. This statement had the effect of giving the stocks a standing and a value before the arbitrators which they did not have before at all. It was a straight declaration to the arbitrators that these stocks, such as guaranteed and preferred, should bear four per cent. (4 per cent.) and that that was what the Dominion of Canada was prepared to pay for them.

Mr. Burnham: Is it true, as my hon friend (Mr. Fielding) has said, that the fact of the Government's entering into this bargain means the penalizing of the people of Canada to the extent of many millions of dollars with regard to the guaranteed stock? Is it true that the stock—which appears on the market at a certain sum, and for which, if nothing intervenes, its owners would get that sum—will, on account of the Dominion of Canada's entering into this agreement, receive from that circumstance a very large additional value representing the difference between the market price a few days ago and par? (the market price a few days ago was 45).

The Minister responsible for the bill (Mr. Meighen) did not return to the chamber till the vote took place. Mr. Burnham voted against the Government's bill as he considered it a hand-over to the speculators, who would seize upon the Government's guarantee and acquire, by option or otherwise, a hold upon millions of stock, out of which they would make a sum of not less than fifty or sixty millions of dollars. If the matter had been left to arbitration, as is only fair under all circumstances and in all business transactions, the country would undoubtedly have been saved this large sum. The Government's guarantee in black and white was a guarantee to the financier on the watch and on 'Change that would enable him to pick up this stock without fear and wholly unknown to the people who were only too glad to give it up. This is the way millionaires are made.

Aid for Veterans.

On the 6th of November, 1919, the committee, composed of members of both sides of the House, which had been appointed to consider the soldiers' re-establishment, brought in a report. It has been stated by the Minister (Mr. Calder) bringing in the report, that the committee must have the report adopted and would not take any amendments, and that the Government would resign if the report was not approved. Mr. Burnham, however, made a strong attack upon the report as unfair in many particulars, and contended that no government should at any time shut out the soldier from making representations as to his condition on any pretence or threat whatever — the soldiers deserve too well of the people to be treated in that way, and suggested that the matter be left open, that the report be acted upon as far as it went, but that the dissatisfaction of the soldier should leave him opportunity to make further representations. Other members joined in this attack and the result was that the Government agreed to leave the matter open and that whatever representations, evidence, etc., the soldiers wished to make to the Government, they should make straight to the Government, and it would be dealt with directly and without any further reference to a committee.

It will be remembered that when the Government pleaded that the various loans had already exhausted the Government's credit with the people, Mr. Burnham suggested that if a soldiers' loan were floated it would be taken up with enthusiasm by the people, and that the Government need not worry on that account.

In the session of 1920 Mr. Burnham has endeavored to bring about the stabilizing of the working day, viewing—as very many men concerned in business do—the unsettled condition of the working world, both with regard to its hours of working and its rate of pay, as having a very serious effect upon business and upon the prosperity and the organization of the nation.

Mr. Burnham steadfastly contended that Governments should organize the relations of the people of a nation to each other and adjust them in the same way that the various departments of any great business are organized and adjusted leaving to the people freedom of action and natural progress without allowing it to degenerate into rankness and disorder from which not only business suffers severely, but the mass of the people suffer still more. The nation is a joint-stock company, not a number of unrelated and antagonistic groups.

A COURSE THAT WILL OFFER FEW TERRORS

CORRESPONDENT WRITES ON COMING OLYMPIC EVENTS IN BELGIUM

Antwerp, Belgium, April 30.—Players in the Olympic golf championship events to be held in connection with the Olympic games, beginning on July 12 will compete on a course that offers new terrors to the steady, straight driver who is an accurate judge of pitch and distance, but which promises untold difficulties to the man with the slightest tendency to hook or slice.

The Associated Press correspondent recently went over the course, which is that of the Antwerp Golf Club, at Cappelinbosch, about 15 miles from Antwerp. There are no pronounced elevations, but the 18 holes of the course are dotted all about with natural, bumpy little hummocks of hard earth—most of them on the fairway—while sand-pits and annoying little cup-like depressions vie with artificial bunkers, tiny water ditches and particularly nasty stretches of trees or rutty highroads on or bordering all the fairways.

"It is a course which should be played over several times by any one who intends to compete in a real match," the correspondent was told by one Scotch officer—a scratch man at St Andrews—who found difficulty some times in making the round in bogey, which is 78

The length of the course is 5,820 yards—2,885 yards for the first nine holes out and 2,935 yards in, with bogey 39 both out and in. The longest hole, the fifth, is 540 yards—the cleanest, widest straightaway of the lot, though even this offers occasional pitted or wooded difficulties, and the shortest is the 12th, 150 yards, a nice little pitch for the accurate mashie but so full of trouble in the shape of ditches, bumps and traps that only the scratch men generally make it in the 3 strokes set for bogey.

Just now, after the spring rains, the entire course is spongy, but, during the paking hot weather which is customary at Cappelinbosch in July, it becomes hard and bumpy, giving much bound and roll to the ball.

The greens, which have been well kept despite the war, are composed of a thin mossy grass, fast but here and there, ust a bit bumpy. Most of them are protected bjy pits or ditches before and behind, and are particularly dangerous for overshots.

The course has been well arranged, with only one possibility of cross-fire or interference in its whole length, this being where the tee shot for the fourth hole crosses one of the greens, but the tee is considerably elevated and most of the drives go well over.

The ground rules are, as yet, a bit incomplete, no provision being made for the wagon ruts in the dirt roads bordering or crossing some of the fairways, but these are expected to be changed before the Olympic matches.

Joseph Webb of Cobourg was fatally hurt when struck by a C.P.R. train on a level crossing.

Fifty-seven entries have been received for the British ladies' golf championship tournament which begins at Newcastle, countp Down, Ireland, next Tuesday. Two are Canadians.

Egyptian Nationalists' Attempt to Intimidate Rulers of the Country

AN attentive observer of the trend of Egyptian politics during the last year must have come to the conclusion that those who purpose to build a national independence are choosing as part of their foundation a remarkably unsuitable material in the form of a policy of intimidation. As has been frequently pointed out, the prevailing habit of a large proportion of Egypt's inhabitants of allowing the few to do the political thinking for the country has been assiduously exploited by the principal wire-pullers in the present movement, and thus it is that, through taking advantage of circumstances peculiarly favorable to their plans, they have been able to present, especially in the press, a superficially united front.

That this unity, so largely advertised in accordance with their method of propaganda, is but superficial has been the conviction of many intimately connected with Egyptian life. What, however, the prime movers perhaps overlooked was the fact that those very circumstances which appeared to favor their campaign were inducing among the masses a change of thought, as has been and is being experienced in other countries, so that the habit of carelessness is slowly giving way to a more intelligent interest in matters outside the village circle.

To counteract this tendency intimidation has to a growing extent been resorted to, an instance of which is shown in the methods employed for deterring notables from giving evidence before the Milner Commission. Thus, any well-known person receiving a member of that commission is aware that in all probability, a delegation of lawyers and students will cross-examine him on the subject and have the interview published in a press almost entirely in Nationalist hands. In a country in which public opinion counts for so much, it is scarcely surprising that few natives care to risk such publicity, or that, if it cannot be avoided, they will see that the report shall be inocuous from a Nationalist standpoint as far as they are concerned, whether it be in accordance with the actual facts or not.

More violent means of intimidation have been evidenced in the recent bomb outrages on public ministers, not to mention the method of sending out anonymous threats of violence. Few temperaments can withstand the strain of experiencing such methods, and certainly that of the average Egyptian is not included in the few. It is not surprising then, that the policy of two Ministers, the former Premier, Mohamed Pasha Said, and the former Minister of Public Works, Ismail Pasha Sirry, should have been affected by the recent outrages.

The former, who took up office shortly after the March (1919) disorders and thus rendered a most valuable service to the British authorities, was attacked in July, and in November resigned on the grounds that the coming Milner Commission, against which the Nationalists had issued threats of strenuous opposition, was undesirable. Yet it was decided to send out the Milner Commission last spring. The latter's resignation came about a month after a bomb had been thrown at his motor car by a hitherto unknown assailant. In explanation of his action Sirry Pasha stated that he was of the opinion that the Soudan irrigation projects might be detrimental to Egypt and that an Egyptian had not been appointed as member of the special commission which is examining the whole problem, both objections, be it noted, fully in line with Nationalist opinion.

As the Government immediately complied with his demands by appointing Hussein Wassik Pasha, a retired irrigation official, and by promising full publicity for the projects, the Minister necessarily withdrew his resignation, but within two days he had resigned again, this time on another ground. Yet it was only a few days before the bomb attack that he had given lectures to the Government officials explaining and endorsing the very projects in question. In contrast, the attitude of the present Premier, Yusef Pasha Wahba, a Copt, and one of the most capable men in Egypt, is all the more commendable, as in spite of his narrow escape a few weeks ago he still holds office, and it is hoped will continue to do so for some time to come.

The efforts of the National press to improve the party's standing are frequently most amusing. A few days ago an article appeared in the Nazaru, most naively suggesting that the greater part of the sum of £163,000 which had been collected on behalf of the Kitchener Memorial Fund should be transferred to the Nationalist delegation. Up to the present few memorial funds in Egypt appear to have realized their original object, and the proposed disposal of a fund contributed to by people of many nationalities and political opinions is delightfully simple.

At the same time another daily paper published a most glowing description of the success of a tour of Nationalist delegates in the provinces for the purpose of raising subscriptions. In as far as the account of their reception at one town goes the journalistic license of multiplying the size of the crowd by 10 was recognized as the writer happened to be at the spot when the delegates arrived. The crowd of youths and boys was noisy, it is true, but nevertheless, if the report was officially sanctioned by the delegates, Nationalist subscribers should insist on a reliable audit of the account of their fund.—Christian Science Monitor.

Erich Von Falkenhayn Had His Big Reputation Destroyed Before Verdun

ERICH VON FALKENHAYN deserves to rank with Hindenburg, Ludendorff and Mackensen as one of the four outstanding leaders produced by Germany during the war. By instinct a planner and theoretician rather than a field general, he was admirably qualified to fill the post of chief of staff, which he held from the fall of 1914 to the summer of 1916. During this period the German armies won notable victories in Russia and in the Balkans. But Falkenhayn met his Waterloo at Verdun. He was responsible for the conception and execution of this great and unsuccessful attack, and it was a tradition that no German commander could survive a serious defeat on the Western front. Verdun was as fatal to Falkenhayn as the Marne had been to his predecessor, Moltke. His failure there cost him the confidence of the kaiser and he was speedily replaced by von Hindenburg.

In his book, "The German General Staff and Its Decisions, 1914-1916," Falkenhayn reveals himself as a thorough soldier, whose outlook upon the war is determined and limited by strictly professional considerations. His few political observations simply reflect the viewpoint of the most reactionary sections of German opinion. At times the general is unconsciously humorous, as when he declaims about the deep guilt incurred by the United States in shipping munitions to the Allies or says, quite gravely, that "we had to look into the question whether it was advisable to compel Roumania by force of arms to adopt an attitude more in keeping with her moral obligations."

GEN. VON FALKENHAYN.

From a military standpoint Falkenhayn's work possesses very considerable value. It is simpler, less prolix and less entangled with personal controversies than Ludendrff's. It reveals many interesting facts about the development of Teutonic military policy during the first two years of the war.

Falkenhayn was a pronounced "Westerner" in his orientation. In other words, he believed that Germany could win the war only either by crushing the French on the Western front or by striking a deadly blow at Great Britain by means of the submarine weapon. He was skeptical of the possibility of winning any decisive triumphs in Russia, in Italy or in the Balkans. Consequently he was always inclined to concentrate his main forces upon the Western front and to grant troops as sparingly as possible for other fields of operation. This policy brought him into constant conflict with the Austrian General Staff, which was interested chiefly in dealing with Austria's immediate enemies, Russia and Italy. The indifferent quality and repeated defeats of the Austrian troops, however, always gave Falkenhayn the advantage in dealing with their generals. After the ill advised and unsuccessful Austrian offensive against Italy in the spring of 1916 the German General Staff took the entire direction of the war into its own hands, with little regard for the feelings of its blundering ally.

The relations between Falkenhayn and Hindenburg were decidedly strained. Hindenburg, who was in command of the northern wing of the German troops operating against Russia, invariably wanted more troops than Falkenhayn was willing to give him in order to carry out his own far-reaching military ambitions. The difference of opinion between the two generals, which at times reached the acerbity of a personal quarrel, was based upon fundamentally different conceptions of the proper objects of the Russian campaign. Falkenhayn did not believe that Russia could be crushed to the point of surrender, and was opposed to using up more and more troops in holding an ever-widening front. Hindenburg, on the other hand, believed that he could bring about the annihilation of the Russian army if he were given an adequate supply of men and guns.

Falkenhayn cannot be accused of a lack of frankness. He shoulders full responsibility for advocating both the attack on Verdun and the initiation of unlimited submarine warfare. He reproduces an interesting memorandum supporting these policies which he presented to the Kaiser at Christmas, 1915.

WAR AND ART.

Fresh Creative Force May Be Felt in the Future.

As for the action of the world's great war upon the world's great art, it is a theme too vast for easy handling. It was said in the spring of 1915 that the Quartier Latin had ceased to produce, having nothing which breathless humanity could pause to look at. Death took its toll of artists, and month after month saw the blighting of hope, as men died with their work undone.

Mr. Pennell, an acute but not a sanguine observer, says plainly that new inspiration—as a result of the conflict—is not to be hoped for. Yet if national fervor was fed by the simplicities of art, by the cartoon, the verses of the trench, the "half articulate songs" that set the soldier's blood a-tingling, it is reasonable to believe that the high tide of human passion will not ebb before impregnating a lethargic world with fresh creative force.

Rodin, brooding over the darkest hour and minimizing no peril or calamity, spoke with heroic assurance of the future: "Our young soldiers and our old cathedrals fall that there may flourish again a youth, pure, ardent, healthy, hostile to materialism, keen for spirituality and that a renewed and sublime art may spring from the soil washed and fertilised by blood." Agnes Repplier, in Art and Life (New York).

He Was "It."

Not long ago, relates the Youth's Companion, a traveling salesman visited a certain small town and sold the proprietor of its general store an order of jewelry. When the jewelry arrived, it was not as represented, and the merchant consequently returned it. But the wholesale house nevertheless attempted to collect the bill, and drew a sight draft on the merchant through the local bank, which returned the draft unhonored. The wholesalers then wrote to the postmaster, inquiring about the financial standing of the merchant, and the postmaster replied laconically that it was O.K. By return mail the wholesalers requested him to "hand the inclosed account to the leading lawyer" of the place for collection. This is the reply that they received: "The undersigned is the merchant on whom you attempted to palm off your worthless goods. The undersigned is the postmaster to whom you wrote, and the undersigned is the lawyer whose services you sought to obtain for your nefarious business. If the undersigned were not also the pastor of the church at this place he would tell you where to go."

In Formosa.

Formosa is a beautiful island with somewhat unbeautiful natives who are addicted to the habit of head-hunting. This makes exploring dangerous. The Japanese, however, have made things safer by installing a live wire barrier a hundred miles long that restricts the savages to a limited territory and makes their gory pastime difficult. Other equally unbeautiful but very useful natives of Formosa are the water buffaloes. "No rural Formosan landscape is complete without at least one of these bulking creatures," says the writer. "And wherever there are buffaloes, graceful white herons are seen perched on their backs. It seems, indeed, that each buffalo has a particular heron for a pal, who takes care to rid him of smaller friends just as devoted perhaps, but less desirable."

Too Much Name.

It was a proud day for the Jenkinses and the Smiths. The first grandchild was being christened and a host of admiring uncles and aunts had turned up to witness the great event. "And the name is to be—" asked the clergyman suavely as he stood beside the font with his armful of silk, lace, ribbon and red face. "Augustus Philip Frederick Charles Snooks Chesterfield," replied the godmother in one long breath. "Dear me!" exclaimed the clergyman. Then he turned to the sexton. "Some more water, Mr. Perkins, if you please."

The Cheerful Friend.

A certain coster had been laid low with a bad attack of flue, so one of his pals thought he would go and visit him and cheer him up. "Bill," he said with a beaming smile as he stood by the side of the invalid's bed, "I've brought yer a few flahrs—I thought if I was too late they'd come in 'andy for a wreaf. Nice little place you 'ave 'ere too," he added, gazing round the room, "but as I ses to meself when I was comin' up wot a orkard staircase to get a coffin dahn."

A CLOSE-UP OF VILLA.

Thrilling Story of Capture by the Mexican Bandit.

Now that "Pancho" Villa is reported to have been seized by his own men and held for a reward of $25,000, it is interesting to get the following description by a correspondent of the London Times, who was in the grip of the Mexican bandit during one of his raids last winter. He is a not unentertaining desperado, according to the writer, who says:

"Those of us who were in the mining camp of Santa Eulalia on January 22 last had an experience we do not want repeated. I was awakened very early that morning by four armed men who stood at my bedroom door with their six-shooters and rifles levelled at me. The leader, in a deep husky voice, demanded 'Armas y dinero.' I pointed to our six-shooters, which were on a small table by my bed, and the money I told them was in a bag under my bed. They immediately helped themselves, and they were not slow in appropriating many other things, including a camera, an excellent pair of field glasses, two watches, a couple of pairs of boots, and a pair of blankets. The bandits then departed, the leader in a very loud voice charging one of his band to guard the door and see that no one left the house. However, they did not leave us long, but soon returned to escort us down to the patio at Santo Domingo.

"By invariably giving the inhabitants something free, Villa has always been able to keep the greater number of the people on his side, for they come in for a share of the plunder.

"But to go back to the patio at Santo Domingo, where we seven foreigners were guarded by Villa's officers. In front of us were collected about 2,000 men employed in the mines. Three or four men rode up, the leader dismounted, and Francisco Villa, arrayed in a brilliant scarlet, yellow and green blanket, stood by one side, facing the workmen. He certainly looked the very picture of health and was clean-shaven, but for a heavy moustache, which he continued to stroke with his right hand. When not thus employed I noticed that his fingers kept opening and closing on the palm of his hands, as though he were itching to do something. Villa did not take the smallest notice of his foreign guests, but immediately addressed the workingmen somewhat as follows:

"'Mexican brothers, you all know me, Francisco Villa. I am the biggest bandit in the world. I have come to help you. I am the champion of justice. What do you want me to do? Shall I blow up these mines or will you demand your rights?'

"The men replied that they would demand their rights.

"'Then,' said Villa, 'I will not blow up the mines, but what I shall do with these foreigners I have not yet made up my mind. I don't know whether I shall hang them or shoot them.'

"We were then ordered back to our offices, where we were guarded by several armed men, while the rest broke open the safes and ransacked our houses, stealing anything they wanted. At a neighboring mine one of the bandits put on a suit of dress clothes over his own dirty clothes. After much palaver, our cook was allowed to make us a cup of coffee and to bring us some dry bread. Most of us popped a few pieces in our pockets, not knowing when, if ever, we should get another meal. Opinion seemed to be about equally divided as to whether Villa would kill us or demand a ransom. Personally, I was convinced that he would take the latter course, so I made up my mind that a long march lay ahead of me. All this while one of these gentry was lying full length, boots and all, on one of our beds. Fortunately they did not discover our small stock of liquor, for had they got drunk they would probably have committed other excesses and, moreover, would have increased the anger of Don Pancho, as Villa is familiarly called, for he is a very strict abstainer.

"Then I noticed a Mexican whom I knew walking up the hill at Francisco Villa's back, for I was standing close to Don Pancho. This man turned round, and I recognized Antonio Cabello, the former Gefe Politico (Mayor) of Santa Eulalia, but his face was blanched and distorted. Where, I asked myself, is he going? Where, indeed? One of Villa's soldiers was on either side of him. 'Adios, mi general,' said he, but Don Pancho never so much as turned his head. Cabello was led up the hill about fifty yards and then, when under an aerial tramway, he was made to mount a horse. A rope was put round his neck and the other end fastened to the aerial tramway. The horse was flicked away and down fell Don Antonio, never to smile again."

THE FIRST COST of an inferior watch is a long way from being its last cost.

Watchmakers nowadays receive high wages. Their bills are apt to be large for time spent in trying to repair low-grade watches. It is far better to buy a Guaranteed Watch from us and save repair bills.

The Chinese Poor.

So far as the frugality of Chinese is concerned, nothing is wasted in China. Even the dirt of the streets is sold to farmers, who turn it into a fertilizer.

Prices of dirt vary in their kinds. The ash of burning wood from a cooking stove of a Chinese family has a good value. It brings a good amount of tea money to the house boy of a big Chinese family who sells it to gardeners for fertilizing flower plants. When a peculiar cry is heard the house boy seems to understand that an ash-buyer has come. Immediately a big quantity of kitchen dirt and stove ash, which he has stored up, is brought to the buyer. Thirty pounds of the waste material of this kind brings about 10 or 15 cents.

During the last few years the demand for waste foreign magazines, pamphlets, newspapers, etc., has been exceedingly great among the Chinese hawkers, who buy different kinds of very old foreign magazines nearly at one third of what they cost originally. Their use probably is to make soles for sandals for the poorer classes of Chinese to wear in place of shoes in good weather.

If the waste magazines contain some war pictures they will be applied to better use than making of sandal soles. These people are too poor to get themselves educated, and since they do not know how to read and write, the best way for them to get some knowledge of world affairs seems to be through the medium of the pictures in foreign magazines. Many scavengers buy such things from the house boy of foreign residents.

Another interesting collection of waste material in Shanghai alone has brought not a small amount of money to many poor children and women. This is the collection of cigarette ends. After filling a tin of about two inches in diameter and four inches deep it is brought to a native tobacco factory, which buys it for five to seven cents. The factory manufactures this tobacco into cigarettes, and thus makes a good profit out of the material which it buys at such a low price.

GREATER PRODUCTION PROBLEM

An American view in conditions today in that country, applies in a large measure to conditions here, and Fredric B. Washburn, president of the Franklin Savings Bank, says:

"Labor will find itself out of some of its present fat jobs if it doesn't increase its daily production, in the general opinion of the bankers of the country who finance manufacturing and other industries," said Mr. Washburn yesterday.

He has just returned from a conclave of the executive council of the American Bankers' Association at Pinehurst, N. C., where financiers from forty-three States met to discuss their part in solving national problems.

"It is not a question of what industrial managers want to do, but of what they may have to do," he explained. "They'd like to see their businesses grow indefinitely, of course. But certain hard facts must be faced.

"Labor sometimes misunderstands the banker or is misled as to his interest in industry. The banker's real function is to be a medium through which industry can borrow the public's money for carrying on or extending its operations. By these operations the public lives, both by drawing its wages or income and by buying its necessities and luxuries from them.

"The war caused great inflation, by compelling very large and rapid expansion in many industries at a time of a shortage of both labor and material. For the additional plant, equipment, stock and payrolls this expansion required, industry had to borrow from the banks.

Banks Are Short of Money.

"So heavy has this borrowing necessarily been that the rate charged on loans has gone up to an abnormal degree as money became scarcer and scarcer; and in some parts of the country the banks actually have no more money to lend, on any terms.

"That means that industry must soon finance itself out of current income, in many places. And that means that it must increase its income by increasing its output or it will have to contract somewhat instyead of expanding. It won't be able to get in the money to meet its present big payrolls unless it has more to sell.

"Bringing down the cost of living depends, thus, chiefly on labor's producing more—at least as much as it used to before th ewar upset normal conditions," Mr. Washburn declared. "The other serious factor in prices, especially food prices, in the days ahead, is the inability of the farmers to get help. He can neither raise nor harvest the crops the country must have unless he can get men."

Can't Get Men on Farms.

"It is a question of how many men he can hire, not of what he has to pay them, with the farmer. Mr. Washburn said he was told by men from Oklahoma, Kansas and Minnesota, Iowa, the Dakotas and other great agricultural States.

"It is just as bad right here in New England," he added. "The nearby food sources will shrink in a way very uncomfortable for town dwellers unless enough people can be found to work the farms. High wages in factories have drawn the workers to the cities and left the farmer helpless."

Faith in the sound sense, energy and general intelligence and good will of American workers gives the bankers confidence in the country's being able to meet the serious situation before it without disaster, Mr. Washburn said. There is no cause for alarm, he believed: but there is urgent need of the mistake of underproduction being corrected without losing a moment more. It is the only thing, he insisted, which can stop the upward course of prices and start them on the way back to where they used to be.

"I believe the majority of the workers of the country are beginning to see with clearer vision the necessity of greater individual production," Mr. Washbarn declared. "If they will only assert themselves, begin to act and work as their better intelligence directs and retire from the direction of those policies many of the leaders who either from ignorance or viciousness have misled these men normal conditions will gradually return and, perhaps, a serious catastrophe be avoided."

TO ESTABLISH VENERAL CLINIC

BOARD OF HEALTH ASKS COUNCIL TO TAKE THIS STEP

At the regular meeting of the Board of Health this morning a communication was read from Dr. Yelland, who wrote on behalf of the Peterborough Medical Society giving a resolution passed at the last meeting o fthat body to the effect that they were in favor of the establishing a clinic for the treatment of venereal diseases. They also strongly favored the idea that the clinic should be situated somewhere in the down-town district.

The above communication re-opened the discussion on the venereal clinic question, and after much discussion on the matter, a resolution was moved by Dr. McPherson and carried that the Board is of the opinion that the establishment of a venereal clinic in the city of Peterborough is desirable and that Dr. MacPherson and the chairman be appointed to interview either the City Council or the Finance Committee on the matter at the earliest possible moment. The two were mentioned so that if the committee met before the next meeting of the Council the delegation from the Board would go straight to the committee with reference to the question.

A communication was also received from Dr. Wood asking whether the Board was in a position to supply free treatment for veneral diseases, and on the motion of Dr. MacPherson it was decided that a reply should be sent stating that at the present time the Board was not able to supply any such treatment, but that they hoped soon to be in a position to do so.

On the motion of Mr. Lynch, it was decided to vote $35 to Dr. Morgan on account of the assistance which he rendered the M.O.H. during the smallpox epidemic and also during the illness of Dr. MacPherson.

A resolution was also passed confirming the appointment of Ed. Morden and his wife as caretaker and cook at the Queen Mary Hospital at a nannual salary of $700. This disposes of a matter which has been open for some time and which has caused the Board much inconvenience and worry.

It was brought to the notice of

EAST PETERBORO LEAGUE ASSURED

Jake Solomon's East Peterborough League is now an assured fact, there being only Norwood to hear from in connection with it.

There was a meeting of the fans at Keene on Friday night, and as a result of this meeting Jake was informed on Saturday that Keene would be right there for the word "play ball." They seemed to be quite enthused over the idea.

An application has also been received from West Douro, which is desirous of entering the league.

Indian River has also written to say that they will be right there, and taking the condition all round the prospects are the brightest.

LEPER COLONY "KOENDOES"

(By Captain J. Befring)

The terrible disease known as leprosy prevails to an alarming degree on the island of Sumatra as well as on the other islands round about. It is touching and heart-rending beyond measure to hear of the various means resorted to by the different races of natives in their endeavors to prevent the further spread of this loathsome sickness.

The Batakkers, that is the native people who occupy the Highlands of Central Sumatra, who, until a few years ago were cannibals applied such drastic measures that the very thought of them makes one shudder.

As soon as a member of their race was discovered to be suffering from leprosy the unfortunate one was locked up in his own dwelling and then the house was set on fire so that the leper with all that he possessed was burnt to ashes.

On the Island of Banka which lies on the South East of Sumatra, the natives took their lepers on board of one of their native prauws (boats) and rowed them well out to sea and then threw them overboard to perish neath the waves of the ocean.

In the district of Palembang in the south of Sumatra the natives show a little more human feeling, though there the treatment meted out to the people of their tribe who become lepers is far from being free from cruelty or suffering.

Here if one shows signs of leprosy he is driven from his hut in the native village and hunted into the vast virgin forest which covers so much of this great island. There he must live as best he can on the wild fruits, herbs or roots which he can find. For a time until the disease has made him weak or has completly eaten away his hands and feet, he may be able to clear a small patch of the dense bush and grow such food as will keep him alive.

Slowly, however, his strength must give way and the end which he saw from the first surely overtakes him and so he dies of starvation in the great loneliness.

The Government a few years ago found on enquiry into the condition of the lepers in this district that there were at least eight hundred poor wretches suffering and hoping for a speedy end in the forests around Palembang.

A few of the leading Europeans of the little town which is the centre of the district moved with compassion towards the sufferers formed a committee to take up their cause and bring some relief to them.

A sum of money was raised and the Government granted a piece of ground on an island which lies in the midst of and near to the mouth of the River Moesi.

Then these gentlemen appealed to the Salvation Army to undertake the erection and management of a Leper Colony on this island.

Arrangements were completed and the Salvation Army sent in their officers to carry forward the work thus begun by this committee of humane men.

When we (the witer had the honour to be one of the three officers) reached the colony we found that already there were a few patients huddled together in a miserable hut. There was also a house for the officers but besides this there was nothing to be seen but the great wild forest.

The river and the swamps round about were literally alive with crocodiles. Wild boars came nightly prowling around our dwelling and more than once in the still early hours of the morning we were woke from our sleep by the howls of the tigers close by the dense bush.

An interesting collection of snakes which I have were all captured quite near to the house.

Now, however, after two years of labour and effort the place has become somewhat like a spot that is inhabited by man.

Hospital accommodation for one hundred and nintey patients has been built; a nice house for the assistant officer; a room for the treatment of patients and their wounds and suitable accommodation for medicine and instruments have been erected. Then store-rooms; a kitchen, where all the cooking is done; dwellings for native assistants; a general dining room for the patients and a hall for meetings, etc., have all sprung up, not as by magic, but as the result of hard work and devotion.

The grounds have been drained and leveled and in the place of the wild bush and dense creepers a garden has been laid out and made beautiful with all sorts of lovely tropical flowers and palms.

Now a plantation of cocoanut trees is beng planted which in a few years will be yielding a rich harvest as a reward of industry and courage.

The crowd of patients which is now to be found on the colony from a truly happy community. Friends might readily and somewhat naturally ask how it is possible for such a people to be happy. Can people be happy who are always suffering and that from a disease which so far appears to be incurable, poor souls whose only earthly prospect is death and a place in the little grave-yard behind the colony.

To understand, you must remember that without exception everyone of these lepers had been banished from their homes and their fellows and driven into the forest to live or die like wild animals. A few branhces and some handsfull of grass formed all the shelter they had against storm and rain. Wild fruits and a few scratched out roots formed their only food.

Now they have a comfortable house and home, good food, the necessary medicines and their bodily suffering relieved as far as that can be done by the medical aid which is placed at their service.

UNMARRIED MOTHERS

Oshawa, May 10.— Representatives from the Women's Council of Oshawa waited on the Town Council the other night and made a number of suggestions. The ladies stated that it was felt that the viewpoint of the ladies should be presented to the Town Council.

The women urged the adoption of the curfew bell, the employment of a policewoman, and a proper place of detention for girls. It was claimed that last year there were at least thirty unmarried mothers under the age of 17 in Oshawa. Supervised playgrounds were asked for and it was claimed that there was not sufficent lighting and supervision in the town parks, and consequently they were hotbeds of immorality.

Lt. L. L. Brown, M.C., supt. of the Dominion Forest Products Laboratory attached to the University of British Columbia, has been appointed Provincial Lumber Commissioner for Eastern Canada, with headquarters at Toronto.

STORY OF FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE

When she was a very little girl she endeared herself to the neighbors by being ever helpful and thoughtful and watchful of their needs and desires. The story is told that one day as she was walking through her father's estate with her friend the pastor she came upon the old shepherd, who was having great difficulty gathering his flock together.

"Where is your shepherd dog?" asked little Miss Florence (that was what all the country folk called her. "I thought he always helped you call in the flock."

"Ah, indeed," sighed the old man. "I fear he will never help me again, for some bad boys have broken his leg with stones and the poor dog is in such pain that I am going to shoot him tonight to put him out of his troubles."

Tears came to the little girl's eyes. "Shoot him," he said, "Oh, poor old Cap." The walk back to the house was a very silent one, and as they approached the dog kennel Florence timidly asked if she might see the dog and find out if his leg were really so badly injured. At first the dog yelped with pain and anger when he saw her come near him but when he realized that she was coming to help him he ran forward trustingly and placed the wounded leg in her hand. The pastor examined the wound and it was soon discovered that the leg was not broken, but badly bruised.

"Get some water and some soft cloths and we may be able to fix poor Cap's leg so that he will be more comfortable," he said. "Careful nursing should pull this good dog around in a few weeks."

"May I nurse him?" asked Florence, her eyes glowing in anticipation. "I should try very hard to be a good nurse."

And so it was that one of the very first patients that one of the greatest nurses in history had to care for was Cap, the old shepherd dog.

Florence was born in Italy in the city of Florence, May 15, 1820, for which city she was named. All her life Florence Nightingale planned to aid the comfort of others; all her life she strove to alleviate the suffering of the sick, and to care for the distressed. When in 1854 the Crimean War brought sorrow and suffering into the homes of many people in England and in Europe Florence Nightingale volunteered her services to her country and offered to go into the heart of the war-infested and disease-ravaged country and care for the wounded and dying. After the officers had made their rounds of the military hospital wards and after the nurses had gone to their well earned rest, Florence Nightingale would take her candle and make a tour of the wards to see that no one had been overlooked or neglected. These nightly visits to the wounded soldiers won for her the title of "The Lady of the Lamp," and the soldiers came to look forward to this quiet hour of the day with longing and anticipation.

But this unselfish work undermined the health of Florence Nightingale and she returned to England worn out from the hardships she had cheerfully endured. The rest of her life was passed in poor health, and she died some years later leaving behind her fond recollections in the hearts of her many friends.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA, HONORS PETERBOROUGH CITY, ENGLAND

Sir Richard Winfrey Lunched at Empress Today by Citizens.

Peterborough, Canada, honored Peterborough, England, in the person of Sir Richard Winfrey, M.P., and his son, at a luncheon in the Empress Hotel this afternoon. The gathering was small on account of the accommodation available being limited, but the reception committee of the City Council counteracted this fault by making the gathering a completely representative body and inclusive of all the city and county departments and officials, members of the Board of Trade, representatives of the Trades Council, Great War Veterans' Association, the Ministerial Association, and in fact practically every local organization, as well as mnay other prominent citizens.

Alderman Gordon, acting in the unavoidable absence of Mayor McIntyre, took the chair, with Sir Richard seated next to him.

Alderman Gordon.

After the inner man had been satisfied, Alderman Gordon, on behalf of the City Council, extended the hand of welcome to Sir Richard Winfrey. He explained how Sir Richard represented Peterborough England, and on account of this fact he was invited to come to Peterborough, Canada. Sir Richard was speaking on the World Brotherhood Movement at St. Paul's Church tonight, and it was expected that a large representative committee would be present to support him. Before closing, he wished to welcome Sir Richard and present to him a book of views of this city on behalf of the Council, and which was engraved in gold with his name.

Judge Huycke.

Alderman Gordon then called on Judge Huycke to speak on behalf of the people of Peterborough. In opening, Judge Huycke said it was a misfortune that we knew so little of each other. Conditions were very different. Peterborough, England was an old city, while our Peterborough's history hardly went back one hundred years. He welcomed Sir Richard not only as a citizen and representative of Peterborough, England, but because of his own personal worth as a citizen of the Mother Land. (Applause.) Although they did not know, perhaps, as much as they ought to of Peterborough England, yet they were all citizens of the great British Empire. Our boys went over and fought side by side with the sons of Peterborough England, for a common cause, and they were thus united.

He wished the citizens of Peterborough, England, every joy and blessing. Other citizens of Peterborough would be gladly welcomed in the same way. He also welcomed him for the magnificent cause of brotherhood for which Sir Richard was working. If this brotherhood did not come, the sacrifices of the last five years would have been in vain.

In conclusion, he again welcomed Sir Richard Winfrey to this city and trusted that his short stay here would be full of pleasure.

Sir Richard Replies.

In reply, Sir Richard said that he deemed it a great privilege to accept their kind hospitality. When he left home he had quite made up his mind to visit Peterborough, Canada. Coming to a new town like this he could draw distinctions which it was not possible for those who had not seen both Peterboroughs to do.

Peterborough, England, was a very old town, with a cathedral 1,200 years old, dating back to when Peterborough was a swamp.

City Hall Old.

The Peterborough city hall was built 800 years ago. On the 9th of November, when they elected their mayor, the public were invited, and it was necessary to shore up the butter market underneath to prevent the building collapsing.

He brought warmest greetings from Peterborough, England, of which he was the oldest councillor.

His War Record.

Looking back over the years of the war seemed almost like a dream. Seven days after was was declared he was called on the telephone to read the Riot Act on account of attacks on German pork butchers in Peterborough. That was his first experience of the war. Next, a Red Cross committee was formed and much work done in that regard. It was the duty of this committee to meet all trains and give the wounded soldiers going through refreshments. Two hundred and fifty thousand wounded soldiers passed through Peterborough during the war, so that the work entailed was onerous.

Eulogizes British Farmer.

He spoke in glowing terms of the support of the farming community for war causes. Cattle, sheep, produce, etc., were given freely, and in one auction sale $20,000 was raised in this way. There was also much work done in connection with the care of many Belgian refugees.

Corporation Not Old.

Peterborough had a corporation not as old as Peterborough, Canada, dating only from 1874. Before that it was managed by town commissioners.

Sir Richard stated that he got more pleasure from administering laws than in making them, and he was a strong believer in wise administration. A good law may be placed on the statute books, but was of no effect unless wisely administered.

It was his duty during the war to join Lloyd George's ministry, in which he was parliamentary secretary to the Board of Agriculture. In his capacity he was instrumental in passing the Corn Production Act.

Six Days From Starvation.

At one time in 1917 England was six days from starvation, and it was an anxious time for those in authority. The Act compelled farmers to grow cereals, and compelled the plowing up of grass land, increasing cultivation by two million acres.

Drastic powers were given to the authorities, but in most cases the farmers loyally carried out instructions and enormously increased production of potatoes, cereals, etc.

Objects of Visit.

His object in visiting Canada was three-fold — first, to regain his health, which was broken by war work; secondly, on behalf of the Brotherhood Movement, and finally, to study the Canadian soldiers' land settlement scheme so as to be able to advise Britishers on this subject. He thought that Canada was in the same position as the Old Country in that they must make the rural life of the country more attractive and prevent rural depopulation.

It we were as an Empire to prosper, it would be only by keeping a virile rural population.

Sir Richard thanked the citizens of Peterborough for the beautiful souvenir, which he would value highly and would show to the other councillors of Peterborough, England. When he returned home he would reciprocate by sending views of his city. In conclusion he again thanked them for the kindness he had received at their hands.

At the conclusion Ald. Gordon announced that tonight Mr. Ward, the head of the Brotherhood Movement would also be a speaker at the mass meeting in St. Paul's Church.

Tours City.

Sir Richard was then taken in hand by the Board of Trade and driven around the city to see the various points of interest.

Weddings count many at this time of the year, and the problem: "What shall we give the fair daughter about to leave the home nest?" asserts itself with trying insistency.

CALEDONIANS WON FROM CAN. WOOLENS

The football match between the Caledonians and Canadian Woollens on Saturday afternoon at the Exhibition grounds was a very one-sided affair, the Scotchmen adding another game to their string of victories by a score of 7-0.

The winning team were at all times throughout the game vastly superior to their opponents, and there never was any hope for the Canadian Woollens, who, in spite of the desperate game they played could get no where near the Caledonian goal.

JEWS IN TORONTO PARADE STREETS

MONSTER CELEBRATION OF EMANCIPATION OF THE HOLY LAND

Toronto, May 10.— Never since the armistice has "The Ward" been so generously decorated as it was yesterday, when Toronto's Hebrew population fittingly celebrated the emancipaton of Palestine from Turkey rule and the restoration of the country to the Jews. Bunting streamed from houses and stores, and Isaac and Rebecca strutted about in their "store clothes," buttonhole and corsage flauntingly emblazoned with the flags of the Allies, the Union Jack predominant. Services in the synagogue were well attended.

Police officials of West Dundas Division characterized the procession held as one of the largest in the history of the city. Throughout the afternoon the main streets of the downtown section were thronged with marching, shouting celebrants. Motor cars by the hundreds blocked both sides of the streets. At Spadina Avenue and Dundas street the traffic was so dense at one time that the cars from every direction were halted in their progress. Police officers jumped into the fray and helped to start the wheels of progress moving again. A dozen cars suffered damage when vehicles to the forefront of the long string on the south side of Dundas Street backed up, causing numerous rear-end collisions and cries of alarm. After strenuous effort the police managed to disentangle the "tie log" and release traffic.

thirty acres of land. The rental of the association is about $25,000 annually. Sir Richard has lived to see many of the men who started with little or no capital, make, by their own industry a sufficient competency to retire upon and hand their holdings over to their sons.

Dividing Up Farms

When he got into Parliament fifteen years ago he immediately became asociated with the Board of Agriculture, acting in the capacity of private secretary to the then president of the board, Lord Lincolnshire. Lord Carrington is one of the oldest members of the British aristocracy. Lord Lincolnshire, who is a large landowner in the county of Lincoln, is also an enthusiastic beleiver in the small holdings, and with the assistance of Sir Richard Winfrey he has divided many of his farms up among the working people.

So impressed were they with the value of the movement in preventing the rural depopulation under which the Old Country was suffering that they brought about legislation, and passed what is known as the small holdings and allotments act in the year 1908, which empowered the county councils to purchase land from the large land owners and create smaller farms. This movement has been in operation for some twelve years and has been most successful.

Help Ex-Soldiers.

When Lloyd George formed his Government he asked Sir Richard Winfrey to join it in the capacity of Parliamentary secretary to the Board of Agriculture. And during Sir Richard's tenure of office he was responsible for the passing of the Land Settlement Act for ex-service men. This is a development of the small heldings movement and not only provides small farms for those who have served in the British forces but also capital to farm with. Each man is eligible for a state loan equal to the amount that he can put up himself. That is if he can put up $500 himself another $500 is lent to him through the local banks for the purpose of equiping his holding, purchasing horses implements and fertilizer. In the Old Country ex-service men do not purchase the land, but are becoming state tenants with absolute fixiture of tenure so that no capital is necessary for the purchase of the holding. In this respect the English method differs from the Canadian method. Here, the Land Settlement Board lend out men 90 per cent of the money to purchase holdings to be repaid over a term of twenty-five years.

Sir Richard has been at Ottawa to interview Mr. Black, chairman of the Land Settlement Board, and he proposes before leaving for home to visit land settlements in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia so that he may have a first hand knowledge of Canadian methods, and be able to advise any Britishers who desire to emigrate to this country.

An Administrator

Sir Richard is not only a legislator but has taken an active part in administration having been a member of the county council for many years and also a member of the Peterborough City Council, a town about the same size as Peterborough, Ontario, for a period of twenty-five years. He was mayor of Peterborough during the war, and he naturally took a leading part in all war activities. He was chairman of the Red Cross Committee and of the Belgian Refugee committee, taking charge of no less than 200 Belgian refugees for four years. He represents in the city council what is known as the north ward which is a purely industrial section of the city, most of his constituency being railway servants. It was in this ward that he started the brotherhood movement seventeen years ago, and part of his mission to this country is to help on that movement in Canada.

A World Brotherhood Federation was started, which has its second congress in Washington next October, and held its first congress in London, England, last October. At that congress there were many delegates from Canada and the United States present. He will explain the growth of this movement at a mass meeting held in St. Paul's Church tonight.

WILSON URGES THAT DEMOCRATS ADOPT THIS AS CAMPAIGN PLANK

Washington, May 10.— A call to the Democratic party to go into the campaign standing four square in favor of the treaty of Versailles and against the Senate's reservations, was issued tonight by President Wilson in a telegram to Oregon Democratic leaders, made public at the White House.

Declaring that the party had "the honor of the nation" in its hands, the President said that the Lodge reservations were "utterly inconsistent" with that honor, as well as destructive of the role of world leadership which the United States must assume.

The only true Americanism, the Americanism, the President said, was "that which put America at the front of free nations and redeemed the great promises which we made to the world." It would be a violation of such promises, he said, to attach reservations to the treaty which "whittle down or weaken it as the Republican leaders of the Senate have proposed to do."

SEVENTEEN'S LEAD SERVED AS PRIVATE

A STAR NONE SHOULD MISS AT GRAND THEATRE TONIGHT

When one hears that Thomas Kelly made his first theatrical appearance with Virginia Harned and E. H. Southern in "The Light That Lies in Woman's Eyes," one wonders how he can play and look Willie Baxter in "Seventeen."

But it must be stated at the outset that Mr. Kelly is still very, very young, and began acting as soon as he could talk. After a season with Harned and Southern he joined Miss Ethel Barrymore's Company playing with her for three successive seasons in "Cousin Kate," in which he played the young brother, "Bobby," in "Alice-Sit-By The Fire," playing Cosmo Grey and in a revival of Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines.

During the summer of 1[illegible] he was a member of the American company that went to London to play "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," one of the most notable successes ever achieved by an American company and play in England. Mr. Kelly played Billy Wiggs opposite the Lovey Mary of Bessie Barriscale, now a well-known picture star. He left during the London run, returning to America to play in Maxine Elliot's company for a season, the play being Rachel Crother's "Myself Bettina." He also played several engagements with Ben Greet's Company in Shakespeare and spent a season as the Young Caliph in "Kismet."

At the outbreak of the war he en- a year in France with the 58th Artillery, C.A.C. Returning to America he was engaged by Stuart Walker for the part of Willie Baxter in "Seventeen."

HOW TO KEEP UP WITH THE JONESES

GUS HILL'S ANSWER TO THIS PROBLEM IS A SCREAM

"Keeping Up With the Joneses" is the title of the new Gus Hill offering which is to hold the boards at the Grand Theatre Wednesday evening only. The play, which is a combination of music, fantasy, novelty, startling surprises, dancing, and containing a chorus of pretty and fascinating young women, calculated capable of gracing any Broadway stage, is founded on the popular cartoons of Pop Momand which appear daily in the New York Globe and hundreds of other newspapers throughout the United States. It was Mr. Hill who first conceived the idea of transferring newspaper comics to the stage as attested by the phenomenal success of "Bringing Up Father," etc. The new offering is surrounded with a beauty chorus and from all accounts is the most sensational hit that has been presented hereabouts in years. The cast is a large one containing thirty capable people.

BLANCHE SWEET COMING TO GRAND

The Grand Theatre is delighted to bring beautiful and talented Blanche Sweet before the public again in her newest picture, a seven part Special Pathe Feature, entitled "A Woman of Pleasure." It will be shown for 3 days commencing Thursday.

After a long retirement necessitated by a nervous breakdown, Miss Sweet came back to the screen recently, more fascinating and lovely than ever, in "The Unpardonable Sin." Then Jesse D. Hampton induced her to autograph a contract calling for her services as the centre of attraction in pictures with stories specially selected for her. "A Woman of Pleasure" is the first offering of The Blanche Sweet Productions.

James Willard's celebrated English melo-drama that ran for three seasons at the Adelphi Theatre, London, supplied the story of "A Woman of Pleasure," which has been scenarioized by George Elwood Jenks. The action takes place along the English coast and in British South Africa, where a Zulu uprising furnishes lots of thrills. The story touches upon the eternally interesting eternal triangle. Wheeler Oakman, Wilfred Lucas, Wesley Barry and Spottiswoode Aitken are prominently cast.

Map for Guidance of Strangers.

Apropo the suggestion that London borough councils should display maps of their districts for the benefit of strangers, why not copy the example of Berlin, and erect "Urania Towers."

These towers, which are dotted about Berlin, are about 15 feet high, and contain a synchronized clock, barometer, thermometer, and hygrometer, and a large scale plan of the district, with a smaller plan of the whole of Berlin inset. In addition are shown the addresses of the nearest police, fire, and ambulance stations, and other information useful to residents as well as strangers.

Their upkeep is a charge on the local rates, but they are practically self-supporting, as a portion of the available space is let for advertisements. There are nearly a hundred towers altogether, and each clock is wound and regulated automatically daily from one central station.—Tit-Bits.

Cornish Tin Miners.

The men who work in the Cornish tin mines are a class by themselves, and all their differences are adjusted by the stannary courts, as they are called from the Latin word stannum, says an exchange.

These curious courts have existed in their present form since the middle of the thirteenth century, and, in simpler form, much earlier; and the miners claim to be free from all other jurisdiction, "except in matters affecting the land, life or limb."

MASARYK'S VIEWS.

Speech By the Czecho-Slovakia President.

President Masaryk's speech to the National Assembly of Czecho-Slovakia has been received in this country. In the course of the address President Masaryk said:

"The war and its consequent peace have brought about a new era for mankind and humanity. I have always been of the opinion that the humanitarian program is not a mere abstraction, but is a reality, indeed we have evidence tending to show that all the peoples of the world have awakened and are organizing for future mutual development. Therefore it is the duty of our (Czecho-Slovak) public men to grasp the organization and development of the whole human race. It is our duty to synchronize our national aspirations with the aspirations of mankind.

"There is one rule for us to follow in the economic and political interests of the republic—to pursue a European, humanitarian and a world policy—and thus be truly Czecho-Slovakic and Slavic.

"Within the bounds of our country we have considerable portions of other nationalities and this affords us an opportunity to make our republic an excellent example of true humanitarian practices.

"The language question and the natural difficulties in its solution should not frighten us. For a modern, democratic state language is significant only in administration. We will correctly solve the problems of languages and minorities if we will make them questions not of politics, as was the case of Austria-Hungary, but proper subjects of administration.

"I consider the republican form of government a great advantage, in fact a distinct political idea. It is an achievement to attain a republican form of government. Not that I do not realize the defects and dangers of republicanism and democracy yet I decided in favor of a republic with entire consciousness. Due to the vicissitudes of war and consequent political changes, I made known to the Allied Powers, in the spring of 1916, my conviction that our people were becoming republican in their sentiments. I firmly believe that we are ripe for a republic. By that, I do not infer that we do not have to safeguard our republic, but on the contrary we must defend it and build it up carefully and thoughtfully.

"Not only or national humanitarian problem, but the entire situation of Europe and mankind imposes on us social reforms. This is the principal task for our internal existence both as a nation and a state. The social evolution is going to be an evolutionary revolution and it is a great error to think that a social revolution can be brought about through the subjugation of the bourgoisie."

Diphtheria Anti-Toxin.

It was before the Rome Congress in 1894 that Roux presented the case of diphtheria antitoxin so thoroughly that it was at once accepted by authorities throughout the world. Before the serum era the mortality from the disease varied from 50 to 100 per 100,000 inhabitants. Since that period the figure has been less than 20, and often less than 10, says the Medical Record. The hospital mortality throughout the world now runs from 10 to 15 per cent. of those stricken.

During the five years of warfare the number of soldiers attacked by the disease was about 30,000 in all the hospitals, and the total number of deaths about 600, or 2 per cent. Before the use of antitoxin Paris lost from 14 to 45 inhabitants weekly from the disease. She now loses, and has for many years, from two to 12 a week; or, in other words, the former minimum has become the maximum. Indeed, for the past ten years the maximum has not exceeded seven weekly. Naturally during the twenty-five years the population has increased notably, no account being taken of this fact in the statistics.

No one to-day can doubt that diphtheria antitoxin has made good. The enormous number of repeated serum injections of all kinds made during the war has brought home the fact that the dangers have been grossly exaggerated.

A MARTYR TO SCIENCE.

Dr. Vaillant of Paris Makes Great Sacrifices.

In all the annals of medicine in France no more courageous and self-sacrificing career is chronicled than that of Dr. Vaillant, famous as an X-day specialist. Soon after the X-ray became known, Dr. Vaillant set about improving the method of its application and to introduce it in general use in the French hospitals.

Dr. Vaillant's devotion to his work began to impair his health after a few years. As happens occasionally, his constant exposure to the X-ray affected his skin and cancer developed. To arrest its progress, two of his fingers were amputated. But he kept at his work, the cancer recurred again and again, and since ten surgical operations have been performed on him. He lost his left arm under the knife recently, and only two fingers of his right hand remain.

Maimed as he is Dr. Vaillant says that his losses have been humanity's gain; that he is ready to sacrifice even more to advance science, his material recompense—which he did not seek—is 1,000 francs a year (about $200 normally). This is less money than is paid to persons employed in the wards of the hospitals where Vaillant once worked and healed the sick. "Republics are ungrateful." "Dr. Vaillant's friends strove for years before French bureaucracy recognized his supreme usefulness, but, last year, President Poincare in person, bestowed the Legion of Honor on Vaillant.

Thirty thousand persons suffer from cancer in Paris alone; here it causes 3,000 deaths each year. The professors of the Pasteur Institute have said that the employment of two half grams of radium (15.42 grains), would go far to check the spread of cancer in Paris. So the authorities have appropriated 2,600,000 francs to purchase this seemingly trifling quantity of the rarest and most expensive metal in the world. The radium will be kept in the University of Paris; physicians of reputation will be able to use its emanations to benefit their patients.

C. D. Gibson Takes Lease of "Life"

"LIFE" has a new owner. He is the man who, as a boy thirty-four years ago sold his first picture to the the paper and received $4, and his name is Charles Dana Gibson. If Life does not occupy the same position in American life that Punch does in England, it is at least the chief humorous weekly on this continent. It has been remarkably well edited throughout its career. In the war it had as fine a record as the Providence Journal, though it attacked the Hun with the lance of ridicule and not the club of denunciation. On this account Life has come to be something of a national institution, and thousands of people are keenly interested in any changes in its editorship or ownership. Mr. Gibson, too, is something of a national institution. He is not the foremost American artist, but for many years he has been the most popular. He has probably earned more by drawing the pictures of pretty girls and athletic young men than any artist of his generation. He has a lovable disposition and a host of friends. Everybody will wish him success with Life.

Charles Dana Gibson, native of Flushing, L.I., and son of Charles De Wolf Gibson, began drawing at the age of eight, and even before that he was making paper silhouettes with a pair of scissors. He had no stern parental disapproval to contend with when he desired to study art. On the contrary, and in violation of all standards of fiction, he had encouragement and praise. He entered the New York Art Students' League at the age of eighteen, and toiled long and earnestly before he had made sketches that he would show his friends. One evening he went to hear "The Mikado" and a cartoon suggested itself to him based on that lovely song, "The Moon and I." He set to work at once and produced a picture of a dog howling at the moon. The idea was not extremely subtle, but there was a laugh in it, especially as practically everybody knew the song. He took his picture to New York, and climbed many flights of stairs to the art rooms of Life. There he met Mr. John Mitchell, the art editor. Mr. Mitchell smiled at the picture, and asked Gibson to return the next day. He did so and received $4.

But Mr. Mitchell gave him even greater pleasure when he asked him to produce any other drawings he had for inspection. Back he came with a dozen. Mr. Mitchell looked them over and said, "Not so good as your first, my lad; not so good as your first. I'm afraid we can't use them." But he spoke so kindly, as indeed Mr. Mitchell always did, that the pang of the refusal was partly assuaged. Nevertheless, Gibson could not be expected to immediately concur in this unfavorable verdict, and he has told that as he left the building he made a vow to himself that some day he would own a paper of his own, and that the editor of it would make no difficulties about accepting his work. As the days went by the fact that he had had one drawing accepted by the leading humorous paper in the United States bulked more largely in his reflections than that he had had a dozen rejected. He continued to work hard, with the result that quite often he sold a sketch to Life ~~or~~ some other periodicals. They were mostly of a humorous nature, but better drawn than most of the "comics" of to-day.

Frequently he drew girls, and the girls gradually merged into one girl. Nobody needs to be told what the "Gibson girl" is like, and the "Gibson girl" was not the first girl that Mr. Gibson drew. Slowly he approached the face and form that represented his idea of beauty, even if it may have had no living prototype. By this time he was under contract to Life and was receiving good pay for his work. He did not call his creation the "Gibson girl"; he left this to the public. By 1893 the type was famous. Everybody was talking about the "Gibson girl." And thenceforth Mr. Gibson was doomed to keep on drawing "Gibson girls" and "Gibson men," of stern clean-chiseled beauty, for the rest of his days. His statuesque creations set a style. Girls in New York, in London, in Paris, began to dress themselves and wear their hair and carry their china according to the pictures in Life. The ladies of the stage unblushingly copied them. One after another sought fame by coyly admitting that she was the "original Gibson girl," and the good-natured Mr. Gibson rarely denied. It is said that at this time, when he was still a bachelor, he received more offers of marriage than any other eligible man in the United States.

When he did marry Miss Irene Langhorne, of Richmond, a beautiful and accomplished girl, the world at once immediately asserted that she was the "original Gibson girl." Her husband properly regards her as the most beautiful woman in the world, but has pointed out that he was drawing Gibson girls before he met Miss Langhorne. Perhaps there was no original of the Gibson girl. Maybe Mr. Gibson made her up out of his own head. The feat, we believe, is by no means beyond him. A few years ago he announced that he was through with his black and white drawings, and that he intended to enter the field of color, but we have not seen any specimens of his work in this line, and from the fact that he has come back to pen and ink we assume that the experiment was not encouraging. Mr. Gibson has made a fortune out of his art. He received $100,000 from Collier's several years ago for a few drawings to be made in Europe. Success has not spoiled him. He is a staunch friend, and criticism of his art does not proceed from anyone who knows Mr. Gibson personally.

Maestro E. Sestero, who claims to be a distinguished musician of Toronto, was arrested on three charges of fraud.

VETERANS' FOOTBALL TEAM WIN FROM DE LAVAL IN SCORE OF 1-0

Veterans One Goal the Surprise of Game—De Laval's Goal Keeper Was in a Too Leisurely Mood.

The Great War Veterans looked more like a football team than they have looked so far this season when they defeated the DeLaval aggregation at the Exhibition grounds on Saturday afternoon by a score of 1-0. The score would have been a great deal heavier had it not been for the wonderful work in goal of Jones of the DeLaval team who saved many a sure shot.

First Half

The toss was won by the DeLaval who elected to play with the sun at their backs, and with a slight advantage of wind for the first half. Whatever these advantages were they were unable to put them to the slightest use at any time during the first half, and this period was one of complete idleness for the Vets' goalie, who lounged against the goal post watching the fun up at the other end of the field. From the kick off the Vets were on the aggressive carrying the battle right against the DeLaval goal and giving Jones a warm time of it in preventing a score. Once in a while the ball would pass from the Vets to their opponents, but on these occasions it rarely got past the centre of the field before the Vets had it again and were pressing the attack forward in a desperate endeavor to gain a counter with the elements against them. They should have scored several times too, but it seemed that when it came to placing the shot right in the net the Vets fell down, time and time again.

About half-way through the first half Evans, for the Vets, who played a magnificent game on the whole, missed a sure shot against an open goal. If he had placed the shot as it should have been placed nothing could have prevented the Vets getting a counter. A few minutes later Evans again shot for the goal, and this time his shot was acurate and was only saved by the magnificent work of the goal keeper, which brought cheers from the spectators irrespective of what team they were supporting.

Struggle at DeLaval Goal

Shortly after this point the game was enlivened by a fierce attack on the DeLaval goal. The Vets pressed the fight so closely that the goalie was unable to get a good clear kick at the ball and send it down the field. Three of four times in rapid succession he was called upon to face shots which seemed bound to result in a score. It was a tme of great anxiety for the DeLaval supporters, and a time that called for quick judgment and action on the part of the goal keeper, and he showed clearly that he was right there with the goods as far as judgment and quick action were concerned. The attack lasting probably five minutes, ended with Jones sending the ball way down the feld and a clean sheet still again him.

Penalty Kick

Another great chance missed was when Bishop received a penalty kick on account of Hillman's foul. As soon as the fans discovered that there was to be a penalty kick it was generally conceded by the supporters of both teams that it would result in a pointer for the Vets. Bishop made a good kick right for the goal and a fast one but once again the indomitable Jones was a stone wall, and caught the shot right n ihis hands. He was aided somewhat in doing this by Bishop himself, who kicked almost straight for the goal keeper instead of getting in at one side. Nevertheless the "save" was received with loud applause by the fans, who were willing to appreciate good playing no matter which side it was on.

Evans' Good Work

At the end of the first half the Vets still had everything their own way, but were unable to score on acount of the good work of Jones. One fault that was noticed with this half and practically all through the game was that the Vets idd not support Evans the way they should have. He was doing very good work on the outside left, and for a time also when he replaced McKinley on the inside left, but his teammates either did not observe his good work or ignored it for the fact was clear to the spectators that he was not getting support which, if he had received, might have meant the scoring of several more goals. Instead they played more to McKinley, who was still feeling the effects of a pretty rough time last Saturday, and was not by any means in his best condition. However, McKinley, in spite of his bad condition, played gamely, and did much good work. The DeLaval backs feared Evans as could be seen by the fact that whether he played inside or outside left, he was closely followed by the DeLaval back and half-back.

Second Half

The second half was pretty much a repetition of the first half, with the game still being played entirely on one half of the field except for an occasional dash and a bit of combination work by the DeLaval, which, however, died before they were able to get far. The one goal scored by the Vets was the surprise of the day. It seemed so strange that Jones, who had saved so many wonderful shots all through the game should fall a prey to the simplest shot of the game. After a short tussle, not far in front of the DeLaval goal, Ryan kicked a straight show shot right for the corner of the goal. Jones' vision was partly obscured by his own backs and he stretched leisurely to stop it. He stretched out a little too leisurely, and the ball passed him for the first and only score of the game and the first victory for the Veterans this season. The remainder of the game was uninteresting except that the DeLaval seemed able to put up a little more opposition to their opponents and from this point on there was not much possibilty of another goal for either sides.

FOOTBALL NOTES

McKinley showed great gameness and also his sincere interest in the game by playing on Saturday, although he knew he was not in the best of condition.

Evans was just aching for a chance to show what he could do but all through the game his teammates seemed to have no desire to afford him this opportunity.

Bishop is remarkably fact and a great support to the Veterans' team. Although he was playing back he seemed to be able to cover an awful lot of ground.

Sidney Whatley fortunately was not needed in goal for this game but it is quite possible that if Griffin had any opportunity to show his goods he would have brought credit to the team and himself.

Hillman was at all times a dangerous fan for the Vets, and he spoilt many a nice rush for the goal. He is a powerful looking player and his opponents think twice before tackling him.

LACROSSE INTEREST KEEN

There was a wonderful turn-out at the lacrosse practice on Saturday afternoon and great enthusiasm was shown both by the players, of whom there were some 25 present, and the spectators seemed pleased with the prospect of a revival of the national game in this city. According to the showing made on Saturday, the game, which is to be played on May 24, will be a fast and exciting game and one well worth seeing.

POLITICS TAKEN NEAT

BLOODSHED IS NOT UNCOMMON IN SOUTH AMERICA.

Battles Between the Ins and the Outs Contain Many Picturesque Incidents—Some Recent Incidents In Uruguay Throw Light Upon the Manners and Customs of the Latin Americans.

JUST as we used to imagine the politics of the little Balkan states as chiefly suitable for comic opera, so we are inclined to smile at the struggles of the Ins and Outs in South American republics. But we are reminded now and then that politics is a strenuous and dangerous business in the south. The news from Uruguay that a politician had shot and killed a newspaper editor who had criticized him, calls attention to the latent savagery among many South Americans. The hero of the duel, if indeed there can be anything heroic about the victor in such an anachronism as a duel, was Jose Batlle y Ordonez, a member of the National Council, and twice President of the Republic. The victim was Washington Beltran, editor of El Pais, a leading Montevideo newspaper. The duel had a unique sequel, for the following day the Chamber of Deputies met and voted an annual pension of $3,000 to the widow of the slain journalist, causing the New York Sun to observe that this is "probably the swiftest example of remedial legislation on record," and causing us to infer, without further data, that the criticisms of Ordonez were probably satisfactory to the majority of the Chamber.

But the complexion of the Assembly in Uruguay is subject to lightning changes. Next year's or next week's Chamber might revoke the grant and demand that Mme. Beltran make restitution. South Americans have not yet fully worked out a system of government that is both democratic and reasonably continuous. The changes are too swift; and too often they are brought about by bloodshed. Instead of an election we have a revolution. Yet the opposing factors have been the same in Uruguay for seventy-five years. They are the Whites, or church party, which is strongest in the country, and the Reds, the anti-clerical party, which has its strongholds in the cities. Of late years the Reds have been tending toward Socialism, though with them the word "Red" has not attained any such eminence of reproach as applies to the term among us. If conditions are the same in Uruguay as in other countries where the church takes an active part in politics, the balance of power would seem likely to shift to the Opposition, only to swing back again when excessive radicalism alarms the moderates.

Writing on Uruguay some years ago Lord Bryce remarked upon the curious fidelity of voters to party in Uruguay. "A child is born a little Blanco or a little Colorado and rarely deserts his color," although the frequent changes in government would indicate that conditions have altered in Uruguay since Bryce wrote, just as they have changed in England since Gilbert wrote about the "little Liberal and little Conservative." Yet politics are probably fiercer in Uruguay than in any other South American republic as far advanced along the path of civilization. Certainly they are more frenzied than in the neighboring Argentine, though Argentine's past record shows no lack of partisan and revolutionary zeal. But of course Argentine is becoming a great state and is much more difficult than a smaller community to rouse to wrath about the dismissal of a school teacher or an alcalde.

Lieut. Isaac Strain, an American naval officer, had an interesting experience of South American politics when he made a journey from the Pacific Coast of the continent at Valparaiso to Buenos Aires on the Atlantic. On his arrival at Mendoza, capital of the westernmost province of Argentine, he found himself in the midst of a revolution. The dominant party in the state was the Federal or Red, while the others were known as Unitarians and wore blue badges. The Federals insisted that Lieut. Strain should immediately prove with which side his sympathies were by wearing a red cockade. Naturally he objected, not only on grounds of neutrality but because he could never tell at what point on his travels he might run into a party of Unitarians. The Federals also insisted that he should shave off his beard, for they asserted that it was U-shaped and might indicate a leaning toward the Unitarians. Only when Lieut. Strain threatened to recross the Andes and publish to the world the treatment he had received did the Federals abate their demands and permit him to proceed.

Despite the primitive state of politics in Uruguay, the country is one of the loveliest in South America. Lord Bryce says there is no part of that great land with the exception of Southern Chile where the European would feel more disposed to settle down. In some respects its civilization is not surpassed elsewhere in the world. Even the savagery that crops out in politics might be held by Uruguayans to indicate nothing more than an extremely passionate and self-sacrificing regard for the public weal. Non-Uruguayans might, on the other hand, attribute the occasional outbreaks of savagery not to the Spanish but to the native Indian blood of the South Americans. However, it is not a hundred years by any means since we had duels in Canada and also in the United States over political issues and are justified in expecting that, like bull fighting, duels will not long survive in a country otherwise so far advanced.

A Friend In Need.

"Hear about Bill Bottlenose? He's got a case of lumbago at his house."

"I guess I'd better run over and help him drink it up."

Remaking Mortar.

Villages in the vicinity of St. Quentin, France, are literally rising, Phoenix-like, from their own ashes. Confronted by a lack of stone and building materials, the artisans have established a big grinding machine in which the debris of the shell-shattered houses is remade into mortar.

When Oil Was Cheap.

Connoisseur (newly rich) — Six thousand francs for that old picture! I could understand it if it was a modern painting, on account of the high price of oil. But in the eighteenth century oil was only four cents a quart!

Deduction.

Head Detective (a Teutonic Sherlock Holmes), reflecting: "The wretch has fled with ten thousand marks. Therefore he must be traveling on foot: a taxi to the station would have cost him more than that."

Fertilizers.

Fertilizers should never be mixed with manure, because such a mixture tends to let loose some of the nitrogen in the form of ammonia of both the manure and the fertilizers. Acid phosphate can be applied to manure at the rate of 50 pounds to the ton of manure with great profit to the farmer. Best results can be obtained by applying manure and fertilizers separately. Never mix fertilizers with lime or ashes, or lime itself. A mixture of lime or ashes, tends to change the soluble phosphoric acid of the fertilizer back to the slowly available or unavailable form.

Language He Knew.

A Halifax divine had occasion to officiate at a christening in a small fishing village in Nova Scotia. When the time for baptism arrived, the embarrassed father was holding the child so that its fat legs pointed towards the font. "Turn her this way," he whispered. But the father was too disconcerted to hear or understand. "Turn her feet around," the minister whispered again, but there was no response. An old seaman in the back of the church came to the rescue. Putting his weather-beaten hand to his mouth, he roared across the room: "Head her into the wind, Tom."

Hotel Rates.

A report from Pekin gives the rates in one of the large hotels as ranging from $8 to $18 a day for one person in a room, including meals, and from $13 to $25 for two in a room. The monthly rates were $185 to $325 for a single person and from $225 to $450 for two. A suite of rooms for one person was $40 a day, or $1,000 a month, and for a party of four, $56 a day and $1,350 a month. These prices are given in Mexican dollars and, at the rate of exchange prevailing at that time, would be equivalent to about 15 per cent. more in Canadian currency.

Threats.

"Nigger," warned one, "don't mess wid me, 'kase when yo' do, yo' shuah is flirting wid de hearse." "Don't pesticate me, nigger," replied the other, shaking his fist, according to Everybody's. "Don't fo'ce me to press dis upon yo', 'kase if I does, I'll hit yo' so hard I'll separate you' from amazin' grace to a floatin' oportunity." "If yo' mess wid me, nigger," cried the first, showing the whites of his eyes, "I'll jes make one pass, and dere'll be a man pattin' you' in de face wid a spade to-morrow mornin'."

The Thrifty Thought.

A Scotsman and his wife were on their first sea voyage, and they were experiencing such very bad weather that the lady began to feel alarmed. "Oh, Sandy," she moaned, "I'm no afeard o' deein', but I dinna care to dee at sea." "Dinna think o' deein yet," answered Sandy; "but when we do, ye'd better be drooned at sea than anywhere else." "An' why, Sandy?" she asked. "Why?" exclaimed Sandy, "because ye wouldna coat sae muckle to bury."

A Good Reason.

Wife (in Tyrihans, of Christiania, Norway)—But, Hansen, if you always long for me when you are away from me, why must you go every evening to your club as you do? Husband—Because otherwise I might cease to long for you!

VIENNA NEEDS HOMES.

Another Problem Faces That Suffering City.

Lack of housing accommodation is causing as much suffering in Vienna to-day as shortage of coal and deal food. It is next to impossible to find an empty flat in the city or suburbs. In peace times out of the total number of apartments, there was an average of nearly 5 per cent. vacant. Now there is not one-tenth of 1 per cent.

During the war building operations ceased entirely in Vienna. There was no really urgent reason for this. Labor could be had in sufficient numbers, and bricks and timber and other necessary materials at fairly reasonable prices. The stoppage of building was rather due to the greed of private capitalists, who, calculating upon a victorious end of the war, imagined they could make much greater profits later. All these hopes proved vain, and now the Viennese are suffering from the cupidity and shortsightedness of these would-be profiteers.

Vienna's municipal finances are bankrupt, and the City Council finds it well-nigh impossible to undertake the building of houses for thousands of home-seekers, living at present in miserably overcrowded quarters. For it is difficult to obtain labor, and wages are fantastically high. Materials just now are scarcer than labor and equally costly. Cement is especially hard to get, as its production involves a large consumption of coal, an article just now peculiarly scarce in this part of Europe.

At the present time the city has only three large buildings in course of erection. One of these will contain 140 apartments. The original cost was estimated at 14,500,000 crowns, but it will certainly double this sum. As the rents will necessarily be very low, the city will lose very heavily by the operation.

There is a considerable number of buildings, begun before the war and left in an unfinished condition. It might be supposed that these could easily be completed at a moderate outlay. But this is by no means the case. Exposed to summer heat and winter cold, to wind and rain, and snow and frost, the structures have suffered a good deal of damage which must be made good. One building for instance, left three-quarters unfinished, had cost 600,000 crowns. A further 150,000 crowns would in peace time have sufficed to pay for its completion. Now the work would cost 2,000,000 crowns. It is not surprising, therefore, that all these unfinished buildings are left in their present state, and indeed it is highly probable that many of them will never be completed.

Unable to build new houses or complete the unfinished buildings, the city authorities have been trying to find other means of providing homes for the overcrowded population. A number of Swedish frame-houses have been erected at Kagram, a suburb of Vienna, for the municipal tramway employes. The city has also taken over one of the archducal palaces, an imposing building on the Park Ring, until lately occupied by Archduke Eugene. The headquarters of the new American Food Relief Commission are now in this palace. It contains a large number of rooms, formerly occupied by the archduke's household officers and servants, and these rooms are now being turned into small flats which will be let to working-class tenants at very low rents.

The City Government, too, is socializing flats in a moderate way, by requisitioning rooms in large apartments where the household is small. This is being carried out in a very reasonable manner and without inflicting undue inconvenience on the original tenant. Families having only one or two spare rooms have not been interfered with, the socializing commission only requisitioning quarters where there are surplus rooms sufficient for a small family, and which can be entered without disturbing the privacy of the principal occupier.

In peace times one could see "Zu Vermieten" cards hanging on the outside house-doors in nearly every street of Vienna. Now one could not find a single one of these cards in a whole day's walk. People wanting a flat are not uncommonly asked to buy the furniture at an exorbitant price, as a condition of getting the apartment, and as a rule the outgoing tenant has no difficulty in finding somebody to agree to these terms.

It is frequently asserted that Vienna's population will soon decrease, and the city become a kind of Munich or Dresden. But, judging from the difficulty experienced in finding homes, there is little sign of this at present.—Christian Science Monitor.

Canny Washington.

On a trip through western Virginia, George Washington came upon what he called an "oil spring." He was so struck with the possible usefulness of this oil that, in his last will he called the special attention of his trustees to the matter. Right there, it might be said, was the first awakening of interest in petroleum production in the United States—an industry the development of which gave an output of 356,000,000 barrels in the last year.

The conciliation committee of the City Council is negotiating with the strikers from the Canadian General Electric Company and with the company with a view to effecting a settlement of their differences, and it is thought that there is a likelihood of their efforts being successful within a day or so.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

ERSKINE—MATTHEWS.

The Port Frances Times of April 29th says:

"On Wednesday evening, the 21st inst., there were united in the bonds of matrimony, Miss Ida Ethel Matthews and Mr. Wesley Erskine, late of the 78th Batalion, C.E.F.

"The marriage was celebrated at St. John's Anglican Church, the Rev. Archdeacon Maltby presiding.

"The bride made the long journey from her English home at the insistent call of Dan Cupid, having met her future husband while he was recuperating from the effect of wounds and gas received in the firing line in France.

"The groom's mother, Mrs. Erskine, and his two sisters met the bride in Winnipeg and returned to Fort Frances with her, the ceremony took place next evening.

"Lt.-Col. D. C. McKenzie, M.P. who has proved himself the 'best man' in six bitterly contested mayorality contests, again acted as such, this time without a contest, while Miss Erskine supported the bride. Mrs. Erskine gave the bride away.

"After the ceremony the wedding party adjourned to Mrs. Erskine's home on Third street, where a delightful wedding supper was served. Twenty-five of the immediate friends of the groom sat down at the festive board and a merry evening was spent. The health of the bride was proposed by Col. McKenzie in a neat speech in which he praised the war record of the groom, but considered the bride to be an equal gallant and faithful spirit as proven by her long and arduous journey to the side of the groom. He pointed out that this marriage was a typical re-union of the Anglo-Saxon family, since the groom served his country with the Canadian forces his brother, Morton, fought the hun under "Old Glory" and now the old land sent one of her fairest daughters to cement the bond. The groom responded neatly as did also his bride who made a delightful and appropriate reply to the colonel's compliments.

"The young couple left on the midnight train for Duluth and St. Paul and after the honeymoon will reside at Mrs. Erskine's home here."

The groom, Wesley Erskine, was born in Peterborough, and left for the West six or seven years ago.

Miss Helen Payne of Hamilton was in the city for the week end.

Mr. John Watson of Detroit was a visitor in Peterborough yesterday.

Mrs. Max Hamilton and Miss M[illegible]well left in Saturday for a few weeks vacation at Rice Lake.

Mr. Herb Walsh of Toronto has returned home after a few days' visit with Peterborough friends.

Mrs. John Crane, Weller Street, is spending a few days visiting friends in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Banks and Mrs. Walker, motored to Toronto yesterday.

the Board that there were a number of unpaid accounts in connection with the patients at the Isolation Hospital and it was stated that this matter was now assuming large proportions and that something would have to be done in the matter without delay.

The discussion which followed this announcement brought to light the fact that the city solicitor was apparently not empowered to act for the Board of Health and, therefore, could do nothing towards collecting the bills. It was, therefore, decided, on the motion of Mr. Mason, seconded by Mr. Lynch, that the City Council should be asked to amend bylaw No. 2138 so that the city solicitor would be able to act for the Board in straightening the belated accounts.

The various monthly reports, including one by the sanitary inspector on the milk tests were read and received.

Those present were G. H. Duncan in the chair; C. F. Mason, J. Lynch and Dr. MacPherson.

ANNUAL MEETING Y.W.C.A. THURSDAY

INTEREST STILL KEEN AMONG TEAMS IN MISSIONARY CAMPAIGN

Interest is still being kept up in the missionary campaign at the Young Women's Christian Association. The keenest rivalry seems to be between Miss Thomson's and Miss Payne's teams, and although each one led alternately on Saturday, at the time of writing Miss Thomson's team is again ahead.

There are two events of importance at the association this week. On Thursday evening the annual meeting will be held at 8 o'clock. The different secretaries will tell of the work of the past year in their various departments, and there will be special music. It is hoped that a large number, both of men and women, will come and learn more about the Young Women's Christian Association. An informal social hour will be spent at the close of the meeting.

On Saturday afternoon Miss Thomson, secretary of the Industrial Extension Department, will be at home to all employed girls from three to six. A cordial invitation is extended to all, whether acquainted with Miss Thomson or not, to come in and meet her.

The clubs and classes will be held much as usual. On Tuesday afternoon all the junior members of the gymnasium classes will meet for a special farewell good time.

Why not join a swimming class this week?

DAYLIGHT SAVING FOR BARRIES' LTD.

EMPLOYEES STARTED AN HOUR EARLIER TODAY—MAJORITY VOTE CARRIED

At least one factory has decided that in view of the favorable vote of its employees with regard to the matter of daylight saving that system will be in operation commencing today. The firm referred to is Barries' Limited. This morning, the employees started work at seven standard time instead of eight as formerly. They are working on an eight-hour day and forty-five hour week schedule, and in order that the dinner hour will not be inconvenient in families where some of the family may be employed at factories not working under the daylight saving, it has been arranged that the morning shall consist of five hours from seven until twelve noon and the afternoon of three hours from one o'colck until four.

While some of the employees do not fancy the early rising that this change will entail, it is thought that the extra time it permits for enjoyment after the day's work is done will more than counteract the disadvantage of getting up early, and as the move is as a result of the majority vote of the employees there is no doubt as to the popularity of the change. It is quite likely that other factories where the vote was favorable to daylight saving will follow suit in the near future.

PREPARES FOR SUMMER FAIR

Rev. Father Phelan announced in St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday that preparations for his summer fair which is to be held in place of the usual picnic at the exhibition grounds next month, are well under way. Committees have been appointed to take care of the difefrent details, and it is promised that there will be plenty of excitement and amusement.

One of the main features of the fair will be a popularity contest between two well known citizens, R. Denne and G. N. Gordon. The canvassers in this event will be Catholic and non-Catholic young ladies.

Yesterday afternoon committees of young ladies were appointed to canvass the city for chances on a list of valuable prizes, including $20 in gold donated by Father Phelan and a ton of coal.

IGNORANCE ONE OF GREATEST FOES

INTERESTING AND INSTRUCTIVE SERMON BY REV. A. J. THOMAS

Mother's Day was fittingly observed at George Street Methodist Church yesterday. The pastor, who preached morning and evening, used appropriate themes and old-time familiar hymns. A very large congregation, which practically filled the church at the evening service, added to the inspirative of the occasion.

Special Music.

The choir, augmented to nearly fifty voices, repeated one of the numbers, "Say, Watchman, What of the Night," given at the recent concert, with very fine effect. Mr. J. H. Renwick plans to repeat "Judge Me, O God," the other eight part chorus, next Sunday evening.

A Tribute to Our Parents.

At the morning service Mr. Thomas taking as his subject "A Tribute to Our Parents," made a plea for greater reverence for both mother and father. He pointed out that while mother occupies the supreme place in the home, father has a large place also. He showed that in addition to scriptural exhortation, the facts of experience justify a deep reverence for parenthood, which points to God.

The Canadian Home.

In the evening the subject of the pastor's discourse was, "Is Anything Wrong With the Canadian Home?" In a forceful manner Mr. Thomas outlined several reasons why many of our Canadian homes are far from ideal.

In the first place some are suffering from the fatal mistake of a wrong choice in marriage. Physically, intellectually, morally and spiritually there should be a fitness in the two who stand before the marriage altar.

Lack of proper home facilities is another reason. We know that material features have much to do with the making of a home. Old rickety, dilapidated buildings are not an asset to any community, and it is well nigh impossible for people who dwell in such surroundings to enjoy real home life. A home needs not only father, mother and children, but also a distinct dwelling place.

Solemn Contract Not Observed.

The third reason given for lack of ideal conditions in some homes is an impaired estimate of marriage sanctity. "Unfaithfulness," said Mr. Thomas, "is like a foul cancer eating into home life at this very hour. The power of the home on the child never falls out of ratio with the holiness of the tie between the father and mother."

Many homes are suffering from the pressure of material needs. Some are working hard because of a greed for wealth; others are working hard and long because of necessity. The home will never be ideal, however, unless the parents recognize the fact that more than material things are required. There are great moral, social and intellectual needs which must be satisfied.

One of Greatest Foes.

The crippling power of ignorance is one of the greatest foes of the home. "I am thoroughly convinced," said Mr. Thomas, "that one of the great lacks in home is knowledge. Homes are being handicapped by ignorance of the essentials of true home making." Almost ten per cent. of the children born in Toronto in 1916 did not live to see their first birthday. Undoubtedly that calamity is due to some extent to ignorance of the mothers. Education sanctified by the grace of God will be a great blessing to the child who grows up in such an atmosphere.

The allurement of pleasure seeking is another reason. There is a place for recreation in every life but the home is far from perfect if the parents and children do not find their greatest pleasure in their own fellowship.

The extreme spirit of individualism is another detriment to homes. The home has become to some young people simply a place of physical convenience. "Young people should learn in the home that which will make them good citizens," said Mr. Thomas. "They can never do so, however, so long as they foster a spirit of individualism."

Christian Character Not Cultivated.

Laxity regarding the culture of Christian character also prevails. Often ideals set before the children are far too low. Homes are being undermined by irreligion. The Sabbath day is being profaned; there is no family altar in many homes; the word of God is not read; the principles of the gospel are not taught to the children. Such parents are treating their children with injustice. They should remember that a child is gifted with a destiny that is eternal. If parents expect their children to build a superstructure that is abiding throughout eternity, they should lay well the foundation.

"If parents fail in this regard," concluded Mr. Thomas, "they have committed the greatest blunder of their life. Let us open our hearts to Jesus Christ that he may use us as avenues to come into the home life of this country and into the social and national life of this Dominion."

MOTHERS' DAY, ST. PAUL'S

LARGE CONGREGATIONS PRESENT TO HONOUR MOTHERHOOD

Mother's Day was observed in St. Paul's Church by a sermon by the Minister, Rev. Robert Pogue, on the subject of Motherhood. He remarked:

Surely motherhood is the holiest of all human relationships. It is sacred in itself, sacred in its associations and sacred in its memories. Its sacredness, and beauty have been the subject of the writer's pen and the artist's brush in all lands, and in all ages of the world's history. In every country where art has flourished, the artists have given their best efforts to portray on canvass the glory of motherhood. One cannot look, for example, on Raphael's Madonna without being enthralled by it, and feeling anew the beauty and glory of motherhood.

What artists have done in their special field, poets have done in their's in the tributes they [illegible] pay to women, and particularly mothers. Mr. Pogue spoke of two things. First a mother's influence, and second a mother's ambition. There is no influence so vast, so varied and so far reaching as a mother's. One of the holiest memories which we all treasure is the memory of our mother's prayers. Many of you are Christians this morning, because you could never get away from the influence of a mother's prayers and a mother's life. There is a long line of great and good men running down through the centuries and they would tell us that all they were and all they achieved, they owed to their mother. There is nothing a mother can do comparable to the work of influencing for God and eternity the child whom He has given her.

The ambition of every mother ought to be the ambition of the mother of James and John. She desired for them not so much the place of honor as the place of blessing. She desired that they might be near Jesus. That is the only place where children are safe. And a mother can have no higher ambition than that. The most worthy ambition for any mother is not that her sons might get on in the world, but that they might get on in the Kingdom, not that they might know the great ones of the earth, but that they might know that company of men and women, who like their Master, lived not for themselves but for others.

If you had such a mother as this thank God for her today. If she is still living, do something that will show her your appreciation of the noble ideals she set before you, and all that she has been to you in life.

If she be not living, then thank God for her memory, her example, for her prayers and influence. You will best show your appreciation of what she was to you by a rededication of your life to the service of the God for whom she lived.

MARK STREET CHURCH SERVICES

A very large congregation greeted the pastor in the morning, and the music at both services was good. Mrs. E. Wand excelled herself. Mr. Joffe gave an excellent address in the evening.

In the morning the subject was a very popular one, namely, "The Queen of the World," and was based on the text, "Behold, thy mother," Matt. XII., 47. The following is a synopsis of the sermon.

1.—Greater thank "King," or "Czar," or "Emperor," or "Sultan," is the wonderful term "mother." It means more than any other human influence that ever touched the world. The "Divine Right of Kings" has been disputed, and rivers of blood have been shed in support of this doctrine, but the Divine Right of glorious motherhood has never been contested. The hand that moves the cradle is the hand that swings the world.

2.—This crown of motherhood comes from the skies. An angel of god crowns Sarah with the cornet of motherhood, in the precincts of her tent, and it is a divinely imposed exaltation. By mighty prayer Hannah, the mother of Samuel, claims this crown in the temple of her God. It was so with Elizabeth, the mother of John the Baptist, and Mary, the mother of Christ.

3.—Why is motherhood crowned from above? The true mother is God's counterpart. She is more like the divine, than any other being in the universe. As no human soul can ever go beyond the reach of God's love and care, so no child can go beyond the range of mother's love. As God is love and sacrifice so is mother. She lays her all on the altar of maternal devotion. Her step is slow and feeble, her boys is quick and strong, her ear is dull and heavy, his is sharp and keen, she is sinking down to the grave and her resting-place, he will hie to the mountain of activity. She has given him her very life.

4.—The strongest impression of childhood linger with us till death, but the strongest is our impression of mother, her love, her sympathy, her loyalty, her self-sacrifice. Mother is the embodiment of woman's tenderness.

5.—What do we owe to these mothers of ours? Mother never failed us. When others cursed she blessed. She always had faith in us, and we in her. She would always give us a character. Have you any one in court who will vouch for you? Yes, mother, was the simple response of a boy awaiting sentence.

6.—The crown of motherhood has been withheld from some, but some reject it, and seem to say, "Thank you Lord," but the love and care I might have for a babe I will give to a poodle dog on the end of a string.

Let us wear the red flower in recognition of her who stays, and the white in remembrance of her who's gone.

SERMONS FITTING WORTHY OCCASION

LOCAL DIVINES PAY GLOWING TRIBUTES TO MOTHERHOOD

Mother's Day was fittingly commemorated in all of the local churches yesterday, and there were exceptionally good attendances at all services.

In George Street Methodist church it was announced as Mother's and Father's day. In the morning the pastor, Rev. A. J. Thomas preached on "a tribute to our parents," and in the evening the subject was, "Is anythink wrong with the Canadian home?"

At Trinity Methodist Church, Rev. F. E. Malott, B. A. B. D., preached at both services. The morning subject was 'The boy you are worrying about," and the evening subject: "Three mothers of Bethlehem."

In St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Mother's day was commemorated at the morning service only, when the pastor, Rev. Robert Pogue preached an eloquent and inspiring sermon on 'The glory of Motherhood."

The subject taken by Rev. Mr. Webb, at Murray Street Baptist Church yesterday was also especially fitting to Mother's Day. His sermon was woven round the words: "Her Faith, her Hope, her Love never faileth."

"Queen of the World," the subject of Rev. G. E. Ross' sermon at the morning service in Mark street Methodist Church was very fitting for Mother's Day.

DECLARED THAT REVOLUTION IN MEXICO IS AT ITS LAST STAGE

All Efforts Now to be Directed Toward Restoring Country's Industry and Prosperity—Foreign Industry and Capital Reported Welcome—Revolutionists Statement

(By Canadian Press.)

Washington, May 11. — Officials of the new revolutionary party now in virtual control of Mexico City today maintained that the revolution is in its final stages, so far as active fighting is concerned. Statements from the revolutionary leaders at Juarez, opposite El Paso, indicated that all efforts now would be bent oward the restoration of the country's industry and prosperity.

Protect Foreign Interests.

Foreign industry and capital in the development of the country's resources was welcomed in a statement in which lives and property were promised protection.

Welcome Expatriates.

Expatriates also were welcomed to return to Mexico, and it was stated that a reform movement would be inaugurated to prohibit gambling and saloons.

Reports available here today dealt mostly with the reported arrest of President Carranza and promises of safeguarding his life, and his probable exile. Little attention is being paid to troop movements or activities.

Carranza Captured.

President Carranza and his candidate for the Mexican Presidency, Ignacio Bonillas, have been captured by revolutionary forces, according to semi-official advices received here today. Through the same channels came information that General Obregon, their captor, had given strict orders that the lives and interests of the prisoners be protected. Hence a report from Agua Prieta that Carranza had been assassinated was generally discredited in official circles tonight.

BOLSHEVIKI'S STAND ON DNEIPER RIVER

(By Canadian Press.)

Warsaw, May 11.—Bolshevki forces are making a stand on the east bank of the Dnieper in the region of Kiev, and an artillery battle is raging north and south of that city.

Polish and Ukrainian troops found when they reached Kiev that two of three bridges over the Dnieper had been dynamited.

CARRANZA FORCES ACTIVE.

(By Canadian Press.)

El Paso, May 11.—The activities of the Carranza forces in the region about Tampico, which is itself in rebel hands, are causing the American Government considerable concern according to a desatch from agents of the Mexican revolutionists to agents of the movement here, received today. No details were contained in the message.

CORRECTS REPORT RE-SENATORSHIP

Word was received from Mr. Barnham today to correct the report yesterday that a canvass is being made in his favor for a senatorship. Under no circumstances, he says, would he be a party to such a canvass for honor.

THE IDEAL OF A NATION, LET IT BE TRUE OR FALSE MUST ALWAYS RULE

Sir Richard Winfrey Points Out That Militarism, Must be Abolished to Assure World—Brotherhood Success Mass Meeting in St. Paul's Church.

There was a fair attendance at the mass meeting in St. Paul's Church last night to hear Sir Richard Winfrey, of Peterborough, England, and Mr. Ward, of London, England, speak on the World Brotherhood Federation. The speakers were accompanied by Mr. Howell secretary of the Canadian Brotherhood Movement, and on the platform there were also Rev. F. E. Malott, Rev. R. Pogue and Rev. Mr. Webb. Mr. Webb lead in prayer.

Mr. Malott.

Mr. Malott, who acted as chairman for the meeting, told of the pleasure in having present tonight Sir Richard Winfrey of Peterborough, England, and Mr. Ward, of London, England, both of whom were instrumental in bringing about the forming of the World Brotherhood Federation. He eulogized the work of Sir Richard Winfrey in the different activities in which he had interested himself. He could say much in praise of these gentlemen, he said, but it was his duty to act as chairman, and he, therefore, called upon Mr. Ward to address the meeting.

Mr. Ward.

Mr. Ward, in opening, said that Sir Richard Winfrey was one of the most distinguished members of the movement in England, and had instrumental in bringing about the international success of the movement.

They were here tonight to give some idea of what the movement was. He understood there were three societies in Peterborough bearing the word "brotherhood." They should not be satisfied until every city church had a brotherhood united in a city brotherhood, a Canadian brotherhood, and finally, a world brotherhood federation.

Formation of National Council.

In 1906 the National Brotherhood Council of Great Britain was formed from a few individual societies. They were formed for a single object. A religious census had revealed the appalling fact that 75 per cent. of the population of Great Britain attended no church, and in London less than 10 per cent. went to church at all.

An Experiment.

It came into the minds of a few men to try an experiment. This took the shape of organizing meetings for men only on Sunday afternoons, a meeting of distinctly religious character, but entirely different from the ordinary church service. They were anxious that it should not be construed as an attempt to form another denomination, hence a simple program was devised — a simple hymn, a prayer, the scripture lesson, another hymn, perhaps a solo and then an address about twenty minutes long; another hymn and always a collection, and then finally benediction.

The meetings always started sharp at 3 o'clock. He had in his mind such meetings where the meeting house was crowded before the time for opening the service. Men of all stations were in the habit of taking a leading part in these meetings but generally a working man took the lead.

No Sermons.

The addresses also had a character of their own. They never had sermons preached. The meeting was not to be used instead of a regular morning or evening service. When the war broke out there were 2,000 such societies in Great Britain and a million men were in attendance on Sunday afternoons mostly men who would not have been at another service had it not been for the Brotherhood.

In 1908 the International Campaign commenced. In France there was open hostility to all organized

WILD JAMBOREE ON THE FINLAND

REBERT PEEL, GRANDSON OF BRITISH MINISTER, HEADS CONVIVIAL CROWD

BRANDISHES WINE BOTTLES

SEIZES FIRE AXE AND PROCEEDS TO SMASH UP THE SHIP RUNS AMUCK

New York, May 10.—The Red Star liner Finland, from Antwerp and Southampton, completed yesterday the most amazing trip in her career of twenty years, bearing scars of the delirium that affected a thirsty group of her cabin passengers, made up largely of men made wealthy in neutral countries through the war. Champagne began to flow at Southampton and did not cease until the liner was within sight of the Ambrose Channel lightship early yesterday morning, when the Finland's skipper, Capt. T. W. Barnum, breathed naturally for the first time in ten days.

The leader in the revelry, which had its climax Saturday night, was Robert Peel, a blond Briton, 22 years old, of Viking aspect, six feet five inches tall, great grandson of the famous Prime Minister of England, Sir Robert Peel distinguished for physical and mental virility and the organizer of the Irish constabulary, called "peelers." Young Mr. Robert Peel will inherit the title on the death of his father, Sir Robert Peel, whose spectacular life is told in part in a story written by himself entitled "A Bit of a Fool," and who went through a fortune of more than $4,000,000 before his marriage twenty-three years ago to Mercedes, daughter of the Baroness de raffenzied of Switzerland.

Last Day's Celebration.

The champagne buccaneers which Mr. Robert Peel headed did not show a disposition to take the command of the liner from Capt. Barnum until the last day of the trip. Before that they had been very noisy, and Mr. Peel on a rough day found ascending companion-ways too slow, or tortuous, for his impetuous temperament and reached the boat deck by climbing there with the help of stanchions. The ship was rolling in a beam sea and passengers marvelled at the young man's intregidity and his luck in not going over the side.

On Saturday night the followers of Mr. Peel lamented their nearness to the shores of the arid region and decided to take a last or an ever-

DISSOLVE FEDERATION OF FRENCH LABOR

(By Canadian Press.)

Paris, May 11.—The French Cabinet at a meeting today instructed the minister of justice to open proceedings against the General Federation of Labor with a view to the dissolution of that organization which has been supporting the strike of French railwaymen by calling other strikes.

The decision of the government to seek this dissolution came after hours of discussion by the council of ministers presided over by President Deschanel.

LIBERAL-CONSERVATIVES WILL CALL DOMINION CONVENTION

Object Will Be to Select a Leader—Believed Time Has Come For Re-Organization of Party—Stable and Settled Policy For Development of Canada's Resources

Toronto, May 11.—A decision to proceed at once with the reorganization of the Liberal-Conservative party in all the provinces, and to call a convention at Ottawa at the earliest possible date in the present year for the purpose of selecting a leader, was reached at a conference of prominent Conservatives representing all parts of the Dominion held at the Ontario headquarters in the Ryrie Building here yesterday. Twenty-one out of a possible 22 representatives were in attendance, and a number of resolutions, adopted unanimously, voiced what may be regarded as the opinions of Liberal-Conservatives throughout the whole of Canada. Hon. Robert Rogers, of Winnipeg, was one of the prominent men present.

The gathering expressed the belief that the time had come for the immediate reorganization of the party, and for an adherence to the lines laid down by Sir John A. Macdonald and Sir George Etienne Cartier. It was felt that only by following the lines of the National Policy could there be assured for Canadian labor an abundance of continuous employment, and for Canadian industry a protection which would enable it to seize the opportunities afforded at present of securing a firm foothold in the markets of the world. At the same time it was recognized that no handicap should be placed in the way of the development of Canada's basic industry, agriculture.

Another resolution adopted declared the opinion that a stable and settled policy was needed for the proper Government of the country and the development of Canada's natural resources. It was felt that in the principles for which the Liberal-Conservative party had always stood such policy was afforded. A sound economic policy which would adequately bear the burden of Canada's national debt was wanted, it was stated, instead of the present system of "continuous borrowing, with scarcely any provision for repayment."

BURNT TO DEATH IN MOTOR UPSET

YOUNG WOMAN WAS LEFT PINNED UNDER BLAZING AUTOMOBILE

POLICE ARREST DRIVER OF CAR

VICTIM BLAMED FOR FORCING HANDS OFF DRIVING WHEEL

New York, May 11.— Mrs. Helen Brogley, of 158 Washington street, Newark, reached over and grabbed the wheel of an automobile in which she was joy riding with another woman and two men early Sunday morning on the Queens Boulevard at Elmhurst, L. J. John Daly of 24 Van Pelt street, Laurel Hill, Queens Borough, who was driving, tried to push her away, but she presisted:

"Step on it!" she cried "Go faster!"

Daly took both hands from the wheel to cope with the girl, and the car, uncontrolled, swerved up the embankment at the side of the road and overturned. Daly and Walter Flanagan of 219 Greenpoint avenue Laurel Hill, and Mrs. Freda Bartell of 72 Seventeenth avenue, Newark were thrown out of the car and escaped with only a few bruises. But Mrs. Brogley, who earlier in the evening had expressed the wish that she might die, was caught under the automobile and so badly burned that her body was not recognizable. She was identified only after detectives had worked on the case for several hours.

Noise Awakens Witnesses

Anthony Kupillas, who lives direct across the road from where the accident occurred, said he and his wife were awakened by the noise made by the automobile and the shouting of its occupants. They looked out of window and saw the car zigzagging crazily along the road, and then they saw it overturn. The next instant the car burst into flames and they heard a woman crying:

"Help! I'm burning to death!"

Kupillas said that he saw one of the men go to the automobile and try to get the body of the woman out from under it, but the other man grabbed him and said. "Come on we've got to get out of here!"

The two men and the girl then ran up the road and disappeared.

Kupillas called the Fire Department and the police. Detectives found lying under the girl's body a prayer book inscribed, "Katherine Daly of 21 Van Pelt street, Long Island City," and a handbag, in which was a slip of paper. On the paper was written the addres of Mrs. Bartell in Newark. They also found under the car part of a flask of whiskey.

Detectives found that the prayer book belonged to Daly's sister, and that he had taken it when he left home late Saturday night, telling his parents he was going to confession.

Victim a New Jersey Girl

Detectives James Knott and Thomas Caputo of the Elmhurst station went to the Newark address and found Mrs. Bartell, who said that she and Daly and Flanagan, after leaving the burning motor, had gone home as quickly as possible. She also identified the dead girl, and gave information through which the police learned that Mrs. Brogley was nineteen years old, the daughter of Henry Williams of 17 Chadwick avenue, Newark, and that she was living apart from her husband.

Daly was arrested by the police and taken to the Newtown station house, but Flanagan had not been located up to a late hour last night. Both Daly and Mrs. Bartell made statements to the police. Daly said he met Flanigan while on his way to Church, and accepted the latter's invitation to go riding. They stopped at numerous road houses on Long Island where they had drinks, and also got some bottle whiskey and ginger ale.

SAYS NORTH SEA MINE BARRAGE WAS DELAYED BY SIMS' OPPOSITION

The Idea Was Wholly American, Declares United States Secretary Daniels—Charges That Admiral Sims Attempted to Rob U.S. Navy of Credit Due It.

(By Canadian Press.)

Washington, May 11.—A counter charge that the establishment of the North Sea mine barrage was delayed six months because of the opposition of Rear-Admiral Sims and the British Admiralty, was made before the Senate's naval investigating committee today by Secretary Daniels, in presenting the second part of his reply to the officers' charge that the U. S. navy department had unnecessarily prolonged the war through its failure to co-operate fully at first with the Allied naval forces. Mr. Daniels claimed the barrage was "wholly an American idea."

Would Rob American Navy.

Secretary Daniels also charged that Sims attempted in his testimony to rob the American navy of credit for this project and to give it to the British. The plan was conceived, he said, in the Bureau of Ordnance at he U. S. Navy Department and urged on the British naval authorities for six months before it was accepted. During this time Sims constantly discouraged and opposed the idea, he added, and when Admiral Mayo was sent abroad and finally convinced the British of the worth of the scheme, Admiral Sims attempted to convey the impression that this project had been delayed while the British attempted to get the American Navy Department's approval.

THAT OFFICIAL TOUR OF BRITISH DRAPERS' CHAMBER OF TRADE

Party Leaves New York For Boston Tomorrow—At Vancouver on June 16.

(By Canadian Press.)

New York, May 11— The official tour of Canada by twenty representatives of the Drapers' Chamber of Trade of the United Kingdom, headed by F. W. Cook, J. P., O. B. E. chairman, will commence at Vancouver on June 16, and will be preceded by a six weeks' tour of the principal cities of the United States. The party which recently arrived in New York on the steamship Cedric, was warmly entertained by civic authorities, as well as by the National Dry Goods Association of America. Lew Hahn, managing director of the latter organization, is conducting the tour of the British visitors, and will accompany them on the trip. The party leaves for Boston tomorrow.

Their stay in Canada will be very brief, and only a short time will be spent in the cities they have arranged to visit. They are due to arrive in Winnipeg on June 19. From the Manitoba capital they will continue the journey eastward to Toronto, weher they are expected to arrive on June 21. On June 23 they will arrive in Ottawa, and after spending a few hours in the capital will proceed to Montreal the same day, concluding their round trip in New York on June 25. It is understood the Canadian Retail Dry Goods Association has made arrangements for the delegation to carry out as thorough inspection of the Canadian department stores as the brief space of time available will permit.

The idea of the trip through Canada and the United States was first suggested to the British department store proprietors by Salmon P. Halle, president of the National Retail Dry Goods Association of America, at a dinner given to him in London during the spring of 1919 by the Drapers' Chamber of Trade. The journey originally contemplated as an unofficial one, attracted the interest of the business men of Great Britain so much that the British Board of Trade took official cognizance of the visit, and invested it with the character of an offical tour. The merchants are, therefore touring as the representatives of the British retail trade.

The primary object of the visit is to study the retail trade methods of the Canadian and American department stores. For six weeks they will tour the principal citeis of the United States, investigating trade conditions, department store management, servie and eficiency methods. Their study of these matters in the United States will be continued throughout their tour of the five Canadian cities included in their itinerary.

The British merchants have indicated their desire to use the post-war period of reconstruction for the purpose of gaining a knowledge of the most effective methods of conducting department sore work and using them now when the time for a change was most sorely needed. In spite of the unsettled condition of English business affairs, these department store owners have left their organizations to visit Canada and the United States, and become acquainted with methods

SOLDIERS' SETTLEMENT.

FOLLOWING UP our editorial reference yesterday to the vast acreage of land in Canada, especially in the western provinces, awaiting cultivation, the Soldiers' Settlement Board has done good work in establishing 13,499 soldiers on farms up to March 31st this year. And the work is to continue, for fifty thousand dollars more is to be placed at he disposal of the Board this year. The total amount used on loan accounts up to the foregoing date was $42,279,796, and the sum spent on live stock and farm equipment for settlers amounted to $12,117,420.

No money could be better spent and no encouragement more deserving than in behalf of our gallant boys who fought overseas in defence of this fair land. For those who are adapted to farm life, together with those who can adjust themselves to it under training, this settlement scheme offers to ex-service men opportunity for acquiring independence for themselves and the means for assisting in that development of Canada's untouched agricultural resources so much desired if Canada is to enjoy permanent prosperity, and if living is to be cheapened for the mass of her population.

But, of course, in the way of utilising our vast untilled areas now lying awaiting the plow, these 13,498 soldier farmers leave oceans of room for still more settlers, to whom, let it be hoped, they are but the pioneers. And we trust that the efforts of the Soldiers' Settlement Board will, so practicable and commendable as they are incite present and future governments to a broad policy of inviting, and if possible encouraging, land settlement by others than soldiers, so long as they are of our own British races and of the desirable kind. For settlers who can and will farm, not only produce from the land the first essentials of living for we who have land aplenty and for those abroad whose land is inadequate for their own support, but they also quicken the wheels of industry in urban centres. The land is really the first movement in the cycle of industry and progress, and to that national asset Canada must look as the basis of her wealth. And in the land's richness is not only included the agricultural prolificness, but all that grows thereon or is found beneath—its mines and forests.

ANOTHER REFERENDUM.

A CONTEMPORARY suggests that a referendum be submitted to the people on the question of increased indemnities for legislators. Oh, come now, don't encourage our legislators in shirking the courage of their convictions in this or any other measure. Don't encourage this referendum principle until it becomes a fad. Members are sent to the Legislature as fit and proper persons to represent the people and to serve the Province's best interests. Rereferendums on every little measure will stimulate representation in the House by men unwilling or unable to shoulder the responsibilities of office. The best servants of the people have been leaders of men, men of strong character, courag and conviction.

In this matter of indemnities our legislators should know what their duties are costing them in lost time expenses and so forth, as things go these days of "high everything." We think the people are quite content to leave that question with the House—and especially so that great mass of the people who are periodically striking themselves for more pay to meet the ever-increasing cost of living. The tendency these days is for the laborer to estimate his own worth and fix his own hire, and probably our legislators accept that principle as applicable to themselves. But underlying that principle there is, in some industrial organizations, at any rate, an earnest desire to give value for value received, and we have no reason to doubt that with the majority of our legislators that same earnest desire obtains.

BROTHERHOOD OF MAN.

SIR RICHARD WINFREY is an enthusiastic advocate of the brotherhood of man as exemplified, perhaps, in the truest sense of the term, amongst the Allied soldiers at the front. There, indeed, we saw a brotherhood, a fraternal companionship of each for all and all for each which offered an ideal which it was hoped would be adopted in peaceful life. But, alas, nations are still warring, the United States stands apart from its allies as to the peace treaty, the world is teeming with unrest, and the promised era of live-and-let-live finds us in a state of live-who-can.

It is a large question, this brotherhood of man, and Sir Richard needs all the moral and practical support of thinking men to promulgate its principles among a people beset today by the ever-increasing cost of living, the ever-growing suspicion of profiteering, the continual depreciation in the dollar's power of purchase.

Sir Richard is a gentleman to be admired in his broad, philanthropic views and practices, his splendid part in making it possible in his own country for men to acquire small holdings of land, and for his loyalty to the ex-service men in regard to land settlement. These are steps toward ushering in a state of man's brotherhood; and Sir Richard Winfrey's participation in them shows an earnest desire than man, just plain man, should come into his reward as a result of his great sacrifices in defence of this Empire in which there is really enough for all, with plenty to spare for those not so inherently blessed by economic advantages and opportunities.

Sir Richard is optimistic of the future, and let us be optimistic, too. He is a strong man, and let us hope that many like him will arise in Canada to lead toward that goal of settled normal economic world conditions all hope for—when industrial strife shall have ceased, and when men's thoughts shall turn literally toward social, industrial and national reconstruction on the lines of "brotherhood."

OIL PROSPECTS.

THE OIL QUESTION is a vital one in its relation to this age's increased call upon its use for motor cars, ocean boats, motor boats and such like conveyances, but what of the future? According to the Westminster Gazette, that can only be judged by present conditions. The United States has, according to the Boston News Bureau, reported through "Firestone Current Events," produced 57 per cent. of the world's output of 7,000,000,000 barrels of oil since 1859. With the Mexican fields, developed largely by American capital, it is supplying the bulk of the world's requirements now. It is evident from the latest statistics, published by the Bureau of mines, that this cannot be maintained indefiniel, owing to the huge increase in domestic consumption. At the close of 1919 there were 292 refineries in operation, with a daily capacity of 1,356,355 barrels of crude oil, and when al lthe new refineries are completely equipped this midsummer there will be a potential surplus refining capacity over the supply of petroleum of 614,707 barrels. The production of gasoline in 1919 showen an increase of ten per cent. over 1918, while the production of kerosene increased 28 per cent. And this is what is very important, while gas and fuel oil went up only four per cent., the use of bunker oil for vessels engaged in foreign trade increased 114 per cent. during 1919. The large increase in domestic consumption of gas and fuel oil caused stocks to decline rapidly even though exports decreased 303,000,000 gallons. Much the same thing is to be found in the case of gasoline stocks, which increased during 1919 from 297,326,963 gallons to 446,793,431 galoins, but the exports declined by about 190,000,000 gallons during the year, while the domestic consumption increased 309,000,000 gallons. And the situation will not be made easier by the stupendous production of cars, and trucks, and tractors that is going irresistibly on. Passenger car production in the United States this year is estimated at 1,700,000 vehicles, aggregating at least 34,000,000 horse-power, though more than one authority makes out that the prodution plans are for 3,000,000 new vehicles, with a possible production of 2,500,000. The number of new motor trucks in hand amounts to 305,142, which will raise the total from 700,000 to 800,000 trucks. Add to them the immense new tractor output, the ever-increasing number of stationary plants, the mounting use of oil for driving large and small ships, and take in the prospect of seeing 20,000,000 passenger cars alone in use in a few years, and it will be seen that the United States will shortly be hard pressed to meet her own requirements in the mattes of oil. And that is why she is sending her experts to discover new sources of supply in Europe.

STEEL AND SHIPPING INTERESTS.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE Steel Corporation's proposed merger of Canadian steel and shipping interests is a matter of vast national concern, says the Ottawa Journal. As such it is proper that Parliament should discuss and examine it in all its aspects, and particularly in all its bearings upon the public interest.

In pursuing such a course, however, it is to be hoped that mere declamatory speeches, based on demagogy and little else, will be avoided. What the public demands is not rhetorical denunciations or eulogies of trusts and mergers as such, but a fair and reasoned examination of the merits and demerits of the proposition in the light of the national interest. If it can be shown that there is over-capitalization, that there is stock-watering to a point where the public interest is menaced, then it will become the Government's duty to see to it that such a danger is removed.

If, on the other hand, it can be demonstrated that the merger is what its authors profess it to be, namely an honest, legitimate endeavor to conserve and use the Empire's resources for the Empire's gain, to promote inter-Imperial trade by developing Imperial assets, then there is no sensible reason why the enterprise should not receive all possible encouragement and support.

COMMON SENSE.

(Hamilton Spectator.)

An attempt by the State of Missouri to have declared illegal the Migratory Bird Treaty recently signed between Canada and the United States has been frustrated by the United States Supreme Court. The court holds that where a nation's food supply is endangered the Federal Government has the right to interfere regardless of the doctrine of state rights. Bird lovers everywhere will rejoice at this common sense decision.

HOW TO CURE CRIMINALS

Judge Ben Lindsay of Denver has passed twenty years in helping wayward youngsters to become right thinking, has taken up the crimes of society against criminals. He seeks to cure bad people rather than to demand vengeance for what they have done.

"I am not a maudlin sympathizer with criminals," he said, "but I am a sincere sympathizer with victims of circumstances, and when a person is placed on trial, I am for placing society on trial at the same time.

"My absorbing plan now is to institute courts of chancery to try tain adult offenders. In these equity procedure would prevail.

"We have had the system in practice in Colorado for some years and it works. What I want is to see it adopted in every state.

"To acelerate the move, I am to appear before the National Bar Association in St. Louis, in August, and argue the proposal.

Hanged for Stealing

"When I was in England Lord Lyton took me to the Old Bailey Court and told me of how his father had seen a young girl sentenced to be hanged for stealing a bolt of cloth, and how her baby was torn from her arms as she went to the galows.

"And when I returned to Denver, we had a case of a young girl arrested for stealing. She tried to kill herself. The law tried to be inexorable, but it was shown that her mother was consumptive, her father was dead; and she had the support of the family on her frail shoulders—and she had yielded to temptation.

"Now, to find the cause of crime is just as important as to punish criminals. A doctor, when he treats a typhoid case, does not stop at the patient; he seeks to find where the typhoid comes from.

"I no longer classify people as good or bad; but just as people; and in what are known as bad people you cannot cure badness without knowing the cause.

"This chancery court wil do that. It will be a moral hospital.

His Plan Explained

"Cases coming before it can be referred by the Chancellor to a referee chosen as the best qualified person to pass on the defendant's situation, merits and demerits, and the way to develop him or her into something worth while.

"What is needed is not new laws, but what I term 'humanartistry'—an artistry that will recreate character and develop good.

"The present system of criminal procedure is purely mechanical. The chancery system would be spiritually developing, and would use justice in place of vengeance.

"At present, we only have violence as a remedy, and violence always praduces violence.

"I firmly believe my idea will bring about great reforms, for it will reform the crimes of the State against criminals as well as the crimes of criminals against the State.

"The State never can gain in turning a human being into a beast.

"Criminals must be restrained, and while restrained, if possible, cured. But our present system is no more than a stupid course of brutality and vengeance."

The Employment Service of the Department of Labor reports that returns from the Dominion and Provincial offices of the employment service of Canada for the week ending April 24 again show a higher placement figure. An increase is noted in most of the provinces, the Maritime Provinces establishing a new record of placements while a nominal decline was registered in Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia. THIEVES BROKEN IN Lindsa, May 11.—At an early hour Sunday morning sneak thieves entered the residence of Mr. Peter Kennedy corer Glenelg and St. Lawrence sts. Entrance was gained by removing a storm window on the west side of the house. They carried off a quantity of goods from the cellar and left by a door on the east side placing their spoil in an automobile in waiting. A neighbor heard the car, and dressing quickly, hurried after Constable Parkes. When the officer arrived an inspection of the house was made when it was found that the cellar was the only place visited. The police are working on the case.

RESTORE CASINO AT OSTEND

Famous Pleasure Resort, Devastated by Huns, Is Being Rapidly Put in Good Condition.

After nearly five years of war Ostend is resuming ordinary life, as far as possible under present conditions, with the reopening of the famous casino, says the Pall Mall Gazette.

Less than twelve weeks ago, says a Reuter telegram, the great salons of the casino were a scene of devastation and wanton destruction. Although occupying so prominent a position on the sea front, the buildings themselves escaped the constant bombardment from sea and air that has transformed so many of the beautiful hotels and villas along the Digue into heaps of rubble, and the use of nine tons of glass has repaired all the damage thus occasioned, but the Germans showed their usual thoroughness in gutting and defiling the salons themselves.

Every stick of furniture was taken away, beautiful tapestries were slashed and torn by German bayonets and every mirror in the halls was removed, together with the copper candelabra in the salons and the beautiful copper staircase.

Not content with robbery, the Germans defiled the rooms in nameless ways and, in fact, left the whole place in a state that would have shamed any animal inhabiting a stable. But since February a miracle has been wrought and but for the fact that some of the more valuable fittings are at present only temporarily replaced by imitation, there will be no evidence of the war, so far as the casino is concerned, when it reopens soon.

RATHER OVERDID THE THING

Friends of Candidate for Government Appointment Laid the Flattery on a Bit Thick.

John L. McNabb, attorney, tells this one on himself: "When I was a candidate for United States district attorney in this district several years ago, my friends procured documents and testimonials without number to substantiate the desired appointment, and a book full of this eulogistic matter was forwarded to President Taft. An outsider reading the documents would have supposed I was a candidate for admission into the heavenly kingdom, so unreserved were the commendations.

"Not long ago I met ex-President Taft while he was in this city. He has a remarkable memory. Shaking me by the hand, he said: 'When I finished reading the grandiloquent reports in your favor some years ago I pictured to myself a man possessed with angels' wings and fit to be the American ambassador extraordinary to the heavenly kingdom. I supposed you were dead at the time, for the report read like an epitaph on a tombstone, so remarkable were the testimonials of your friends in your behalf.'"—San Francisco Chronicle.

Question of Dress.

Few of the picturesque tribal costumes that depart in main essentials from the dress found convenient by western civilization have succeeded in maintaining their traditional characteristics. The Roumanian people are among those whom the war has caused to forsake a distinctive national male attire. This, in its main lines, recalled the costume of the Roman legionaries, which was adopted by the nation when Roumania formed the Roman Province of Dacia. It consisted of a short white tunic, "bag-trousers" of white wool, and a curiously embroidered coat. Many of these garments were carried away as loot by invaders during the war, and the relief garments sent in from France which are of more conventional design, are expected to drive the national costume into disuse. Heavy demands, however, will doubtless be made upon it in the field of masquerade and musical comedy.

Coffee Instead of Booze.

If the dope of Mr. Manuel Gorzyl is correct coffee will supplant booze and coffee houses will stand where the wet drinks once held forth. Mr. Gorzyl, who by the way is from Porto Rico, bases his predictions upon what already has happened in his own country, which recently went dry. From statistics, he says Porto Ricans are drinking 75 per cent more coffee now than before prohibition went into effect. "There is no demand for the so-called soft drinks," declared Mr. Gorzyl, "and there will be no increased demand for such drinks in your own country. Coffee will become the favorite drink between meals as it is now at meals. Coffee shops will take the place of corner saloons."

WHOLESALE EXECUTIONS

Revolutionists Overtake Carranzas Troops.

El Paso, Texas, May 10.—Mexican revolutionists overtook and dispersed the trops escorting President Carranza in his flight from Mexico City "causing them serious losses," according to a message from General Alvaro Obregon to Governor De La Huerta, Supreme Commander of the Liberal constitutionalist army, made public here today.

General Obregon detailed the capture of Mexico City, confirmed the report of a wholesale execution of military prisoners at Mexico City by Gen. Francisco Murguia before the Carranza leader fled the capital, and told of further states to join the revolution and of the capture of Puebla City, one of the largest towns in Mexico. Among the victims were Generals Triana, Lechuga, Artigas, Roberto Ce Judo ,and others, according to Gen. Obregon.

Women Can Take Degrees

OXFORD, "the Home of Lost Causes," has given the lie to its ancient reputation, and stands up boldly for the women. It might be regarded as a great forward step, if the war had not given Englishwomen a status that makes this act of Oxford's somewhat old-fashioned. The congregation in this ancient seat of learning has at last voted the right of woman to the full reward of her labors after being taught and examined, which latter privilege she has long enjoyed. "The woman scholar has been knocking at the gates of Oxford University for a generation or so," says the London Telegraph, "demeaning herself, let it be added in fairness, in a manner wholly creditable to her sex." The Telegraph finds all kinds of justification for the action of the congregation, and calls the roll of the great achievements of women, even saying, "But for Queen Elizabeth, who, at sixteen, revealed a man's power of application to her books, the British Empire might not have been founded." Now it summarises the new liberties bestowed:

"Oxford's new statute carries the movement for the emancipation of women to lengths which would have caused many dons of former days to recoil in nervous dread. They are to wear the academical dress; admission to university lectures and institutions is to be denied them by the Vice-Chancellor only in special cases; graduates will be qualified to act as examiners in all university examinations, and they will have their places on the governing and deliberative bodies. Perhaps in the future women students may be seen taking part in the lofty debates of the union, where young orators first learn the arts which fit them for public life. It is characteristically English that, once the outer trenches of reform have been carried, the movement rushes forward, experiencing little resistance until the heights are carried."

Since educated women have invaded almost all the learned professions, it was inevitable that the "old universities would have to bring themselves into line with the new dispensation." But we find:

"Oxford has had to take much thought before capitulating for the very reason that because women—or at least some women—fell little short of being angels, the ancient statutes are not in all respects fitted for general extension to meet their needs. Prof. William M. Geldart, a Fellow of All Souls, who constituted himself the champion of the women students, admitted that 'there were many portions of existing statutes that were either obsolete or might be found inappropriate.' It is admitted, for instance, that what he euphemistically described as 'the ordinary proctorial methods' of enforcing discipline could not be applied to women. On the other hand, the university is opening to them all the degrees, except those in theology, for which Holy Orders are still required as a condition. Whether that limitation will continue is open to some doubt."

The Manchester Guardian refrains from "exulting over those who so long kept women students a kind of semi-members of the universities of Oxford and Cambridge." It finds reasons for the present grant in the recently changed status of women as a whole which strikes at man's opposition with heavier blows than the positive force of a few women's accomplishments:

"The war has been pretty searching in its dealings with all the old arguments against the admission of women to full comradeship as citizens. The last refuge of the hard-pressed anti-feminist in pre-war days was the argument that as women could not fight for the state, in the physical senses, therefore they ought to be dogged by corresponding disqualifications for serving it in peace. It was a queer piece of mock logic. It was answered a long time ago, when the Medea of Euripide's play said she would rather face three battles than one confinement. She was quite right. And now war itself has changed, as though to make the old fallacy still more clearly fallacious. The late war, during its course, was coming more and more to call for passive as distinct from active physical courage. The element of hand-to-hand fighting, though fervently written up by both sides, was relatively insignificant. Had the war gone on for a few more years our troops in the west would have been living underground, from the front to the coast, and the Germans doing much the same on their side. The amount of efficiency of bomb-fire from the air were increasing out of all proportion to those of any other form of attack; the distinction between front line and other troops, in respect of exposure, was rapidly diminishing, and in 1918, the women of the W.A.A.C. at Abbeville were for some weeks as much bombed as front line troops in an average sector had been shelled in 1915. The ultimate development coming into distant view when the war stopped was a kind of war in which the whole of each side's territory would be attacked by the other almost as freely from bombing by aviators as any other form of attack; the distinction between soldiers and civilians would diminish until it might disappear. If this smiling future should ever be realized for us by any of our lovers of war at any price, women and men would be equally combatant. They would suffer alike from attack, and as attacking would be mainly an aviator's job, and plenty of women are sure to take to aviation soon, they would probably be busy in attacking too. The growth of scientific warfare is not kind to people who wanted to keep women out of the vote because they would not have shone in one of the strong man events that used to be war."

Firing While Submerged.

Just as the war ended, the British navy had, ready to put into commission, large submarines which, among other novel features, could fire submerged. They are armed with a 12-inch gun mounted so that it could fire with only its muzzle out of water. The submarine had to rise to the surface to reload, but the whole process could be executed in only half a minute.

Wedded Enroute

By SAIDEE E. BALCOM

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

The newly selected clergyman for Merton stood looking dismally across a barren expanse of meadow, sparsely sheltered inside of a board structure, one end of which was entirely exposed to the elements.

He had been informed by letter by his new parishioners that he would be met by wagon or by a light hand-car which twice a day brought freight, and sometimes passengers, from Merton along a seven-mile abandoned narrow-gauge spur. Neither wagon nor hand-car had appeared, and almost with resentment Rev. Joel Mannierre stood viewing the unfamiliar landscape.

He ran out into the middle of the road and waved his arms as an automobile driven by a pleasant-faced young man, a very charming girl of about seventeen at his side, slowed up.

"Please excuse me," spoke the forlorn one, "but I am a stranger, and was to have been met here by somebody. I am the new pastor of the Merton church. Can you direct me how to reach that town?"

"Why, jump right in!" cried Alan Ware, open-heartedly.

"I think I understand," spoke up Lucille Durland. "We passed a wagon broken down in a rut some ways down the road, and it must be the one delegated to see that you were taken care of."

"As it is, make yourself comfortable in the back seat and we will get you to welcome and comfort in a jiffy!" said Alan. "I am not much of a church man, but Lucille, here, has devoutness enough to make up for a whole neglectful community."

It was very plain to Reverend Manniere that he was in the company of two heartsome beings, very much in love with each other.

Lucille told him a lot as to his new charge, and the clergyman warmed towards the bright-spirited young fellow, who kept up an animated conversation until the reverend gentleman was landed in the hotel at Merton.

Alan and Lucille were secretly engaged. She lived with her stepfather at the edge of Merton, and behind her home was a shed where the hand-car was stored. Lucille's mother was dead and her stepfather, a crusty, exacting old tyrant, and a servant were her sole home companions. Alan left her a few hundred feet from the house, for Mr. Durland had a decided aversion to beaux, and had told Lucille she must not think of engagement or marriage for at least two years to come.

"Wednesday afternoon, Lucille," were Alan's parting words.

"Yes, if you must have your way. Oh, dear! I fear there will be a scene when father learns the truth."

"It's the only way to insure our happiness," insisted Alan. "I'll come at about three, in the automobile. You be all ready, and we'll spin to Verden and be back, man and wife, before your father gets home."

And Wednesday at three o'clock Alan Ware drove up in front of the Durland place. The servant liked him and, admitting him, told him that Lucille would be downstairs in a few minutes. Alan was impatiently awaiting the appearance of his lady love when the servant burst into his presence, alive with excitement.

"Mr. Ware," she fluttered, "Mr. Durland is coming tearing down the street like mad. I don't know why, but if you do, and your idea is to go somewhere with Lucille, you had better hurry."

"That fellow, Ware!" panted Mr. Durland, a few minutes later dashing into the house. "That's his automobile outside. He's trying to steal a march on me! Where is he, Lucille?"

"Mr. Ware was here a minute ago," reported the servant, "and Miss Lucille was up in her room."

But Alan had disappeared, and, Lucille, too. Warned by the servant, they had stolen out the back way. The dauntless Alan resolved that the elopement should not be a fizzle. Had he not the marriage license in his pocket? Lucille was all unnerved, but she followed his instructions. They had reached the hand-car shelter.

"It's the only way," declared Alan, and settled the old but light vehicle across the rails. "Now, then, dear, for terminus and a dash on foot to Verden before your father can overtake us!"

Richard Durland uttered a hollow roar of rage and discomfiture as he saw his stepdaughter and Alan speeding down the rails. Then he hurried around the house and jumped into Alan's automobile.

From the hand-car the fugitives could discern and comprehend this maneuver. Whenever the road beyond the cut came within view of Alan, he could see the automobile keeping pace with them. Turning a curve he made out a figure walking between the rails.

"Oh!" spoke Lucille. "It's Mr. Manniere!"

"What luck! Hi, get aboard! We need you," cheerily hailed Alan, and the hand-car slowed down, and then dashed on again, with three passengers aboard.

The automobile reached the end of the spur first. As the hand-car arrived Durland made a dash for his stepdaughter.

"Reached you in time!" he shouted.

"No, too late," dissented Alan, all smiles. "Mr. Durland, allow me to introduce you to our accommodating friend, Rev. Mr. Manniere. He has just married us, en route."

The body of eorge Wise, a returned soldier who had been missing since Friday, was found in the ship channel at the foot of Cherry street, Toronto.

COULDN'T EAT PET

Children Balked at Idea of Making Meal of "Jerry."

Outspoken Revolt at Dinner Table Resulted in Neighbors Having Poetic Revenge and Enjoying Dainty Dish of Roast Pig.

A well-known physician in town has a family of small children who are crazy about animals, and every stray dog or cat is always sure of a good home if they happen to wander near the doctor's spacious residence. Indeed, the doctor calls his home the "Zoo Annex," for it harbors not only dogs and cats galore, but three canaries, two white mice, five pigeons, one conversational and profane parrot and a brown squirrel, so an animal or two more doesn't count.

Somebody gave the children a baby pig, a nice little pink-and-white pig with funny little squinty eyes and a cute little curl to its tail.

The children were wild with joy over their new pet, and installed it in the laundry, but evidently the little pig didn't adapt himself to his surroundings, and persisted in staying up late nights and giving voice to such lugubrious lamentations that the doctor christened him "Jeremiah." This name was too long for the children to manage, so they called him Jerry and loved him to death.

Jerry grew so fat he could hardly waddle, but he was great fun and frolicked with the youngsters and had a grand time, and even his squeal had a joyous note in it by day, but once night fell Jerry seemed to grow so low in his mind that he refused to be comforted and his tones were as shrill and piercing as a banshee's.

He grew so big that he looked like a young mountain lion in the arms of the children, and occasionally he would escape to the front of the house and waddling up the steps, would lie down and drop into slumber, so that visiting patients had to fall over or step over the reclining Jerry. Then to add to the general discomfort his squeals grew deeper, like unto the vocal efforts of a basso profundo, so the doctor, losing all patience, declared that Jerry must pass on and pass out. So one day when his children were in school Jerry took his first automobile ride, ending up at the butcher's, who had orders to return Jerry right side up with care, ready for the oven and the Sunday dinner.

The children, in ignorance of this foul deed, searched high and low for the missing pig, but he couldn't be found, and after weeping violently for the first day, grew resigned to their loss, after the manner of children, and seemed to forget him.

Sunday came and the family assembled at the dinner table. Norah, the cook, came in, bearing aloft the plump form of Jerry roasted to a turn, with his tail turned in a saucy ringlet and an apple in his mouth.

There was a moment of absolute silence, fraught with significance for the doctor and his wife, then one of their eagle-eyed youngsters shrieked: "It's our Jerry," and set up a dismal howl which the rest soon joined and fixing their guilty parents with uncompromising looks demanded to know why their beloved pig was being served up as a burnt offering.

They were aided and abetted by Norah, the cook, who, wiping a furtive tear from her eye with the corner of her apron, muttered: "Shure, 'tis mesilf thinks it a sin to murder the baste."

Not one mouthful of the martyred Jerry would any of the mourning youngsters take, and the parents suddenly lost all desire for roast pig and decided that the late Charles Lamb's dissertation of that delicacy was all wrong.

Jerry, the baked, was removed without delay and sent to a neighbor's, who took a poetic revenge in eating the animal that had squealed them into insomnia for weeks past.—Buffalo Courier.

Refuses to Leave Prison.

A man sentenced to Sing Sing prison in May, 1917, has already overstayed his sentence more than seven months, and refuses to go home. He is working with a construction gang building the new prison, and the warden says he does as much work as any four men. The pay allowed prisoners by the state amounts to 1½ cents a day. This man was greatly relieved when he was told that the prison authorities would not shut off his pay to make him apply for parole, which he has so far steadfastly refused to do.

HAWAII GROWS.

Last Census Shows Big Increase in Population.

In the ten-year period from 1910 to 1920 the population of the territory of Hawaii increased from 191,909 to 249,992, a net gain of 58,083, according to official statistics of the latest census, just made public, says the Honolulu Star-Bulletin. The city and county of Honolulu, which includes all of the island of Oahu, gained 35,578, while the city of Honolulu proper now has a population of 80,369, as against 52,183 ten years ago, an increase of 28,186. The city proper now has almost as large a population as the entire island of Oahu had a decade ago.

It must be kept in mind that in the census figures no account is taken of the naval and military forces stationed on this island. And, unless the United States in carrying out its policy of economy leaves the country almost defenceless, we shall have here in the next few years approximately 25,000 service men. The civilians of the city and county of Honolulu now number 117,606, which is Honolulu's actual and directly tributary population.

Making allowance for the service men now here and soon to come, we can conservatively figure that Honolulu's population, for the city and county, will soon be near the 150,000 mark.

A War Every Two Years.

There is a war somewhere on the earth, on an average, every two years. That is the record of history which confronts the Peace Conference when it turns aside from the urgent business of dictating a peace to Germany, to think about contriving some plan that will make war impossible hereafter.

A casual glance down the list of wars since Napoleon's time, indeed, might suggest to some minds the question if it would be really wise to set up an agency that would "guarantee" the world against war—assuming the possibility of securing any such guarantee.

The apparent fact is that wars have sometimes accomplished a great deal of good for the world. They have settled important moral questions perhaps about as often as they have the question of which side is stronger.

Efficiency in Japan.

That within five or six years the Japanese factory efficiency and skill in machine tools plants will be developed to a point where products will measure up to any turned out by American manufacturers, was the view expressed to U. S. Commercial Attache James F. Abbott at Tokio recently by an American iron and steelmaker of prominence.

Women in Temple Inn.

Of the five women who were permitted to dine at a recent banquet at the Inner Temple and Middle Temple of the ancient Inns of Court and Chancery, in London, England, thus breaking a custom of several hundred years, one of the women, Miss Helen Normanton, was the first woman to enter her name as a student at the Middle Temple.

"Only Man is Vile."

The Quai d'Orsay, where the peace delegates gathered, contains soft, sumptuous carpets, gilded chairs, heavy square armchairs, artistic marble tables, wonderful damasks, which have so often figured in former descriptions of brilliant assemblies since the early days of the third Napoleon. Some connoisseurs of these objects demand that the sumptuous carpet be covered or removed, in order to allow the plenipotentiaries of those heroic countries to smoke cigarettes at their ease, even when absorbed by passionate debates.

FAITH HAD A HARD TEST.

New G.W.V.A. President Keeps Calm in the Turmoil.

Faith is a strong characteristic of R. B. Maxwell, of Winnipeg, the new Dominion president of the G.W.V.A. It was amply shown at the big convention in Montreal when he was presiding just after being elected to office.

There had been a decided disagreement in the ranks of the delegates over the policy of enlarging the scope for new members. It looked as if there would be a serious split in the ranks of the G.W.V.A. The meeting had broken up without formal adjournment and faces registered gloom, dismay and irritation.

Mr. Maxwell walked into the room where the reporters were rushing the "story" to their papers. His face wore his usual merry smile. He made only a passing reference to the excitement just over. "Everything will turn out all right," he declared, and almost in the same breath began a totally irrelevant story about a sergeant-major in his old battalion, the Eighth.

Everything did turn out all right and this nonchalant faith was justified.

Leadership is not a new thing to Mr. Maxwell. He was prominent as a labor man of sane ideas and moderate views long before going overseas. He was prominent at the first Dominion Convention of the G.W.V.A. in Winnipeg in 1917 when the delegates were not more than a round dozen. Three years later when the delegates numbered 300 he was chosen Dominion president.

forms of religion, especially in the north of France. They were socialists of the Carl Mar class, who believed that religion should be swept from their lives before they could attain their objects.

Movement in France.

Lille, France, was the first place where that movement started and this was the stronghold of French socialism. He told of the wonderful work in this city by the English delegation, even to the using of the socialist hall for their first meeting. Some of the men after the meeting said they had never heard that Jesus Christ was a carpenter before. There were240 in the English delegation, and every man paid his own expenses.

Brotherhood Spread.

As the outcome of that meeting a Brotherhood was formed and from that flourishing Brotherhool of Lille others sprang and, at the outbreak of war, there were nearly 40 in that part of France.

During the War.

When the war came it seemed that all they had been striving for had been smashed. They officers of the Brotherhool were all men of military age and enlisted. No less than 500 societies had to close down because there was no one to carry on.

Appeals From Lille.

Then in the day of disaster a letter from the president of Lille Brotherhood put new life into them. He told of the suffering and starvation in that city and how all the men had gone to the front. In 10 days they took food, clothing and money to Lille and that was the first case of assistance gone to the continent. The Brotherhood were pioneer in this relief work.

He told a pathetic story of a meeting in September, 1914, in Lille. It was a meeting of widows, held within sound of the guns of the advancing Germans. Later distress was heard of in other districts, and so the work of relief went on and on.

Canadian Brotherhood took up the work and contributed in the neighborhood of $200,000 to the relief work in France, Belgium and Serbia. Fro mthe last named country the greatest call for help came. Thousands of men and women lost their lives trying to cross the Albanian mountains in the depth of winter during the terrible retreat. Over 200,000 children under 15 years died in that way.

Heart-rending Appeals.

Pathetic and heart-rending letters of appeal came from that country. Refugees also came from the stricken country. There were children hardly fifteen, but with faces that gave the appearance of being 35 years old.

He had been to Servia three times on this work. The Government made an investigation of destitution among the children and found at least 600,000 boys and girls in a state of destitution: 200,000 of them were orphans with no relatives known. He saw a thousand children get nothing but a basin of soup for a meal.

Government Assists.

The Serbian Government had now co-operated with them in educating these children and it was estimated that $100 would cover the cost of educating one child. So far they had been able to look after 50,000 of these Serbian children in this way.

Mr. Ward went on to tell of the gratitude expressed by Serbian soldiers whose children had been saved by the Brotherhood. This relief work had resulted in unconsciously extending the Brotherhood in the Balkans, which would have the result of pacifying that troublesome part of Europe.

Sir Richard Winfrey.

Sir Richard Winfrey, who followed Mr. Ward, expressed his pleasure in being present at such a meeting in Peterborough, Canada, in consequence of his connection with Peterborough, England. He had been a resident of old Peterborough for 25 years, and had taken part in the local government of the city. He brought greetings from Peterborough, England. He was favorably impressed with the evident prosperity surrounding this city, and he would carry these tidings back to England with him in July.

Brotherhood in Peterborough.

Speaking of the Brotherhood Movement, he related how he came to join the movement 17 years ago. In his town the Brotherhood now had an instrumental band which assisted in the musical program. He had not been absent from these Sunday meetings ten Sundays in any year since the commencement. In connection with the society in Peterborough many different spheres had been entered, such as a library and a savings bank.

1,500 Delegates at Conference.

In the year 1912 he attended a Brotherhood conference at Birmingham. It was his first experience of the great movement. There were 1,500 delegates from all over the United Kingdom. He was greatly enthused by that gathering and started the Federation in the eastern counties in which Peterborough was situated. They were now all linked up under the great council, of which Mr. Ward was president. Sir Richard appealed to the Canadian Brotherhoods to get linked up in time for the next congress at Washington in October.

He was very much struck with the appeal at St. Thomas, where over $900 was promised for the good york of the movement. The success Chatham had subscribed was $1,920, and had also been achieved at Guelph and other places in Ontario. At Woodstock the judge took charge of the appeal. He hoped that a committee would be formed as a result of this meeting to take up the good work.

The Duty of Victory.

The people of the British Empire had been blessed by an overwhelming victory. It brought with it the necessity of a great mission for the Brotherhood of mankind. They must practice the great virtues of mercy and forgiveness.

The condition of the world today was pitiable, and offered the most awful spectacle in history. People must realize the necessity of the Brotherhood of mankind. Take for example the case of poor struggling Armenia which required to be guided in its quest for liberty. Then there was Egypt and Ireland which were causing trouble. He hoped that Lloyd George's present measure would have the desired effect in Ireland. Then there was the question of Palestine, which was not an easy one.

Abolish Militarism.

Brotherhood meant the abolition of militarism. It was gone in the British Empire and Germany, but it was still in force in the rest of Europe and even the United States had not seen fit to drop conscription. They should welcome these new and difficult times which, as Mr. Ward had said, heralded the beginning of a new age.

Old ideas of class and relationship had been wiped out, as also had ideas of international relations. They were out to work for a better and a happier world and to prevent falling back into the mistakes of the past. The great ideas of Brotherhood must spread and become world-wide, and a brotherhood of nations result.

"If you want a better social order you must produce a better man," said Sir Winfrey.

Lack of an ideal was death to a nation and death to an individual. The ideal ruled everywhere whether it was a true or a false ideal. Germany had a false ideal and fell. It was the mission of the Brotherhood to teach them to forget self in serving others. Ideals in the past had been false, bringing the vices of poverty and riches, and, in the end, the fall of nations.

It came to this conclusion: Amidst all our difficulties the situation could be summed up that the ideal state could only be created by ideal men and women. "We are the state," he said, "and we have got to get into our heart a conscience of right." We must get hold of this 75 per cent. of the population who do not attend church, and get them interested in religion.

To Help the Christian Church.

The Brotherhood was out to help the Christian church in that great work. He appealed for the different parts of the Empire to march hand in hand in this good work.

Rev. J. McKenzie.

Mr. Malott called upon Rev. J. McKenzie to give a few words. He stated that the hour was late, and that he would, therefore, say little. He appreciated the noble words of the speakers, and proposed a hearty thanks from the meeting to them for their eloquent and inspiring addresses.

This was seconded by Rev. Mr. Webb, who expressed his great pleasure at being privileged to do so.

The vote was carried with loud applause, to which Sir Richard responded fittingly. He proposed that Judge Huycke, Mr. Moore and Mr. Hartley form themselves into a committee to take charge of the appeal locally. He did not want to see the meeting evaporate without definite action.

Hymns were sung between the speakers' addresses, and the meeting closed with the National Anthem and the benediction by Rev. Robert Pogue.

BRITAIN AND THE JAPANESE TREATY

COLONIES WILL BE CONSULTED ON GREAT ALLIANCE PROPOSITION

Washington, May 11.—Australia, New Zealand and possibly Canada, will be consulted by the British Foreign Office before the British-Japanese defensive alliance is renewed, it was learned today. The date for notification of termination of the pact is July 1. There has been a good deal of anti-Japanese feeling in Australia and New Zealand, and on the western coast of Canada, therefore, it was deemed prudent to consult the Governments of these nations of the Empire before reaching a decision of renewing the agreement. However, it is considered virtually certain that the alliance will be renewed and continued indefinitely.

The treaty provides that should either Great Britain or Japan become involved in war, through "unprovoked attack or aggressive action" in "defense of its territorial rights or special interests" in the regions of eastern Asia, or of India, the other nation "will at once come to the assistance of its ally and will conduct the war in common."

VISITED PLANT OF QUAKER OATS

SIR RICHARD WINFREY MUCH INTERESTED IN BIG INDUSTRY

This morning Sir Richard Winfrey and his son, Mr. R. P. Winfrey, accompanied by Ald. Gordon and City Clerk Armstrong, visited the plant of the Quaker Oats Company There they were met by Mr. Cormack, superintendent of the factory, and Mr. Edwards, assistant superintendent, who escorted them over the plant. They were very much interested in the size of the factory, the appliances, machinery, elevators and methods of loading and unloading and were also particularly struck by the appearance of cleanliness about the mills.

Sir Richard was greatly impressed by the big gun which is used in the manufacture of puffed wheat and puffed rice. The visit to the Quaker Oats Company occupied practically the whole morning.

This afternoon Sir Richard and his son were taken for a drive into the country to see some of the agricultural land surrounding Peterborough. Not much time could be spent on this trip, however, as Sir Richard and his son left on the 3.20 p.m. C. P. R. train for Toronto. The city officials and His Honor Judge Huycke were at the station to bid him farewell.

Mr. Ward and Mr. Howell left for Toronto on the morning train.

WOULD DEVELOP DEEP WATERWAY

TRAFFIC EXPERTS AND HEADS OF INDUSTRIES ENTHUSIASTIC OVER PLAN

Marquette, Mich., May 11. — That rail transportation facilities in the Great Lakes States are greatly inadequate to take care of commerce and manufactured products, and that industry will always be weighted down under this handicap unless advantage is taken of every opportunity to develop waterways, was the declaration of traffic experts and heads of industries yesterday at the hearing held in this city by three members of the International Joint Commission relative to the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence deep waterway project.

More than one hundred prominent men of this upper peninsula of Michigan and of Wisconsin and Minnesota gathered here to present their arguments to the commissioners. About forty men spoke before the commission, outlining the resources of the region, its production in agriculture, mineral wealth, lumbering business and varied other manufactures, and the testimony tended to show that the opening of a lake to ocean channel in the St. Lawrence River would be a tremendous help to development of industry and agriculture and would clear up the ever-burdensome problem of transportation. It was an enthusiastic session and demonstrated the keen interest shown in the project by upper Michigan and Wisconsin.

GAVE DEFENDANT BENEFIT OF DOUBT

CHARGE OF SELLING CIGARETTES TO BOY, DISMISSED

Ernest Griffin, proprietor of the Montreal House, Aylmer street, was charged in police court this morning with selling cigarettes to a minor, one Alfred Marshall, aged 13 years.

Marshall's testimony in the witness box was slightly confusing and at times directly contradictory. He admitted that he had purchased cigarettes from the defendant, but could not say how many or just when. Under the cross-examination of Mr. F. D. Kerr, who was defending the accused, the witness broke down and started to cry. He stated that on the first occasion when he bought cigarettes from Griffin the defendant asked him if he was sixteen, and when he said that he was not, Griffin replied: "Well, put them in your pocket until you get outside."

Testifying on his own behalf Griffin stated that he had been eleven years in the business and knew the law concerning the selling of cigarettes to minors. He knew that Marshall was not sixteen, and would not have served him if he had asked for any, which he did not. To account for Marshall's testimony he stated that some time ago when Marshall was working for Mervin the butcher he had quarrelled with him when he delivered meat to his house, and that on this account he had complained to Mr. Mervin of it when he paid his bill.

A lively passage-at-arms occurred here between the Chief and Mr Kerr. The Chief rang Mr. Mervin up on the 'phone and requested him to give evidence. Mr. Kerr objected to the hearing of such collateral evidence, which he stated had no concern with the present case. The magistrate upheld the objection and Mr. Mervin was not called.

Mr. Kerr contended that in this case it was a point as to whether the boy's or the man's evidence should be accepted, and that it had been proven that the boy's evidence was confusing. Magistrate Dumble although not quite satisfied, was inclined to give the defendant the benefit of the doubt, and dismissed the case.

PREMIER WILL BE THERE FOR BUDGET

ANTICIPATION THAT PRESENT FORMS O FTAXATION WILL BE MAINTAINED

Ottawa, May 11.—Sir Robert Borden will leave New York for Ottawa tonight and will arrive at the capital in time to hear his new Finance Minister, Sir Henry Drayton, deliver his first budget on Wednesday afternoon.

The Premier's health is said to be considerably improved, but there is nobody here who would predict that he will remain for long as active Premier and leader. The general impression is that Sir George Foster will continue to lead the House until arrangements can be made for complete reconstruction. A general caucus of Government forces will be held shortly after the Prime Minister's return, and at this the whole question of the future of Union will be threshed out.

The budget proposals are a matter of conjecture at the present time. It is anticipated that the present forms of taxation will be maintained, including the income and excess profits taxes. Collections during the past year from the two sources totalled about a hundred millions, which is an amount much in excess of the total for any previous year. It is believed that the collections for the coming year will be even greater inasmuch as the machinery is now running more smoothly and the number of assessments has increased. There is talk of a tax being imposed on luxuries and also further talk of an excise duty being imposed on Canadian manufacturers who now enjoy protection.

Won't Talk in New York.

New York, May 10.—Sir Robert Borden, accompanied by Lady Borden, will leave for Ottawa tomorrow evening.

It is stated that the Premier finds himself greatly improved in health as a result of his sojourn in the south. The visit to New York was merely for the purpose of breaking the return journey to Canada, and while in this city Sir Robert refused to make any statements on public affairs. The Premier's party includes George W. Yates, his secretary, and I. W. Pugsley, of the Canadian Department of Railways.

SUGAR 9 CENTS IN QUEENSLAND

A REAL SOCIAL PARADISE DECLARES PREMIER THEODORE OF AUSTRALIA

New York, May 11.—"Ours is a real social paradise," declared Premier Edward Theodore, of Queensland, Australia, at the Labor Lyceum, Brooklyn, in referring to living conditions in his country.

"We have curbed the rent profiteer by passing adequate laws, and we are not troubled with exorbitant prices for sugar or meat. Sugar sells at 9 cents a pound and steak can be had for 16 cents," he declared.

"The Government owns all the grazing lands, the mines, and also operates the railroads. We have laws for the protection of widows and children and compensation laws for the employed."

The body of Mrs. Anna Wilson Johnston, widow of Robt. Johnston, was found in a foot of water in the horse trough in the barnyard on her sons' farm in Guelph township.

CONCERT PROGRAM AT ST. ALPHONSUS LYCEUM REPLETE WITH EXCELLENT TALENT

The concert put on by Miss McCabe in the St. Alphonsus Lyceum last night turned out to be a huge success. The limited accommodation of the hall was taxed to the utmost long before the curtain was rung up and every item on the program was listened to with rapt attention by a greatly impressed audience. The object of the concert, that of providing a phonograph for the House of Providence, was a mostworthy one and had the sympathy of the best-thinking people of the city.

The program was divided into two parts and was full of variety and interestin gall the way through. The first part included solos, recitations and a dance, and the second part took more the form of a sketch, in which humor was uppermost and the acting of a remarkably good character for amateurs.

In view of the reception given the concert last night and also the fact that the size of the hall prevented many who would have liked to have witnessed the performance from doing so, Miss McCabe has decided to repeat the concert again next Friday night at the Lyceum

OBITUARY

GERALDINE LANE.

The sad intelligence reached this city early this morning of the death in Windsor of Geraldine Lane, beloved wife of Orville Kenneally.

This news was received as a shock by deceased's many friends here, who had no intimation whatever of her illness, the immediate family being unaware of her condition up till yesterday.

Deceased, who was in her 23rd year, and a bride of only six months, was well known as a deservedly popular and highly esteemed young lady among a large circle of friends and acquaintances in Peterborough, to whom she had endeared herself by the charm of a genial personality and trustworthy nature.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Kenneally were born in this city and lived here sincechildhood, having taken up residence in Windsor after their marriage some months ago. Deceased is survived by her sorrowing husband, her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lane, Hunter street, city; two sisters, Helen, a nurse-in-training at St. Mary's Hospital, Rochester, and Hilda, at home. Also one brother, Jack, to whom, and the whole bereaved family, the sincere sympathy of a large circle of friends is extended in their bereavement.

One consolation in this untimely demise, if indeed there can be any, was the fact that deceased's mother reached her bedside before she passed away. The remains are expected to arrive in the city this afternoon and funeral arrangements will be made later.

PIRATES HOLD UP FRENCH LINER

BOARDED BOAT AT BATUM AND ROBBED WOMEN OF VALUABLES.

Constantinople, May 11.—Pirates held up the French packet Souirah, which left Batum on May 6 for Marseilles, and after robbing the passengers, went ashore in boats which they compelled members of the crew to man. Among those robbed were several women, whose husbands are connected with relief work in Armenia. They were fleeing before the Bolsheviki advance, and were compelled to give up their money and jewelry at the point of the revolver. The pirates boarded the steamer at Batum, either as passengers or members of the crew. On May 6th fifteen men sprang up from various parts of the ship, covered officers and passengers with revolvers and took possession. The women passengers were later taken off by a French destroyer. They arrived here on the 9th.

In Truth a Home

Everybody in the colony is so arranged and equipped that not only have they found a hospital but in very truth a home.

The patients who are able to do anything are allowed to work as many or as few hours per day as they themselves desire to.

The work consists of cutting of grass, clearing of bush and planting etc., etc. For every hour they labour they are paid as per a fixed scale and the amount which they earn is placed to their credit on their savings bank.

Once per week they have the opportunity of ordering little extras and luxuries from the town. One of the officers takes the list of orders per motor-boat up the river to Palembang and returns with parcels and packets nearly innumerable and what an interesting and important affair his return is.

At the distribution of the packages one hears an almost constant "tarima kaasi banjak" or "thank you very much" as each poor face beams forth the gladness and gratitude of the recipient.

If it does happen that one has during the past week proved indolent or inclined to shirk work the sight of all the others receiving their parcels brings such a rebuke to his laziness and an inspiration to industry that the next day usually finds him at work.

Although practically all the lepers are Mohammedans, our meetings are nevertheless well attended. There is much interest shown in the Bible lessons. After each meeting we usually devote an hour or so to talk frankly and freely with them over what had been said or sung, and they are no longer afraid to ask about matters that they have not been able to understand.

We try to place ourselves in their position and to see things from their standpoint as well as to remember their superstitions and strange ideas. It is often very interesting and not seldom amusing to learn from them their somewhat original and queer conception of things pertaining to the service of God.

The Gospel is, however, surely winning!

Before concluding let me give the readers a leaf from our daily life and work here.

Yesterday when I was trying to enjoy a few minutes rest from my work among and for the lepers and had sat down in my little garden hoping for quiet and pleasure among my few flowers, I was called from my day-dream by one of the native assistant nurses.

He told me that at the landing place on the river there was a small prauk (native dugout) with a leprous man in it and that he had asked to be taken in as a patient.

I went with the nurses and found the poor man who on seeing me clasped his hands and bowed himself as he beseeched in heart-rending desperation that I might have compassion on him and help him. He cried "hely me sir, help me sir, there is no one else will help me." I asked him to stand up so that I could see just what was the matter and what his condition was. He was, however, unable to rise and could only move his arms. The nurse who had called me carried the thin wasted body into one of the hospital wards.

After he had been given something to eat and felt a bit stronger I tried to find out who he was, where he came from and how he had arrived at "Koendoer" Leper Colony. He told me that he came from a native village far, far, in the interior and three years ago he had developed leprosy and was driven to the bush as an outcast.

He managed on the banks of the river to make for himself a little dug out and in this he lived, and catching with a string and a hook a few fish from the river and digging roots from the bush he had managed to keep body and soul together.

Slowly, however, he became worse and weaker and at last was no longer able to roam into the bush to search for roots or wild fruits. The few fish he was able to hook were now all that kept him from dying of starvation.

One day another native boat going up the river contained a fellow native who told him that away down the river, many days rowing, where the waters widened and flowed slowly on their way into the sea, there were some kind-hearted white people who had made a place for lepers like him and who would give him shelter and food.

It seemed too good to be true and for a few days he kept thinking about what he had heard.

Then he decided like the ancient lepers that if he stayed where he was he must die and to go even if it all turned out a disappointment could be no worse, he could but die.

So he untied his boat and rowed out into the current to drift down the river in hopes of falling in with these kind, white people. Floating and rowing further and further by day and night the mountains were left behind the highlands, steadily passed while the riverwas getting daily wider and the current less rapid. Thus the boat was carried on and on to what was to him the great unknown and as the days went by he began to have serious doubts if the news he had heard could really be true. He said to himself that he ought to have known that since his own people had turned him out to die, no whte strangers would be likely to trouble themselves about such as he.

On the ninth day when he was tired out and nearly dying of hunger, he saw on the further bank of the river a clearing in the great forest with beautiful houses a landing place with a boat moored to it and wondered what it could be. Other boats were here and there to be seen plying their way up and down on the waters and from a native rowing post he asked what Kampong (village) that was. The reply was that it was a hospital for lepers. He was astounded and overjoyed for this surely must be the place he was in search of and yet could it be possible for it looked so good and beautiful to his poor mind that he said it is far too fine for a poor miserable being such as he felt himself to be.

"But I am here now," he said, as he ended his story and added: "I want to stay here till I die. Oh, I am so tired, so tired! Yes, poor fellow after nine days and nights in that little canoe and almost without food was it a wonder that his weak hands could hardly hold the oars any longer. Yet in this way he had travelled some three hundred miles to find friends, rest and hope.

As I left him to sleep off some of his exhaustion I could not refrain from raising my heart-felt praise and thanks to God that He had found me worthy to labour for Him on behalf of such poor people who are by so many considered the outcasts of all society.

May God hasten the day when the terrible lot of the thousands of lepers still in the forest and living a life that is worse than death may be helped for this life and told of the Christ the hope and Saviour for the life to come.

All of the T.D.F.A. games were played as scheduled on Saturday. Chief interest centred in the Ulster-All Scots game, which the former won by 2 to 1.

RETURN SOLDIER WORKMEN ASK THAT PROGRAM BE ENLARGED

ORDERS FROM FRANCE READY

ADVOCATED GOVERNMENT SUBSIDIES TO PRIVATE BUILDING ENTERPRISES

(By Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, May 10.—Asking that the Government continue with a substantial shipbuilding program in order that as much work as possible be found for men now employed in various yards throughout the Dominion a deputation of returned soldier workers over one hundred strong waited upon Sir George Foster and members of the Cabinet today.

Orders From France.

In the memorandum submitted it was stated that the French Government was willing, if Canada would provide credit, to place orders for merchant marine vessels, which would keep Canadian yards busy at a high pressure for two or three years. The men also advocated an extension of our merchant marine, and the granting of the Government subsidies to private enterprises willing to build this year.

DECLARE MUST PURSUE SIMILAR COURSE AS EUROPEAN GOVERNMENTS

Ottawa, May 10.— Western supporters of the Government, in caucus today, practically decided to favor the principle of continuing the Canadian Wheat Board.

SAYS ADMIRAL SIMS LACKED PATRIOTISM

DECLARES HE ASPIRED TO BECOME HONORARY MEMBER BRITISH NAVY

(By Canadian Press.)

Washington, May 10.— Secretary Daniels, before the Senate Investigating Committee today made his long awaited reply to criticisms of Rear-Admiral W. S. Sims, on the United States navy's part in the war.

SIMS LACKED VISION

The American Naval Secretary's charges that Sims lacked vision, belittled the work of the American navy in contrast to the British, coveted British decorations and aspired to become an honorary member of the British Admiralty. He declared that officers supporting Sims' charges were largely "people with a grievance."

The testimony of other officers in possession of first hand knowledge, Secretary Daniels testified, "should be accepted by all openminded men as an absolute refutation of practically all of Admiral Sims' charges."

WOMAN OF PLEASURE MARRIES FOR MONEY

Alice Dane taught school in a poverty-stricken fishing village. Being young and beautiful and of gentle birth, she longed for wealth and all the luxuries and pleasures that went with it. So when Sir John Turnbull proposed marrige, she accepted and became "A woman Of Pleasure," at last. This is the title of the highly dramatic picture showing at the Grand Theatre for three days commencing next Thursday. It is Blanche Sweet's newest offering and her first production for Jesse D. Hampton for distribution by Pathe.

Shortly after the loveless marriage the action of the story shifts to British South Africa, where Sir John has vast mining interests. There a great and powerful love develops between Lady Turnbull and her husband's mine superintendent. The Zulus have been stealing Sir John's gold and an uprising follows durign which Alice is captured and held as hostage. Her lover comes to the rescue and a just Fate, in the guise of the vengeful Zulu Chief, removes the obstacle that stands between the happiness of these two.

The cast is a small big one—boasting such popular artists as Wheeler Oakman, Wilfred Lucas, Spottiswoode Aitken, Frederick Starr, Milton Ross, and that clever freckle-faced youngster, Wesley Barry.

WHOLESOME FUN AND CATCHY SONGS

KEEPINP UP WITH THE JONESES OFFERS TREAT TO ALL

A night of wholesome fun, splendid songs and a bewitching chorus of young misses that can sing and dance is in store for the lovers of good musical comedy with the announcement that Gus Hill's latest musical novelty "Keeping up With the Joneses," will be seen at the Grand tomorrow evening. Originality is the keynote of this brand new concoction of melody, song and hilarity which is founded on the popular cartoons of the same title created by Pop. Momand and published in the principal newspapers throughout the country. The book and lyrics are by John P. Mulgrew, and the music by Ed. Hutchinson. The management promises a big cast of well known musical comedy players, and one of the smartest choruses ever assembled.

AUDIENCE DELIGHTED WITH "SEVENTEEN"

ONE OF THE MOST WHOLESOME PLAYS OF PRESENT SEASON.

One of the most wholseome plays seen in Peterborough this season was "Seventeen" as produced at the Grand last night. It was humorous, youth giving and happy in its sincerity and the members of the cast must be given much credit in that they gave the impression that they wese actually living the verious episodes.

Thomas Kelly was perfect in his characterization of Willie Baxter, the youth just beginning to realize his coming manhood—life is never quite so important and serious as at that age—Elizabeth Black, the impish Jane, is the infant terrible of ten, in looks, in manners, in gestures and in that curious mixture of innocence. Lael Davies, who plays the part of Lola Pratt, the baby talk lady, has a certain fascination for all with whom she comes in contact. All the otherparts were particularly well taken and altogether "Seventeen" was one of the most delightful shows one could wish to see.

TYRONE POWER

COMING AGAIN TO GRAND, MONDAY MAY 24th

The presentation by Trans-Canada Theatres, Limited, of the eminent English actor, Mr. Tyrone Power, at the Grand, on Monday, May 24th, in a revival of "The Little Brother" the powerful drama by Milton Goldsmith and Benedict James, will doubtless be received with keen interest by local theatre-goers, for Mr. Power is one of the best known English actors throughout the entire Dominion.

It was in Montreal that Tyrone Power made his debut in the role of Brutus, a triumphant portrayal which was hailed by the leading dramatic critics of Canada and the United States, as the finest of the generation he also played here the remarkable role of "The Drainman" in "The Servant of the House."

His engagement to present the role of Father Petrovich, in "The Little Brother," for the Trans-Canada Theatres, Limited, is significant in, that it is their avowed policy to maintain a high standard in the selection of plays it will produce and in regard to the casts chosen to present them.

Mr. Power is supported by a notable company, including Mr. Harvey Hays, Mr. Walter Edwin, Mr. J. Irving White., Mr. Harold De Becker, Mr. Robert Taber, Miss Alma Chester, Miss Chela Knight, Miss Edna Holland and others.

IGNORED SIGNAL FINED FIVE SPOT

MAGISTRATE DUMBLE INSISTS THAT TRAFFIC COP MUST BE OBEYED

"Yours not to reason why," said Magistrate Dumble at the police court this morning when he fined a Mr. Seabrook $5 for disobeying the signal of the constable on traffic control duty at the corner of Charlotte and George streets.

Seabzrook contended that although he had seen the signal to stop, he was already on his way across the street, and if he had obeyed it another car which was proceeding north along George street at a fair pace would have run into him. The magistrate could not see that this contention was possible and diagrams were drawn in an endeavor to explain the situation. Seabrook also brought a witness to prove his contention, but the magistrate held that the fact was clear that he had disobeyed instructions and he imposed the above fine with $3.10 costs.

"I feel certain that in the same circumstances I would do the same thing again," Seabrook said in departing, to which the magistrate retorted, "A few more fines may alter your view of the matter."

lasting drink. The smoking room was jammed The drinking was mostly at the expense of Robert Peel, ex-Lieutenant of the Coldstream Guards and with a fine record in the war. With five companions Mr. Peel left the smoking room brandishing champagne bottles and flourishing glasses.

Mr Peel noted a red handled fire axe on a rack and wrenched it out. His followers did not all follow him out of the doorway to the deck. Some were developing cold feet. Mr Peel honed the blade on the teak railing and then stumbled into the lobby He apparently had decided to chop up the ship. He smashed the glass in the door to the alleyway on the port side and swept aft through the passage, putting out the electric lights quite informally with his axe and frightening women in the state-rooms bordering the alleyway.

Good Start for a Good Time.

Capt. Barnum was notified and decided that he would dispel the delusion Mr. Peel seemed to be momentarily harboring that he was the commander of the Finland. But before this could be accomplished Mr. Peel reached the after end of the alleyway and started to wield his axe on the mahogany rail. He had made six or seven hard hacks and the splinters were flying when the skipper's forces closed in and disarmed him. He was taken to his suite and was restored by his bride, who was Miss Beatrice Lillie of Ontario, a popular revue artist in London, with the help of her sister and her mother, Mrs. John Lillie. Earlier in the day Mr. Peel had made an effor to teach some of the sailors how to swab down the decks. After using the swabs he threw them overboard.

Mr. Peel has been married four months, but refused to regard the trip as a honeymoon tour. He said he had come here to have a good time and felt as if he had started well. He had been having a good time in London too and never had been arrested

THE BUDGET HAS BEEN DELAYED

VERY DOUBTFUL NOW IF IT WILL BE BROUGHT DOWN THIS WEEK

(By Canadian Press)

Ottawa, May 11.—the budget has been delayed. Official announcement was made last week that it would be presented tomorrow, but to quote high authority, it is "very undoubtful" if the budget will be brought down this week at all. In all probability it will be submitted to the House next week. This afternoon it is expected Sir George Foster will announce its postponement.

The arrival of Sir Robert Borden tomorrw, who will be afforded an opportunity of studying proposals before presentation to the House.

CAPTAIN EARNEST HILL, of Portland, Me., who says he was not able to report for duty before taking Tanlac. Declares he feels like a new man now and is on deck every day ready for work.

"I feel just like a new man since I began taking Tanlac and I am not only willing, but I am anxious to tell other people what this medicine has done for me," said Captain Earnest H. Hill, Portland, Me., recently.

Captain Hill is in command of the Ben Hur, plying between Portland and Casco Bay. He has been in the service for ten years and is held in high regard as an officer and citizen by all who know him.

"I have suffered from indigestion and stomach trouble for the past eight years," continued Captain Hill "and at the time I started taking Tanlac I was in such a weakened condition I could hardly stand up. When I walked I would actually stagger like a drunken man and, at times would have to hold on to something to keep from falling. After every meal I would simply suffer torment. My food would sour and I would swell up so with gas I could hardly get my breath.

"I would also have awful smothering spells at night and sometimes I would have to get up to get my breath. Lots of times I would have to open the windows and doors to let in fresh air, or go out into the open air in order to get my breath. I could not find anything to do me any good and along toward the last I became so weak and nervous I could not do my work.

"Five bottles of Tanlac have made a wonderful change in my condition It helped me from the very first dose and now I feel as good as I did when I was twenty years old. I sleep fine and have a fine appetite and just feel like a new man in every way. I am now able to be on deck every day ready for duty."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by The Warne Drug Co., and by the leading druggists in every town.

SEIZURE OF TABOGA IN BRITISH HOUSE

NOT A MATTER IN WHICH THE GOVERNMENT SHOULD INTERFERE.

London May 11.— Major Christopher Lowther, coalition Unionist asked in the House of Commons today whether the Government's attention had been called to the report that the United States had seized the island of Tobago, which is the property of Panama, for the purpose of erecting fortifications, and whether, in view of Great Britain's desire to protect the rights of small nationalities a protest would be made to the United States, and further, whether the matter could be referred to the League of Nations.

Cecil Harmsworth, Under-Secretary of Foreign Affairs, in replying described the proposal of the United States in 1918 to erect fences for the purpose of protecting the entrance to the canal, and America's later decision to postpone action Mr. Harmsworth added that it did not appear to be a matterin which the British Government was called upon to intervene.

Mr. Lowther asked why it was Gerat Britain objected to the French occupying Frankfort, and did not protest when the United States occupied an island belonging to a small nationality.

Andrew Bonar Law, the Government leader, replied that there was no analogy. "As regards Germany," he said, "we acted together, and our objectiaon was to any of the allies acting separately."

HOME RULE AMENDMENT DEFEATED BY 259 TO 55

London, May 11.—An amendment to the Government's Irish Home Rule Bill offered by Mr. Asquith providing one parliament instead of two for Ireland, was defeated in the House of Commons last evening after a short debate by a vote of 259 to 55.

HOW THE POOR LIVE.

Interesting Street Life Seen In Old London.

The street markets of London are among the distinctive and picturesque "sights of the town" to which curious "rubbernecks" from foreign parts pay special visits and homage. There is nothing in the world quite like them.

The open-air markets of the continent, especially in France, with their gay display of flowers and dainty etalage of vegetables, are a different thing altogether. Only in China, in ancient, remote, and un-Europeanised quarters, is anything like the same interesting fulness and variety of perfume to be encountered.

Take, for instance, the New Cut between Waterloo road and Blackfriars road, Lambeth, on a Saturday night. The flaring naphtha lamps belch their characteristic incense. The whelk and tripe and trotter emporia, the fried fish and eel-pie restaurants, the hot-potato oven and the "places within the meaning of the Act," which represent the Ritz and Berkeley of the poor, all contributed lavishly to the many-scented bouquet of odors.

"Come, girls, tell us what you want and you shall have it," lustily cried the fish-merchant, slapping his slippery wares across each other as if to demonstrate their freshness, liveliness. "Food prices are going up, but ours are still coming down," yelled the potato vendor.

"Now the beer's weak try the onions," appealed another merchant, "this lot's going stronger than ever." And the people laughed and chaffed and cheerily chaffered, much more gaily than they do at the Bond street shops.

Ten thousand of them are said to pass through this bit of a street between seven and eleven on Saturday night. The market has been there for more than a hundred years. Now it is threatened with extinction because the L. C. C. want to run tramways through the street.

But the stall-keepers for the most part do not seem frightened. "Or they've tried to do it before," said one merchant, who had been in the street for thirty years, and whose father had been there before him, "but they durstn't do it neither. We got rights same as other people and we ain't going to stand it."

Another merchant, who had served his country in France till the beginning of 1920, expressed the changed spirit and temper of the time in a very characteristic speech: "It's hard work to git a livin' at this job. I been at it since four this morning and I shan't git home till after midnight. But I got a large family to keep, and, such as it is, this stand is what you might call my bit o' property.

"It's been in the family further back than I can remember. Now what I say is that if Government's going to buy out owners of mining royalties who never done nothing for their properties, they got to pay me out if they want to shift me. That's only fair and common sense."

That is the general note. The people, even down the New Cut, have learned the meaning of "vested interest."

Afghan Golf.

Habibullah Khan, late Amir of Afghanistan, became a golf enthusiast and during the year 1910, and for three years, played the game almost daily. He had links built at both Kabul and Jellalabad. He lost a ball one day in the neighborhood of some store sheds that had recently been erected for storing electrical machinery that was arriving. He sent some companies of soldiers and had all the machinery removed and the godowns torn down that same day. He told me once, says A. C. Jewett in Asia, that whereas the year before he only played four holes at golf in a day, he now played as many as six. He often drove off and then rode to the ball in his rickshaw.

Once when he was playing against his oldest son, Prince Inayatullah, his Majesty's ball lodged behind a bunch of camel grass. He asked the Scotch engineer, who was acting as instructor and coach, what the rules were and whether the ball could be moved out from behind the grass. When told that the rules prohibited this he asked if the rules could be changed; and when told that this might be done, said, "We will make it a rule that when a ball falls behind a bunch of camel grass, it can be moved out." A little later the prince's ball lodged behind a bunch of camel grass, and the Amir, noting it, said "We will change the ruling; the ball cannot be moved."

There is little of the true sporting instinct in an Afghan. They will lie and cheat, anything to win, and are very poor losers. The Amir generally won. I do not believe anyone ever dared to beat him except the prince.

Mr. Asquith's Lost Distinction.

It is rather curious that Mr. Asquith, like Mr. Balfour, has lost his chance of becoming the "Father" of the House of Commons. There are still a few seniors of the new member for Paisley at Westminster, men who were elected prior to 1886, when Mr. Asquith entered Parliament, but in course of time he may become the oldest M. P.

However, the fourteen months during which he has been out of the House have deprived Mr. Asquith of the prospect of holding this honorable title, just as the few months between Mr. Balfour's defeat in East Manchester and his election for the City of London took the distinction from the present Lord President.

Undeniable Evidence.

Charlie and his three sisters had been to visit a relative in the country.

"Well," asked the father, upon the return of his offspring, "was your uncle glad to see you?"

Charlie's face lit up with delight at the question.

"Glad!" he echoed. "Uncle glad! Why, dad, he wanted to know why we didn't bring you, mother, the maid, the cat, the canary and the goldfish!"

A quart of milk equals in food value ten eggs, almost a pound of lean beef, ten pounds of chicken, or nearly half a pound of cheese.

OUTFIELDER HE IS DOING GOOD WORK

WITH SASKKATOON'S LAST YEAR RELEASED TO BROOKLYN CLUB

(By Canadian Press.)

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 11.— The Saskatoon Club of the Western Canada League furnished the Brooklyn fans with a first-class ball played when it parted with outfielder Bernard Edmund (Bernie) Neis last fall, if the general consensus of sporting opinion is of any acount. His performances so far this season have confirmed the execellent reports received last year by Manager Wilbert Robinson from Western Canada to the effect that Neis was a good all-round man and worthy of higher "diamond" society.

When Neis reported to the Dodgager Robiers' training camp this spring, Manager Robinson was much impressed by the hitting qualities of this young Western Canadian leaguer. His first step towards enhancing Bernard's playing value was to teach him to bat left-handed. Last summer he used to hit the sphere from the right side of the plate. His proficiency as a left-hand hitter was established—at least the fans thought so— on April 18, when at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, against the delivery of "Bald Dick" Rudolph of the Boston Braves. Neis knocked the ball out of the grounds, and made a circuitous tour of the sacks.

Neis is at present twenty-three years of age, and will celebrate his twenty-fourth birthday anniversary on September 26 next. He is five ft. seven inches in height and weighs 160 pounds. Born in Bloomington, Ill., he started his professional baseball career in 1919 with the Peoria, Ill., Club, which was then in the Three-Eye League. Neis was not in good health then, and his career with the distillers was brief. He played twelve games before the Three-Eye season prematurely closed on July 8, his batting average being .188.

Peoria then went into the Central League, but Neis did not go along. He went back to his home in Chicago, worked in a munitions factory there, and later began playing ball again with the Saskatoon Quakers, of the Western Canada League.

The playing record of Neis while with the Quakers prompted a big league scout to transmit eulogical reports to Manager Robinson which were favorably considered, and the deal was completed. Neis played in 101 games with Saskatoon, hit .297; stole 56 bases, and played third base in about one-third of these games.

Brooklyn fans are anxious to see Neis display his sprinting prowess. When he was in grammar school he held the record for the 50 and 100 yard dashes, said records being 5 4-5 and 10 1-5 seconds. He also captained the championship baseball and basketball teams.

After Neis left school he played on a state championship winning basketball team for three years and also ran for Bosemer Park in Chicago. (In this track team he won many medals and cups. Then he ran at picnics for cash prizes, winning what was for him a lot of money.

Last winter Neis started to compete for the Illinois Athletic Club, but after participating in one meet it was discovered that he was a professional. He won the fifty yards dash in 5 2-5 seconds in that meet.

In Western Canada last summer the Saskatoon [illegible] held three field [illegible]. According to reports he won the 100-yards dash in baseball togs in [illegible] seconds flat on all three occasions, went to first base in 3 1-5 seconds, and went around the bases in fourteen seconds.

If his present hitting and fielding form continues, it is expected Neis will figure in the Brooklyn line-up for the remainder of the season.

LEAVE NOTHING TO CHANCE

Although full of confidence as to the result of the game when they meet the Canadian Woollens' ball team on Saturday next, the Thistles are leaving nothing to chance. Louis Yeotes has called a special practice at the Riverside Park for tomorrtaointaoin Riverside Park for tonight, and he requests all players to be on hand.

BIG RECEPTION FOR SERGT. JIMMY WILDE

FAMOUS BRITISH MIDGET SOLDIER GLADIATOR IN TORONTO NEXT MONDAY

The visit to Toronto of Georges Carpentier, the idol of France, has served as a vigorous impetus in boxing, and increased interest is showing, in the big Grand Army Carnival, at Exhibition Park, week beginning May 22nd.

If Canadians have shown such warmth to the French champion, what a welcome should be accorded our own champion, the great Jimmy Wilde, or as the soldier boys call him, "Sergeant" Jimmy Wilde. Here is the famous British midget gladiator, about to come here among his own people, and it necessarily excites the intense interest of our patriotic people, which includes man, woman and child. Our natives are full-red blooded and when they so heartily respond in welcoming the French champion, they will be enthusiastic in receiving and honoring their own blood. Sergeant Jimmy Wilde, our soldiers and entire military contingent, are determined that the mother country shall know in what great esteem their champion is held in Canada. The soldier boys are preparing a greeting such as never before awaited a English champion athlete, and one of their own.

The Reception Committee will comprise leading representative citizens in public, financial, official, commercial and military life.

This committee is now arranging for the reception of Sergeant Wilde, and from the moment his train arrives on Canadian soil, at every station he will be met by local members of the committee who will show him what intense warmth exists in Canadians for an English idol.

Sergeant Wilde will address the crowds, at the different stations, and when he reaches Canada, a large delegation from Torotnto will meet him to accompany him to this city. Our citizens are requested to meet Sergeant Wilde, and the delegation at the station, and to form in the parade, which will march through the principal streets, headed by two big bands.

Military men and all soldiers are asked to be present in uniform to emphasize that Sergeant Wilde is being received and welcomed as much as a British soldier as he is as a great world's champion.

It is expected that Sergeant Wilde will arrive in Toronto Monday, May 17, but the exact time of arrival will be given in the newspapers.

The British champion will have a full week to finish his training, all of which is conducted under the most efficient director—as our Jimmy says—Mrs. Wilde.

It will be gracious for our lady citizens, particularly those whose patriotic efforts were so strongly shown during the war period, to show the same heartiness and combined effort, as only women can, in meeting, greeting and entertaining Sergeant and Mrs. "Jimmy" Wilde.

Feverish military preparations are in progress in oRumania, and Berlin despatches say an alliance is being formed with Poland against Russia.

The urgent deficiency bill passed by the U.S. Congress, carrying $300,000,000 for railroad operation deficiency, has been signed by President Wilson.

A bill will be introduced in the Legislature providing for the appointment of a Commission to fix a maximum wage for women and girls.

The annual meeting of the Canadian Conference on Public Welfare and of the Social Service Council of Ontario opened in Hamilton yesterday morning.

Eight persons were killed and 38 injured near Portland when two electric trains collided head-on.

REVIEW BALLPLAYERS REPLY

To the Editor Review:

Dear Sir,—Considering the fact that it took three days to compose the Examiner's reply to the Review acceptance of their challenge, certainly it is not a work of art. The Review accepted the challenge in good spirit and the "sporting" editor of the Examiner comes back with a slashing attack on the Review itself. TheReview ball players can hardly believe that such an item as published last night ever passed the city editor, even for the sporting page, and they are inclined to believe that so discourteous an item found its way into their columns by an oversight.

The Examiner says it has no hibernating periods. Now we only referred to baseball in using such an expression and it was not noticed that the Examiner baseball enthusiasts were very active during the winter. If they had been they might have been examined for lunacy.

These remarks are for the sporting page and are confined to sport and we will, therefore, decline to answer the charge of hibernating except to remind the Examiner that as a newspaper we were not hibernating when the fact that our issue contained an important item recently which compelled them to stop their press after they had run off half their circulation and insert the news they had omitted. That does not savor of hibernation.

Yours truly,
REVIEW BALL TEAM.

The Toronto International League team defeated Reading for the fourth consecutive time here on Saturday afternoon. Akron, by winning on Sunday while the Leafs were idle, tied the Leafs for second place.

A bill was introduced in the Legislature by Hon. Walter Rollo providing for monetary allowances to widows with children.

MICHIGAN-ONTARIO LEAGUE OPENING

MEETING OF MANAGERS AND UMPIRES AT BELMONT HOTEL BRANTFORD

Brantford, Ont., May 11. — The decks were cleared for the opening of the Michigan and Ontario League on Tuesday at a meeting of managers and umpires and club presidents at the Belmont Hotel here yesterday afternoon. President George Maines was present and held an informal discussion with the arbiters on all the new rules for the year and various interpretations thereon. The umpiring staff was present in full force and included Lou Fife, just let out by President Heydler, of the National League. Fife will act in the M. and O. temporarily.

The question of freak deliveries brought for a spirited discussion when Bay City made a motion to have all such barred from the league. The move was opposed by Frank Shaughnessy, who stated that he had built up his pitching staff on the understanding that the spitball would be allowed. After considerable discussion the Hamilton amendment to permit each club to carry one spitball pitcher, whose name will have to be posted with the president, carried, Brantford, Kitchener, Hamilton and Battle Creek supporting the amendment. To facilitate play each club will be required to place eight balls in box, same to be in entire charge of the umpires once a game has been started.

President Maines announced that he would give a $50 gold watch to the umpire who had the lowest time average for the season in the despatch of the league games. The following are the assignments for the umpiring staff, Jack Carroll, of Detroit, being umpire-in-chief:

May 11, 12, 13, 14—Battle Creek at London, Doolan; Bay City at Brantford, Brichter; Flint at Hamilton, McKee; Carroll; Saginaw at Kitchener, Fife.

May 15, 16—Kitchener at Flint, Carroll and Brichter; Brantford at Battle Creek, Fife; Hamilton at Bay City, Doolan; London at Saginaw, McKee.

May 17, 18—Kitchener at Saginaw, McKee; Hamilton at Battle Creek, Fife; London at Bay City; Doolan; Brantford at Flint, Carroll and Brichter. London, Saginaw and Flint were not represented at the meeting this afternoon.

DENOUNCES DIVORCE COURTS FOR ONTARIO

BISHOP WILLIAMS SAYS THEY WOULD EXTEND CAUSES FOR DIVORCE

(By Canadian Press.)

Brantford, May 11.—Denunciation of divorce courts for Ontario and of extreme raicialism were features of a charge of Bishop David Williams, of Huron, delivered at the annual meeting of the synod of Huron here today.

Bishop Williams recommended that the church maintain its present stand in relation to divorce and marriage of divorced people. He believed that the establishment of a divorce court in Ontario would be a calamity of just the magnitude to extend causes of divorce.

Combat Bolshevism.

Bolshevism in Canada, or in any other country would mean the establishment of brutal tyranny. Such forces as extreme radicalism were to be combatted very forcefully by the church. Bishop Williams, speaking of the needs of the clergy, recommended that the minimum stipends for junior clerics be $12,000 and $14,000 for serior clergy.

VETERANS BUY THEATRE.

Harrison, Ont., May 11.—Messrs. Cowan and Bates, experienced show operators of Toronto, have purchased the show here from Mrs. Matchewson and will remodel the building and install new equipment. Both men are returned soldiers.

GAME INTERESTS ALL RACES

Baseball Knows No Distinction of Nationality, Nor Does It Recognize the Color Line.

There isn't anything that can draw together the races, nationalities and religious beliefs like the good, old-fashioned American game of baseball.

In a game played on the Fourth of July an American who witnessed it in describing one of the plays says: A batter whose name showed him to be of Polish descent, had reached first base. A German went to bat. A pitcher with a French name pitched the ball and the German knocked a high fly. A Jew ran after it and dropped it. He picked the ball up and threw it to an Englishman at second. The Englishman threw the ball to an Irishman on first and a double play was made and the German and the Pole were declared out.

From where the spectator sat he could have reached out his hand and touched a German, a Russian, a Jew, an Italian and a negro. Several negroes were seated together watching the game. The umpire made a decision. One of the negroes did not agree with the decision and he said the "empire" was "rotten." He'd bet $2 the "empire" was wrong, and he took $2 from his pocket. An American in soldier's uniform took the bet and covered the $2. The soldier explained the rule to the negro, and the negro said:

"'Pears to me dat's right, after all."

Then the American put his own $2 back in his pocket and returned the $2 he had won on the bet back to the negro. What other athletic game could be played in this world with such representation of peoples as are to be found at a baseball game? The best of it all is that the soldiers having introduced it overseas, it now promises to be an all-over-the-world game.—Hartford Courant.

PROFIT SHARING NOT MODERN

Scheme Has Been in Operation Since 1829, Though Really Only Active in Last Forty Years.

Profit sharing has been used in various forms since at least 1829, being most active in the last 40 years, Park Mathewson writes in the Magazine of Wall Street. Pioneers in profit sharing, such as Lever Bros. of Port Sunlight, Eng., and Cambridge, Mass.; N. O. Nelson Manufacturing company of the model town of Leclaire near St Louis, Mo.; Procter & Gamble of Ivorydale, O., and numerous other smaller or less known companies have operated on the profit-sharing plan successfully for over a quarter of a century.

As with many other fundamental and social movements, profit sharing clearly came from the old countries for one of the first successful profit sharing plans in the United States was founded in Leclaire, Ill., named after the "father of profit sharing," Monsieur Leclaire of Maison Leclaire, Paris France.

There are many modifications of profit sharing, as laid down in one of the complete and fundamental discussions of the subject, printed some forty years ago, and it is well to have it mind the differentiations of the true profit sharing and its various offshoots such as bonus giving, holiday gifts production bonus, pensions, welfare work, etc.

Bohemia—Czecho-Slovakia.

American business men are reminded by Wallace J. Young, United States consul at Prague, that letters intended for that country should not be addressed "Bohemia," but should be addressed "Czecho-Slovakia." Also in the body of the letters, when the whole country is intended to be mentioned its proper name should be used. The former "Bohemia" is only one of the parts of Czecho-Slovakia, and when an American firm speaks, for example, of wanting agencies in "Bohemia," without a knowledge of such a firm's previous connections in the former "crown lands" now comprised within the state, it is impossible to tell whether the writer is desirous of securing new agencies in Bohemia only or throughout, the entire Czecho-Slovakia.

Skillful Job of Moving.

A gas container 70 feet in diameter and 75 feet high, weighing 200 tons, was moved three miles recently at Portland, Ore. First it was raised 15 feet and loaded on rollers. Then it was moved four blocks through the city streets and lowered 28 feet to a dock, whence it was moved upon a pair of barges. The barges were towed three miles to a shipbuilding plant, where the tank was unloaded and raised 26 feet, moved across newly filled ground for a distance of 2,000 feet, crossing a railroad track, and placed on its new foundation. It took 71 days to complete the work.

WOULD NOT HEED WARNING

World Refused to Profit by Exhibition of German Cunning Given Forty-Eight Years Ago.

Alsace and Lorraine, those familiar names, found almost every day in almost every paper; those two oblong strips of country between France and Germany—how little some of us know about them, after all. The ex-crown prince, in order to prove the ignorance of our fighting men, reported an American prisoner as saying that Alsace was a large lake. Perhaps he did, this soldier of ours—and perhaps there was a twinkle in his eye and a laugh in his heart when he said it; for our boys packed a lot of humor in their kits.

When we come down to it, however, we Americans—yes, and our English, even our French, brothers—might well have known more of these two "lost provinces." We had a chance. But in our crowded lives many books are left unread; and so it is that these Alsatian stories, translated from the French of two authors who wrote under their combined names of Erckmann-Chatrian were little known except to college students. Even then, the prophecy which these books contain went unheeded—a warning so plain, so certain, so convincing, that as we read it now in the light of what Germany has done these last four years, we wonder it was not trumpeted to us in every street.

In their book, "The Plebiscite," Erckmann-Chatrain gave us not only the tragic story of what happened in Alsace and Lorraine in 1870 and 1871, but warnings of the German designs on the rest of the world. Before most of us dreamed of this awful war, they told the story of 48 years ago, and in the telling pointed a certain finger to the future. Only a year after the Franco-Prussian war ended, after picturing freshly remembered German brutalities they said:

"Those who shall come after will see worse things than this; since men are wolves, foxes, hawks, owls, all this must come round again.

"Those Germans are the most perfect spies in the world; they come into the world to spy, as birds do to thieve; it is part of their nature. Let the Americans and all the people who are kind enough to receive them think of this. Their imprudence may some day cost them dearly. I am not inventing; I am not saying a word too much. We are an example. Let the world profit by it."

That was our warning almost half a century ago.—Ariadne Gilbert, in St. Nicholas.

Rich Chinese Provinces.

Shantung, the Chinese province which Japan has been demanding from China, is a mountainous promontory 100 miles wide, which projects eastward from the mainland into the Yellow sea for 200 miles. Its area is about 55,970 square miles. The central portion is occupied by massive limestone mountains, culminating in Mount Tai, famous in history and considered sacred by the people. West, southwest and north of these mountains lie the Shantung portions of the great alluvial plain of north China. East and southeast of the mountains and throughout the promontory are many fertile valleys and small plains. The province is well watered, though its lakes are few and small, and there are no rivers of importance except the Hoang-ho, which traverses the great plain in the west and north. The Grand canal runs through the whole province from north to south. Agriculture is a flourishing industry and the crops include some cotton, a little rice, tobacco, indigo, wheat, barley, maize, millet, pulse, peanuts and vegetables.

Novel Use for a Periscope.

Turning the sword into a plowshare is a figure of speech, but using the periscope to direct the players in a pantomime has actually come to pass. This peaceful adaptation of the means whereby the submarine commander has watched the ocean, to the purposes of a musical director watching a stage, took place at the first performance of a pantomime, in New York. The composer of the music had come from Chicago to direct the orchestra, and found his seat in the orchestra pit so far below the stage level that only a neck like that of Alice in Wonderland, after she had eaten the mushroom, would have let him look over the footlights. So the management installed a periscope. It was probably some little time before the whole audience had guessed what the thing was, and that a musical director down below was periscoping the players on the stage while he beat time for his orchestra.

The Reason.

"Monday is generally a fine day for motorists."

"Why Monday especially?"

"Because it comes after the Sunday speeding pinches."

WILL DEMAND THAT GEN. McLEAN RESIGNS

THIS ACTION WAS AGREED ON BY LOCAL EXECUTIVE G. W. V. A.

At the executive meeting of the Great War Veterans' Association last night the expected General McLean incident discussion held sway, and it was decided to pass a resolution condemning the statement alleged to have been made by the general and demanding his resignation from the Pensions Board. The resolution also commended the action of Colonel Peck V. C., and Colonel Cooper in resigning from the Board in consequence of the statemets made by General McLean. A copy of this resolution will be forwarded to the Dominion Command G. W. V. A., and also to the Peterborough member of the Federal House.

This action was foreshadowed last week by the feeling of the eVterans on the matter and is entirely in line with the action that is being taken all over the coutry. Several other matters of minor importance were also taken up at the meeting. President Muir was in the chair.

OBSERVATION TOUR.

"Y." Boys Will Invade the Tinshop of the De Laval.

The weekly educational oservation tour of the Boys' Department of the Y. M. C. A. will be held tomorrow (Wednesday) afternoon, when, by the kindness of Mr. W. R. Breyfogle the boys will be shown through the tinshop of the De Laval Company's plant. Those who attended last week's trip know of how great and educational value these trips are and a goodly number, it is hoped will turn out tomorrow.

In view of the De Laval plant being situated so far from the centre of the city anh the fact that it ceases operation for the day at 5 o'clock, it will be necessary to have all intending to make the trip ready to start at 4:20. Therefore, instead of meeting at the Y.M.C.A. building those with bicycles will ride directly from school to the factory, the oth and taking the street car. Any boy in the city, whether or not a member of the "Y." is invited to attend.

On Saturday next a bicycle hike will be held, leaving the Association building at 9:30 a.m. A good day's fun is assured to those who possess bicycles and have the inclination to use them. Be on hand Saturday morning.

POULTRY MEETING.

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough Poultry Association will be held in the Labor Hall as usual tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. A large attendance is requested.

EX-ARTILLERYMEN MEET.

There was a good attendance at the meeting of ex-artillerymen held in the Armories last night in connection with the recruiting of a 4th Battery of field artillery in Peterborough, but little was done with regard to the organising of the unit on account of the fact that it was the drill night for the Machine Gun Company.

There will be another meeting on Wednesday night. At present the prospects look good for the battery being completely organized and in good running order in time for the trip to Petawawa some time during June.

JOIN IN PROTEST.

BOLSHEVIK AUTHORITIES AGREE TO SPARE LIVES OF CAPTURED MEN

Prisoners From General Denekine's Army in Southern Russia to be Protected—Result of British Appeals to Moscow—Trade Agreements Likely Now.

(By Canadian Press.)

London, May 12.—The Russian Bolshevik authorities have agreed to spare the lives of soldiers captured from General Denekine's army in Southern Russia and those of other anti-Soviet troops who may in future be taken prisoners.

Trade Relations.

A note to this effect was received by the British officials in answer to appeals sent from Moscow during the past fortnight. The suggestion is made in the Bolshevik note that the British Government negotiate with Bolshevik representatives, preferably those now in Copenhagen regarding the final disposition of the men captured, and also in relation to the resumption of trade relations between the two countries.

From the British viewpoint this is the most satisfactory note on the subject yet received from the Soviet Government, and officials hope that full protection can be guaranteed to Denekine's men, with trade agreements or other concessions to Moscow.

ONE BIG UNION OF U. S. CITIZENS IDEA

SCHEME TO PROTECT COMMUNITIES FROM FUEL OR FOOD FAMINE

OFFERS VOLUNTEERS FOR WORK

TO COMBAT REVOLUTIONARY UPHEAVALS AND "OUTLAW" WALKOUTS

New York, May 12.— An investigation of the "one big union of citizens" idea and its feasibility in protecting American communities from possible fuel or food famines during strikes is now underway by ten members of the New York State Chamber of Commerce recently appointed by the president of the organization as a "Committee on Public Welfare."

Revolutionary labor upheavals and strikes designated as 'outlaw" walkouts by union officials and the employment of volunteer Americans in keeping the channels of communication and transportation open, are the objects, it is said, of the Chamber's present inquiry. The Chamber for several weeks has been listing and classifying volunteers who, with no antagonism toward unions or partisan interest in labor quarrels, obligate themselves to operate motor trucks or do any other work necessary to keep the nation's commercial arteries open in times of stress. To prevent the tying up and throttling of whole communities, the committee has received hundreds of responses to blank questionaires specifying ability and equipment of the various volunteers. Their occupation, home addresses and telephone numbers, together with other similar data are in possession of the committee which in time of crisis, may be utilized.

The Chamber at a recent meeting authorising the appointment of the committee by President Alfred E. Marling, passed resolutions in which it said that "civilization is now menaced by false and distorted and political ideas and the public welfare demands that the men and women of the nation, who hold to high ideals of personal and political conduct, who believe in sound economic principles and in constitutional government, shall undertake more resolutely to fulfill their civic duties." The resolutions further declared that "the structure of Government and society as a whole" was imperilled by the interruption of the normal channels of of communication and public service due to 'an irresponsible minority of the population of the United States.'" It further stated that the duties of the Committee on Public Welfare should be to draw up "a plan of organization and cooperation whereby the public may, by volunteer service aid in maintaining the uninterrupted use of public utilities and assist the duly constituted authorities in preserving law and order."

Many interesting letters accompanied the applications of volunteers. A doctor who formerly was a telegraph operator offered his services in any capacity for "the maintenance of social equilibrium against the rebellious and misled small minority." He said "that the movement deserved the support of all right-minded citizens who are the backbone of the country."

A Russian refugee, a major-general in the former Russian Army, "who has suffered the loss of everything I possessed through the Bolsheviki" said he felt in duty bound to offer his services. He wrote: "I am perfectly familiar with the beginning of the Bolsheviki, a movement in Russia which started as you know, wi strikes, uprisings and the curtailment of food. I know thoroughly the Bolshevists of other countries as well as Russia and their methods and, since I am the guest of America and everybody has been so very kind to me I wish to do all in my power to help America."

A man, a consulting engineer, 67 years old, in "fair health and vigor," wrote:"I am fully in sympathy with your apparent theory that the way to combat 'outlaw or even 'inlaw' labor obstructions to public activities is to develop a strong and widespread sentiment among the masses of right minded citizens against such labor disturbances. Also that the best way to develop this sentiment among right thinking people is to permit them to take part in combatting lawlessness and to aid in the carrying on of public activities which may be interrupted by labor disturbances."

A lawyer wrote enrolling his name "as a member of your organization which has for its purpose the preservation of the national life. No other country," he added, "gives to its citizens and others, so large an amount of freedom and privilege as does America, yet many of those within our borders fail to appreciate that with liberty also comes responsibility toward others. It is high time that the true American citizen awakens to the conditions that threaten and rallies to the support of law and order."

The Committee on Public Welfare is expected to make a report of its investigations and progress in the near future.

CRIPPLE 12 MONTHS NOW WALKS AGAIN

USE OF LIMBS RESTORED TO WOMAN IN REMARKABLE MANNER

(By Canadian Press.)

Fort William, Ont., May 12.—A remarkable incident happened at St. Joseph's convent here recently. One of the sisters, who for the past twelve months has been unable to walk, suffering from a tubercular knee, and who was told by several doctors that it would be absolutely impossible for her to walk again, fell from a chair in trying to get to a wheel chair that was close by, and in falling she regained her strength. The strange thing was she started to walk; in fact ran around the convent, and she is now walking, it is said as if she had never been sick.

DID PRESIDENT WILSON SAY BRITISH ADMIRALTY SEEMED PANIC STRICKEN

Secretary Daniels Declares President's Cable to Admiral Sims in Regard to Submarine Situation Conveyed Above Opinion—Was Not Satisfied With British Admiralty's Conduction of Naval Affairs.

(By Canadian Press.)

Washington, May 12.—A confidential cablegram from President Wilson to Rear Admiral Sims in London, sent during the war, was read to the Senate's naval investigating committee today by Secretary Daniels.

President Not Satisfied.

The cable disclosed the fact that the American President was not at all satisfied with the way the British Admiralty was directing the work of the British navy, and also indicated that Mr. Wilson could not understand why naval experts there were reluctant to allow American experts to tell them just how things should be done.

Were Too Prudent.

Mr. Wilson intimated that he considered the British naval men too prudent, and expressed surprise that "the British Admiralty had failed to use Great Britain's great naval superiority effetcively against submarines." He called on Admiral Sims for comments and suggestions, "based on independent thought" and without regard to the "judgments of anyone on that side of the water."

Replied in Generalities.

Secretary Daniels said Admiral Sims' reply was a "long telegram of generalities of what the British Admiralty was doing."

Another opinion expressed by the President in his message was that the Admiralty was helpless to a point of panic "in face of the submarine situation."

"Every plan we suggest they reject for some reason of prudence," the American President said. "In my view, this is not a time for prudence, but fo boldness, even at the cost of great losses."

Asked Sims' Advice.

In conclusion, President Wilson asked Admiral Sims to advise him, as he would give advice, "if you were running a navy of your own."

CEREMONIES AT LOWER FORT GARRY

RENEWED IN SMOKKE OF PEACE PIPE PLEDGES OF FRIENDSHIP

(By Canadian Press.)

Winnipeg, Man., May 12. — The ceremonies at lower Fort Garry which renewed in the smoke of the peace pipe the ancient pledges of friendship between the Indian tribes of Canada and the Hudson's Bay Company were perhaps the most quaintly interesting feature of the celebration of the old fur company's 250th anniversary. Indians of a dozen tribes gorgeous in paint, feathers and beaded buckskin, squatted upon the grass within the stone walls of the old fort about the table of Sir Robert Kindersley, governor of the Hudson's Bay Company, Kinnewakan, chief of the Wapheton Sioux, stepped forward. With fine dignity, the magnificent old savage delivered an address of welcome in his native tongue.

From his beaded tobacco pouch the old chief filled a great calumet of red sanstone four feet long upon whose stem of white wood were painted the totems of all the tribes. He held the pipe aloft toward the sun and called upon the Great Spirit to witness the sacredness of the rite he was performing. While Kinnewakan held a lighted matched to the bowl, Governor Kendersley took six long puffs. When Kinnewakan had taken a puff, he carried the pipe about the circle and the chiefs of the tribes each drew deeply upon it. Then the pipe was presented to the governor as a souvenir.

While the smoke of the peace pipe was still fragrant on the air, Governor Kindersley delivered an address to the tribe. The governor's speech was interpreted into four Indian languages by Willie Charles McKay, of Prince Albert. At the conclusion of the ceremonies Governor Kindersley pinned upon the breasts of the Indians medals especially struck in commemoration of the event and the nidians presented to him an elaborately beaded belt of wampum as a symgol of their renewed friendship and allegiance.

PAY SHOULD BE ON BASIS OF WORK DONE

TUBERCULOSIS SPECIALISTS GIVE VIEWS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON PENSIONS

(By Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, May 12. — The needs of tubercular soldiers in matters of pensions and after-care were placed before the special committee on pensions this morning by Dr. C. D. Parfitt and Col. Wm. Hart, tuberculosis specialists.

Specialists Scarce.

Col. Hart said that the finality in the case of tubercular patients' pensions should not be reached until a man became seriously ill. These cases should be given frequent review. Referring to the sacrcity of tuberculosis specialists in Canada, Col. Hart said the work did not appeal to physicians unless they had themselves suffered from tuberculosis.

Pay To Workers.

The pay to tubercular workers should be on a basis of work accomplished and should not be influenced by any pension or allowance. Asked regarding the establishment of a colony, Col. Hart said any attempt should be on an experimental basis.

Six men were fined at Windsor $600 each for failing for six days to send income tax returns to the authorities.

NICHOLLS HOSPITAL NURSES ARE AWARDED DIPLOMAS AND MEDALS

Graduating Exercises Last Night Attracted Keen Interest and Large Attendance—Great War Veterans' Hall Crowded to Doors—Addresses and Entertainment

One of the most interesting events of the year for the citizens of Peterborough, and perhaps the most momentous event in the lives of the ten young ladies concerned, took place last night at the Great War Veterans' Hall, when the graduating class of nurses from Nicholl's Hospital received their diplomas and medals. This event has always attracted a large amount of public attention, and this year it was more so than ever. Long before the program commenced crowds of people had swarmed the building and there was not even standing room in the large hall. In fact when the chairman arrived a few minutes late he had a great difficulty in making his way into the room at all.

The platform and the vicinity was lavishly decorated with flowers presented by admiring friends of thte graduating class, and the ten young ladies who graduated this year were seated on the platform for the greater part of the program. Seated along the front rows were all the nurses of the hospital.

The program was greatly added to by selections rendered by Mrs. Maurice H. Parks, Miss Ida Sanderson and Mr. Douglas Carlisle.

Who Graduated

The nurses graduating this year are: Miss G. M. Drake, Miss I. E Thompson, Miss O. Waterman, Miss C. E. Gulliver, Miss V. Baker Miss R. D. Fraser, Miss H. N. Anderson Miss R. P. Gray, Miss M. R. Reid, Miss B. H. Chalmers.

Opening Remarks

In opening the program Mr. John Crane, who acted as chairman apologized for the absence of the intended chairman, Mr. Richard Hall. He spoke in glowing terms of the work of the Nicholl's Hospital and of the nurses. He thought, citizens ought to realize the value of their services more than they did. It had not been necessary to call on the people for financial assistance, thanks to the generosity of Mrs. Nicholls.

Memorial Tablet.

He then called upon Miss Dixon, president of the Nurses' Alumni to come forward and perform the duties of presenting a memorial tablet to the hospital.

She stated this was always a function they looked forward to. It was always a happy time. The nurses had been trained in the hospitals in their various duties to their patients and themselves. Tonight they would be told by the speakers of their duties to the public.

They would find when they went out into public life, duties imposed upon them which they had no training for.

It was her pleasure tonight to make this presentation to the hospital. In 1914, the nurses of the hospital had received the call for service overseas and fourteen had answered it together with the superintendent. Two received the decoration of Royal Red Cross for their services. They all went through many hardships about which those at home knew nothing. But she had yet to hear one nurse say she was sorry she went They gave their service freely and gladly. Tonight, as representative of the Nurses Alumni, she asked Mrs. (Dr) Holloway, who was president of the Alumni during the war to unveil the tablet

POLES AND UKRAINIAN FORCES STRIKE MIGHTY BLOWS AT REDS

Have Driven Russian Bolsheviki Back Inflicting Serious Losses on Retiring Enemy- -New Offensive Started to Straighten Out Polish Line After Kiev's Capture.

(By Canadian Press.)

Warsaw, May 12. — Polish and Ukrainian forces have struck some mighty blows at the Russian Bolshevik front far north of Kiev, and have driven the enemy back along the Beresina River. Betchitsa, an important Dnieper River crossing has been captured and serious losses have been inflicted on the Soviet army. Fighting is now going on over a front of approximately four thousand miles.

To Straighten Line.

The necessity of straightening the Polish line after the capture of Kiev is said to have led to a new offensive. The Poles have crossed the Beresina River at several points and have taken Wjelatisch. Northeast of Mozir the Bolsheviki have been forced across the Dnieper, from Kiev northward to the mouth of the Pripet River, a distance of about fifty miles. The Bolsheviki on the west side of the Dnieper are slowly falling back and are building bridges to facilitate their escape before the main body of the Polish army reaches the stream.

FELL BETWEEN WAGON WHEELS

THOMAS PARRINGTON MEETS WITH ACCIDENT WHICH MAY PROVE SERIOUS

A serious accident occurred at about five o'clock yesterday afternoon on George street near the C. P. R. station, when Thomas Parrington, of Aylmer street, a returned soldier fell between the wheels of a wagon carrying a heavy load of wood, and it is thought received severe injuries internally.

Parrington was driving the team when the tongue fell out. He climbed further up the load of wood to get a better hold and suddenly the wood began to slip and he fell to the ground becoming caught underneath the rear wheels of the wagon. A hurried call for Belleghem's ambulance was made, and the young man conveyed to Nicholl's Hospital.

Although no broken bones were found, it was not known this morning just how much he was suffering from shock and from concussion, and also whether or not he had been injured internally. For this reason Dr. McCulloch, who was called to the accident, ordered Parrington to the hospital.

WILFUL WASTE MAKES WOEFUL WANT.

TODAY IT IS ESTIMATED that it costs almost, if not quite, as much to build wooden houses as those of brick, so high has ascended the price of lumber. The cause for the present abnormal price of lumber is no doubt mainly due to lack of conservation of our forests, reckless cutting theron, and fire. Orignally, timber was the greatest natural resource of Canada, and would have been so today had it not been for what may be characterized as criminal wastage. But Canada is not alone in neglect and reckless depletion of forests, for our neighbors to the south have been equally shortsighted in destroying a natural wealth which might have to a least a self-sustaining effect been perpetuated. And this international state of affairs as regards Canada and the United States, with the balance of still remaining lumber resources in this country's favor, has forced up the price of timber to a height quite amazing, with no hope for relief in sight. Dr. C. D. Horne, acting dean of the Faculty of Forestry, Univesity of Toonto, declares quite frankly that the high prices of lumber are here to stay, and will go still higher unless the public that owns the forests initiate at once recuperative measures. He urges forest protection, conservation and cultivation. He also says that from one-half to two-thirds of Canadian forests have been destroyed by fire the past seventy-five years—a loss equivalent to about four hundred and fifty years' supply at our present rate of consumption of four billion board feet a year. And these forest fires are every year's occurrence still; in fact, it is estimated that, if anything, destruction by fire, caused in the main by criminal carelessness, shows an alarming increase.

As with the soil, so with forests—it is possible to conserve life, and cultivate. Nature herself offers the means of conservation. In cutting timber, an eye to the future should govern operations. Good timber of small growth should be preserved, and growth of an undesirable character which is obstructing maturity in valuable trees should be cleared away. In this manner perpetuation would be assured. The policy in the past, so abundant then of wealth in forests, was to destroy valuable saplings to facilitate easy removal of the parent trees. For that reckless impoverishment of Nature's offering to our needs Canada is now paying threefold in high prices for a commodity which really should be reasonably cheap.

As to forest fires, too many of them result from a match heedlessly thrown among dry, inflammable leaves, and from camp-fires left burning. In hot, dry weather it does not take much to start a fire in woods or forest, and the man guilty of contributing by carelessness or negligence to the nation's loss in timber wealth should, if caught, be made an object lesson of.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS AND LABOR.

CANON ALEXANDER, the treasurer of St. Paul's London, England, in a sermon on "The League of Nations," said that many people professed to believe that the whole scheme of a League of Nations was based rather on the dreams of well-intentioned optimism than on the hard facts of experience. Last year, however, a manifesto supporting the principles of the League had been signed by the leaders of organized industry in Great Britain, and it was not to be supposed that these men were all sentimental idealists. The fact was that the prosperity of democracy depended on stable conditions of society, and, as Mr. Clynes had said lately in an admirable address, the question of wages was less importance to our workers than that of the maintenance of peace. He trusted that the rank and file of Labor would remember, like their leaders, the vital necessity of supporting and being represented in the League, and so of keeping the Empire in the vanguard of advancing civilization.

These are days of the open door for representation on all public bodies, national, municipal and otherwise, and there is no reason why Labor should not be represented in the League of Nations. One thing is quite certain, and that is that the principles of the League promise to make for that world peace which not only Labor, but every state of civilised society, hopes for.

We believe that England was one of the first, if not actually the first, country to make possible representation of Labor interests in its House of Commons, and it is not surprising that in the Old Land the suggestion for Labor's participation in the deliberations and decisions of a League of Nations should be forthcoming.

ANOTHER FINANCIAL CORNERSTONE.

IN EGYPT, BRITAIN has found another cornerstone of her financial strength. This is revealed in the 1920-21 budget for Egypt's administration, submitted by Sir Paul Harvey, the financial adviser at Cairo, and his remarks in that connection are illuminating.

The financial adviser points out that Egypt has foreign investments estimated at £E152,000,000, that private deposits in her banks have increased in five years from £E6,500,000 to £E35,000,000, and that her mortgage loans have been reduced from E£40,000,00 to £E26,000,000 in that period. The production of cotton was stimulated greatly by the war, and Egypt built up a large favorable trade balance. That trade has given her people additional buying power, represented partly by an increase in paper currency, which amounts to £E60,000,000. Egypt's revenue receipts for the fiscal year 1919-1920 have been so large that instead of an expected deficit of £E1,450,000, there will be a surplus of £E3,000,000. (The Egyptian pound is worth at par almost exactly $5.)

By the simple device of pegging the rate of exchange between London and Egypt at a fixed figure and giving Egyptian paper money a cover of British short-dated Treasury bills, the entire influence of Egypt's favorable trade balance, her increased production and her larger wealth were exerted in favor of the English pound instead of the Egyptian piaster.

In other words, by giving British Treasury bilsl to Egypt in exchange for commodities., England settled her trade debt in that quarter without shipping gold. The Treasury bills were used in the same manner as gold would have been used for currency reserve. As a result The Egyptian piaster stands at par in London, but at exactly the same discount as the pound sterling in all other parts of the world.

The British Treasury bills held by Egypt represent a large part of the foreign investments mentioned by the financial adviser. Eventually those bills will migrate back to London in cancellation of principal and interest of loans extended to Egypt by England for public and private purposes.

The Egyptian budget, disclosing unexpectedly large wealth, is a striking illustration of how British capital's world-wide ramifications were of untold advantage to the Mother Country in time of war.

A DRASTIC LAW.

THE TORONTO TELEGRAM SAYS: "Imprisonment for one year for stealing a motor car is the minimum sentence under the Criminal Code.

"Stealing motors is an offence that merits severe punishment. But the court should have some discrimination.

"Under the existing law a magistrate is obliged to impose a sentence that may leave a mark for life. While such a penalty may fit the crime nine cases out of ten, it may also be needlessly cruel in the tenth case. Offences of this character are not always the acts of criminals. A youth who appropriates a car and drives it round the block, an act which may be innocent in intent and harmless in execution, is liable to be branded for his thoughtless folly. No matter what extenuating circumstances may be urged on his behalf, the court is powerless to exercise judicial clemency. A man who is intoxicated while driving a car is a greater menace to himself and to the community, but he may escape with a nominal penalty."

TREES ON THE PRAIRIES.

IT WAS IN 1901 that the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior began to send out trees to the farmers in the prairie provinces to plant shelter-belts about their buildings and fields. Since that time over fifty million seedlings and cuttings have been sent out from the Dominion forest nursery station at Indian Head, and the branch nursery recently established near Saskatoon. The success of this plan of free distribution of trees is shown not only in the increasing use made of it by the farmers of the prairie provinces, but also by the fact that this tree distribution has been copied either as it stands or in a modified form by other important administrative bodies. The Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, although their conditions are very different from those of the prairie provinces, have applied the plan in a modified form to farmers' woodlots. The United States Department of Agriculture, after a careful study of the system in Canada, applied it to the prairie states. At present several thousand farmers in the Canadian West are receiving trees annually, and this number will doubtless now be increased seeing that the war is over, and the farmers have more time

PROFESSIONAL ETHICS.

(Providence Journal.)

Could there be a more vivid example of professional honor than that of the French doctor who continued on his way to the bedside of a seriously sick patient after he had been overtaken with the news that his son had met with a most distressing accident? The pathos of the incident is heightened by the fact that the father learned on his return that the boy had died in his absence.

A St. Mary's man, who believes in the old saying "See a pin and pick it up and that day you'll have good luck," saw a safety pin on the sidewalk in front of the Windsor hotel the other day. Bending down to get it his hat tumbled off and fell in the gutter, his eyeglasses fell and broke on the pavement, his suspenders gave way behind, he broke the buttonhole on the back of his shirt collar, and he all but lost his new front teeth.

ANOTHER "IF—"

(Faith Baldwin in the New York Times.)

If you can smash the Law when those about you
Are keeping it, and guarding it from you;
If you can boost yourself when clean men flout you,
Or, being shunned and spurned, sneak back again,
And watch your every decent impulse rotting
Without a throb of guilt or honest pain—

If you can scheme and not dread the Hereafter,
But trust the guidance of an Evil Star;
If you can face good men with sneers and laughter,
And treat them like the fools you think they are;
If you can bear to hear the lies you've spoken
Exposed by those who still put faith in Right;
If you can smile when that high Law you've broken
Resets, and jails you some uncaring night—

If you can fight, with words, and never fairly,
And risk some loyal fellow's double fist,
And, cringing back from him who struck out squarely,
Can turn and wriggle, lie and hedge and twist
The thing you've uttered into celebration
Of Martyrdom, and Brotherhood instead,
Proclaiming that you stand for One Great Nation
Whose Flag of Freedom is untainted Red—

If you can shriek at crowds, and keep them quiet,
Dethrone Democracy and set up Fear;
If you can urge the ignorant to riot,
And yell "Oppression!" till the restless hear;
If you can fill the short, impartial hour
With sixty minutes' worth of evil done,
Yours is the Reign of Terror and of Power,
And you're a Bolshevist—a red-hot one!

SOFT OR PIEBALD WHEAT

Experimental Farm Note.

It is well known that, when grown on certain soils and especially in certain seasons, wheat instead of being dark and translucent, is pale or spotted with patches or light colour. If this condition is very marked the wheat is called "soft," and if it less evident the term "piebald" is often used. In Kansas and some other States the phrase "yellow berry" is employed to designate the same condition. There is considerable misapprehension in regard to softness in wheat. Some varieties, such as Prelude for instance, are extra hard in their nature and very seldom produce soft kernels, while others, such as White Russian, are essentially softer. But most of the popular sorts, though usually hard in character, become soft under special conditions of soil and climate. Even the extra hard wheats of the Durum class, such as Wild Goose, sometimes show softness.

Soft kernels of wheat contain a lower proportion of gluten and a higher proportion of starch. The interior of a hard kernel is horny and translucent, while the interior of a soft kenel is whitish and opaque. As bran also is translucent, the soft kernels are paler than the hard ones. The bran itself, however, does not change colour when the wheat becomes soft and the term "yellow berry" is quit misleading. A soft sample of a so-called red wheat (which is really reddish-brown, rather than red, in color) is not yellowish but pale reddish-brown. The popular idea that Red Fife wheat turns into White Fife when it becomes soft is entirely erroneous: the difference between these two varities lies only in the colour of the bran. White Fife is just as hard a wheat as Red Fife though of a different colour; yellowish rather than reddish.

Softness is the outcome of peculiar soil conditions, especially in regard to soil structure and the quantity of moisture present. Land from which trees have recently been cleared is particularly liable to produce soft wheat. It is also well established that in countries where the summer is rather long and where the temperatures are moderate the wheat is usually softer than in districts where the summer is short and where great extremes of temperatures occur. A full explanation of the causes of softness has not yet been arrived at.

It is generally believed that soft wheat is inferior in quality to hard wheat for bread making, this is usually true, provided the samples compared belong to the same variety. However, some soft varieties are superior to some hard ones. For milling purposes hard wheat is preferred as it is easier to handle and it usually gives better satisfaction to bakers who desire to make extremely light bread. For pastry and cake, flour from soft wheat is better. Hard wheat being more in demand usually brings a higher price than soft wheat. As a rule, therefore, farmers whose wheat is soft suffer a financial loss on that account. Such wheat, however, (if of a usually hard variety) is perfectly good for seed purposes, be-

Not very much is yet known as to cause the softness is not inherited. the best way to overcome the tendency of any soil to produce soft wheat. To a certain extent this is doubtless beyond control, but it appears probable that cultivation and especially the ploughing under of sod will, in time, tend to bring about such a condition of soil as will produce harder wheat. This could be expected particularly if the land under tillage were formerly covered with trees.

THE IRISH LAND HUNGER

Katharine Tyran in the Westminster Gazette writes as follows. :

As though the witches cauldron of Irish affairs was not already bubbling with a sufficiency of ingredients there is now cast into it another potent cause of trouble, Agrarianism, the hunger for land. I dont' know who invented the word Agrarianism any more than whose responsibility it was for the horrid phrase "Home Rule" with its suggestion of Mr. and Mrs. Caudle, but the word has come to be accepted for the thing that is sporadic in the poorer parts of Ireland, and has nothing at all to do with Irish patriotism.

One remembers the interview between Parnell and Charles Kickham, the old Fenian idealist. It was when Parnel was just "taking off his coat," to use his own pharse. He can have had little sympathy with Agrarianism except as something to be cleared out of the way before bigger things could be tackled. "Will the land question rouse them? he asked Kickham. "I'm only afraid they'll go to hell for it," was the answer.

They went some way towards hell for it in the Land League days, but the Revolution got what it asked for and what it needed. As regards the land Question in Ireland, in the main it was settled by the various Land Bills following the revolution, for England taught Ireland the bad lesson that without violence there was no redress. But it did not settle the Land Question for the little farmers living precariously on a few boggy acres in Western and North Western Ireland. There the land-hunger has always been intense. The people have lived in conditions which no civilized people should accept: the lands acquired and distributed by the Congested Districts Board were incapable of supporting life in normal times; they were not economic holdings. The land was too little to divide among so many, and too miserable to repay the labour spent upon it. Nine acres of swampy and stony land to rear a family upon, and the little farmers of the West have long families! They existed in normal years with the help of the money sent home from America by the children who had emigrated. The war brought them prosperity, as prosperity counts in lives that ask so little. That, doubtless, has whetted the land-hunger; for Agrarianism is up again in Ireland, and there is no stronger force to be reckoned with, for as Kickham said, they will go to hell for it.

The revolt of people who for long have borne intolerable conditions without complaint is apt to be more violent than continuous revolt. For a long time those Western peasants held fast hold of a spiritual kingdom. But in the Revolution that hold is apt to relax, and the recrudescence of Agrarianism may yet be the most dangerous element in the witches' brew, since idealism has no part in it.

One takes comfort remembering how the thing subsided in the eighties but then the leaders had some power to lead. Now, with so many varying, elements there is no leader for the whole, though the idealists are well led; and the rest is underground. In many parts of Ireland they are being steadily maddened by the military regime. One wonders how an Englishman's home would stand the night raids. But the agrarian question in less complicated. It is the land hunger over again, the land hunger which even under happier conditions is common to the Celtic and the Latin peoples.

The agrarian situation in Ireland is out of hand. The priests have lost control. How often I have smiled at the English idea of the "priest-ridden" Celt. The priest has given up everything for a spiritual kingdom; he lives and he dies alone; and terrible in his responsibility for the parish that is under his responsibilty for the parish that is under his charge. There are heavy hearts today in many a presbytery and many a "palace" in Ireland. (They are such humble palaces.) The tragedy of the Land League days is upon them again, but a thousand times more complicated. Much has been written of the tragedy of the landlords, nothing of the tragedy of the parish priests of the land League days. The parish priests of that day were still men who had been educated abroad, who were welcome guests at "the Big House" and natural Conservatives. Not only were the people up against them, but their curates, some of them because they were children of the small farm, others because they looked on the movement as some sort of Nationalism. The curates of that day are the parish priests of this, and living over again the old tragedy, for the people will go to hell for the land.

One remembers the fine scorn with which John O'Leary, the noblest and simplest of idealists, used to talk of aclaimed persons of that day as "some sort of agrarian person."

EDITOR'S MAIL

CITIZENS' BAND QUESTION

Editor The Review:—A few remarks from myself may not be out of place in the public press of this city with reference to the band question. So, after a careful study of the situation, looking at every angle that it presents, I submite the following:

Some way we ought to have a purely Citizens' Band, free from any military or society regulations, governed and maintained by a set of by-laws and financed by the city.

This I agree with if it were possible and could have any likelihood of permanency where there would be an open field with none of other bands to conflict with.

Take, for instance, the Waterloo-Preston Musical Society Band. This is an organization kept up by the whole district, financed by a membership ticket and a grant of $1200.00 per year. This band is one of the best in the province and has been such for upwards of forty years, and connected with no other society or military organization in the locality. This could be attempted here, but would it be permanent with already a regimental band here, and likely two of them (if present enthusiasm can be depended on.) striving for existence The band I have mentioned is controled and financed by a commission services given gratis. This commission I would have outside of the performers, entirely, and if such plan could be adopted I would most heartily endorse.

But as conditions are here at present and with the experience of the past to review, and summing it all up as a guidance in arriving at a conclusion for the future. Now a great many of our citizens are not familiar with past conditions, (some may say, "let the past go," but we must not ignore the past even if we are changed somewhat from the effects of the great war, as human nature is the same today as ever,) and for their benefit I will briefly give a few facts.

Within the past thirty years several bands have been instituted here, each with just the enthusiasm and ambition as it exhibited today. First we had a Citizen's Band made up of men which withdrew from the Fire Brigade Band, and making up a strong membership. They got a grant, procured instruments and uniforms, lasted a short time and evaporated.

Second. The Sons of England undertook to get into the musical field of operation. Secured the services of Mr. Finch Millar as bandmaster. This organization had a strong local society behind it; a free hall, uniforms and instruments. Where is that band today. It disappeared mysteriously.

Third. The T. A. S. Society, a very strong organization, took up musical ideas, engaged a bandmaster, spent $600.00 on instruments, etc. Not a vestiage of the band is left.

I could go on and name and instance others, but what I have instanced ought to be sufficient to arrive at a conclusion, especially with the past, present and future before us in surveying the whole field and taking in the whole province as such, what do we see.

The many good bands that have stood up for forty years or more, namely the 13th of Hamilton, 19th. of St. Catharines, 7th., of London. the Queen's Own Rifles, 10th. Royal Grenadiers, 48th. Highlanders, the Ottawa Guards, P. W. O. Rifles. Kingston, and Peterborough Rangers. many of which have splendid reputations. What is the secret of their success? It is discipline and military organization, Government supervision and partial financial support.

As I view the question as it stands today, with scarcely a hope of all coming in together to form one really good band, yet I would strive to have such accomplished if all would only lay aside little petty jealousies, which will result in no good whatever. With the object in view I am satisfied that the stand I have taken is the one which without any prejudice to any other one grant, one band, and that is the Peterborough Rangers, which has stood on one solid foundation for upwards of forty years, and which has still room enugh to accommodate all who wish to further the object sought for by the writer and have a most promising future.

May I add the following, to make my position clear, I am not opposed to the Great War Veterans' organization, and I have not forgotten the promises we have made to the soldier before he went overseas and what we are willing to do for him now that he has come home victorious. Any promises, that we have made will be so far as I am concerned and within my ability, will be kept. But in taking the position as I do in regard to this band matter I am only discharging my duty to the people as a servant and of the people whom I have sworn to serve to the best of my ability. I will not vary from my position for any creed or society whatever. And I wil carry this out no matter what the consequences be to myself from a municipal point of view.

Yours respectfully,

JOSEPH CROWE.

NEGLECTED LEFT HAND

It has been estimated that 97 per cent. of the English-speaking people are right-handed when they grow up. Seventeen out of every hundred are born right-handed, but according to statistics the remaining eighty-three are born without any inclination to use one hand more than the other, and become right-handed owing to the influence brought to bear upon them in childhood.

We cannot calculate how much men, and even women, lose by neglecting their left hand. In primitive times almost everyone was, it is supposed, ambidextrous. In Japan for many years past soldiers and school boys have been taught to use both hands equally, but it certainly looks very awkward when at the table a knife is held in the left hand, and children need watching, if they are born right-handed, otherwise they may contract the habit, and it is a difficult one to break.

SLAYER TRIES TO SAVE LIFE

Cantine Appeals for Another Murderer Condemned to Death

New York, May 12.—His own death in the electric chair set for this Thursday night, Chester Cantine, youthful Poughkeepsie murderer, devoted some time yesterday in his cell at Sing Sing to an appeal in behalf of James Byrd, another murderer, who is to die May 24th. In a letter to the Rev. Lee Brown of Poughkeepsie, he tells the minister that Byrd is friendless and forsaken, that he was intoxicated when he was arrested and that if the minister gets up a petition to the Governor the man's sentence may be commuted to life imprisonment.

While Cantine was thus appealing for a friend his mother was doing what she could to have his sentence commuted. After visiting him yesterday, she said she would seek out the trial judge, Justice Morschauser, and beg him to assent to a commutation which she felt sure the Governor would grant on the Justice's word. Cantine is to die the same time as [illegible] Harrison, Manhattan murderer, whose counsel was with him yesterday arranging for another legal move to stay the execution.

Gunpowder's Origin.

"How little is known about Korea!" remarked Rev. J. A. Duncan, a missionary who has lived in the country for ten years, in an interview in Washington. "Korea was and still is a progressive nation. I saw recently some reference to the fact that Korea used ironclads against the Japanese as early as 1597, and that the Koreans were the first to use cast metal type. Nothing has been said about, and perhaps it is not generally known, that the Koreans discovered gunpowder in 200 B.C., fourteen centuries before the German monk, who is ordinarily credited with the discovery, gave out his formula. The astronomers of Silla, one of the ancient provinces of Korea, thought out the operations of the planetary system and its working to such an extent that they were able to predict eclipses with certainty centuries before present-day scientists gave credit for these discoveries, and it was this same people that gave the world the magnetic needle and the mariner's compass. One of their old observatory towers can still be seen in lower Korea. Many of the industrial arts of the present day are based on Korean discoveries.

"A Korean invented the potter's wheel, and Korean potters discovered the art of underglazing. The present Emperor of Japan drinks his tea from the first examples of Korean pottery. Count Okuma gives credit to Koreans for the introduction into Japan of the art of weaving silk and of carpentry and architecture. Koreans first sent into Japan musical instruments. There were brass and bronze foundries in Korea at the beginning of the Christian era. One of their products is still in Korea—the great bell of Silla, the same size as the great bell of Moscow, but cast eleven centuries before the latter. Bronze cannon from Korea have been found in China cast in 200 B.C.

"There is a tradition, and evidence to support it, that Korean engineers planned and built the great wall of China for the Emperor Chin. The advanced civilization of Korea no doubt was contemporaneous with the [illegible] advanced civilization of China."

Won By Waiting

By ALVAH JORDAN GARTH

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

It was like a transition from the arid desert to a fertile valley of Eden, the abandonment of an impossible farm in the alkali lands, and a grateful settling down in the welcome groove of the Walden place. It was the possession of a decrepit old man, Ezra Walden, and his orphan niece, Iola, and from the start John Burton liked it and bound himself to remain. He was to work it on shares and after that on a half ownership basis.

Outside of comfort and prospect there was Iola. It took less than a month for Burton to treasure her as the brightest little being he had ever met. First he admired her, then he longed for her constant company and finally came to love her.

And then disenchantment, so far as his hopes were concerned—a blow, sudden and bitter and then all the sunshine of life seemed blotted out for him. Iola had come to treat Burton almost as one of the family. She enjoyed companionship with a person so intellectual and kindly, and he entertained the secret hope that as time went on she might come to regard him with the favor of affection. The place of happiness he had built so fondly crashed into ruins as one day Ezra Walden called him to his room, where he lay slowly wasting away.

"Sit down, Burton," said the old man feebly. "I want to have a talk with you. You have been a great help and comfort to me, you have worked hard and faithfully and I don't want to see you lose by it. I haven't long to live, the doctor told me last week. When the end comes there is Iola to think of. I want to provide for her as fully as possible. Iola wishes to go to Denver."

A quick pain struck the heart of the ardent lover. "She has relatives there?" he ventured faintly.

"No, but about a year ago a man named Blake Darrell spent a month here hunting and fishing. He was a flashy, boastful sort of a fellow and, between you and I, did not impress me very favorably, but as I later learned made love to Iola and she was impressed. It was after he was gone that the child told me that he had filled her mind with all kinds of glowing ideas of the active life of the city, that he was writing to her regularly, and if she ever came to Denver he would see that she got a fine position and would make her his wife. She did not exactly agree to this, for she wasn't sure of her own mind, but I can see that when I am gone her thoughts will all be fixed upon going into this new life. What I was thinking was this: You say you have about a thousand dollars saved up. Buy the place here, pay down what you can and the balance to go to Iola as she needs it. Only this—if her mind is set on going to Denver and if she wishes to marry this man, Darrell, go with her and become her guardian until that is consummated, just as if you were myself."

Burton's heart was heavy as he gave his promise to carry out the injunctions of Mr. Walden. His dream was over and done. Iola was lost to him and the future seemed blighted. Within the week the old man died. A kindly neighbor took Iola in her charge and a few days later Burton called upon Iola to learn her wishes.

She was subdued with grief, forlornly uncertain, but finally told Burton that she wished to go to Denver. He explained to her the wishes of her grandfather and she seemed to experience a deep gratitude for his helpful, loyal service.

This was emphasized when together they started for the East. His delicate and solicitous care for her comfort touched Iola deeply. She began to realize how she would miss the sturdy, sterling friend when he went back alone to the old farm for which she secretly began to grow homesick. She was almost tearful when he left her at a hotel in Denver. Her face wore a strange seriousness when he called the next morning.

"I would like to have you deliver this," she said. "Wait for no answer." And she handed him a letter directed to Blake Darrell.

She was in a nervous flutter when Burton returned. He also acted unsettled and shaken.

"I have strange news for you, Iola," he said. "Blake Darrell was shot dead in a drunken brawl a month since. He left a widow."

To his surprise Iola seemed little affected by the intelligence. "I changed my mind half way to Denver," she spoke in troubled tones. "I do not intend to remain. Oh! my good, kind friend, whom I alone can trust, take me back—home!"

Burton began to tremble with vague suppressed emotion. She tore open the envelope he had returned to her. "Read it, please. It will explain," she said in subdued tones and turned her face away.

He understood as he traversed the lines telling Darrell that she had decided not to marry him, that her love was bestowed upon another.

"You are going back to the old home?" spoke Burton.

"Yes, if you will take me," said she brokenly. "We had not left the dear old place an hour before I realized my folly."

He hastened to take her hand. Her head dropped to his shoulder and he knew he was that other to whom she had referred in the letter.

TheLeafs made a slight gain in the International League race by beating Syracuse here yesterday. Spencer and Riley made home runs.

UNION WITH CANADA.

West Indies Grow Anxious for Closer Relations.

The visit of Mr. Frank H. Keefer, the Parliamentary Secretary for External Affairs of the Canadian Government, has necessarily given some fillip to the consideration of our eventual relations with the Dominion, says the Daily Argosy of Georgetown, Demerara. Mr. Keefer was only in British Guina for a few days and, although his visit was an unofficial one, he made it quite clear that he was entirely in favor of a commercial union between this country and Canada. The impression he made was a singularly good one and his utterances on the subject were so logical and so well supported by facts that he confirmed to a considerable degree the conviction already extensively held that such a union would be of mutual advantage. This is one of the questions which he will hear discussed at the conference of the Associated Chambers of Commerce, and we fancy that the verdict which that conference will pass on the project will be sufficiently unanimous to give an unmistakeable mandate to both Governments to proceed to formulate a scheme for its consummation. The deliberations of the conference in this respect will be watched with the greatest sympathy by the people of the West Indies, who are daily burdened by severe economic disabilities. So far as British Guiana is concerned, it is fairly obvious that our geographical position and local circumstances make some form of union advisable. Our exports are few and special; our imports are varied and comprise practically all the necessities of life. It is vital to our interests that we should secure a safe market for our exports to maintain the colony's trade. One of the best methods of securing this is by a system of Imperial preference and it is heartening to notice that it is the opinion of Lieut.-Col. Amery, the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, that the British Government will not readily forsake this principle. But preference naturally involves mutual obligations and if we are to sell in a British market we must buy in a British market. If British ships are to carry our products to British ports, the same ships must come back to us loaded with commodities of British origin. That is the gospel of Empire and the gospel to which we have all subscribed. It has especial force as between British Guiana, Canada, and the United States. The later has a northern zone and a tropical zone and can thus supply almost completely its own wants, especially since its acquirement of Porto Rico. Canada produces only northern products, British Guiana only tropical products. Our exports are in fact dissimilar, but complementary and, being both of the Empire, it would seem the natural consequence that we should be close customers. But what are the actual facts. For every dollar's worth of goods the United States purchases from British Guiana, Guiana purchases from the United States to the value of $7.27. For every dollar's worth Canada purchases from British Guiana, Guiana purchases from Canada only 41 cents worth. Our credit, Canadian credit, and British credit in New York is depreciated and in the case of this colony, to the enormous extent of forty per cent. So long as we are obliged to purchase from America, we are assisting in levelling up the cost of living and delaying our own restoration of a normal condition of trade. America protects herself and her markets by a high tariff wall. Why should not we secure our interests and reduce the cost of living by a mutual preference? There is little doubt that the opinion of the people of the West Indies is overwhelmingly in favor of a commercial alliance, and we trust that the two Governments, in conjunction with the Colonial Office, will proceed at once to give effect to our wishes. The question of political union has not, perhaps, been so thoroughly considered, but it is one which must be kept in mind. Situated as we are, there is always the circumstantial possibility of American political aggression, and however strenuous may be the disclaimers from Washington, there is sufficient prima facie evidence to keep us on our guard. In Jamaica, for instance, there has been a very conspicuous wave of pro-America enthusiasm and this is, we must presume, the result of propaganda rather than of any spontaneous conviction of an hitherto loyal island. While we welcome American trade and enterprise in the West Indies where such is of advantage to us, we must say in all candor that we do so in an absolutely selfish spirit and with the reservation that such trade shall not prejudice the political or commercial interests of the Empire. As a result of our participation in the war and of America's participation in the war—the terms being relative—the United States now occupies a dominant financial position and she is exploiting that position to the last cent. We are paying the piper and we must strive to adjust the level of credits. America is, in fact, a dangerous rival of British interests in the West Indies and we have to marshal our forces to meet her. Canada can be of assistance both commercially and politically. She is an established power on this side of the Atlantic and she can afford us protection against any manoeuvring of American capitalists which may be inspired by ulterior political motives. Canada can, and is prepared to, give a closer supervision to our affairs than ever the Colonial Office, by reason of its heterogeneous functions, has been able to do. The principle of devolution within the Empire has received the support of various colonial authorities and, in the event of any sub-division of Imperial administration, the community of our commercial and political interests immediately points to the Dominion as our ideal protector. Public opinion has not been developed very extensively on this point, but we are convinced that, if the issue be raised and attention focussed on it, the feeling of the West Indies will favor a general union with Canada.

It is impossible to acquire money without making sacrifices; most men and women who marry for it sacrifice their happiness.

STRENGTH FOR YOUNG MOTHERS

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restores Health and Strength.

Lansing, Mich.—"After the birth of my child I was not able to stand on my feet. I was so weak I could not get up. I suffered such pain in my back I could not work or hardly take care of my baby. One of my neighbors recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, and I got better right away and was soon a new woman and could work hard, and I can recommend these remedies to other young mothers who are weak and ailing as I was."—Mrs. ORA O. BOWERS, [illegible] S. Hosmer Street, Lansing, Mich.

Women who are in Mrs. Bowers' condition should not continue to suffer from weakness and pain—but profit from her experience and give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial.

For suggestions in regard to your condition write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of their 40 years' experience is at your service.

NEW ERA DAWNS FOR WORLD

With the Conquest of the Air, Life Has Changed From the Old Scheme of Things.

Do the people of today realize the great changes which now are moving over the scheme of the universe?

We should look well on the old order before it has faded away. We stand on the edge of the new epoch in the history of mankind. In the air we have just conquered a new element of inconceivable immensity. With the palms of victory in every hand we have a slightly overwhelming sense of our power.

Almost in a moment the span of the world has shrunk to a quarter of its former size. Where we thought in countries now we think in continents. Where we thought in days now we think in hours, observes a writer in London Daily Mail.

We have the power of throwing a girdle round the earth. Remote Australia suddenly draws close. Greenland and Spitzbergen loom over us. Rome and Christiania and Amsterdam are quaint foreign suburbs of London.

Nation almost merges into nation. Perhaps the desire of ages may by a glorious fraction draw nearer and the splendor of a world peace and a peaceful world may materialize a little through the air. . . .

Now should we take our fill of the old scheme of things. In twenty years' time our life today will seem 10,000 years old. The ancient civilizations of Rome and Egypt will not be more legendary. How lucky are we, who are young, to be able to see this swift and dazzling age of the air move triumphantly into being.

No longer is Japan an unattainable dream: The Nile lies but a day and a half away. On glorious honeymoons we can slip away into the star-beflowered darkness of the East to drift at dawn above some fragrant island of Greece.

Over the rolling whiteness of the limitless cloudland, under a limitless sky of unimagined depths, we will wing our long and easy way through a health-inspiring wind to the golden sun-drowsed beaches of the southern seas.

This new life will not spoil our lovely world. Less than the train or the whirling car will our journeyings disturb the earth. On the blue above our white wings will glitter, for a moment—a little murmuring as of bees will sink to the ground below and we shall be gone. The world, unstained and pure, goes on rejoicing into the era of the air.

India's Coal Supplies.

Mr. H. Kelway-Bamber, former superintendent of rolling stock, East Indian railway, speaking at the Society of Arts, said that the coal resources of India were estimated at 79,001,000,000 tons—ten times as great as those of Japan. Europe's coal deposits were estimated at 784,190,000,000 tons. Of the numerous coal fields of proved value in India only 18 were being worked, the reason being found in the remote position of the coal fields from ports and existing centers of industry. Sir Charles H. Armstrong, chairman of the Great India Peninsula railway, who presided, said that a very large amount of coal would be produced in [illegible] were more plentiful. It was largely due to [illegible] the heavy traffic on the Indian railways that the [illegible] in Mesopotamia.

Igloos Built of Concrete.

Though the snow blocks of the Eskimo igloo might almost class as permanent building material in the land of perpetual ice, their use does not accord with even the most primitive ideas of civilization. And it is a matter of governmental recognition that the Eskimo Indians of the Pribilof Islands are rapidly gaining in sophistication, as the prices of the sealskins and blue and gray fox pelts they sell mount higher and higher.

Those bits of frozen land in Behring Sea, whose total area is less than 70 square miles, have only about 350 inhabitants, yet they are being assailed by all the aspirations of prosperity, and are beginning to buy the most interesting items the mail-order catalogues offer.

A writer in Popular Mechanics Magazine describes how engineers are building igloos of concrete for these Eskimos, thus substituting the most substantial of materials for what seems, from the temperate zone viewpoint, the most ephemeral. It is to be noted, however, that the builders are careful to adhere closely to the native style of architecture. The new concrete dwellings introduce no unfamiliar and depressing innovations to their tenants.

If those built this season are accepted as satisfactory to the changing Eskimo taste, a whole colony of them will be constructed next summer.

Lives in Old "Pillbox."

A Belgian farmer who has returned to his shell-shattered fields near Poelcapelle, has solved his own particular housing problem by converting an undamaged "pillbox" into a temporary home for himself and family. "Pillbox" was always an unfortunate and misleading name for concrete forts. Nearly all of them were rectangular and contained four or more large rooms. Very little work would be required to turn them into comfortable and everlasting homes. Some near Boesinghe are already being fitted up as cafes, in anticipation of tourist parties which will throng the battlefields as soon as passports and travel restrictions will be relaxed.

TEST WATER

Nothing is more necessary to the system then plain water. It is a splendid habit to drink a glass of clear, cold water every morning before breakfast; in fact, one cannot drink too much of it. But it must be pure, otherwise, instead of acting as an internal bath and cleansing the system, it may introduce into it its own impurities and cause much harm.

A simple way to find out whether your water is pure is to draw a tumblerful from the tap over-night; put a lump of loaf sugar into it and place it, covered, on the kitchen mantlepiece, or in any place where the temperature will not be under sixty degrees Fahrenheit. The water will be quite clear in the morning if it is pure, and milky if contaminated by sewage or other impurities.

Of course a sure way of making water safe for drinking is to boil it, but it is certainly also rather a tiresome way. It must be remembered a long time before required for drinking purposes, and set aside and covered, to get cold. Yet even if we are careless on our own account, we can hardly be careless about the children, and children all seem to need a great deal of water, even baby requires it as much indeed as any one. When a child is fretful, sometimes a drink of water, say a teaspoonful at a time, will quiet him, for baby is often thirsty, and milk does not serve to quench his thirst.

If one has not a filter in the house however, one need not be reduced to boiling all the drinking water or to going without it as a drink. A cheap filter may be made in the following simple way: Take a square of fine, thick flannel about five inches, fold in half, stitch one side together, put the open part, bound firmly with string on the round part of the tap, so as to leave the point of the bag about two inches below the mouth of the tap. The flannel should be folded across from corner to corner, making a pointed bag. The bag must be carefully scalded once a week.

THE SMART DRESSERS.

They Have Disappeared From Public Life in England.

M. Deschanel is one of the best dressed Frenchmen of to-day. The action of France in making one of the best dressed men its President leads one to hope that the utter blotting out of strikingly good dressing among distinguished leaders in all walks of life in England by the war may soon be rectified. Why should we dress as though we had lost the war?

In Parliament, in the medical profession, among leading men of the stage, in the city, and in other classes, not only did the silk hat disappear, but in many cases all those little touches of neat and pleasing dandiness also went by the board.

Take the House of Commons. Where is the Chamberlain orchid? Mr. Austen Chamberlain kept up his father's custom for a time, but has long discarded it. Mr. Walter Long, it is true, is still perfectly groomed, looks younger than ever, and wears a dandyish little tuft of white handkerchief always an inch and a half out of the breast pocket of his well-cut morning coat, but the Treasury bench and Whitehall are sartorially drab in comparison with pre-war days. Gone is the dainty bunch of violets—without which, for instance, the late Mr. Agar-Robartes never entered the House of Commons.

The fine frying-pan carnation that Col. Lockwood always sported when he was in the House is missing from the lounge coat of the same man who is now Lord Lambourne in the House of Lords. Gone is the row of red roses that used to adorn the Irish Nationalist benches in the Commons, and the new Parliament, with its 707 members, has produced only about one. Capt. Reginald Terrell, who is given to the sporting of a flower. Col. Burgoyne, who used to be a sort of choicely controlled rainbow, has for some years discarded color.

In addition, there has been a sort of fashion for sending away from the Commons its most delightfully dressed men. Col. Weigall, one of these, is now being appointed to somewhere the other side of the world, and Sir Edward Tennant, who used to sit—a beautiful symphony in blue and silver—in the Commons, was banished some time ago to the House of Lords.

Lord Althorp and Mr. Lulu Harcourt, who were distinguished for collars and cuffs of unusual area, have also gone from the Commons and they seldom shine in the Lords. Even some of the most immaculate of peers now come down to the Gilded Chamber in shapeless soft felt hats and crumpled lounge suits.

Gone is the galaxy of high color which until the past few sessions always burst out in the Commons every spring in the way of fancy vests. Lemon, ecru, saffron, cinnamon, violet, black and white, white and black, emerald, red, salmon—all are gone, and the commonplace morning suit or lounge coat, with an occasional brown or grey going-way country cut on Fridays, now make up the dress of the sombre-looking House of Commons. Perhaps the passing of the war and the influence of M. Deschanel may make the House blossom again. If the present House of Commons is a little dull intellectually that is no reason why it should not shine sartorially.

Up in the city things are something the same, though not quite. At the Bar, where is the daintiness of the Lawson-Waltons of yesterday. Mr. Justice Darling is a dapper, well dressed figure when in mufti, it is true, but the general smartness of yesterday is not there.

The men connected with the stage have been much the same way of late. Spats are rare, and touches of dandiness infrequent. The George Alexander type and the really exquisite quiet dressiness of Charles Wyndham seem to have few successors just now.

As a nation we are given to self-depreciation. As Mr. Bonar Law said, speaking of what we have done in the war, "we really are a wonderful people." There are such marvelous possibilities of glorious wealth, peace and happiness in front of us, if we work and keep our heads, and realize the fruits that are within our reach, that we certainly have no need either to feel or look dowdy.—London Express.

Escaped Death Sentence.

Forty-six death sentences were commuted by the Department of Justice at Ottawa in the last four years. Forty of the condemned are now serving life sentences, five are serving terms of 10 to 20 years' imprisonment, and one was granted a new trial, which is now pending.

Of the above cases, ten were tried in Ontario courts, nine in Manitoba, six in Quebec, six in Alberta, five in British Columbia, four in Saskatchewan, three in Nova Scotia, and one each in New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and the Yukon.

PARTURIENT PARESIS

Disease More Commonly Known as Milk Fever.

Symptoms Described and Treatment Suggested — Nothing Should Be Administered by the Mouth— How to Treat the Udder and Teats.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

PARTURIENT PARESIS, commonly, but improperly, called "milk fever" is a disease peculiar to breeding cows, and, as the name implies, appears at or near the time of parturition. In rare cases the symptoms have been noticed shortly before the appearances of labor pains, in some cases during the act of parturition, but in most cases not for a few hours or days after the young has been born. The exact cause and nature of the trouble, and the manner in which treatment acts, are still in comparative obscurity.

We know that it appears only in milch cows, and at or about the period of parturition, that it has never been noticed at or following the birth of the first calf, and very rarely the second; that cows that are heavy milkers or in gross condition, or both, are particularly susceptible, but it is occasionally met with in a poor milker or an animal in low condtion.

Symptoms.—Shortly before, at, or in a variable time (say a few hours to three days) after parturition, the cows becomes uneasy, neglects her calf, stamps her feet, whisks her tail, and the eyes have a glassy appearance. She sways, has not proper control of her limbs, lies or falls down, may or may not be able to rise, goes down again. This may occur a few times, until she becomes unable to rise. She usually assumes one of two positions: lies either on her side with limbs and head outstretched, or on her sternum, with the head thrown backwards and the muzzle resting on the flank. There are few cases in which either one or the other of these positions are not observed. The temperature is subnormal in all uncomplicated cases, hence the term "milk fever" is not correct. More or less well marked coma is noted. In many cases she is apparently dead, except that breathing can be noticed, in many cases a sonorous breathing. She is insensible to surroundings and insensitive to pain. In some cases the development of the symptoms is very quick, while in others slow, and in some cases the extreme symptoms are not noticed. She may retain a degree of power of action and sensation.

Treatment.—It has been demonstrated that a full udder tends to prevent the disease. Hence it is good practice to allow the calf to remain with the dam for at least three days, as it will nurse frequently and a little at a time, never leaving the udder without considerable milk. When, for any reason this cannot be done, the milker should simulate nature as near as possible, by milking frequently, but very little at a time for three days. It is also good practice to reduce the animal's milk producing food for a few days before parturition is expected.

Curative Treatment.—We wish to particularly emphasize the fact that on no account, and under no circumstances, should any attempt be made to administer anything whatever by the mouth. Even in the very early stages of the disease, the patient loses the power to swallow; hence, if fluids be introduced into the mouth some of it will almost surely pass down the windpipe and cause death by suffocation in a few minutes, or set up mechanical bronchitis, which will probably cause death in a few days.

We have stated that "a full udder tends to prevent," now we say that "a distended udder tends to cure." Inflation with oxygen gas or sterilized air is easier and less liable to cause complications than distension with fluids. The use of gas demands the possession of a tank of compressed pure oxygen gas, and special apparatus. Outfits for inflating with sterilized air can be purchased from dealers in veterinary instruments for from $2 to $3, and where neither can be obtained an ordinary bicycle pump with a teat syphon attached may be used, but complications from the introduction of septic material are more liable than when gas or sterilized air is used.

The udder and teats must be thoroughly washed with an antiseptic such as a 5 per cent. solution of one of the coal tar antiseptics, the hands of the operator and the instruments also sterilized. All milk is drawn off, as its presence interferes more or less with inflation. The syphon is introduced into a teat, and all the gas or air that the quarter will hold is forced in, and the teat then tied tightly with tape to prevent escape of it. Each quarter is inflated and the teat tied. The udder is then well massaged every hour until the cow rises to her feet, which is usually in from one half to two hours. The tapes should be removed in at most two hours. If not on her feet in at most six hours the udder should be re-inflated. She should be given some easily digested food, or a reasonable amount of her usual food, and all the water she will take. If the weather be cold, the chill should be removed from the water and the cow kept as comfortable as possible. She should not be milked at all for 24 hours after inflation, and for the second twenty-four hours she should be milked frequently, but very little drawn at a time. Forty-eight hours after inflation she should be milked and attended to in the ordinary manner.—Dr. J. H. Reed, O. H. A. College, Guelph.

Shade is important for all classes of stock.

It's easy to laugh at misfortune when it visits the other fellow.

Some men are too lazy to kick when they get the short end of it.

ALBERT B. STEINER, of St. Paul, Minn., who declares he is now able to do twice the work he could before taking Tanlac and that his sister has gained sixteen pounds.

"Talking about things that help people, I have just received a letter from my sister in Waterloo, Iowa telling me she has gained sixteen pounds in weight by taking Tanlac," said A. B. Steiner, 461 East Page St., St. Paul, Minn., recently.

"My sister was on a visit to me a short while ago, and as she was suffering from stomach trouble some one advised her to try Tanlac, which she did, and as I saw the great benefit she was getting from it I decided to try it myself, for I had been troubled with my stomach for the past two years. I had a very poor appetite, and the little I did manage to eat seemed to lodge right in the pit of my stomach and sour. I would bloat terribly after eating and have the worst sort of cramping pains in my stomach, and at times I had such bad attacks of heartburn I would nearly go wild. My back gave me a lot of trouble, and I had such intense pains in the small of my back I could hardly bend over. To add to my other troubles about two months ago I began to suffer with rheumatism in my shoulder blades and arms, which got so bad I could hardly do my work and could not even put on my coat without assistance. I was so nervous I could get but little sleep and would roll and toss from one side of the bed to the other all night long, and would get up in the morning all tired out. I was so badly run down and had lost so much weight I was so weak I could hardly get about at all.

"Well, while I have only taken five bottles of Tanlac in all my improvement is simply remarkable. I have such a good appetite I am hungry all the time and my stomach is in such a splendid condition I can eat anything I want without suffering the least bit from it afterward. The pains have all gone out of my back and I never have the least sign of rheumatism. In fact, I never have an ache or pain of any kind. I sleep as sound as a log every night and have gained in weight and strength until I can do twice as much work as I could before I began taking Tanlac. Yes, sir, I can recommend Tanlac after what it has done for me, and I know it will do the same for others if they will only give it a fair trial."

Search for Rubies.

The greater part of the world's rubies are derived from the mines of the Mogok Valley, in Burma, where much modern machinery and the very latest tools are employed to facilitate the examination of a large amount of byon, or ruby-bearing clay. Nearby, in the valleys of the Burmans, the search for rubies is conducted very much as it was centuries and centuries ago. The digging and washing there is a matter of hand labor; but they are still getting the rubies, the finest rubies in all the world. In the Mogok Valley, however, where large workings are always in hand, a scientific system has been introduced with corresponding results. The byon is extracted by the open quarry method of removing all the surface down to the ruby-bearing clay. This is then dug up, carried on trolleys to the steam cleansing mill, washed, passed through sieves, and then closely scrutinized for rubies and spinels. In addition to the pure ruby, spinel or balas rubies are found in large quantities in Mogok. Whenever the ruby is found there also is spinel. Both are crystals of aluminum, but of varying shape. While the true ruby may be said to be pure corundum only, the spinel shows a minute quantity of magnisium, the presence of which lessens its hardness by one-fifth. There is in use at these mines an instrument called the dichroiscope, whereby rubies are separated from the spinels with the utmost accuracy and certainty. The gem is placed in the instrument in such a way that a ray of light passes through it and is polarized. The true ruby shows a pure red ray, whereas the spinel discloses a slight tinge of blue with the red. Among the comparatively few magnificent spinels in existence may be mentioned the great Agincourt ruby in the British crown.

Dislike Corn Flour.

It is practically impossible to popularize corn flour in Greece, says Consul-General A. W. Wendell, of Athens, partly owing to the fact that the bakeries produce all the bread that is eaten in the country, even baking that which is kneaded and prepared at home by the housewives.

Nearly all the world's supply of asbestos comes from Canada.

Times are times in Mississippi, it seems from these items in the Yazoo City Sentinel: "Mr. Vernon O'Neal is having a time riding around in his new Dodge." "Miss Addie Fisher is having a time trying to get her home papered."

GERMAN PRE-WAR DEBTS.

New Office Will Handle Sum of $10,000,000.

An Order-in-Council just issued at Ottawa constitutes Canada's clearing house, by means of which, in conjunction with a central clearing house at London, England, and another at Berlin, all pre-war debts between Canada and Germany will be settled.

One of the outstanding features of the Order-in-Council is the rate at which Canadian debts owing to Germans will be paid. The set rate is 49.01 marks to $1, which places the value of the mark at little more than two cents. Of course, a Canadian importer who owed his German creditors $1,000 at midnight on August 4, 1914, will only have to pay them $100 with interest at five per cent from that date. On the other hand, the German importer who owed his Canadian creditors 1,000 marks when the war began will have to pay them 10,000 marks.

During the fiscal year ending March 31, 1914, Canadian imports from Germany were $14,000,000 and Canadian exports to Germany were $4,044,019. Assuming that both countries were equally prompt in payment, Canadian pre-war debts to Germany would be three times as great as German pre-war debts to Canada. The rate of exchange will of course, offset that.

What debts Canadians must collect from Germany may be indicated by the fact that during the year ending March 31, 1914, Canada exported to Germany $281,414 in raw furs, $1,242,011 in agricultural implements mostly reaping machines, and $320,000 worth of flax seed.

Concerning the Canadian Clearing House, one authority says: "It is expected that some $10,000,000 in claims will be handled through the Canadian clearing office. Cash assets and trade debts and balances owing by Canadians to German nationals will reach about $1,700,000, according to figures at present available while Germany owes to Canadians some $775,000, excluding three items, one of which it is said may prove fictitious, and another which is owned by a subsidiary company and may not be included among the debts owed by Germans. With dividens on stocks, etc., it is expected that the total sum will reach $10,000,000."

Another authority places the debts owed by Canadians to Germans at $1,650,000, but says that take into consideration German property in the Dominion, Canadian claims are secured to the extent of 125 per cent.

Among the larger German holdings in Canada are 140,000 shares of Canadian Pacific Railway stock valued at $22,500,000, and Canadian Northern Railway debentures of a par value of $200,000 held by German and Austrian citizens. Another matter which may come under consideration is the timber and mineral holdings in Alberta and British Columbia said to have been acquired by von Alvensleben on behalf of the ex-emperor and valued at $9,000,000.

How to Know Birds.

The only way really to know the birds is to study them in the field in their natural environment. Bird-study furnishes one of the most attractive hobbies. The pleasure that birds furnish in this way makes their æsthetic value quite as important as their economic value. Bird activities pass through so many changes in the course of a year that there is no opportunity for bird-study to become monotonous. Then, too, bird-study takes one out into the fields, in the open, so that the setting in which bird-study is carried on is in itself attractive.

While special trips to the woods and water to look for birds offer many pleasant hours, yet, perhaps, the greatest pleasure from bird-study comes through the observation of the birds found around one's home, as one sits on the porch and watches the wrens and bluebirds rear their young in the houses provided for them or sees the robins and flickers that dot the lawn; or hears the bird chorus that swells through the open window as one awakens in the early spring morn. The pleasure thus derived is the lasting, unconscious enjoyment that becomes an intimate part of one's life.

There are all stages of attainment possible to suit every condition, from the identifying of a few birds in the field up to the most careful study of bird habits, which may occupy one's entire time. One of the most satisfactory methods of studying bird life is to observe close at hand in one's yard the birds that may be attracted there by nesting-houses, fountains, and food.

The first step in bird-study is the identification of birds. Learning a bird's name is much like an introduction to a person; it is a means by which a new friendship may be formed. But there is a great deal of pleasure in merely learning to name the birds. Many people will never care to go beyond this point in bird-study. The ability to name the birds from year to year as they return in the spring is one of the chief pleasures in bird-study, and gives a sort of feeling of friendship for the birds. But in the process of learning the names of birds, one of necessity learns many interesting things about them. There is a sort of fascination to see if one can learn to name all the birds of a locality. It serves as an incentive from year to year, as one recognizes the old friends, to try each year to make a few new friends, as well as to get better acquainted with the old.—Gilbert Trafton in "Bird Friends."

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restore Its Natural Color and Lustre at Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

Bad News for Plumbers.

Discouraging news for the plumber comes from Sweden, where a factory recently started the production of packingless water fawcets. The troublesome material is rendered unnecessary by grinding the valve seats and faces so accurately that these parts fit closely enough to prevent leakage.—Popular Mechanics.

Radical Notions.

"I heern tell," said Gap Johnson, "that they are figgering on putting a pipe organ into the new church in town."

"Well, it may be all right for them that likes it that-a-way," severely returned Mrs Johnson, "but, as for me, I'm plum ag'in smoking in church!"

The Dodo.

The dodo—its name to-day a synonym for "back number"—became extinct owing to the circumstance that it was good to eat. Not being able to fly, its clumsy waddle gave it no means of escape. Sailors stopping at the Island of Mauritius, to which it was native, killed it for food. Not even a skeleton of the dodo now exists, and, until recently, it was supposed there was only one picture of the bird—made by an artist who visited Mauritius in 1626. But it now appears that living specimens were taken to Amsterdam at about the same period, and beautiful painted portraits of them have turned up. One of the latter is of a white dodo (not an albino), which presumably represented a distinct variety, the ordinary type having plumage that was mostly grey.

SHOT THRICE BY MASKED BURGLAR

VICE-PRESIDENT OF MANUFACTURING CO. LIES AT POINT OF DEATH

New York, May 12.—In an effort to save the life of Frederick Ruckert, vice-president of the White Metal Manufacturing Company of Hoboken, who was shot three times by a burglar he discovered in the dining room of his home at 1127 Washington street Hoboken, early Monday morning, two blood transfusions were performed a few hours apart. St. Mary's Hospital, Hoboken, and other physicians summoned to attend the wealthy bachelor said there is small hope for his recovery.

Mr. Ruckert returned to his apartments about midnight, after spending the evening at a Manhattan theatre with Miss Elsie Vormach of 1032 Garden avenue, Hoboken, to whom he was to be married in August.

As he flashed on the lights he was confronted by a masked man, who was armed with two revolvers. The man told him to throw up his hands and "take is easy." Mr. Ruckert's reply was to switch off the lights with a swift motion and attack the intruder. As the men rolled to the floor the burglar fired from both weapons. The bullets entered Mr. Ruckert's right shoulder and left side but he retained his grip.

Fighting, the men crashed into the dining room table, sent it over, with Mr. Ruckert holding to the man's throat. The burglar fired again. The bullet pierced Mr. Ruckert's abdomen and his hold relaxed. The burglar fled fearing a general alarm from the sound of the gun explosions. Mr. Ruckert followed to the street and then collapsed. He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital in a passing automobile.

Mr. Ruckert had drawn from a bank $1,500 for a trip to Cincinnati to be made Monday. The burglar obtained no money or any silverware or jewelry. Entrance was made by a rope ladder suspended from the cornice to the kitchen window of the apartment.

EDITOR'S MAIL

A PROPHET, ETC.

Editor Review: Permit me to express my gratitude to Mr. Frank Tattersall, choirmaster of St. Paul's Church, for the exquisite pleasure which I enjoyed last night at the recital given by him, assisted most ably by his choir.

I have travelled almost all over the world and have heard the masters of the musical art, including the famous Paderewski, and, believe me, sir, I have no reason to flatter Mr. Tattersall. I am not a permanent resident of your city, but in my judgment Paderewski does not excell to any great extent the wonderful talent displayed by Mr Tattersall last evening. It was a painful experience for me to have seen such art rendered to so small an audience and at only fifty cents at that. Evidently a prophet is not appreciated in his own city. In all probability if Mr. Tattersall had a foreign appendix to his name he would have filled Massey Hall to standing room capacity.

Trusting you will find space for my humble expression of well-deserved praise for a man of real genius, I am.

Yours, etc.,
L. JOFFE.

Talking About Pipes!

Hang on to anything you may have left! The other morning I was running to catch the 8.25 up. The train was already in when I arrived on the platform, and, being in the habit of purchasing my morning paper from a newsboy on the platform, he caught sight of my flying coat-tails, and, anticipating my desire, ran after me. Just as the train started he handed through the window my usual morning paper with. "Your paper, sir. Thank you!"

I was lucky in finding a corner seat, and took it.

A lightness in my teeth prompted me to look to my pipe. My pipe! The bowl was missing!

"Well," said I, "the stem is pretty useless," and, feeling rather annoyed at the loss of my best briar, chucked the stem out of the window. "So much for that!" said I. Turning my attention to the paper I opened it and imagine my surprise on finding my dearly-loved bowl inside it!

"Well," said I, "the bowl is no much use without the stem," so out of the window it went.

My cup of misfortune was full. Next morning I had bags of time to catch the train, and the next greeting I received on the platform was from the newsboy, "Your paper, sir, and is this the stem of your pipe?"

TO CLEAN UPHOLSTERED FURNITURE

If the furniture is covered with serge, tapestry, and similar fabrics, first beat and brush it will. Mix 2 parts of spirits of wine with one part of ammonia. Make a swab of soft rags by folding two or three together, dip this in the spirits of wine solution and rub the upholstery vigorously with it. As the rag becomes soiled turn it or use a clean piece.

To clean furniture, upholstered in woollen velvets or saddlebags: Beat and brush it very well. Obtain one ox gall from the butcher and mix it with a pailful of cold water. Wring a cloth out in this solution and wipe the furniture over with it. Rinse the cloth out several times, during the process, wringing it as dry as possible each time. Rub again with a dry cloth.

To clean silk, velvets, brocades, silk tapestries, plush: Brush very thoroughly with a soft brush. Make a swab of old rags, moisten it with benzine and rub the materials with it. Care must be taken not to allow a naked light anywhere near the benzine, as it is highly inflammable. Too much benzine must not be put in the swab, as very little will revive the color of the upholstery.

To remove stains on upholstered furniture: Make a thick paste of Fuller's earth and cold water. Spread this on the stains and leave it to dry thoroughly, then brush off with a clean brush. Sometimes a second application is necessary, if the stains are old.

When a suction or vacuum cleaner is available, the first cleaning of the furniture is done by its aid.

"STYLES" IN SUICIDE.

The Ancients Used to Jump Off Cliffs.

Primitive man, when stirred by some primeval instinct to remove himself or some neighbor permanently from the community, adopted the means at hand. His body, or that of his neighbor, shortly after he had entered on the resolution, would be found at the foot of some cliff, from which it had fallen; or perhaps he would disappear into the depths of the sea, or, as with the Hawaiians, into the fuming crater of a volcano. A writer in the Journal of the American Medical Association points out how, with the coming of science, methods of suicide and homicide began to be "refined."

"It is reported," says this authority, "that the ancient Egyptians were skilled in securing the deadly prussic acid from the peach. Nicander (204 B.C.) described the use of snake venom, opium, henbane and other popular methods of seeking the Great Beyond. Socrates drank the hemlock and Cleopatra succumbed to the sting of the asp.

"In more modern times arsenic became popular, reaching the height of refinement in the 17th century. At this period the infamous Tofans at Venice prepared vials of arsenous oxid for general sale and herself concocted weird and unusual combinations for the secret use of arsenic by those high in political and ecclesiastical circles.

"Since the advent of firearms, these have steadily maintained a reasonable popularity as suicidal and homicidal agencies in view of their notorious ease of procurement and increasing facility of operation.

"The adoption of hanging—a rather awkward procedure requiring four ingredients, a victim, a noose, something to hang it from and something to step from—is rather common. And we must not forget asphyxia, which the statistics list separately from hanging. Here we have an increasing vogue, although the advent of electric light in place of gas makes the method not so generally available.

"Modern man, in place of leaping from a cliff, sometimes seeks the easily available upper floors of city skyscrapers and thence projects himself into eternity.

"However, poisoning has lost but slightly in popularity. In ancient days the fame of poisoner and poisons was spread by word of mouth.

"Everyone remembers when phenol—popularly called carbolic acid—was the deadly elixir of choice. Domestically used to aid the unesthetic bedbug to shuffle off this mortal coil, it sometimes found its way to the family medicine chest and was available for human extermination. The demise and the method were duly recorded, thus increasing the 'popularity.'

"Latterly, since the advent of mercuric chlorid for certain domestic uses, this poison is conveniently at hand. Not only is it convenient, but there exists for it an alluring propaganda. Thus, when a Georgia banker took mercuric chlorid by mistake and lay dying, the notoriety given to this case introduced mercuric chloral as an available poison. It became one of the 'six best sellers'."

ONLY 45 WAR CRIMINALS.

Berlin, May 12.—The Allies have presented a new note to Germany containing the names of forty-five Germans who are alleged to have committed crimes during the war for which the Allies would have them prosecuted, according to an announcement by the Foreign Office. The note makes specific indictments and permits the inference that witnesses for the prosecution are prepared to come to Germany.

The list does not contain the names of the former German Crown Prince or of Field Marshal von Hindenburg or Gen. Ludendorff.

PREMIER NITTI RESIGNS.

Rome, May 12.—The Ministry, of which Premier Nitti was the head, has resigned. The decision to resign came when the Chamber adopted by a vote of 193 to 112 a motion by the Socialists regarding posts and telegraphs. Signor Nitti called for a rejection of the action and demanded that the balloting be considered a vote of confidence in the ministry. The popular party voted with the Socialists.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if bladder bothers You.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become sluggish; they become overworked; get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for a generation to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

COLONEL GILLESPIE PRAISES CADETS

IMMENSELY PLEASED WITH SOLDIERLY DISCIPLINE AND GOOD TRAINING

Colonel G. H. Gillespie, organizer and Inspector of Cadet Corps this afternoon inspected the local Collegiate and school cadets before a large crowd of friends and relatives of the boys at the Exhibition Grounds. The battalions taking part in the inspection were: No. 13 Collegiate Cadets, No. 728 Central School Cadets, No. 549 South Central School Cadets, No. 768 Queen Mary School Cadets, and No. 776 King Edward School Cadets.

The boys presented a splendid appearance and showed the effects of first class discipline, especially the battalion from King Edward School.

Colonel Gillespie, accompanied by Captain Winterbottom of the Peterborough Rangers and Captain Jamieson, of the Collegiate Institute arrived on the grounds at three o'clock and proceeded immediately with the inspection, starting with the Collegiate battalion. He expressed himself as immensely pleased with the splendid turn out and with the amount of training which they had apparently received. He was also pleased with the class of discipline shown by the ranks and stated that they were a credit to the city.

The battalions lined up in review order for the inspection, after which they marched past in column of platoons. Returning they marched past the inspection base with the whole brigade in close column and presented a very fine appearance on this occasion. The battalions then marched in column of fours and took up their original formation in review order.

After the march past, a relay race was run off with teams of twenty competing. There was also a tug of war and a signalling competition between the different battalions. The results of these contests will probably be announced tomorrow.

Collingwood, May 12. — Facing a deficit left over from last year, which amounts to $47,000, the municipal council of the town at their meeting Monday night fixed the tax rate for 1920 at 50 mills on the dollar, ten mills higher than last year. Even with the present tax rate the council expects to be $20,000 behind at the end of the year.

C.P.R. EXHIBIT AT BIRMINGHAM ENG.

CANADIAN PACIFIC.
CANADIAN PACIFIC

One of the most striking features of the British Industries Fair at Birmingham was the Canadian Pacific Railway exhibit in the Town Hall. The majority of the exhibitors had their stands made in Birmingham to a standard pattern, but the Publicity Department of the C.P.R., with its customary foresight, decided that they would get away from the regular stands, and have a special exhibit designed by the well-known architect, Mr. A. H. Jones. The work was carried out by Messrs. Gaze & Co., of Kingston-on-Thames, and the exhibit was sent from Kingston to Birmingham on a motor lorry. Three expert fitters went down from London to Birmingham, with the result that the C.P.R. stand was the first to be finished in the whole of the Brit-

Mr. W. T. Treadaway, the energetic representative of the Canadian Pacific Railway in Birmingham, and Mr. Owen of the Birmingham office received many congratulations upon the Canadian Pacific Railway Exhibit.

Australians Must Have Adequate Home Defenses, Say Their Public Leaders

DISCUSSING the question of Australian home defence with a representative of the press in London, some twelve months ago, Senator G. F. Pearce, Federal Defence Minister, indicated, in one short sentence, Australia's attitude on the question. "My own present view," he said, "in judging by the news that one reads, and following the Peace Conference, is, I am sorry to say, that we must still make provision for military and naval defence." Australia is one of the last nations that could be charged with any least taint of militarism. Twice, during the war, she rejected conscription. And yet, her contribution in men and material to the great struggle ranks high indeed amongst those of the other Allies. Australia's part in the war was a very great and very honorable part; but there can be no doubt that the vast majority of Australians would be quite unfeignedly glad to see an end made of the whole military system of the country, if they thought it was in any way feasible. The "glamor of war" never had much part in the Australian national outlook. It has certainly less than ever to-day.

Australia, however, has always shown herself determined not to be neglectful of what she regarded as her clear duty in providing for her own defence both on land and on sea. She has, moreover, always boldly faced the facts of the case, the vastness of her territory, the comparative smallness of her population, her strange, isolated position in the British Commonwealth, and most of all, perhaps, the growing strength and the expanding policy of the great power "north of the line." In considering the question of her own security, Australia has, indeed, never made much secret of the fact that she was not looking "over the roof of the world to Europe," but over the Pacific toward Japan.

And so, to-day, Australia, although she hopes everything, ultimately, from the League of Nations, and is one of the League's most earnest supporters, is determined to shirk no responsibility which may be laid upon her to make sure her own defence until the League really begins to fulfill its high purpose. "It is undoubtedly our duty," declared Gen. Sir William Birdwood, speaking recently in Melbourne, "to encourage and support the League by every means in our power, for if we and all others give our whole-hearted support, the time may come when the League may be regarded as a real factor in preserving universal peace. But surely it would be the height of folly for us to rely on the League of Nations in any way, at the present time, to insure our defense."

Australia is, accordingly, going steadily forward, working out her plans. Two main features were outlined by Gen. Birdwood in the speech just referred to. The general considered it essential that the chief reliance should be, in the future as in the past, on the citizen forces, organised and trained by a really good and efficient staff, and maintained "for defence and not defiance," in the greatest efficiency of which the means of the Commonwealth will permit. The other point which Gen. Birdwood emphasised was the necessity of Australia and New Zealand "seeing eye to eye," and working together as one nation. As British outposts in the Pacific, he insisted, there could never be any divergent views between them concerning defence.

Paris Under Fire.

After the first day and a half of the long distance bombardment of Paris an officer of the Red Cross went out to get his lunch. Paris had just traversed one disquieting moment—a moment of mystery. Ordered to its cellars in broad daylight, it could not, in spite of periodic explosions, discern a single "gotha" in the sky or hear a single French defensive shot. But the news of the long range gun was now abroad; already the boulevards were in movement, and the old woman who sells newspapers at the kiosk opposite the Madeleine was in her place.

"Good morning, madame. I haven't heard that famous gun of yours for at least half an hour—have you?"

"What would you? It has to have its lunch!"

Sharps in A Flat.

"Germany's place in the peace conference? Has she any place?" Senator Lodge wanted to know. "Is she not as much out of tune with the scheme of things as Miss Matchmaker?

"Mrs. Matchmaker was greeting Mr. Bach and as he reached for his coat, Miss Matchmaker, in the next room, could be heard howling a song to her own accompaniment.

"'Ah,' exclaimed Mrs. Matchmaker, 'my daughter is breaking into song!'

"'You are right, madam,' growled Mr. Bach. 'You can tell that she's breaking in, for obviously she hasn't been able to find the key.'"

Identifying Him.

"'Lije Lazzenberry came to town with me yesterday, but I lost him in the shuffle some'rs," said the gent from Jimpson Junction. "If you happen to run onto him tell him I'm looking for him."

"But I do not know him," replied the acquaintance addressed. "How shall I identify him?"

"If you see a white eyed feller at Twelfth and Grand or some other lively corner, running out into the street to get across and then running back again, and starting and stopping and jumping sideways and hopping around like a toad on a hot griddle, that's 'Lije."—Kansas City Star.

Electricity Restores Youth.

The electrical instrument which made the late Sir James Grant, consulting physician to the General Hospital, Ottawa, look fifty at the age of eighty-six, was shown to an interviewer recently by the inventor, Mr T. C. Hodgkinson, of Hammersmith.

Mr. Hodgkinson is seventy-three, but might pass for anything between forty-eight and fifty-two. His face is ruddy, his eyes are bright, and his tread is firm. He has not a trace of baldness and moves with the ease of a man of twenty-five. He did three years' munition work, putting in ten to twelve hours a day.

The electro-neurotone, as the machine is called, is three to four inches in length and two and a half inches wide and high. It has a controlling switch to regulate the current and is worked by a dry battery. Applied to the skin, it produces a pleasant tickling sensation.

"How does this keep one young?" Mr. Hodgkinson was asked.

"Sir James Grant," he replied, "explained it in the Montreal Medical Journal as making possible the building of more tissue, the absorption of more oxygen, and great improvement in nutrition. A person not only feels younger but looks younger, for defective blood-making power shows itself particularly in the face.

"Dr. Grant cites the case of a woman, aged seventy-eight, who, after neurotone treatment, moved about with the activity of twenty years before and said she felt almost youthful.

GREENWOOD'S LUCKY FALL.

How Bus Accident in London Started a Career.

A lucky accident carried Hamar Greenwood far on his way from Whitby, Ont., to the Irish secretaryship at Dublin Castle. And whimsical fate decreed that the Canadian should win fortune not by "falling on his feet" but by falling literally on his head. Indeed, after the hard knocks he got in those early days in London, and the difficulties his courage surmounted, even a rebellious Ireland should have no terrors for this son of Ontario.

No bed of roses was life for Hamar Greenwood when, equipped with little else than his degree from Toronto University and unlimited pluck, he crossed the Atlantic in 1895 to try his luck in the world's metropolis. He had just celebrated his 25th birthday, and was about to make his debut on the lecture platform under the auspices of a celebrated British temperance society.

A forceful and convincing speaker, young Greenwood, who had learned the art of oratory at Toronto Varsity, and acquired the secret of self-confidence as an officer in the Canadian militia, favorably impressed the critical British audiences. But temperance lecturing was not a remunerative avocation. In fact Greenwood could just keep body and soul together. So presently he enrolled at Gray's Inn to study for the bar, the most ambitious and uphill career in England, difficult for an Englishman with legal connections, but simply appalling for an unknown Canadian That is the last piece of money I possess," declared Greenwood desperately one day in 1899 as he met a Canadian friend on the Strand. The Whitbyite produced this last remnant of his funds, a solitary half-crown—60 cents. Greenwood remarked that he was just deliberating whether he should make one more attempt to get some employment which would help him through with his legal studies, or throw up the sponge then and there, go to the nearest recruiting office and join the regular army in the ranks—in those days the last resort of the stoney broke.

It was here that fate stepped in. A day or so later Greenwood, sitting disconsolately a-top an old horse omnibus was jogging down towards the city to try and better his fortunes. Suddenly the ponderous vehicle in which he was riding slewed sharply on the greasy pavement, struck the curb and rolled over. Greenwood was thrown heavily on the cement sidewalk, striking his head. Unconscious when picked up he remained in that condition for ten days. For weeks he hovered between life and death in hospital, receiving the daily attention of one of London's most eminent surgeons, who, having met the young Canadian at a lecture, took a kindly interest in him. News of the accident brought other friends from whom Greenwood, too proud and independent to disclose his poverty, had held aloof.

The upshot was that the London General Omnibus Co. paid Greenwood £1,000—nearly $5,000—damages for the very severe injuries he had received. After a lengthy convalescence the injured man resumed his studies, and thanks to the funds at his disposal was absolved from any further financial worries until he had emerged a full fledged barrister from the Temple. From the day that the bus toppled over Greenwood's fortunes steadily advanced, partly as a lawyer, but chiefly in the political field. In 1911 fortune smiled her kindest when the beautiful and charming Miss Margery Spencer, daughter of a well-known family, became his wife.

Member for York in 1906-10, Greenwood has since represented Sunderland in the British House. When war broke out he became a lieutenant-colonel in a Welsh regiment, and after six months' active service was invalided home. He was created a baronet in 1915, and became Deputy Adjutant-General of the British army later. He was Under-Secretary in the British Cabinet for Home Affairs prior to his present appointment.

A Strange Case.

Dr. C. F. Oddie reports to the archives of radiology and electrotherapy (London, Eng.) the case of a boy of fourteen whose fingers have only one joint. His mother had similar hands, as have four of her nine children, the fingers of the other five being normal.

With coal ever growing scarcer and higher in price, the value of the farm woodlot is increasing by leaps and bounds.

Frankness.

The eldest sons of British peers bear what are known as "courtesy titles," when the head of the house has two or three and can spare an inferior one to his son.

Earl Winterton, a young English politician, has a keen sense of humor and can enjoy a joke on himself, as is evidenced by his recounting of this one.

Before succeeding to the earldom he was known as Lord Turnour, under which name he figured in some noisy scenes in the House. A few months after his father's death he was thus addressed at dinner by a fellow guest:

"I ought to know you, but I can't recall your name."

"Oh, I am Earl Winterton," was the reply.

"Of course, of course," said the other. "Why, I have been confounding you all the evening with that ass Turnour!"

A Postal Airplane Service.

After the signing of the armistice the British authorities established a postal airplane service to Cologne, and in connection with this service systematic use was made of wireless telephony, says the Halifax Chronicle. Wireless telephone stations were placed on the ground at distances of fifty miles from each other and with the use of quite small sets were able to transmit messages to aircraft up to thirty miles away. They could also receive from the air to about fifty miles. Frequently these distances were exceeded and an airplane was in communication at one and the same time with three stations. Considering the small size of the apparatus employed these were remarkable results, and testify to the rapid progress made by the British air service since the first trials of wireless telephony to airplanes in 1915.

"Living Mask" Portrait Painting.

A new and startling departure in the art of portrait painting has been evolved by Mme. Ivy de Verley (Mrs. Vesey Daverend), one of London's best known artists. Mme. de Verley calls this new work "a living mask," and indeed it has all the startling qualities of a real mask.

This new method of bringing out facial characteristics has met a great deal of favor since it was first displayed by the artist. Even in a studio where there are any number of exceedingly attractive portrait paintings this living mask immediately arrests the eye. It gives one the impression that a face is peering through

MASTERLY ART IN PIANO RECITAL

FRANK TATTERSALL DELIGHTS AUDIENCE OF LOCAL MUSIC-LOVERS

An event that will be remembered as one of the most superior in the musical circles of this city, took place in St. Paul's Church last evening when a fair audience of the local music-loving public assembled to hear a brilliant pianoforte recital by Mr Frank Tattersall, the talented English pianist. Mr. Tattersall was very acceptably assisted by the choir of St Paul's Church.

Something of a revelation and a most pleasant one, was last evening's recital, impressing the people with the fact that we have in our midst such marked ability as possesed by this pianist. And that the audience was keenly appreciative of the artistical excellence of Mr. Tattersall's interpretation, was apparent by the encouraging co-operation of the attentive and understanding atmosphere which prevailed throughout the entire evening, broken only by the bursts of frequent applause.

Masterly correct with regard to the technical phase of the art, this gifted entertainer is possessed of a touch of such soulful melody as to thrill and elate..

Generous in responding to the many insistent encores and putting forth every effort to satisfy his insistent listeners, Mr. Tattersall has earned for himself a prominent position in the realm of artistical expression in Peterborough. Following is the program, each number of which was of such excellence that any special comment on an individual selection would be uncalled for, excepting perhaps in the number "Strike the Lyre," by Cooke.

The Programme

NEW SECRETARY CHILDREN'S AID

JOHN EDGAR RECEIVES APPOINTMENT—J. WEARING TENDERED RESIGNATION

At the regular meeting of the Children's Aid Society yesterday afternoon, Mr. Joseph Wearing, secretary of the society, tendered his resignation. In his letter he stated that his heart would still be with the society and that he would still be willing to help out as solicitor for the society if they were unable to secure anyone else.

On motion of Mr. Parsons, seconded by Mrs. Sanderson, it was decided to accept Mr. Wearing's resignation, with thanks for his services during the past three years. It is understood that Mr. Wearing's resignation from the society is due to increasing business cares.

John Edgar, Secretary.

It was moved by Dr. King and seconded by Mr. Parsons, that Mr John Edgar be appointed secretary to replace Mr. Wearing. The motion was carried unanimously. Mr. Edgar was also given authority to purchase a new minute book.

Caretaker's Duties.

The agreement between the society and Mr. and Mrs. Rogers in connection with their duties as caretaker and matron at the Children's Shelter was presented at the meeting. Mr. Edgar pointed out that the committee appointed for that purpose had not yet seen the agreement, as it had been drawn up only that afternoon, and it was, therefore, decided that Mr. Edgar, Chief Thompson, Dr. King and Mrs. Sanderson should be a committee to look after the agreement, and that they should have full power to act in the matter.

A request was received asking that permission be granted to keep a ward of the society home from school, as it was found that the child could not learn and was mentally defective. A letter from the teacher stating that it was useless for the child to go to school was also read, but it was pointed out by different members of the board that the society had no power to override the laws of the country, and it was therefore decided that no action should be taken in the matter.

Pathetic Letter.

A pathetic letter from a ward was read which showed how some children have to fight down the inherent instinct to steal. This child was in a good home, and wanted to stay there, but had stolen, and her guardian wanted to send her back to the Shelter. In her letter the child stated that she knew that is was wrong to steal, but that she had done it all the same. She begged the board to ask her guardian to give her another chance and she would never steal again.

Agent's Report.

The agent's report presented by Mr. Powell was as follows:

Complaints, 3; investigations, 3; mail received, 57; mail sent out 50; mileage covered, 450; visits outside the city, 5; police court attendances, 2; wards heard from, 10; wards sent out, 5; wards returned to Shelter, 2; wards visited, 18; warnings given, 2.

The other usual monthly reports were also presented.

Accounts amounting to $95.48 were passed by the board.

Those present were: Mesdames Gibbs, Sanderson, Turner and Kimberly; Dr. King, Mr. Parsons, Mr. Edgar, Agent Powell, and Rev. Fr. Phelan, in the chair.

At the close of the meeting Father Phelan thanked the board for their kind message of sympathy on the occasion of the death of his brother.

MEETING OF 93rd BATTALION.

Glasgow Friends Send Greets on Jubilee Appeal

Hats off to the Salvation Army! An organization that after fifty years of work emerges from its war activities as strong as ever demands our admiration. There is no social sore that it does not attempt to heal; it does a work that no one else will undertake. It has, of course, some critics, but what are they compared to its host of friends.

The Church, too, has paid its tribute Spurgeon declared that "if the Salvation Army were wiped out of London 5,000 extra policemen could not fill its place in the repression of crime and disorder."

And what is the secret of The Army's success? Nothing but earnestness. Its workers live quiet, modest lives. No one can say that they benefit financially by their association with the great Organization. They get no more than a mere living wage. The Army is wedded to poverty; it lives from hand to mouth. It practises, perhaps the most genuine Socialism that the world has ever seen. Renunciation is the watchword.

And yet tragedy and pathos lie behind its activities. Its officers tackle the roughest proposition in the foulest surroundings. They arrest the would-be suicide they train the tramp's children for honest work; its women do not hesitate to tackle the wife-beater; they are not afraid to enter public-houses. It provides cheap meals, "poor men's hotels," it clothes the slum families. An old and highly esteemed resident of Peterborough passed away in St. Joseph's Hospital last evening in the person of Miss Ellen Payne. Miss Payne was for the past number of years employed as housekeeper at St. Peter's rectory where she made many warm friends by a kindly disposition and a genial nature. Having retired some five or six years ago, deceased made her home with the Misses Sullivan on Downie street. The remains were conveyed to the home of her cousin, Mrs. Michael S. Crough, Ennismore, and the funeral will take place Friday morning at 9 o'clock to St. Martin's Church and Cemetery, Ennismore.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Orville Kenneally will take place from the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Lane, 243 Hunter street, at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and proceed to St. Peter's Church and St. Peter's Cemetery for interment.

NICHOLLS HOSPITAL

The beautiful tablet was thereupon unveiled and Miss Dixon presented it to the Hospital Board to be placed in a prominent place in the hospital. On behalf of the board the chairman responded fittingly.

Rev. William Malott

The chairman then called upon Rev. F. E. Malott to speak.

"No line of thought had been suggested," he said, but he knew he must not resurrect the story of Florence Nightingale. He wished to speak of the work the nurses were trained to do, and the value of that calling.

We were living in a day when it was idle to say that a woman sould not do this or that. They had demonstrated that they could do anything. the work of nursing required esentially womanly or feminine qualities. Sir Walter Scott wrote lines of praise to the nurse and her great work. Nurses would be called upon in their work to face many things that would try and sadden them, but their training in the hospital has been such as to overcome this.

The training course developed character as does any line of work, but the nurse and her training developed qualities of sympathy, thoughtfulness and tact

The calling of the nurse was one of the noblest, in that it offered opportunities for human service as few callings did. Most callings were primarily for purposes devoted to self. The callings of the physician, nurse and minister of the Gospel, ought to be premier for service

It gives them the greatest opportunity in life for service following in the footsteps of the greatest of all the Master who went about through His life, doing good. He congratulated them upon the success they had acheived and wished them the very best success in the years to come. Mr. Malott's address was replete with interesting stories and anecdotes concerning the work of nurses.

Presentation of Diplomas

Following Mr. Malott's address a solo was excellently rendered by Mrs. Maurice H. Parks, after which the graduates were requested to come to the platform to receive their diplomas and make an affirmation to honor their diploma in their future lives. This affirmation was recited by the chairman of the Board and repeated by the ten graduating nurses. Each in turn was then handed her diploma.

Medals Presented

The next item on the program was the presentation of medals by Miss Sanderson, assistant superintendent of the hospital. During these formalities the audience listened and watched with rapt attention, being greatly impressed by the ceremonies.

Dr McPherson

After this interesting event Dr. MacPherson, M. O. H., was called upon to address the nurses. He said he had been asked to give a short address, with emphasis on the "short" He appreciated this honor always, and on this occasion he considered it an exceptional honor, for the ten young ladies this year were the best and finest looking class of nurses that had been graduated from Nicholl's Hospital. (Applause.) He had also received a special invitation from the class to give this address.

It was very appropriate to have a public gathering at this stage in the nurses' work. During the past three years, these nurses had been of great service to the people, and he knew of no other way that the people could show their gratitude than by turning out as they had tonight. He laid stress on the work of the nurses during the war, and the strain it had been upon all nurses. There was always a great strain attached to the work of a nurse. Thy had brought honor to themselves and the hospital, and on behalf of the staff of the hospital, he congratulated them on their success, and he congratulated the hospital on the large class which had graduated this year.

Timely Advice

It was a time honored custom for the doctors addressing the nurses on this occasion to give them some advice for the future. There was their duty to themselves and to their patients.

In spite of utmost care there might arise some awkward situations. He advised them not to be drawn into discussions between patients and doctors. He advised them against private nursing when there were so many different fields in which they could interest themselves to great advantage. There were school nursing district nursing, institutions and child welfare work. Also there had been a field opened up by the establishment of hospitals, in connection with factories. There was the social service work which was both interesting and useful. There were also the insurance companies. He recommended a careful study of the work involved in each class of nursing, before making their final choice. In closing, he again congratulated them on their success, and also the Board of Management superintendent and assistant superintendent on the work being done at the Nicholl's Hospital.

He wished the graduating nurses every success in the noble work which which they had chosen.

Bandaging Prizes

Dr. Sutton presented the bandaging prizes to Miss I. E. Thompson and Miss B. H Chalmers He thought there was little left for him to say. He was pleased to find that the high standing of Nicholl's Hospital had been maintained during the absence of Miss Beamish, overseas. He understood that the bandaging done to win these prizes had been exceptionally well executed.

The Harvey Medal

Dr E. E. Harvey presented the Harvey Medal for general proficiensy to Miss G. N. Drake. He thought that the nurses should be well pleased at the interest shown by the large attendance tonight. To gain this medal, it required extremely hard work for there was no royal road to learning.

He eulogized the work of Miss Drake and also the way in which she had won the hearts of her sister nurses. His description of the work of a nurse was most humorous and interesting. There was nothing in the world so nice as a tender hand and cheerful smile in sickness, he said.

This ended the program and the gathering broke up after singing the National Antehm.

After the ceremonies had been concluded, a host of friends of the graduating nurses waited to offer their congratulations to the young ladies on this eventful occasion

AN EFFORT TO GET 57TH AND G.W.V. BANDS TOGETHER IN AGREEMENT

City Council Passes Resolution With This End in View—Debate On Band Grants and Citizens Band—Proposition From Veterans Leaves Vexed Question Still Undecided.

The band grant question still remains in abeyance, and a deputation from the G.W.V.A. and the 57th Peterborough Rangers will be invited to meet the Committee of the Whole Council in a effort to get these two organizations in mutual agreement for the formation of a citizens' band between them.

This was the result of a motion to the above effect by Ald. Gordon and Whitehouse in a meeting of Council's Committee of the Whole last night.

The division was as follows:

For—Ald. Gordon, Whitehouse, Turner, Hamilton and Phelan.

Against—Ald. Jones, Crowe and Morrison.

Aldermen Copping and Gainey were absent.

The meeting opened with the hearing of a deputation from the G.W.V.A., consisting of Secretary Whatley, R. E. Layfield and Dyer, in support of a Veterans-Citizens' Band.

Mr. Layfield explained that the G.W.V.A. would assist in the support of a Veterans-Citizens' Band by contributing $1,000 to the city's $1,000, which money would be expended for uniforms and music. The boys would give their services free. Such a band, he suggested, should be controlled by a commission on which the G.W.V.A. would have one member. The G.W.V.A. would also give free band accommodation, light and heat, so that there would be no expense to the band in that respect. The annual city grant, he said, would go a long way toward the band's future support and the organization would be open to all citizens for membership. He also ponited out that leaders in the present Vets' Band are skilled men who for three or four years played seven days a week overseas. Mr. Layfield assured the committee that 75 per cent. of the city's instruments are in present use; other instruments are supplied by the men. In conclusion, he said $600 or $700 in the Vets' Band fund, and considerable music would go into the suggested Veterans-Citizens' Band. No one, he thought, should be expected to be tied up to a militia organization to belong to a citizens' band.

Proposed Amalgamation.

Secretary Whatley declared that the G.W.V.A. had endeavored to effect a band amalgamation with the 57th. A resolution was passed offering that the Veterans' Band should join with the 57th as a complete unit. Naturally when a band goes over as a complete unit its bandmaster goes with it, and he assumed that was the reason the Vets had received no reply to their offer.

57th's Position.

Ald. Crowe replied that the 57th had offered a plan for unison with the Vets. Bandmaster Gliddon had proposed to Bandmaster Hughes of the Vets' Band that for one year the latter take all the minor engagements, that he (Mr. Gliddon) take the larger engagements, and that at the expiration of 12 months he (Mr. Gliddon) would resign. The reply to that proposition was that the Vets would not go over to the 57th in any other way but as a complete unit. This, of course, contended Ald. Crowe, would mean a breaking up of the latter organization, and did not look like joining up by any means. Ald. Crowe had not a copy of the reply letter referred to, but he was sure he had given the sentiments expressed, if not the exact wording.

In conclusion, Ald. Crowe said personally he would like to see the

BATTLES TRIBE OF CANNIBALS

DR. RICE, EXPLORER, NEAR DEATH FROM ARROWS OF INDIANS

SEVERAL GIANTS WERE SLAIN

PARTY ESCAPES IN CANOES AS 200 NATIVES PURSUE THEM

Those "legendary white Indians" of the Orinoco, the conquering savage mountaineers of South America who have been the terror of their copper-colored neighbors for centuries, have been found again, a whole tribe of them, all fit to be circus giants, by Dr. Alexander Hamilton Rice, famous for his explorations along the Amazon and its tributaries. He arrived this week from Para by the Booth liner Alban, with his wife, formerly Mrs. George D. Widener, of Philadelphia. The discovery was made unexpectedly. The bleached savages found the doctor about the same time he found them, and for a few days he feared they might take back to the other tribes of their nation some fine American scalps.

Dr. Rice had left his wife and other members of the expedition at Esmeralda, its base, and, with Chester H. Ober, of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, several natives and a Venezuelan, Lio Fuentes, had started up the river to map out a small island seven days from the base. They got to the island without misadventure and finished their work. One of the Indian guides chanced to look across the river, ninety feet wide at this point, and was scared almost as white as the big white Indians, to see one of them, stark naked, scuttling into the jungle undergrowth.

Several shots were fired in the direction of the disappearing savage. A moment later the jungle was alive with yells, and more than two hundred fellows, all big and some pretty close to seven feet in height rushed from the bushes. They were armed with bows and arrows, spears and blowguns. The doctor recognized them as the very fellows he had planned to discover, "cannibals of a mountain legion, considered the most ferocious of all the savages in Venezuela, Colombia or Brazil."

The doctor decided that if it were possible he would parley with the big "almost white" ones. All the Indian dialects known to the exploring party were used vainly on them. They apparently did not belong to any Orinoco literary society and responded to the attempts to get them to talk by yelling and rushing into the river, holding their weapons over their heads. The explorers were unequipped for battle, having only one revolver, one rifle and one shotgun. The savages came on impetuously and the three modern weapons popped and popped, and, after several of the giants had fallen dead in the stream and more had been wounded, they lost their valor. The white man's method of killing at a distance awed them. Their own arrows could not do damage at the long distance. They retreated to the shore, and twenty minutes later the explorers had packed their camp equipment and instruments into their canoe and started on the trip to Esmeralda.

But the cannibals would not let the explorers out of their sight and kept pace with them on the river bank. Dr. Rice said: "For four days and nights sleep was impossible. The savages apparently had no canoes, being a mountain tribe, and they ran along the bank, shooting arrows in our direction. It seems miraculous that none of us were hurt. After the fourth day they became disheartened at their inability to capture us or even to inflict casualties and gave up the pursuit. In three more days we were safe at Esmeralda."

The doctor is confident that he rediscovered the legendary white, or near white, cannibals. He believes they were seen only once before and then by Ensign Bobadilla in 1763, during his explorations made under the Spanish government. They are [illegible] old neighbors of the Mar[illegible] [illegible] tribe, who hold them in deadly terror.

Mrs. Rice, in accompanying her husband on this expedition, the [illegible] which he has made in nineteen years, has achieved the distinction of [illegible]

COUNCIL PLANS TO BUILD TWENTY-FOUR HOUSES FOR WORKINGMEN

Will Issue Debentures For $200,000—Housing Commission Authorized To Have King Edward Park Surveyed For Building Lots—To Get Plans and Estimates.

Council's committee of the whole, at which all members were present except Aldermen Gainey and Copping, decided last night to go ahead with the housing scheme.

The plan now is to survey a portion of King Edward Park into building lots, to borrow by sale of debentures $200,000 for house building purposes and to secure designs and estimated cost of erecting twenty-four houses.

As far as gone it is likely that the city will, if necessary, and all conditions being favorable, put up these houses for subsequent applicants on the installment plan provided for in the Ontario Housing Act.

At present it is estimated that these twenty-four houses would cost between $75,000 and $100,000 dollars.

The forgoing was clinched in the folowing resolution

Instructions Issued

Ald. Turner and Crowe, moved that the City Solicitor be instructed to prepare a bylaw that the Ontario Housing Act be applied to this municipality under a Housing Commission consisting of the Mayor, ex-Ald chairman and James Finnie.

Also a bylaw be prepared to issue debentures for $200,000 for building purposes, bearing interest at six per cent and that the Ontario Government be requested to guarantee the city's bonds.

Also that the solicitor prepare a by-law authorizing the Housing Commission to have the King Edward Park surveyed into building lots.

And that the Housing Commission submit plans to this committee of the while council different designs of houses, and that after acceptance of any of same that estimates for erecting twenty-four houses be secured.

Before actual erection of these houses is undertaken council must be consulted.

Ald. Jones wondered if it would be advisable to build all twenty-four houses in one place such as the King Edward Park, and it was agreed that the foregoing resolution does not commit council to such a survey [illegible] it might be found advantageous to erect houses in different locations.

Why The Delay

Mayor McIntyre said the Housing Commission had not made much progress, pending amendment of the Ontario Housing Act by the Government.

This act is now amended to provide that municipalities instead of borrowing money to loan to builders, may issue their own debentures to amounts not exceeding $250,000, the bonds of which will be guaranteed by the Ontario Government. This money may either be used by the city to build houses to sell, or loan, to people willing to build. Under the act a housing commission may be appointed with or without salary.

Forty-Eight Houses

Ex-Ald. Dobbin suggested building forty-eight houses in King Edward Park. An advantage this plan would be that none of the money from the sale of debentures would be required for land, although on one street, sidewalks water and sewer, would have to be laid on one street.

He also proposed building four roomed houses in groups of two and three which would be varied in design and make the houses attracttive and important in appearance.

Many Inquiries

Mr. Dobbin said he had had many [illegible] houses, but there was no plan absolutely practical to agree on. He had not yet met a citizen adverse to using a portion of this park for building purposes under the housing scheme.

A plan submitted by Ald. Turner showed provision for forty-eight houses on King Edward Park, Sixteen facing the park from the rear of Romaine street, then a new street on which sixteen houses would face, then a lane between the rear of these latter houses and the rear of another sixteen houses facing on Princess street. The lots to be 40x108 feet, the lanes ten feet wide. Or on the same lot fifty-four houses could be erected on lots 35x108 feet.

The 40x108 feet lots met with a majority approval.

THE CITY COUNCIL AND SENATORSHIP

That vacant senatorship was, rather indifferently, 'tis true, referred to by the City Fathers in Committee of the Whole last night.

Ald. Gordon said he would be willing to move the recommendation of Mr. T. E. Bradburn.

Ald. Crowe replied that politics should not enter into the question.

Ald. Gordon said it was not a question of politics at all but one of this city having representation in the Senate.

Ald. Turner was not inclined that the matter should be discussed then, at any rate, and here the question was dropped.

Against—Ald. Jones, Crowe and Morrison.

Aldermen Copping and Gainey were absent.

The meeting opened with the hearing of a deputation from the G.W.V.A., consisting of Secretary Whatley, R. E. Layfield and Dyer, in support of a Veterans-Citizens' Band.

Mr. Layfield explained that the G.W.V.A. would assist in the support of a Veterans-Citizens' Band by contributing $1,000 to the city's $1,000, which money would be expended for uniforms and music. The boys would give their services free. Such a band, he suggested, should be controlled by a commission on which the G.W.V.A. would have one member. The G.W.V.A. would also give free band accommodation, light and heat, so that there would be no expense to the band in that respect. The annual city grant, he said, would go a long way toward the band's future support and the organisation would be open to all citizens for membership. He also ponited out that leaders in the present Vets' Band are skilled men who for three or four years played seven days a week overseas. Mr. Layfield assured the committee that 75 per cent. of the city's instruments are in present use; other instruments are supplied by the men. In conclusion, he said $600 or $700 in the Vets' Band fund, and considerable music would go into the suggested Veterans-Citizens' Band. No one, he thought, should be expected to be tied up to a militia organization to belong to a citizens' band.

Proposed Amalgamation.

Secretary Whatley declared that the G.W.V.A. had endeavored to effect a band amalgamation with the 57th. A resolution was passed offering that the Veterans' Band should join with the 57th as a complete unit. Naturally when a band goes over as a complete unit its bandmaster goes with it, and he assumed that was the reason the Vets had received no reply to their offer.

57th's Position.

Ald. Crowe replied that the 57th had offered a plan for union with the Vets. Bandmaster Gliddon had proposed to Bandmaster Hughes of the Vets' Band that for one year the latter take all the minor engagements, that he (Mr. Gliddon) take the larger engagements, and that at the expiration of 12 months he (Mr. Gliddon) would resign. The reply to that proposition was that the Vets would not go over to the 57th in any other way but as a complete unit. This, of course, contended Ald. Crowe, would mean a breaking up of the latter organization, and did not look like joining up by any means. Ald. Crowe had not a copy of the reply letter referred to, but he was sure he had given the sentiments expressed, if not the exact wording.

In conclusion, Ald. Crowe said personally he would like to see the London, May 13.—An extraordinary number of reports arrived this morning from all portions of Ireland recording robberies, shootings, destruction of public property and other similar actions.

Concerted Action.

Whether these events have been the result of concerted action has not yet been learned. It is believed here, however, that they could hardly have been coincidences.

BATTLES TRIBE OF CANNIBALS

SEVERAL GIANTS WERE SLAIN

PARTY ESCAPES IN CANOES AS 200 NATIVES PURSUE THEM

Those "legendary white Indians" of the Orinoco, the conquering savage mountaineers of South America who have been the terror of their copper-colored neighbors for centuries, have been found again, a whole tribe of them, all fit to be circus giants, by Dr. Alexander Hamilton Rice, famous for his explorations along the Amazon and its tributaries. He arrived this week from Para by the Booth liner Alban, with his wife, formerly Mrs. George D. Widener, of Philadelphia. The discovery was made unexpectedly. The bleached savages found the doctor about the same time he found them, and for a few days he feared they might take back to the other tribes of their nation some fine American scalps.

Dr. Rice had left his wife and other members of the expedition at Esmeralda, its base, and, with Chester H. Ober, of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, several natives and a Venezuelan, Lio Fuentes, had started up the river to map out a small island seven days from the base. They got to the island without misadventure and finished their work. One of the Indian guides chanced to look across the river, ninety feet wide at this point, and was scared almost as white as the big white Indians, to see one of them, stark naked, scuttling into the jungle undergrowth.

Several shots were fired in the direction of the disappearing savage. A moment later the jungle was alive with yells, and more than two hundred fellows, all big and some pretty close to seven feet in height, rushed from the bushes. They were armed with bows and arrows, spears and blowguns. The doctor recognized them as the very fellows he had planned to discover, "cannibals of a mountain legion, considered the most ferocious of all the savages in Venezuela, Colombia or Brazil."

The doctor decided that if it were possible he would parley with the big "almost white" ones. All the Indian dialects known to the exploring party were used vainly on them. They apparently did not belong to any Orinoco literary society and responded to the attempts to get them to talk by yelling and rushing into the river, holding their weapons over their heads. The explorers were unequipped for battle, having only one revolver, one rifle and one shotgun. The savages came on impetuously and the three modern weapons popped and popped, and, after several of the giants had fallen dead in the stream and more had been wounded, they lost their valor. The white man's method of killing at a distance awed them. Their own arrows could not do damage at the long distance. They retreated to the shore, and twenty minutes later the explorers had packed their camp equipment and instruments into their canoe and started on the trip to Esmeralda.

But the cannibals would not let the explorers out of their sight and kept pace with them on the river bank. Dr. Rice said: "For four days and nights sleep was impossible. The savages apparently had no canoes, being a mountain tribe, and they ran along the bank, shooting arrows in our direction. It seemed miraculous that none of us were hurt. After the fourth day they became disheartened at their inability to capture us or even to inflict casualties and gave up the pursuit. In three more days we were safe at Esmeralda."

The doctor is confident that he rediscovered the legendary white, or near white, cannibals. He believes they were seen only once before and then by Ensign Bobadilla in 1763, during his explorations made under the Spanish government. They are [illegible] neighbors of the Mar[illegible] tribe, who hold them in deadly terror.

Mrs. Rice, in accompanying her husband on this expedition, the [illegible] which he has made in nineteen years, has achieved the distinction of [illegible]

COUNCIL PLANS TO BUILD TWENTY-FOUR HOUSES FOR WORKINGMEN

Will Issue Debentures For $200,000—Housing Commission Authorized To Have King Edward Park Surveyed For Building Lots—To Get Plans and Estimates.

Council's committee of the whole, at which all members were present except Aldermen Gainey and Copping, decided last night to go ahead with the housing scheme.

The plan now is to survey a portion of King Edward Park into building lots, to borrow by sale of debentures $200,000 for house building purposes and to secure designs and estimated cost of erecting twenty-four houses.

As far as gone it is likely that the city will, if necesary, and all conditions being favorable, put up these houses for subsequent applicants on the installment plan provided for in the Ontario Housing Act.

At present it is estimated that these twenty-four houses would cost between $75,000 and $100,000 dollars.

The forgoing was clinched in the folowing resolution

Instructions Issued

Ald. Turner and Crowe, moved that the City Solicitor be instructed to prepare a bylaw that the Ontario Housing Act be applied to this municipality under a Housing Commission consisting of the Mayor, ex-Ald chairman and James Finnie.

Also a bylaw be prepared to issue debentures for $200,000 for building purposes, bearing interest at six per cent and that the Ontario Government be requested to guarantee the city's bonds.

Also that the solicitor prepare a by-law authorizing the Housing Commission to have the King Edward Park surveyed into building lots.

And that the Housing Commission submit plans to this committee of the while council different designs of houses, and that after acceptance of anw of same that estimates for erecting twenty four houses be secured.

Before actual erection of these houses is undertaken, council must be consulted.

Ald. Jones wondered if it would be advisable to build all twenty-four houses in one place such as the King Edward Park, and it was agreed that the foregoing resolution does not commit council to such a survey as it might be found advantageous to erect houses in different locations.

Why The Delay

Mayor McIntyre said the Housing Commission had not made much progress, pending amendment of the Ontario Housing Act by the Government.

This act is now amended to provide that municipalities instead of borrowing money to loan to builders, may issue their own debentures to amounts not exceeding $250,000, the bonds of which will be guaranteed by the Ontario Government. This money may either be used by the city to build houses to sell, or loan, to people willing to build. Under the act a housing commission may be appointed with or without salary.

Forty-Eight Houses

Ex-Ald. Dobbin suggested building forty-eight houses in King Edward Park. An advantage this plan would be that none of the money from the sale of debentures would be required for land, although on one street side walks water and sewer, would have to be laid on one street.

He also proposed building four roomed houses in groups of two and three which would be varied in design and make the houses attracttive and important in appearance.

Many Inquiries

Mr. Dobbin said he had had many [illegible] houses, but there was no plan absolutely practical to agree on. He had not yet met a citizen adverse to using a portion of this park for building purposes under the housing scheme.

A plan submitted by Ald. Turner showed provision for forty eight houses on King Edward Park, Sixteen facing the park from the rear of Romaine street, then a new street on which sixteen houses would face, then a lane between the rear of these latter houses and the rear of another sixteen houses facing on Princess street. The lots to be 40x108 feet, the lanes ten feet wide. Or on the same lot fity-four houses could be erected on lots 35x108 feet.

The 40x108 feet lots met with a majority approval.

GENERAL STRIKE OF CANADIAN CIVIL SERVICE SERVANTS FROM COAST TO COAST

Protest Against Re-Classification—Eastern and Western Cities Pledging Full Support, it is Reported.

(By Canadian Press.)

Vancouver, May 13. — A general strike of civil servants extending from coast to coast is now being mooted, according to a high official in the postal service here. This will be in protest against the alleged unsatisfactory salary provisions contained within the reclassification project announced recently by the Civil Service Commission here.

Pledging Support.

During the last few days, it is declared, telegrams have been despatched between eastern and western cities pledging full support to any action embracing the whole of Canada which may be decided upon in protest.

THE CITY COUNCIL AND SENATORSHIP

That vacant senatorship was, rather indifferently, 'tis true, referred to by the City Fathers in Committee of the Whole last night.

Ald. Gordon said he would be willing to move the recommendation of Mr. T. E. Bradburn.

Ald. Crowe replied that politics should not enter into the question.

Ald. Gordon said it was not a question of politics at all but one of this city having representation in the Senate.

Ald. Turner was not inclined that the matter should be discussed then, at any rate, and here the question was dropped.

ACTIVITY IN HOUSING PLAN.

THE CITY COUNCIL is now showing activity in the housing question. Unless some unforeseen hitch occurs King Edward Park will be surveyed into forty-eight building lots of 40 x 108 feet. Debentures are to be sold to the amount of $200,000. They will be sold locally as far as possible at six per cent. interest, and it is to be hoped will be taken up to a substantial amount. The city's bonds will be guaranteed by the Ontario Government, and consequently offer a safe investment. Loyalty to this city's needs should induce their purchase, for unless homes are forthcoming industrial expansion will suffer a shock.

According to the length at present gone by Council, the sentiment in city hall circles lies in favor of proceeding at once with the construction of twenty-four houses, either to be sold after erection, or the money for building that number or any part thereof to be loaned desirable applicants willing to erect their own homes under the Ontario Housing Act.

The cost of building these houses has not yet been ascertained nor plans of construction drawn up. But no doubt Council is in the mood for adopting some plans now, and not to take cold feet at present-day costs. For, according to all reports throughout the country, and from men expert in pesent and promised building prices, they can see no reason to hope for any near future reduction for some time at any rate. As to lumber, we are assured that its present price is with us to stay with the probability even of an increase. So as waiting for reduced costs does seem a forlorn hope, the best policy in sight points to making a start in providing housing accommodation to meet a congested condition promising to grow more acute as the days pass by.

DEEP WATER CHANNEL.

THE SITTINGS of the International Joint Waterways Commission are of stupendous importance. Advisedly, we say that perhaps with the exception of Montreal city, the scheme for deepening the St. Lawrence waters and opening the way for navigation to and on the Great Lakes by ocean-going craft is endorsed by practically the whole of Canada. While Montreal may not take kindly to the project for port reasons, still the end in view is of such magnitude that national interests must dominate. So vast is Canada's territory, especially in the Northwest, yet to be opened up and cultivated, and so big a world-market is there for all Canada can produce, that enlarged transportation facilities by both rail and water must be forthcoming, if this country is to profit by its opportunities for trade expansion. Even today our means of transportation by rail leave room for additional routes. Then, to induce settlement on Canada's enormous idle acreage there must be sure channels of transportation and distribution between producer and consumer; and this one-haul deep waterway, offering another direct connecting link between our great inland seas and the salt water seaboard, will stimulate the gowth and prosperity of the Dominion. The marvel of it is that this deep sea ship proposition has not been agreed on before and put into operation, for the trend of the age has been to open the way for ocean boats wherever engineering skill can devise the means.

This great international project has the endorsation of much of the American press, and the Sun and New York Herald is quite definite in its views, as follows:

"It is a short-sighted policy which because of our Erie Canal would oppose in behalf of the State of New York the joint development of the St. Lawrence Deep Waterways by Canada and the United States. It is an inverted vision which on the American side of the border, sees only what Canada would gain and which on the Canadian side sees only what the United States would gain.

"At this very moment tens of thousands of tons of food and other necessaries are piled up in the West and Northwest, with no chance to move them because there are not cars or other transportation facilities equal to the task. For weeks the eastern markets have been calling for these supplies, consumers have been paying excessive prices because of lack of them, the banks have had hundreds of millions of funds tied up because the industry and business whose products have been blockaded far from selling markets have been unable to liquidate their loans.

"After the neglect or the inability of the Government to keep on building cars and making other railway improvements and betterments during the war, not for years is there going to be adequate rail capacity to take care of the North American traffic of normal crop seasons and of healthy industrial activity. Never again are there going to be too many lines of communication, whether rail, water, motor or what not, to provide reasonable insurance against freight congestion in the great districts where American supplies originate and all the way to market.

"When railroads are tied up from strikes or whatever cause, or when railroads are short of equipment, cargoes of wheat, of steel and other essential commodities moving with dispatch and certainty through a deep waterway passage from the sources of production to the markets of consumption are going to be in their national results as good an investment for New York and Mississippi River States as for the country in general.

"One brief strike of outlaw switchmen has cost and is still costing Manhattan Island alone enough to pay years of interest on the price of a deep waterway channel all the distance from the head of the Great Lakes to the mouth of the St. Lawrence, with smooth sailing and quick voyages thence to Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other Atlantic ports.

"In our vast and complex industrial situation transportation and distribution have now become and always will remain a prime economic factor. The nation must have adequate transportation facilities, it must have the best in the world, and the American people must get behind every sound and comprehensive movement that means surer handling of the supplies, without which our industrial centres cannot operate and our metropolitan populations cannot be fed."

CANADIAN SHOE INDUSTRY.

THE CANADIAN Reconstruction Association has been investigating the boot and shoe industry in Canada, and concludes that the advance in the prices of boots and shoes in Canada has not been as great as the increase in the general level of prices. In brief, according to the association's findings, the cost of material is the main factor in present-day high level prices of footwear. Much complaint is heard of the cost of clothing one's feet these days, and much suspicion of profiteering prevails among the rank and file of those whose greatest struggle lies in making financial means meet living needs. Therefore, the following information handed out by the Canadian Reconstruction Association will no doubt be studied with interest:

From an industry represented in 1867 by twenty shoemakers operating on the handicraft principle, without machinery, boot and shoe manufacturing has developed until today there are in Canada about 160 factories, representing an investment of clase to $35,000,000, giving employment to moe than 14,000 persons, paying more than $10,000,000 million annually in wages, and buying materials to the value of more than $27,000,000 annually, much of which is produced by other Canadian industries employing Canadian lobar.

The net factory selling value of leather boots and shoes produced in Canada annually is now about $50,000,000.

Canadian boot and shoe manufacturers make approximately 95 per cent. of all the boots and shoes worn in Canada, and in addition have developed an export trade which last year exceeded the value of imports.

The production of the average shoe factory in the United States is double that of the average shoe factory in Canada, and one company in the United States manufactures as many leather boots and shoes as all the Canadian plants combined.

Boot and shoe factories in the United States could manufacture in about seventeen days as many boots and shoes as all the Canadian factories make in a year, and in eighteen or nineteen days they could make all the leather footwear requirements of the Canadian population.

The advance in the prices of boots and shoes in Canada has not been as great as the increase in the general level of prices. Indeed, it has been less on a percentage basis than th advance in the cost of materials entering into the production of such footwear.

Three square feet of leather are needed for the manufacture of a single pair of womens' boots. Fine glazed kid now costs the Canadian manufacturer between $1.75 and $2 per foot, as compared with 26 cents per foot in 1914. The leather alone for the uppers of a pair of women's fine shoes now costs between $5.25 and $6. Besides, all other materials used, including sole leather, weltings, linings, etc., now cost he manufacturer from two to six times what they cost in 1914.

With one exception, there have been no importation combinations in the Canadian boot and shoe industry, and the keenest kind of competition prevails.

There is not a single millionaire in the shoe manufacturing industry in Canada.

Profits on turnove run from almost zero to a maximum of about ten per cent. Few concerns have been making more than five per cent on their turnover. Where larger profits have been made during the war they have resulted from increased business rather than from a higher percentage of profit on each unit of output. With possibly one exception, no Canadian boot and shoe manufacturer made a net profit of more than sixteen cents per pair on army boots, and the average did not exceed ten cents per pair. Many of the manufactures actually lost money. In 1914, average net profits in the industry were not more than 2.65 per cent. on turnover, or 2.91 per cent. on capital invested. The average profit on turnover for 1918, as shown by careful analysis of the earnings of a number of representative firms, was only 5.37 per cent., and less than 7½ per cent. on capital invested.

So keen has been the competition in boot and shoe manufacturing in Canada that a carefully prepared list contains the names of considerably more than one hundred firms which have closed their doors during the past thirty years by reason of financial difficulties. The records of a single Canadian sole leather factory show 58 insolvent Canadian boot and shoe manufacturing establishments in which the leather company has been interested as a creditor.

With a few exceptions, a manufacturer's net profit on a pair of boots selling wholesale at $10 and retailing at perhaps $15, is less than 55 cents. On lower priced footwear the profit is proportionately less, and one factory making staple lines averaged a profit in 1918 of less than nine cents per pair on a turnoverof fifty thousand pairs.

IN SPITE OF COPYBOOKS.

(London Daily Express.)

Fortune conspires at times to confound the moralists, notably in the matter of inventions. Rustless steel bids fair to revolutionize one of the greatest of industries, and its discovery, as Professor Carnahan has just disclosed, was due to the carelessness of a furnace man, who "burnt his melt." Similarly, I believe, carelessness in allowing the contents of a cauldron to overflow into the sand packed aound it led to the discovery of dynamite. Even sheer laziness has contributed its quota to the history of invention. It was the sight of a soldier cleaning the rust from a sword after a period of neglect that suggested to one of Prince Rupert's officers in 1611 the idea of what developed into mezzotint engraving.

THE GREAT WHITE ELEPHANT.

(Manchester Guardian.)

It is obviously desirable that the kaiser should, if possible, be removed to a much safer distance. This course the Allies clearly intimate they would be willing to accept if the Dutch Government should feel able to act upon it, and they would regard it as a friendly recognition of a real difficulty. But there is, we are glad to see, no threat nor suggestion of pressure. That is as it should be. We do not want the kaiser, though we may talk as though we did, and we do most emphatically want to avoid the remotest appearance of playing the bully against a small and kindly kindred nation which once knew how to contest with us the mastery of the seas. If the Dutch Government still feels that it can do nothing with the kaiser except let him alone, we had better follow its example. His position, if safe, is inglorious. It is for the Germans themselves to see to it that he does not threaten their peace.

LOCAL HISTORY OF SALVATION ARMY

Nearly all of our local institutions had small beginnings. Whether these were social organizations or material things that were to contribute to our advancement and welfare, all started in a humble way. That is those that survived and became eventually successful. True it is that we have had things of sporadic moment, such as the much vaunted beet sugar factory and enterprises of like kidney. The celebrated Corday Company is another in kind. These things started with a magnificent flourish of trumpets, with loud acclaim, with all signs of prosperity and progress. Presently all were punk. Not built on the foundation of thrift and perseverence. Not having the individual spirit that made for community of effort, the languished and died. It is absolutely true that such industries as we have that are prosperous began in a small way and grew with the times and with persistent effort.

In same manner what we have of local institutions that survive and give of service are where they are because of the personal work and enthusiasm of membership. That hung on, and kept to the good work in adversity and in prosperity. So among the roster of the faithful it becomes us to give a glance to one of our local institutions that has, winter and summer, in fair or foul weather, carried on and gained in membership and influence.

It is a far call back to the evening of Thursday, April 9th, 1885. Promptly at seven o'clock there appeared on our front street a small gathering of men and women. Outwardly they wore strange garb. Spots and splashes of red stood out at odd places on the garments. There was a flag, the Union Jack. There was a drum and cymbals and a cornet with a concertina. The little band emerged from the doors of the old Baptist Church, on Aylmer street (now the Gillespie Garage), and turning the corner on to Simcoe street walked to the corner of George street. There the group paused, and while the cornet shrilled and the drum beat a crowd collected, surprised at the assemblage and the queer preparations. Presently led by a stentorian male voice the group burst into song, and the refrain of "Hold the Fort for I Am Coming," rolled along the street. Followed, what was a novel situation in the town, prayer and invocation in the open air and on the public street. That gathering was the first public appearance of the Salvation Army in Peterborough. A chronicle of the day says: "The first gun fired by the Salvation Army in Peterborough, from the old Baptist Church, Aylmer street, the proceedings in command of Aide-Camp Eddy, also Sergt. Rogers and Capt. Mills (lady)."

Sunday morning, 12th, saw the first march out, led by Capt. Eddy and Cadets Langtry and Hart. Happy Jack Rogers sang at the street corners meetings, and the evening meeting was a ringer, to use the expression of the reporter. Rapidly the Army drew supporters and adherents. It promised to fill a long felt want.

The local corps sent out a call for help. It was felt that all that could be done to impress the work and the theme on the people should not be lacking, and on Oct. 19th, 1886, the local organization welcomed to Peterborough General Booth, the commander and organizer of the Salvation Army. He came accompanied by several staff officers and the occasion was important enough to call for a hearty reception by the civic authorities and municipal institutions. Meetings and services of special import were held, and the Army made its mark.

Within two years the work had reached a position of renewed importance and a real necessity arose for larger and fuller accommodation. The first modest quarters had been outgrown. A movement set on foot to provide what was to be the Salvation Army Temple, a structure in keeping with the importance of the Army and its work, culminated in the opening of the handsome building on Simcoe street, so long and still in use as the headquarters. On July 14th, 1888, the building was opened and dedicated with all the rites and ceremonies of the organization. A large delegation of visiting officers from important posts in the province attended. The services on the Sunday following were phenomenal in point of attendance and effort. The Monday following there was a march-out, led by Army bands from a distance, and from the energy shown and caught up the army continued on in an increased field of effort and usefulness. This was emphasized when on Nov. 26th, following the band of Gen. Booth's Household Troop visited Peterborough and gave entertainments. Staff-bandmaster Applebee and visiting officers shared in the demonstrations.

However, life is just one thing after another. It would now seem a travesty to look back on and reflect, but it is a fact that on March 25th, 1886, the Salvation Army was hailed to the Police Court charged with obstructing the streets and making an annoying disturbances. On March 31st the case was given a further hearing and a fine of $5.00 and costs imposed. But public feeling was aroused. And so soon as judgment was pronounced and made public a subscription was taken up with the object of testing the decision in a higher court. By noon of the same day $225.00 had been collected. However, the matter dropped.

The foregoing recital brings us to the point at present to be presented. On May 15th next, the Army will enter on a local campaign in commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the institution of the Salvation Army and its world-wide work. It is true that the 50th year was five years earlier, say about 1916. But the war was on, and the Army was intensely busy with its gigantic work in the war zones. So now we have it in times of peace. The campaign will be announced and the local effort made. Committees have been struck, districts allotted and the canvas will be made and successfully. It is proposed to raise $5000.00 for local extension and work, $1000.00 to be expended locally and purely and $4000.00 as a missionary effort from the local corps. Both good objects. Both worthy of support.

No organization mustered for the fighting forces in excess of the Peterborough Salvation Army. Its local record is 100 per cent. When the call came for conscription there was not one man in or connected with the Salvation Army of military age. All had gone, served and returned disabled or were on the firing line. So that in asking for this support to the Army objets it knows that as a loyal institution it has lacked not in any particular.

Hats off to the Army. It does a work that no other will attempt. There is no social sore that it does not attempt to heal. It has some critics, but what are they in comparison to its friends, both in number and influence. The Army is wedded to poverty, it lives from hand to mouth. It practices perhaps the most genuine Socialism that the world has ever seen. Its workers live quiet, modest, earnest lives. No one can say that they benefit financially by their association. Its officers tackle the roughest propositions in the most uncouth surroundings. They train the tramp's children for honest work. Its women do not hesitate to tackle the wife-beater. It waits to help at the Police Court and the jail gates. Hats off to the Army. Spurgeon said that "if the Salvation Army were wiped out of London 5000 extra policemen could not fill its place in the repression of crime and disorder."

So when you are asked, on the 15th to do something, do it cheerfully, confident that you are helping a helpful cause and supporting a purpose and a movement that stands without a peer in its field—the world at large.

HERO SAVES LIVES STORE COLLAPSES

QUICK ACTION WHEN WALLS OF BUILDING SUDDENLY COLLAPSED

Hartford, Conn., May 12.—Quick wits and fast work on the part of Harry Woods, a salesman in the department store of the Steiger-Vedder Company of this city and Springfield, saved about a hundred shoppers and saleswomen and salesmen from being crushed probably fatally today, when the walls of a three story building collapsed and piled themselves up in an adjacent ditch.

Woods, who was arranging his stock, noticed a crack in the north wall of the store, and as he looked at it to make sure it was not an old break in the plaster, he saw that it was slowly widening and that the plaster all around him was chipping. He quickly went to the top floor of the building, which was being used temporarily as an annex while contractors were excavating for a big addition to the present store. Arriving on the top floor, Woods drove everybody down stairs and out of the building, telling them to go without talking and without starting a panic among other shoppers and sales clerks on the other floors.

Then he leaned out of the window and ordered the laborers in the excavation to stand from under. He next cleared the second floor and finally the ground floor. He was the last to leave and about seven minutes later the walls, which had been sliding gradually, went down with a roar and amid a shower of dust. When the cloud of plaster and dirt subsided the building and its contents had been lost, but not a life had been destroyed nor a single person injured.

SAYS DOCTORS LEAD DRY LAW VIOLATION

WILEY URGES LAW TO LIMIT WHISKEY P PRESCRIPTIONS IN STATES

Washington, May 12. — Declaring that profiteering had taken the new form in the medical profession of whiskey prescription writing, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley in his address today as retiring president of the United States Pharmacopoeial convention advocated legislation to prohibit physicians from writing more prescriptions for whiskey and brandy than they wrote in 1914.

"The physician is the leading offender in the illegal sale of liquor," Dr. Wiley said. "The pharmacist is only doing his duty when he fills prescriptions for whiskey and brandy. If the writing of such prescriptions is abused the medical profession must accept the greatest part of the criticism and blame."

Dr. Wiley opposed the placing of whiskey and brandy back in the pharmacopia from which they were removed ten years ago.

STEPS TAKEN TO STRENGTHEN WEAKER TEAMS IN INTEREST OF BETTER SPORT

At the executive meeting of the City Baseball League held in the Empress Hotel last night, steps were taken to strengthen the weaker teams and provide better ball for the fans. This action was precipitated by the statement from Mr. Mulhall, manager of the Canadian Woollens team, that his team was seriously considering withdrawing from the City League on account of lack of good material. He stated that at the commencement of the season they had been handicapped by the rules of their Athletic Club which prevented them from seeking the services of outside players and that now they were only allowed to take four from outside of the factory.

A Bomb-Shell.

This statement was pretty much of a bomb-shell to the executive, although it was admitted on all sides that much could be done to even the teams up. Mr. Mulhall stated that they were short of a battery and the representatives of the C.G.E. offered to provide Helson as a catcher. Louis Yeotes came across with the offer of his left-hander, McClintock, and upon the arrival of Mr. J. W. Worth, the Canadian Woollens representatives decided to withdraw their resignations.

The drawing for the opening games on Saturday next was also considered to be against the best interests of the game and it was therefore decided to re-arrange the schedule so as to play the C.G.E. against the Thistles and the Great War Veterans against the Canadian Woollens. It was the opinion of the executive that this arrangement would provide two closely matched games for the opening and something worth presenting to the fans as an opener.

Kay to Umpire.

The chairman of the meeting, Mr. Gordon Matthews, made the pleasing announcement that Mr. Kay, who umpired so satisfactorily last year, had again agreed to umpire for the season. Mr. Kay was a popular umpire with all the teams and this announcement relieves the situation immensely as far as the umpiring of games is concerned.

To Play 7 Innings.

It was also decided that the games should be seven innings. Some representatives wanted to make the first game seven and the last nine innings, but the majority were in favor of making them all only seven innings.

The question of fixing up the grounds was a matter which caused some discussion. It was pointed out by those who had already been practicing on the diamond that sand instead of clay had been placed at the bases and that at the present time they were nothing more than sand holes. The net behind the grand stand is also in need of repair and already practicing teams have lost balls on this account. C. McLean, representing the Peterborough team, and Frank Pierre, representing the City League, were appointed a committee to interview Dr. Wightman with reference to getting these important matters adjusted.

Opening Saturday.

Arrangements for the opening on Saturday have been completed. His Worship the Mayor and two councillors will be on hand. One will pitch the ball, another will catch it and the third will hit or least attempt to hit it. The parade will start from the Y.M.C.A. at 1.30 sharp. The Great War Veteran's band will be on hand and the C.G.E. have guaranteed to provide a conveyance of some kind for them. It was thought last night that on account of the fact that the big truck was broken the conveyance would be a couple of waggons hitched together and four horses. The band will be followed by automobiles carrying the players for both games.

National Rules.

It was also decided that the National rules should govern all games in the City League. There have been some changes in these rules this year, but it was thought last night that there was only one change that would have any affect on the City League. The change is that the pitcher shall not rub the ball on his clothes or in the sand before pitching it and that no other player shall rub the ball in the sand before throwing it to the pitcher. The penalty for doing so is suspension for 10 days and if the pitcher uses the ball after a player has rubbed it in the soil he is also liable for suspension.

Meet on Mondays.

Mr. Worth raised the point that the executive meetings clashed with the football meetings and it was moved by Mr. Mulhall and carried that the meetings should in future be held on Mondays and at 7 o'clock instead of 8.

Fred Craig presented a schedule for the season which he had been requested to draw up. It is a quadruple schedule providing that each team shall have four games with every other team in the league.

TOO MUCH PUBLICITY FOR ONE BALL TEAM

The stir at the City League meeting last night was the unfortunate result of too much publicity for one team. While the Thistles probably have a good line-up it is foolish to assume that they and the C.G.E. have collared all the material in the city as some would have us believe. It looks as if the publicity department of the Thistles was a little overworked and it nearly had opposite results to those intended. However, the difficulties were smoothed over and it is just as well that they arose before the opening of the league.

MAY REVIVE OLD MIDLAND LEAGUE

FOOTBALL EXECUTIVE HAS THIS QUESTION UNDER CONSIDERATION

It was indicated at the regular meeting of the city League Football executive last night that there is a possibility of the old Midland Football League being revived. A communication was received from the secretary of the Football League at Oshawa, stating that Oshawa was anxious that Peterborough should again become the headquarters of this league, as it was in days gone by. He stated that besides Oshawa, Bowmanville and other towns were desirous of reviving the league and believed that there were prospects of a great future for it.

The executive will take this matter up shortly and an announcement as to their decision will then be made.

The matter of picking teams for the international game to be played between Scotch and English teams at the exhibition grounds on May 24th in connection with the Field Day sports also came up for consideration, and it was decided that the players for this game should be picked at the next meeting of the executive. The requirement is that each player of the team shall be a native of one or other of the two countries. In choosing the teams for this game an effort will be made to make the team as strong as possible in order that the general public and visitors will have an opportunity of seeing the class of football which is being played at the present time in the city league.

The following referees were appointed:

Saturday, May 15— Canadian Woollens vs. M. G. C., at Oval; A. McKinley.

Saturday, May 15— G. W. V. A. vs. DeLaval at Exhibition Park; F. Roberts.

Thursday, May 20.— Caledonians vs. C. G. E., Exhibition Park; Mr. Bates.

President Parkins was in the chair.

A GOOD GAME TONIGHT

A good game is promised at 6.30 tonight at the Exhibition Grounds when the C. G. E. meet the DeLaval. The line-ups will probably be as follows:

C. G. E.—J. Naples, goal; B. Mason and J. McDonald, backs; A. Parkins, H. Beatard and J. Young, half-backs; A. Manders, Wag Hotston, H. Turner and Ed. Bartley, forwards; reserves, H. Cowie, J. Bills and W. Ridley.

DeLaval—W. Jones, goal; W. McDougall and Fred Hartshorn, backs; W. Brown, G. Humpage and J. Cooper half-backs; G. Hartshorn, J. Long, J. Cullen, A. Nicholls and E. Abraham, forwards.

FOR BOUNTIFUL HARVEST

Bishop Pinkham Asks Anglican Clergy to Pray.

(By Canadian Press.)

Calgary, Alta., May 12.—Bishop Pinkham of the Anglican diocese of Calgary, earnestly asks the clergy of the diocese to use, in public worship, suitable prayers from the New Canadian Prayer book, for favorable weather during the season for the cultivation of the soil and for a bountiful harvest, and he invites all Anglicans to join him in praying for these blessings when they pray privately, or use family prayer.

BRITISH WARSHIPS FOR THE DOMINION

REGRETS LACK OF PUBLICITY OF PROPOSITION IN DETAIL

Toronto, May 13.—"It is a matter of deep regret that the Government did not present this great subject in a more comprehensive and thorough way to the House of Commons, and did not give the widest possible measure of publicity to the details of the report throughout the country as to the offer made by the British Government to the Canadian Government with respect to the gift of ships," so declared Commodore Aemilius Jarvis, president, at the annual meeting of the Ontario Division of the Navy League of Canada, at their annual meeting in the King Edward Hotel yesterday afternoon. Following his review of Admiral Jellicoe's report a resolution was submitted recommending Jellicoe's major scheme involving $25,000,000, but which, it was pointed out, would not commit the country to this cost, but to policy. Little or no expense would be required for years as the capital expenditure would be absorbed by Great Britain.

Jellicoe's Report.

"We have been advised on reliable authority that the Canadian Government have been informed that the British Government is ready to supply as a free gift such vessels as Canada may require, provided they are available, of course, for Imperial defence in time of war," said Mr. Jarvis. "Therefore, the capital expenditure called for in the schedule of Lord Jellicoe's report would for the first six years be eliminated, thus reducing the estimates by very substantial figures.

"It is a matter of interest to know that Canada is today the eighth maritime power, with 2,300 vessels, and a personnel of over 40,000 in our merchant service. It is common sense and necessity that as an insurance we must make provision for its adequate protection."

Ten Boys' Brigades.

The annual report showed ten Boys' Naval Brigades in Ontario, with 872 boys in training. A new plan is being inaugurated to train boys as officers to take command. To help dependants $60,000 was given to 33 institutions, 18 missions and 180 individuals; $29,000 was spent to take over and erect sailors' homes in Canadian ports. An endowment fund of $250,000 has been established.

Rev. Dr. Cody spoke on "Canada's Place Upon the Waters" at the noonday luncheon, emphasizing the need for expansion. He thought Canada had not taken her proper place in Imperial defence, and in mentioning Admiral Jellicoe's report was of the opinion that one scheme was ineffectual as it only defended Canada.

STRENGTHEN TEAM OF CANADIAN WOOLENS

WELCOME ADDITIONS TO THIS FOOTBALL ELEVEN ARRANGED FOR

Although at the present time safely ensconced at the foot of the league the Canadian Woollens football team has no intention of remaining in that position for the remainder of the season, and it is understood from reliable sources that steps are being taken which will greatly strengthen the team and give them a fighting chance which they apparently have not had up to the present.

It was announced this morning in this connection that Sam Calladine had decided definitely to throw in his lot with the Woollens. Sam was goal-keeper for the old 93rd battalion team, and recently returned from overseas. There is no doubt that he will be a welcome addition to the team. Several other teams have been known to be angling for him but Sam favors the Woollens.

Negotiations are also under way with the DeLaval team where by Hillman, the splendid back of that team be transferred to the Woollens. The Woollens were anxious to have this deal go through in time for the Saturday game, but the DeLaval team require his services for tonight's game as their team has been badly shaken up. The league ruling requires the transfer to take effect forty eight hours before the game is played and it will therefore be impossible for Hillman to play for the DeLaval tonight and the Canadian Woollens on Saturday. It is likely however that he will appear on the Woollens line-up for all games after Saturday.

WAR EXHIBITS AT CRYSTAL PALACE

KING WILL OPEN EXHIBITION WHICH WILL CONTINUE FOUR YEARS

London, May 12.—Signposts bearing the inscriptions "Hell-Fire Corner," "Piccadilly" and "Haig Avenue," erected by British troops just behind the front lines in France, are among the more than 10,000 exhibits being assembled at Crystal Palace London, to form the Imperial War Museum. It will be opened by the King in June and will continue for four years.

Exhibits innumerable have been gathered from every land where the war cast its trail to show the common effort of the Empire during the great conflict. Shortly after the signing of the armistice, the memorable signposts mentioned were found discarded as lumber. In addition to those bearing "street" names, which, to many of the men who knew them best, had meant so many direction posts to avenues of agony, there was found the rallying trench sign of Verdun with its "no thoroughfare." They were all rescued and are now to be preserved as relics of posterity.

There will be on display the gun that fired the first British shot in the war—from the decks of destroyer Lance at the min-layer Koenig Louise; the E battery gun that opened the military hostilities: the anti-aircraft pom-pom which, mounted at Gresham College, fired the first shot ever directed at a foreign foe from London since the days of the Romans—the occasion being the Zeppelin raid in September, 1915—and scores of other entries which have equally vivid associations.

The larger pieces of ordnance some of which weigh 14 tons, are being arranged on the floor of the spacious hall. But the galleries will hold displays of equal, if not greater interest. These include war paintings and trench implements, realistic scenic models and protective devices and curios that throw an illuminating light on conditions which existed in the German army. Some of these are amusing, some tragic.

There is a cycle with a dynamo attachment for lighting an officer's dug-out upon which two of the worst offenders had to sit in shifts and pedal in order that those within might have illumination while they devised new plans of aggression.

Far less amusing is a specimen of the enemy's "bear trap." A soldier exploring No-Man's-Land might step into its ugly spikes, concealed in the grass, and escape from their grip was virtually hopeless.

Looking at the lifebuoys of the Lusitania, the shattered funnel of the Vindictive, the portion of the Zeebrugge Mole and the formidable mines that bestrewed the Dardenelles, the exhibit will recall to "those who were there" many chapters of a great epic.

Prince of Wales Makes New Record as Traveler By Trip to the Antipodes

THE Prince of Wales, who is making a visit to the Antipodes, will have added something like 23,000 miles to his travel record and give him self the distinction of being, for his age, easily the most travelled prince in all history.

His tour of America last autumn, including visits to Washington and New York, covered fully 17,000 miles. Between August, 1919, and October, 1920, the Prince of Wales traveled over 30,000 miles, a total which works out at an average of nearly 100 miles a day, spread over the whole fourteen months. In addition there were literally hundreds of public functions crowded into the very brief periods of "rest" during a highly detailed itinerary.

It is the prince's custom to complete such an itinerary every time before he sets out on a journey from England. Every day of his Australian tour is mapped out to the last minute. Thus he will have two exceedingly trying railway journeys to undergo; first along the transcontinental line from Western Australia to Adelaide, and a week or two later from the South American capital direct to the heart of Queensland. Each of these journeys will occupy four or five days.

In order that the prince shall be enabled to see as much of Australia as he can in the time at his disposal with a minimum of inconvenience little regard has been paid in arranging this itinerary to the somewhat tender susceptibilities of the Australian states in matters of precedence. Tasmania will be visited immediately after Melbourne and Sydney.

On the other hand, however, the prince has not been slow in deciding a sartorial point which was agitating the minds of Premier Hughes and many fellow Australians. Mr Hughes had cabled to England to ascertain whether military men attending functions should dress in khaki on all occasions or wear full regimentals dress or parade uniforms.

The prince immediately inquired what was the existing order in Australia, and he was informed that the instructions for the use of khaki had not so far been countermanded. Without hesitation he intimated that khaki would be the ceremonial uniform of himself and the military members of his staff, and that rule will of course be followed by Australian officers.

After leaving Sydney, the Renown will proceed to Albany, a Western Australian port, which, nevertheless, is the most suitable for a ship of the Renown's dimensions, and from that time onward the prince will do the whole of his Australian trip overland, picking up the warship again on the day of his departure for England.

Sudden Sleepy Fits.

Narcolepsy is a nervous disorder characterized by sudden fits of uncontrollable drowsiness, the sleep lasting only a short time. Dr. Charles S. Myers, who was consulting psychologist to the British army in France describes in the London Lancet a cure that he effected by a sort of mild hypnosis, during which he explored the victim's mind and induced him to raise from the sub-conscious mind memories of certain terrifying experiences and [illegible] them before him to the conscious mind.

The experiences were interesting—horror produced by the [illegible] of an orang-outang he had shot; [illegible] seeing the [illegible] of a Chinese [illegible] and fear that the murderess might kill him, too, because he knew too much about [illegible].

Dr. Myers learned from this case that the narcoleptic attacks were dependent upon [illegible] tendency to revive repressed memories. The attacks [illegible] loss of [illegible] of the dreadful experiences [illegible] immediately probably because the [illegible] strong emotion caused by the [illegible] induced a change of personality, the man passing into a sort of [illegible] state, on passing out of which he repressed all recollection of the events therein.

When the repressed memories were restored to full consciousness the relief was immediate. Dr. Myers has been struck in this and other cases by the utter absence of emotion during the return of the lost memories. In explanation of this, he suggests that "it is the unpleasant, not the emotional, component that is directly repressed or inhibited, and that the resistance against revival expresses the inability to admit the unpleasant, not the inability to face the emotion."

Seaweed as Fodder.

The use of seaweed as fodder for horses, developed in France as a war measure, is now an established custom, for it is said by some to be superior to [illegible].

Patience.

"Is your boy Josh patient and persevering?"

"In some respects," replied Farmer Corntossel. "He stands in line [illegible] an hour, if necessary, to buy a ticket to a picture show."

The Tea Cup Analyst

By RALPH HAMILTON

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

They called Miss Phoebe Dayton a spinster, but juvenile looking and animated at forty, the seeress of the village, she never laid claim to any extraordinary occult powers. Her speciality was tea grounds and she enjoyed telling fortunes through the bottom of a cup.

"Of course it may be silly and all that," Miss Dayton confessed, "but it's pleasure for me and fun for the bright young spirits who flock about me. I never try to find any misfortune in the tea grounds—but always something bright and hopeful and happy."

Miss Dayton had invited five girls to tea and as they reached the end of the refection there was a thrill of excitement and anticipation as she announced:

"Now then, girls, pass up your teacups in the order in which you sit and I will try and construe what the tea leaves say. Oh dear! My own cup predicts a new arrival. It is a handsome young man. Don't flutter so. Only one of you can have him."

"Which is the lucky girl?" pressed Ada Rankin.

"Not you, dear," announced Miss Dayton, "for you already have one ring and I see another one coming."

There was one new girl in the group who took in all this exhibition of clairvoyant power with great innocent eyes. She was Elsie Travis and she shrunk back timidly as she passed up her cup. She fairly trembled as Miss Dayton took up the cups in turn, gave each one a shake and impressively surveyed the leaves and specks. Over two of the cups she shook her head quite doubtingly. Then she picked up the one Elsie had drank out of.

Elsie had noticed that in some way her cup had been put fourth in order instead of fifth, where it belonged. Miss Dayton did not know this.

"Alma Wharton's cup," she announced mistakenly. "Ah! here's a fine oracle. Alma, you are the fortunate one. Here is the handsome stranger. The sun is shining when he comes and I see an auto ride in the moonlight, sweet love making, a blushing, happy bride, a fairy castle like a palace."

Alma laughed gayly. "I shall tell my fiance all about it," she exulted, "and make him jealous" and then as Miss Dayton read a fanciful fortune from the last cup—really Alma—the party broke up.

Miss Dayton had introduced "the handsome young man because a friend in another town had advised her that one Perry Barton living there, had been left some property in Elmwood through the death of a relative, including the show place of the town, the Cedars.

The impressionable Elsie was considerably aroused by the fortune of the teacup and she began to live a romance, wondering if the prediction of Miss Dayton would come true.

A week after the tea party Elsie, strolling through the woods in quest of flowers, came upon a young man near the hotel at the lake. He walked with a cane and suggested a person who had recently sustained some limb injury. A queer thrill pervaded Elsie as she noticed with one swift glance that he was young and undeniably handsome, and her foolish little heart fluttered as he halted and lifted his hat courteously.

"You will pardon me, please, but do you live in the town?" and then, as Elsie assented he added: "I met with an auto accident a week ago and have been rusticating at the hotel. I started for Elmwood expecting to get some mail, but I find my sprained foot will not carry me there. I wonder when you go back to the village if you could not get my mail—I will give you a written order—and hire some accommodating lad to deliver it to me and I will gladly pay him for his trouble."

"I will see that your wish is attended to," replied Elsie, and the young man wrote on a card authorizing the postmaster to deliver to the bearer what mail there might be for Perry Barton.

Elsie received three letters at the post office. She had it in mind to have her little brother Ned take them to the hotel. He was not on [illegible] call, so she herself walked [illegible] the lake. Mr. Barton was profuse in his thanks. He told Elsie the details of his accident and she sympathized in his mishap. He had started for Elmwood on business, but this was postponed on account of his accident and awaiting repairs on his automobile.

But that would be ready for use the next day, he further told Elsie, and would she bear him company then and add to her kindness by showing him the points of interest in the district? And one moonlight night a little later as he took her home from a drive around the lake, it suddenly dawned upon Elsie that at least two points in Miss Dayton's prediction had come true.

It was a few evenings later when Perry Barton told Elsie of his love. In a mutual confidence that followed Elsie recited the incident of the tea party.

[illegible] castle is the castle like palace," said Barton. "Well, my dear, that too is an actuality. It was to look over the Cedars, which I have inherited, that I came to Elmwood and you, mistress of my heart, are bound to be its mistress, too!"

Berenice the Adventuress

WHEN the British troops entered Jerusalem, one of the avenues they passed through was the so-called Cheesemakers' street, which is the oldest thoroughfare in the world. Besides being the oldest, it has the distinction also of probably being the only street which has not changed its character since it was opened thousands of years ago. It still is the rendezvous of makers and venders of cheese, from whom it originally obtained its name.

Not far from Cheesemakers' street is the site of the palace of Queen Berenice, the beautiful sister of King Agrippa. Students of the Bible will recall that Berenice was present with her brother at the hearing of St. Paul before Festus, on which occasion Agrippa exclaimed, "Almost, Paul, thou persuaded me to be a Christian."

Few even of the most assiduous students of the Bible, however, know much more than this about Agrippa and Berenice, although there are scarcely any other characters in history more interesting than these two. For Agrippa, who had received his training principally at Rome, Athens and Alexandria, was a sort of composite Charles II. and Gentleman George, and in almost every respect, except that of cruelty, Berenice resembled Cleopatra, the vampire queen of Egypt.

Berenice was the daughter of Agrippa I., King of Judea, and, like her brother, she received a careful training in everything that constituted the humanities of that period. She was accounted not only the most beautiful but the most accomplished princess of the age she lived in, and was sought in marriage by kings and princes from the far corners of the earth.

Her heart, however, decided in favor of Marcus, the son of the Alabarch Alexander, of Alexandria, and she became his wife. Alabarch sounds big; but meant really nothing more than the chief and most influential man of the Jewish population at Alexandria. Berenice was a slip of a girl when she married Marcus, and her love for him was of the Juliet kind. So much so that when he died within a very few years after their marriage, her grief was so poignant that fears were entertained that she might attempt her own life.

For some state reasons, hard to understand, her father shortly afterward compelled her to marry his own brother, King Herod, of Chalcis. She was barely seventeen at the time. Either the memory of her first husband was too green or else her new husband had qualities which repelled her; at any rate, she did not seem to care very much for him, and probably felt grateful to him when he died.

Berenice was now in her twentieth year, and more radiantly beautiful than ever. Kings from the remotest regions came to Jerusalem to ask for her hand in marriage and offered to renounce their own religions and embrace Judaism if only she would say, "Yes."

She decided in favor of Poleman, King of Cilicia. To us of the present time, Cilicia is interesting mainly for the reason that its capital, Tarsus, was the birthplace of St. Paul, who refers to it as "no mean city"; and because the memorable first meeting between Cleopatra and Anthony took place on the River Sydnus, in Cilicia.

Whether Polemon did not prove as ideal a husband as he had promised to be or whether her pleasure-loving soul craved for more excitement than Tarsus was able to supply, is not recorded, but the fact remains that Berenice soon tired of her third husband's company, and bade him a lasting adieu.

Berenice remained under the care of her brother until the Jewish uprising against the Roman rule, which resulted in the siege of Jerusalem by Vespasian, who afterward became emperor.

Agrippa and Berenice spoke Latin as fluently and well as Romans and had no end of influential friends at Rome. So, seeing their own countrymen rent by factions and on the point of starvation in Jerusalem, they went to the Roman camp, to implore Vespasian to allow at least enough food to enter [illegible] to feed women and children.

When news of the failure of the embassy of Berenice and King Agrippa was circulated in Jerusalem, the infuriated mob, hearing at the same time that what appeared to be an attachment had sprung up between the queen and Titus, wreaked its revenge by burning her palace.

This act of vandalism alienated the affections of both Berenice and Agrippa from their countrymen, and they made no further efforts to avert the fate impending over the doomed city. In A. D. 69 Titus took over the operations against Jerusalem, which fell into the hands of the Romans shortly after. In A. D. 75 when Titus returned to Rome, Berenice went with him as his fiancee, and her residence in Rome during the ensuing four years was one long drawn out series of splendid entertainments, reminiscent of those given by Cleopatra and Marc Antony.

The Roman populace was opposed to Titus marrying Berenice. When Titus came to the throne in A. D. 79, after the death of Vespasian, he still had hopes that he might overcome the opposition of the Romans to Berenice. But they made it clear that his marriage to her would never be forgiven. Yielding to the popular clamor, both Titus and Berenice realized that their marriage would be fraught with danger to the young emperor, and so, reluctantly enough, they decided to part company. Berenice returned, heartbroken, to Palestine, and Titus died two years later. What happened to Berenice after she left Rome is not recorded in any work extant at the present day.

GIRL "BLUFFERS."

Case of Mary Brady Recalls Other Bold Adventuresses.

The case of Mary Brady, the girl cashier who became a leader of fashion in the north of England on money that was not her own—her wardrobe and furniture were sold for over $20,000—recalls to mind the exploits of other girls and women in breaking away from the conventions of their ordinary life, and occasionally startling the world by their meteoric or magnetic careers.

Girls reared in lowly surroundings have lived to make history, created wars, and brought about the fall of empires. Others have drawn to them the most accomplished men of their time. Some have been adventuresses in search of wealth and position, getting both with an ease that has provoked them to still more daring achievements, often ending in disaster, despair, and death.

But for the adventuresses who lived in their palaces, the kings of France might have maintained their dynasty to this day. "France is ruled by Louis, and Louis is ruled by a woman," said a German monarch, and in revenge for that remark the adventuress at Versailles set her mind to work, and the result was the Seven Years' War.

She was only one of a long line of such women, and their influence, with its consequent favoritism, treachery, injustice, and misgovernment of the people, led to the French Revolution.

This mysterious entity — a self within a self—that makes some women so dominant, is often associated with the strictest moral propriety.

Thackeray had met the type, and studied it when he limned Becky Sharp, who trips through "Vanity Fair" as one of the supreme examples in fiction of the girl adventuress. You remember the virtuous and domesticated Amelia, but did you not get rather tired of her, and—honest Injun!—were you not glad to have a romp with Becky? Becky in fiction and Becky in fact are, of course, two different propositions.

A great deal of sympathy was aroused in England a few years ago when reports were published that a motor-car had dashed over a sea-cliff, and it was believed that the occupant, a lady—some of whose clothes were found on the beach—had been killed and washed away by the sea. Newspaper correspondents hurried to the spot to solve the mystery.

For a while they were completely bewildered. Then one of them, having considered all the facts, wrote a story to the paper he represented, declaring that the whole thing was a fake, that the girl [illegible] was alive and in hiding [illegible] she was an adventuress [illegible] to evade her creditors.

He was right, and there followed a hue and cry which interested everybody in the country. The girl was ultimately found and punished.

The police in the north of England were once badly puzzled by the prevalence of forged five-pound notes in circulation. They could not place the forger as anyone on the records. They warned likely people to be on the look-out. An hotelkeeper at a fashionable resort was given one of these notes by a lady. He informed the police, and they [illegible] her on the way to the station.

At her rooms were found all the appliances necessary for making money easily. She was a purely practical sort of adventuress, "tired" of working for a living.

The adventuress thrives in modern America among the circles where dollars are plentiful. Recently the story was told of a [illegible] girl who made a bet that she would marry a rich man within [illegible]. She won the bet [illegible] dollar-making hunt, which included four marriages in three years [illegible] she put [illegible] to cheques and she is now in jail.

One of the ingredients of the girl adventurer's success [illegible] sordid arena of adventure. If she is able to look [illegible] a tremendous asset [illegible].

Still, though bluff may be sufficient for episodes like [illegible] young men, or getting [illegible] tradesmen and [illegible] no good for a long [illegible] higher art of the game.

There must be fascination [illegible] sonality, and now that [illegible] and personality are [illegible] kinds of men to make [illegible] well, only the woman knows.
